

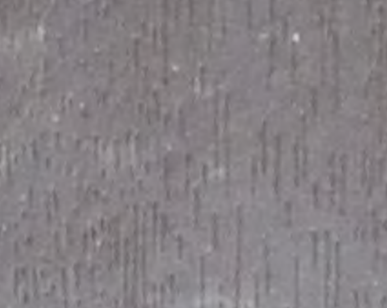
MULLA



THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Twentieth Edition

Justice Kurian Joseph
Namit Saxena

Volume I
Sections 1 to 58

LexisNexis

NATIONAL LAW SCHOOL OF INDIA UNIVERSITY

BENGALURU

धर्मो रक्षति रक्षितः

Please remember that this resource is meant for many other users like you, so do not tamper, tear or damage.

We believe that it is an individual responsibility to care for library documents and other resources of institution.

Please do check before you borrow, because you have to compensate if the material is returned in a damaged condition.

MULLA

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

First edition	1900	by Sir D F Mulla
Second edition	1907	by Sir D F Mulla
Third edition	1908	by Sir D F Mulla
Fourth edition	1910	by Sir D F Mulla
Fifth edition	1913	by Sir D F Mulla
Sixth edition	1916	by Sir D F Mulla
Seventh edition	1920	by Sir D F Mulla
Eighth edition	1926	by Sir D F Mulla
Ninth edition	1930	by Sir D F Mulla
Tenth edition	1934	by Sir D F Mulla
Eleventh edition	1941	by Sir Sajba Rangnekar & Diwan Bahadur P B Shingne
Twelfth edition	1953	by Sir R C Mitter
Thirteenth edition	1965	by T L Venkatarama Aiyar
Fourteenth edition	1981-89	by Sir J M Shelat
—Reprint	1991
Fifteenth edition	1995-96	by P M Bakshi
—Reprint	1997
—Reprint	1999
Sixteenth edition	2002	by Solil Paul & Anupam Srivastava
Seventeenth edition	2007	by B M Prasad & S K Sarvaria
Eighteenth edition	2011	by B M Prasad & Manish Mohan
—Updated edition	2013	by B M Prasad & Manish Mohan
Nineteenth edition	2017	by Justice Deepak Verma, Justice Chandramauli Kumar Prasad & Namit Saxena
—Reprint	2018
—Reprint	2019
—Reprint	2020
—Reprint	2021
Twentieth edition	2021	by Justice Kurian Joseph & Namit Saxena
—Reprint	2022
—Reprint	2022

MULLA

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Including The Commercial Courts, Commercial Division and Commercial Appellate Division of High Courts Act, 2015

by

Sir Dinshaw Fardunji Mulla

Twentieth Edition

Justice Kurian Joseph
Former Judge, Supreme Court of India

Namit Saxena
Advocate on Record, Supreme Court of India

Volume 1

Sections 1 to 158

LexisNexis®

Purchased:
Approval : MLD
Gratis : 038720
Acc No .
Price .
*Narayan Rao Melgi
National Law Library
Bangalor

LexisNexis®

This book is a publication of LexisNexis
(A Division of RELX India Pvt Ltd)
14th floor, Building No 10, Tower–B, DLF Cyber City, Phase-II, Gurgaon–122002, Haryana, India.
Tel: +91 124 4774444 Fax: +91 124 4774100
Website: www.lexisnexis.co.in / E-mail: help.in@lexisnexis.com

---

© LexisNexis (A Division of RELX India Pvt Ltd) 2021

All rights including copyrights and rights of translations etc. reserved and vested exclusively with LexisNexis (A Division of RELX India Pvt Ltd). No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, or stored in any retrieval system of any nature without the written permission of the copyright owner.

Mulla, The Code of Civil Procedure, 20th Edition, 2021.

This book can be exported from India only by the publisher. Infringement of this condition of sale will lead to civil and criminal prosecution.

ISBN: 978-93-91211-12-7

Printed by: Sanat Printers, Kundli

Note: Due care has been taken while editing and printing this book. Neither the author nor the publisher of the book hold any responsibility for any mistake that may have inadvertently crept in.

The publisher has taken all care and effort to ensure that the legislative provisions reproduced here are accurate and up to date. However, the publisher takes no responsibility for any inaccuracy or omission contained herein for advice, action or inaction based hereupon. Reference must be made to the Official Gazette issued by the Government of India for the authoritative text of any Act, Rule, Regulation, Notification or Order.

The publisher shall not be liable for any direct, consequential, or incidental damages arising out of the use of this book.

In case of binding mistake, misprints, or missing pages etc., the publisher's entire liability, and your exclusive remedy, is replacement of this book within one month of purchase by similar edition/reprint of the book.

Printed and bound in India.

Certificate of Authenticity

To know if you have purchased a 100% ORIGINAL and authentic product, please look for unique hologram on the front cover. The hologram has:

- A dual tone shade with Random Sparkling dots and Gradient & Pearl effect
- LexisNexis brand name, logo, animated flying bird and 2D/3D Depth Background bearing 'ORIGINAL'
- An unique Alpha Numeric number (no two holograms have same serial number)

PREFACE TO THE TWENTIETH EDITION

The celebrated commentary on Code of Civil Procedure by Sir Dinshaw Fardunji Mulla is one of the oldest and longest serving commentary on the civil procedural law in the country. The book has received consistent overwhelming response from academicians, professionals, research scholars, judges and students of law. The proposal for revising and updating this legal classic was not only exciting and adventurous but also an honour for us as it associates us with perhaps one of the greatest running books on civil law ever written. It gives us immense and immeasurable pleasure to revise and update the 20th edition of this book and we hope it will succeed in maintaining the highest level of respect the book has earned over the years.

As the last edition of the book was published in 2017–18, we chose to focus more on case law and amendments post that. Therefore, our sweep of case law covered ranges primarily from 2017–18 onwards till April-May 2021. During the process of revision we found that the book missed certain relevant case law and commentaries prior to 2018 as well, so in all fairness and in the interest of readers we deemed it fit to incorporate the missed commentaries and refresh those portions as well. The fact that one of us (Justice Kurian Joseph) retired as a judge of the Supreme Court with practice experience at the bar for many years and another one of us is an advocate on record at the Supreme Court, gave us all a wider view on the subject and helped us immensely in quick and effective revision of the book.

Keeping with the high traditions set by illustrious predecessors, we have tried that this edition contains almost every relevant pronouncement on the instant subject by the Hon'ble Supreme Court and by the Hon'ble High Courts since the preceding revision which was printed and published in 2017–18.

We have incorporated around 200 judgments while revising and updating the book. In addition, we have also tried to give our suggestions and critically analyse few judicial pronouncements so that the reader may develop a thought process on how to simplify the provision and apply it to facts of a case. We seek forgiveness, if due to inadvertence; any important comment has been missed being mentioned.

We are thankful to Mr. Arjun Bhargava, Ms. Radhika Kohli and Ms. Saumya Chitranshi from the team of LexisNexis India for their effective cooperation in revising and shaping this edition. We are also grateful to Mr. Siddarth Chechani, Advocate for his assistance throughout the preparation of this edition. Special mention deserves to be given to Ms. Arushi Dhawan, Advocate, for her support throughout.

It is our endeavour that the book is useful not only for the bar, bench, students, researchers and academicians but also proves its utility for those who wish to learn procedural aspects of vast civil law in India. We would appreciate suggestions for improvement of the book as they will certainly help us for revision of future editions as well as further evolution of the law on the subject.

New Delhi
July, 2021

Justice Kurian Joseph
Former Judge, Supreme Court of India
Namit Saxena
Advocate on Record, Supreme Court of India

PREFACE TO THE NINETEENTH EDITION

Civil procedural law in India achieved its current form after three consecutive experiments by the British in 1859, 1877 and 1882, when in 1908 it was concreted. There is scarcity of books and commentaries which carry within their fold, an updated thesis on the subject with various interpretations before the current form was finalised. One of such rare books is the celebrated commentary on Code of Civil Procedure by Sir Dinshaw Fardunji Mulla. One of the oldest and longest serving, the commentary runs today in its 117th year since the first publication. It is astonishing to note the consistent overwhelming response this book has received from all sections of readers and is not only considered prestigious but also sacred for readers of civil procedural law. The proposal for revising and updating this legal classic was not only exciting and adventurous but also an honour for us as it associates us with perhaps one of the greatest running books on civil law written ever. It gives us immense and immeasurable pleasure to revise and update the 19th edition of this book and we hope it will succeed in maintaining the highest level of respect the book has earned over the years.

Although, the 18th edition of the book was published in 2011 but as it was updated in 2013, we chose to focus more on case laws and amendments post 2013. Therefore, our sweep of case laws covered ranges primarily from 2013 onwards till May 2017. However, we also found that the book missed certain relevant case laws and commentaries prior to 2013 as well, so in all fairness and in interest of readers we deemed it fit to incorporate the missed commentaries and refresh those portions as well. The fact, that two of us retired as judges of the Supreme Court after practising at the bar for many years and one of us is an upcoming advocate at the Supreme Court, gave us a wider view on the subject and helped immensely in quick and effective revision of the book.

The commentary is unique in its precision, carries easy readability, critical analysis and has been throughout appreciated for its authenticity. Keeping with the high traditions set by illustrious predecessors, we have tried that this edition contains almost every relevant pronouncement on the instant subject by the Hon'ble Supreme Court and by the Hon'ble High Courts since the preceding revision which was printed and published in 2013.

We have incorporated around 300 judgments while revising and updating the book. In addition, we have also tried to give our suggestions and critically analyse few judicial pronouncements so that the reader may develop a thought process as to how to simplify the provision and apply it to facts of a case. We seek forgiveness, if due to inadvertence, any important comment has missed mention. Another thing which we found had become gradually essential was that AIR citations ought to be supplanted by the respective SCC citations which we have added in this edition.

We are thankful to Ms. Supriti Narayanan, Mr. Rishi Dixit, Mr. Mrinal Jain, Ms. Nancy Kadyan, Ms. Saumya Chitranshi, Ms. Aastha Khanna and Ms. Shweta Jain apart from the entire editorial and commissioning team of LexisNexis India for their effective cooperation in revising and shaping this edition. We are grateful to Mr. M.A. Rashid, who himself is the distinguished author of Ratanlal and Dhirajlal-Indian Penal Code among other books for his valuable inputs in updating this edition. We are thankful to Mr. Krishna Kumar Raizada, Mr. Ardhendumauli Kumar Prasad, Mr. P.V. Dinesh, Mr. Kunal Verma and Mrs. Taruna Ardhendumauli Prasad, Advocates for sharing their professional experiences which proved important in improving this edition. We appreciate the efforts put in by Ms. Poorva Saxena, a Company Secretary for her valuable inputs, suggestions and guidance. We are also grateful to Mr. Panshul Chandra and Ms. Arunima Bhattacharjee for their assistance throughout the preparation of this edition. We also acknowledge the important clerical support rendered by Mr. Sunil Kumar Sah.

It is our endeavour that the book is useful not only for the bar, the bench, students, researchers and academicians but also proves its utility for those who wish to learn procedural aspects of vast civil law in India. We would appreciate suggestions for improvement of the book as they will certainly help us for revision of future editions as well as further evolution of the law on the subject. For queries and suggestions, the authors may be contacted at namitsaxenaoffice@gmail.com.

New Delhi
June, 2017

Justice Deepak Verma
Justice Chandramauli Kumar Prasad
Namit Saxena

PREFACE TO THE EIGHTEENTH EDITION

The proposal for the revision of the 18th Edition of Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure was very exciting and a signal honour for us as it meant that we would be associated with this great work as revising editors twice. The first hand experience of one of us of the application of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code to litigation in the country's courts—from the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to the Apex Court—has been of inestimable value in the revision of this formidable work.

During the revision of the 17th Edition, we found that the legal pronouncements on provisions inserted by Amending Acts of 1999 and 2002 were few and the Courts of Record in India were still in the process of interpreting the new provisions inserted in the CPC. The approach in this regard has been succinctly laid down in these words : "Procedural law cannot betray the substantive law by submitting to subordination of complexity. Courts equipped with power to interpret law are often posed with queries which may be ultimate. The judicial steps of the Judge then do stir to solve novel problems by neat innovations. When the statute does not provide the path and precedents abstain to lead, then they are the sound logic, rational reasoning, common sense and urge for public good which play as guides of those who decide. Wrong must not be left unredeemed and right not left unenforced. Forum ought to be revealed when it does not clearly exist or when it is doubted where it exists."[1] Therefore, we expected that this 18th Edition would carry the judicial mandate and interpretation of the newly inserted provisions, and in that way, the 18th Edition would mark a water-shed.

However, the initial excitement was soon lost upon realization of the arduous task ahead which we came to know only after interacting with the Editorial Team of the publishers – they wanted this book to be not just a march ahead but a simultaneous march backwards. After the 15th Edition, the revising authors had thought it fit to omit various old case-law. But upon feedback from the eminent members of the Bar & Bench, the publishers were of the view that those omitted judgments needed a reappraisal and re-induction if appropriate, for the short and crisp manner in which those old judgments coined the legal propositions. Also asking for a re-appraisal was the part of the book dealing with Letters Patent which was left out after the 15th Edition.

In today's times, when information is unified through Internet and other modes of communication, Municipal Law is not only restricted to a particular country. E-commerce and transnational disputes between private parties have ushered in a completely new arena of litigation wherein not only the conflict of law has to be addressed but also the different legal systems have to be harmoniously streamlined so that no party is put to any prejudice or obtains any benefit because of change in the nationality of the governing law or the forum.

Needless to say, "a procedural law is always in aid of justice, not in contradiction or to defeat the very object which is sought to be achieved. A procedural law is always subservient to the substantive

---

1. LAHOTI, J. (as His Lordship then was) in Dhannalal v. Kalawatibai, (2002) 6 SCC 16.

law. Nothing can be given by a procedural law what is not sought to be given by a substantive law and nothing can be taken away by the procedural law what is given by the substantive law".[2]

Against this backdrop, it was a huge challenge to maintain the standard of this epic commentary in an all-round manner so as to meet the expectations of not only the Bar and Bench, but also the third important limb of the fraternity i.e. the Educationists comprising of the teachers and the students. It is pertinent to mention here that the student community today, especially with the introduction of 5-years course through National Law Schools, is not as docile as it used to be some years back. Thus, taken together, all these three limbs – the Bar, the Bench and the Educationists are today equally participating in the endeavour to lay down the law as it should be.

With this brief in hand, we hope that the 18th Edition of Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure will be able to meet the expectations. In addition, we have also given various suggestions at different places, as also the suggestions given in various judgments which have been duly highlighted by us, such as that relating to the anomaly arising due to the non-deletion of Section 23(3) of CPC after the insertion of Section 25 of CPC in its present form in 1976.[3] We hope that all these will also help the Law Commission and the law-makers in removing the anomalies in the Code of Civil Procedure.

We are thankful to Shri S.B. Sanyal, Shri Rakesh Munjal, Shri Sunil Kumar, Shri Sidharth Luthra, and Shri Neeraj Kr. Jain, all Senior Advocates, who were ever ready with their valuable suggestions and guidance based on their practical experiences.

Assistance from within the family was also always forthcoming in the form of Mr. U.S. Prasad, Ms. Anita Mohan and Ms. Kaveri Mohan in logistics and research.

We are also grateful to colleagues Ms. Priya Hingorani, Ms. Ketaki Goswami, Mr. C.D. Singh, Mr. Bhaskar Poluri, Mr. Nagendra Kumar, Mr. Pramod Dubey, Ms. Anita Pandey, Mr. Umang Shankar, Mr. Ardhendumauli Kr. Prasad, Mr. Kunal Verma, Mr. Nirmal Ambastha and Mr. Parveen Kumar, Advocates for their assistance as and when required.

A special mention in this regard is due to two law students, namely Ms. Shaliza Katoch and Ms. Puja Sarkar. They were a great help in the research work and together they helped us in concentrating more on the revising work as they took upon themselves the task of research which was never found wanting in quality. Having been exposed to this epic work so early in their career, I have no hesitation in predicting a bright future ahead for both of them.

Our thanks are also due to the Editorial Team of LexisNexis Butterworths Wadhwa Nagpur and Wadhwa Brothers for bringing out this edition in its present form. We hope that it will be useful not only for the Bar and the Bench but also the administrative machinery instrumental in appointing Commissions of Inquiry. Suggestions for improvement would be highly appreciated, as they can be a useful source for improvements in the future edition.

6 October 2011
New Delhi

B M Prasad
Manish Mohan

2. MISHRA, J. in Saiyad Mohd. Bakar El-Edroos v. Abdulhabib Hasan Arab, (1998) 4 SCC 343.
3. Durgesh Sharma v. Jayshree, (2008) 9 SCC 648 : AIR 2009 SC 285.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTEENTH EDITION

Volume 1

A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step.

—Lao Tsu

The seventeenth edition of Mulla's CPC which is amongst the most popular law books with the judicial fraternity is now available for the readers. The book has continuously served the readers for the last several decades. It was initially authored by the renowned legal luminary Sir D.F. Mulla and subsequently revised from time to time by eminent members of the legal fraternity. The fruits of the earlier efforts have been retained, nurtured and expanded by our efforts and only obsolete parts have been weeded out.

The body of this Code, consisting of the Sections part is expressed in more general terms and has to be read in conjunction with the more particular provisions contained in the respective Orders and Rules. However, the part which deal with the sections contained in this Volume I assumes importance because of the basic factual position that in case of conflict between the body of the Code contained in this Volume I and the Rules contained in the other Volumes, the former must prevail, notwithstanding the fact that both the Sections and the Orders and Rules contained in the code have their relative importance in this procedural law. Therefore, we feel extremely overwhelmed for being associated with this part of the esteemed book.

It would not be possible for us to give the details of all the changes and alterations incorporated in this edition of Volume I due to space constraint. However, a few of them are referred to below.

The readers would find a number of new synopses in the important sections 9 to 11, 47 etc. The important section 11 pertaining to res judicata has been extensively dealt with in about 250 pages, 46 headings and more than 100 sub-headings. This particular important provision is like a book with in a book and covers all the aspects pertaining to the doctrine of res judicata. Similarly, in section 9 and 10 besides updation of the case law several new headings have been added.

The last edition of the book just preceded the amendments incorporated in the Code vide Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) and Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 (22 of 2002) wherein the amendments became effective from 1/7/2002. Varied changes were made in several sections of this Volume I by the above said amending Acts with the purpose of speedy disposal of the civil cases. The amendments in the relevant Sections and the case law on them are incorporated under proper headings of the relevant sections.

The second appeal in civil cases, which is filed before High Courts by eminent lawyers, is dealt with exhaustively, based upon extensive legal research. The term 'substantial question of law' and its different aspects are now part of several headings of section 100 to give a wholesome view of different aspects of this term. In separate headings, formulation of substantial question of law and the relative scope of terms 'point in law', 'proposition of law' and substantial question of law' and other relevant new headings are incorporated in this section for the benefit of the readers.

Like Section 100 CPC a large number of judgments handed down since the last edition by the Apex Court and different High Courts are now made a part of Section 96 pertaining to first appeal and section 115 pertaining to revision and other Sections, by us.

Myriad changes have been incorporated in this edition keeping in view, the practical utility of this important procedural law, to make it convenient, meaningful and purposeful for Judges, lawyers, law officers, law professors and teachers, researchers and students.

We believe that our endeavours in this work would serve the cause of justice and those associated with the justice delivery system, alike.

Delhi
15 March 2007

S K Sarvaria
Snigdha Sarvaria

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTEENTH EDITION

Volumes 2 to 4

The two adages associated with administration of justice are "justice delayed is justice denied" and "justice hurried is justice buried". In the field of civil litigation, the Code of Civil Procedure seeks to affect a balance between the two. Three earlier attempts were made to codify laws relating to civil procedure – first in 1859, second in 1877 and the third in 1882. Lastly, the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) was born which received the assent of the Governor General of India on 21st March, 1908.

Primarily, the Code is divided into two parts, the one containing the Sections which are substantive provisions conferring power on Courts and the other containing Orders, which are detailed procedures for dealing with those powers.

After observing the provisions of the Code at work for over half a century, the first serious attempt was made in 1976 to tackle the growing number of arrears of cases with an eye on to its functional efficacy. However, when these amendments did not bring about the desired results, the Government introduced a set of major amendments in the Code in 1999, based on the 129th and 163rd Reports of the Law Commission of India and the recommendations of Justice Malimath Committee and the Committee on Sub-ordinate Legislations of the 11th Lok Sabha. But before the Amendment Act of 1999 could be implemented from 1.7.2002, the Bar Council of India and various Bar Associations of the country sent Memoranda to the Government to reconsider the amendments in the light of the hardships that may be caused to the litigants. Then after discussing the subject with legal experts, the Government introduced the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002.

The amendments of 1999 and 2002, aimed at streamlining the provisions of the Code, have been incorporated in the present Edition in the light of the decisions of the Apex Court and various High Courts. A few headings and sub-headings have also been added to make the task of searching case-laws easier.

Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure has remained popular with the Bench and the Bar on the strength of its sheer quality and the high standard maintained by legal luminaries associated with its previous Editions. The task of revising a monumental work like Mulla's Code of Civil Procedure casts an added responsibility of retaining the soul of the original work while giving fresh breath to the finished work. In my own humble way, I have tried to see that the quality level does not come down.

I am grateful to Mr. Amarjit Singh Chandhiok, Senior Advocate for having guided me with his practical expertise and vast experience. I am thankful to my son Mr. Manish Mohan, my daughter-in-law Mrs. Anita Mohan, and my daughter Ms. Kaveri Mohan, Advocates, for helping me with research work. I also express my thanks to Mr. Manmay Prasad and a few young law graduates who helped me in searching case-laws. I am also thankful to the publishers for the excellent production quality.

I hope this work will be useful to the Bench and the Bar.

B M Prasad
Advocate,
Supreme Court of India

New Delhi
15 March 2007

PREFACE TO THE SIXTEENTH EDITION

Once again, dialogue concerning speedy disposal of cases is in the air of late. The Code of Civil Procedure plays a crucial and determining role in expediting the adjudication of civil disputes. However, the amendment to the Code brought about with a focus in cutting down time consumed in disposal of civil matters has been engulfed within clouds of controversy and thus, not yet been notified. This proposed amendment is appended with this volume as an Annexure; commentary to which shall be included in the last volume, where much is to depend upon what shape it takes in the Code finally.

Effort has been made in this edition to make it lawyer-friendly. Special emphasis has been given to frequently required portions of the Code. Parts of the original text that have outlived their utility have been removed without disturbing the originality of the text. Judgments covering a span of about two decades have been thoroughly analysed and those considered important were added to the text while the others find place in the footnotes. The authors seek forgiveness, if due to inadvertence, any important case law has missed mention. Suggestions are invited by the respected persons of the Bench and the Bar for improvements in the book.

We would like to thank Ms Monika A Srivastava, Advocate, who went through the entire text and contributed invaluable improvements. This edition would not have been completed in time without her assistance and help. We would also like to thank Ms Ankur Chandhoke and Mr Awadesh Srivastava, Advocates, for painstakingly going through the judgments.

Members of our firm, The Chambers of Law, deserve a special mention for relieving us from the routine work so as to enable us to concentrate on the book. Mr Dinesh Chopra, our typesetter, deserves a special mention for keeping up with the stiff schedules.

New Delhi
31 July 2001

Solil Paul
Anupam Srivastava

CONTENTS

Preface to the Twentieth Edition ..... v
Preface to the Nineteenth Edition ..... vii
Preface to the Eighteenth Edition ..... ix
Preface to the Seventeenth Edition Volume 1 ..... xi
Preface to the Seventeenth Edition Volumes 2 to 4 ..... xiii
Preface to the Sixteenth Edition ..... xv
Consolidated Table of Cases and Consolidated Subject Index ..... xxvii

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE
PRELIMINARY

Sections		Page
[S 1]	Short Title, commencement and extent	1
[S 2]	Definitions	18
[S 3]	Subordination of Courts	70
[S 4]	Savings	72
[S 5]	Application of the Code to Revenue Courts	75
[S 6]	Pecuniary jurisdiction	75
[S 7]	Provincial Small Cause Courts	77
[S 8]	Presidency Small Cause Courts	79

PART I
SUITS IN GENERAL

Jurisdiction of the Courts and Res Judicata

[S 9]	Courts to try all civil suits unless barred	81
[S 9A]	(Maharashtra Amendment)	185
[S 10]	Stay of suit	190
[S 11]	Res judicata	214

Sections		Page
[S 12]	Bar to further suit	403
[S 13]	When foreign judgment not conclusive	404
[S 14]	Presumption as to foreign judgments	429
	Place of Suing
[S 15]	Court in which suits to be instituted	430
[S 16]	Suits to be instituted where subject-matter situate	440
[S 17]	Suits for immovable property situate within jurisdiction of different Courts	454
[S 18]	Place of institution of suit where local limits of jurisdiction of Courts are uncertain	458
[S 19]	Suits for compensation for wrongs to person or movables	459
[S 20]	Other suits to be instituted where defendants reside or cause of action arises	461
[S 21]	Objections to jurisdiction	518
[S 21A]	Bar on suit to set aside decree on objection as to place of suing	535
[S 22]	Power to transfer suits which may be instituted in more than one Court	536
[S 23]	To what Court application lies	538
[S 24]	General power of transfer and withdrawal	541
[S 25]	Power of Supreme Court to transfer suits, etc	568
	Institution of suits
[S 26]	Institution of suits	578
	Summons and Discovery
[S 27]	Summons to defendants	581
[S 28]	Service of summons where defendant resides in another [State]	583
[S 29]	Service of foreign summonses	584
[S 30]	Power to order discovery and the like	584
[S 31]	Summons to witness	586
[S 32]	Penalty for default	586
	Judgment and Decree
[S 33]	Judgment and decree	587
	Interest
[S 34]	Interest	588

Sections Page

Costs

[S 35] Costs 628
[S 35A] Compensatory costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defences..... 655
[S 35B] Costs for causing delay 661

PART II EXECUTION

General

[S 36] Application to orders 669
[S 37] Definition of Court which passed a decree 675

Courts by which decrees may be executed

[S 38] Courts by which decrees may be executed..... 682
[S 39] Transfer of decree 692
[S 40] Transfer of decree to Court in another [State]..... 702
[S 41] Result of execution proceedings to be certified..... 703
[S 42] Powers of Court in executing transferred decree..... 705
[S 43] Execution of decrees passed by Civil Courts in places to which this Code does not extend 711
[S 44] Execution of decrees passed by Revenue Courts in places to which this Code does not extend..... 712
[S 44A] Execution of decrees passed by Courts in reciprocating territory 713
[S 45] Execution of decrees outside India..... 721
[S 46] Precepts..... 722

Questions to be determined by Court executing decree

[S 47] Questions to be determined by the Court executing decree 724

Limit of time for execution

[S 48] Execution barred in certain cases 805

Transferees and legal representatives

[S 49] Transferee 806
[S 50] Legal representative 808

Procedure in execution

[S 51] Powers of Court to enforce execution 815

Sections		Page
[S 52]	Enforcement of decree against legal representative	831
[S 53]	Liability of ancestral property	836
[S 54]	Partition of estate or separation of share	842
	Arrest and Detention
[S 55]	Arrest and detention	849
[S 56]	Prohibition of arrest or detention of women in execution of decree for money	853
[S 57]	Subsistence allowance	854
[S 58]	Detention and release	854
[S 59]	Release on ground of illness	858
	Attachment
[S 60]	Property liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree	858
[S 61]	Partial exemption of agricultural produce	900
[S 62]	Seizure of property in dwelling-house	900
[S 63]	Property attached in execution of decrees of several Courts	901
[S 64]	Private alienation of property after attachment to be void	906
	Sale
[S 65]	Purchaser's title	923
[S 66]	Suit against purchaser not maintainable on ground of purchase being on behalf of plaintiff	931
[S 67]	Power for [State Government] to make rules as to sales of land in execution of decrees for payment of money	941
[S 68—72]	[Rep. by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1956 (66 of 1956), sec.7 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).]	942
	Distribution of Assets
[S 73]	Proceeds of execution sale to be rateably distributed among decree-holders	942
	Resistance to Execution
[S 74]	Resistance to execution	970

PART III
INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS

	Commissions
[S 75]	Power of Court to issue Commissions	971

Sections Page

[S 76] Commission to another Court 972
[S 77] Letter of request 972
[S 78] Commissions issued by foreign courts 973

PART IV
SUITS IN PARTICULAR CASES

Suits by or against the Government or public officers in their official capacity

[S 79] Suits by or against Government 975
[S 80] Notice 979
[S 81] Exemption from arrest and personal appearance 1011
[S 82] Execution of decree 1011
[S 83] When aliens may sue 1013
[S 84] When foreign States may sue 1014
[S 85] Persons specially appointed by Government to prosecute or defend on behalf of foreign Rulers 1014
[S 86] Suits against foreign Rulers, Ambassadors and Envoys 1016
[S 87] Style of foreign Rulers as parties to suits 1024
[S 87A] Definitions of "foreign State" and "Ruler" 1024

Suits Against Rulers of Former Indian States

[S 87B] Application of sections 85 and 86 to Rulers of Former Indian States 1024

Interpleader

[S 88] Where interpleader-suit may be instituted 1026

PART V
SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

Arbitration

[S 89] Settlement of disputes outside the Court 1029

Special Case

[S 90] Power to state case for opinion of Court 1040

Sections Page

[Public nuisances and other wrongful acts affecting the public]

[S 91] Public nuisances and other wrongful acts affecting the public 1041

[S 92] Public charities 1049

[S 93] Exercise of powers of Advocate-General outside Presidency-towns 1103

PART VI

SUPPLEMENTAL PROCEEDINGS

[S 94] Supplemental proceedings 1105

[S 95] Compensation for obtaining arrest, attachment or injunction on insufficient grounds 1107

PART VII

APPEALS

Appeals from Original Decrees

[S 96] Appeal from original decrees 1115

[S 97] Appeal from final decree where no appeal from preliminary decree 1158

[S 98] Decision where appeal heard by two or more Judges 1162

[S 99] No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction 1169

[S 99A] No order under section 47 to be reversed or modified unless decision of the case is prejudicially affected 1175

Appeals from appellate decrees

[S 100] Second appeal 1175

[S 100A] No further appeal in certain cases 1264

[S 101] Second appeal on no other grounds 1281

[S 102] No second appeal in certain cases 1282

[S 103] Power of High Court to determine issue of fact 1291

Appeals from Orders

[S 104] Orders from which appeal lies 1299

[S 105] Other orders 1310

[S 106] What Courts to hear appeals 1317

Sections Page

General Provisions Relating to Appeals

[S 107] Powers of Appellate Court 1318
[S 108] Procedure in appeals from appellate decrees and orders 1327

Appeals to the Supreme Court

[S 109] When appeals lie to the Supreme Court 1327
[S 110] Value of subject-matter 1343
[S 111] Bar of certain appeals 1343
[S 111A] Appeals to Federal Court 1344
[S 112] Savings 1344

PART VIII
REFERENCE, REVIEW AND REVISION

[S 113] Reference to High Court 1347
[S 114] Review 1350
[S 115] Revision 1363

PART IX
SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE [HIGH COURTS [NOT BEING THE COURT OF A JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER]]

[S 116] Part to apply to certain High Courts 1487
[S 117] Application of Code to High Courts 1487
[S 118] Execution of decree before ascertainment of costs 1489
[S 119] Unauthorised persons not to address Court 1489
[S 120] Provisions not applicable to High Court in original civil jurisdiction 1490

PART X RULES

[S 121] Effect of rules in First Schedule 1491
[S 122] Power of certain High Courts to make rules 1491
[S 123] Constitution of Rule Committees in certain [States] 1502

Sections		Page
[S 124]	Committee to report to High Court	1504
[S 125]	Power of other High Courts to make rules	1505
[S 126]	Rules to be subject to approval	1506
[S 127]	Publication of rules	1506
[S 128]	Matters for which rules may provide	1506
[S 129]	Power of High Courts to make rules as to their original civil procedure	1507
[S 130]	Power of other High Courts to make rules as to matters other than procedure	1513
[S 131]	Publication of rules	1513

PART XI
MISCELLANEOUS

[S 132]	Exemption of certain women from personal appearance	1515
[S 133]	Exemption of other persons	1516
[S 134]	Arrest other than in execution of decree	1518
[S 135]	Exemption from arrest under civil process	1518
[S 135A]	Exemption of members of legislative bodies from arrest and detention under civil process	1521
[S 136]	Procedure where person to be arrested or property to be attached is outside district	1522
[S 137]	Language of subordinate Courts	1525
[S 138]	Power of High Court to require evidence to be recorded in English	1527
[S 139]	Oath on affidavit by whom to be administered	1527
[S 140]	Assessors in causes of salvage, etc	1529
[S 141]	Miscellaneous proceedings	1529
[S 142]	Orders and notices to be in writing	1541
[S 143]	Postage	1541
[S 144]	Application for Restitution	1542
[S 145]	Enforcement of liability of surety	1580
[S 146]	Proceedings by or against representatives	1595
[S 147]	Consent or agreement by persons under disability	1599
[S 148]	Enlargement of time	1600

Sections		Page
[S 148A]	Right to lodge a caveat	1619
[S 149]	Power to make up deficiency of court-fees	1622
[S 150]	Transfer of business	1631
[S 151]	Saving of inherent powers of Court	1633
[S 152]	Amendment of judgments, decree or orders	1671
[S 153]	General power to amend	1692
[S 153A]	Power to amend decree or order where appeal is summarily dismissed	1696
[S 153B]	Place of trial to be deemed to be open Court	1697
[S 154]	Saving of present right of appeal	1698
[S 155]	Amendment of certain Acts	1698
[S 156]	Repeals	1699
[S 157]	Continuance of orders under repealed enactments	1699
[S 158]	Reference to Code of Civil Procedure and other repealed enactments	1699

CONSOLIDATED TABLE OF CASES AND CONSOLIDATED SUBJECT INDEX

[Vol. 1, Vol. 2 and Vol. 3]

[For the text of Table of Cases and Subject Index refer Vol. 3]

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

(5 of 1908)[1]

[21 March, 1908]

An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

PRELIMINARY

[S 1] Short Title, commencement and extent.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of January, 1909.

---

1. This Act has been amended in its application to Assam by Assam Acts 2 of 1941 and 8 of 1953; to Tamil Nadu by Madras Act 34 of 1950, Madras A.O. 1950, and Tamil Nadu Act 15 of 1970; to Punjab by Punjab Act 7 of 1934; to Uttar Pradesh by U.P. Acts 4 of 1925, 35 of 1948, 24 of 1954, 17 of 1970, 57 of 1976 and 31 of 1978; to Karnataka by Mysore Act 14 of 1955; to Kerala by Kerala Act 13 of 1957; to Rajasthan by Rajasthan Act 19 of 1958; to Maharashtra by Maharashtra Acts 22 of 1960 and 25 of 1970. It has been extended to Berar by the Berar Laws Act, 1941 (4 of 1941) and, by Notification under sections 5 and 5A of the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874 (14 of 1874), also to the following Scheduled Districts:—

(1) The Districts of Jalpaiguri, Cachar (excluding the North Cachar Hills), Goalpara (including the Eastern Duars), Kamrup, Darrang, Nowgong (excluding the Mikir Hill Tracts), Sibsagar (excluding the Mikir Hill Tracts) and Lakhimpur (excluding the Dibrugarh Frontier Tracts), Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 5 and Gazette of India, 1914, Pt I, p 1690.

(2) The District of Darjeeling and the District of Hazaribagh, Ranchi, Palamau and Manbhum in Chota Nagpur, Calcutta Gazette, 1909, Pt I, p 25 and Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 33.

(3) The Province of Kumaon and Garhwal and the Tarai Parganas (with modifications), U.P. Gazette, 1909, Pt I, p 3 and Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 31.

(4) The Pargana of Jaunsar-Bawar in Dehradun and the Scheduled portion of the Mirzapur District, U.P. Gazette, 1909, Pt. I, p. 4 and Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 32.

(5) Coorg, Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 32.

(6) Scheduled Districts in the Punjab, Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 33.

(7) Sections 36 to 43 to all the Scheduled Districts in Madras, Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 152.

(8) Scheduled Districts in the C.P., except so much as is already in force and so much authorizes the attachment and sale of immovable property in execution of a decree, not being a decree directing the sale of such property, Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 239.

(9) Ajmer-Merwara except sections 1 and 155 to 158, Gazette of India, 1909, Pt II, p 480.

(10) Pargana Dhalbhum, the Municipality of Chaibasa in the Kolhan and the Porahat Estate in the District of Singhbhum, Calcutta Gazette, 1909, Pt I, p 453 and Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 443.

Under section 3(3)(a) of the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation (3 of 1872), sections 38 to 42 and 156 and rules 4 to 9 in Order XXI in the First Schedule have been declared to be in force in the Santhal Parganas and the rest of the Code for the trial of suits referred to in section 10 of the Santhal Parganas Justice Regulation, 1893 (5 of 1893), Calcutta Gazette, 1909, Pt I, p 45.

It has been declared to be in force in Panth Piploda by the Panth Piploda Laws Regulation, 1929 (1 of 1929), section 2; in the Khondmals District by the Khondmals Laws.

[2][(3) It extends to the whole of India except—

(a) [3][];

(b) the State of Nagaland and the tribal areas:

Provided that the State Government concerned may, by notification in the Official Gazette, extend the provisions of this Code or any of them to the whole or part of the State of Nagaland or such other tribal areas, as the case may be, with such supplemental, incidental or consequential modifications as may be specified in the notification.

Explanation.—In this clause, "tribal areas" means the territories which, immediately before the 21st day of January, 1972, were included in the tribal areas of Assam as referred to in paragraph 20 of the Sixth Schedule to the Constitution.

(4) In relation to the Amindivi Islands, and the East Godavari, West Godavari and Vishakhapatnam Agencies in the State of Andhra Pradesh and the Union territory of Lakshadweep, the application of this Code shall be without prejudice to the application of any rule or regulation for the time being in force in such Islands, Agencies or such Union Territory, as the case may be, relating to the application of this Code].

SYNOPSIS

[s 1.1]	Previous Procedure	2		[s 1.3.6]	Legal Fiction	8
[s 1.2]	Consolidate and Amend	4		[s 1.3.7]	Judicial Precedents	9
[s 1.3]	Interpretation of the Act	4		[s 1.3.8]	Proceedings of the Legislature	9
	[s 1.3.1] Literal and Grammatical Construction	5		[s 1.3.9]	Parts of the Statute — Preamble	10
	[s 1.3.2] Logical Construction	7		[s 1.3.10]	Code Exhaustive	14
	[s 1.3.3] Harmonious Construction	7		[s 1.3.11]	Retrospective Operation	14
	[s 1.3.4] Liberal Construction of Procedure Codes	7	[s 1.4]	Courts of Civil Judicature		15
	[s 1.3.5] Associated Words	8	[s 1.5]	Extent Clause		16

[s 1.1] Previous Procedure

The first Code of Civil Procedure was Act 8 of 1859. Prior to that, the procedure of the mofussil courts was regulated by special Acts and Regulations repealed by Act 10 of 1861: and the procedure of the Supreme Courts was under their own rules and orders and certain Acts, for example Act 17 of 1852 and Act 6 of 1854. The Code of 1859 applied to mofussil courts only. In 1862, the Supreme Court and the Courts of Sadder Diwani Adalat in the Presidency towns were abolished by the Indian High Courts Act, 1861 (24 and 25 Vic C 104) and the powers of those courts were vested in the chartered high courts. The Letters Patent of 1862 establishing the high courts extended to them the procedure of the Code of Civil

2. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 2, for sub-section (3) (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
3. Clause (a) omitted by the Jammu and Kashmir Reorganisation Act, 2019 (34 of 2019), sections 95, 96 and Fifth Schedule, Table-1 (w.e.f. 31-10-2019). Clause (a), before omission stood as under:
"(a) the State of Jammu and Kashmir;".

Procedure, 1859. The Charters of 1865, which empowered the high courts to make rules and orders regulating proceedings in civil cases required them to be guided as far as possible by the provisions of the Code of 1859 and subsequent Amending Acts.

Such Amending Acts were: Act 4 of 1860; 43 of 1860; 23 of 1861; 9 of 1863; 20 of 1867; 7 of 1870; 14 of 1870; 9 of 1871; 32 of 1871; and 7 of 1872.

The next Code was Act 10 of 1877, which repealed that of 1859. This was amended by Acts 18 of 1878 and 12 of 1879; then superseded by the Code of 1882 (Act 14 of 1882). This was amended by Acts 15 of 1882; 14 of 1885; 4 of 1886; 10 of 1886; 7 of 1887; 8 of 1887; 7 of 1888; 10 of 1888; 13 of 1889; 8 of 1890; 6 of 1892; 5 of 1894; 7 of 1895 and 13 of 1895, and then superseded by the present Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (CPC).

After that, there have been two important Amending Acts, Act 2 of 1951 and Act 66 of 1956 which mainly carried out certain changes necessitated by certain provisions of the Constitution of India and the reorganisation of certain States. In 1976, the Parliament enacted the Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, which has carried out drastic changes both in the sections and the rules. The Act received the assent of the President on the 9 September 1976. In exercise of powers conferred by sub-section (2) of section 1, the Central Government issued a Notification, GSR 15 (E) dated the 14 January 1977, which appointed 1 February 1977 as the date on which the provisions of the new Act except sections 12, 13 and 50 would come into force and 1 May 1977, as the date when sections 12 and 50 would come into force. A notification GSR 416 (E) dated 27 June 1977, fixed 1 July 1977 as the date when section 13 would come into force.

Since then, there have been two very important Amending Acts, the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 and the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002. In fact, the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 was passed by the Parliament inserting various amendments for speedy disposal and curtailing delays at various stages of the suit and appeals. These drastic changes made did not find favour with majority of bar associations who were of the opinion that due to these rigorous changes, the litigants would suffer injustice. Before the action for enforcement of Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 could be taken, various representations were received and the Bar Council of India and various bar associations requested the government to reconsider the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999. The matter was reconsidered and after consulting all concerned, the Code of Civil Procedure was further amended vide Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 and the effects of drastic changes made in the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 were diluted.

In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (2) of section 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), the Central Government appointed 1 July 2002, as the date on which all provisions [except clause (iii) of section 16, clause (iii) of section 18 so far as it relates to rules 9 and 10 of O VIII of the First Schedule to the CPC and section 30] of the said Act came into force vide SO 603(E), dated 6 June 2002, published in the Gazette of India, Pt II, section 3(ii), dated 6 June 2002. Further, vide SO 604(E), dated 6 June 2002, published in the Gazette of India, Pt II, section 3(ii), dated 6 June 2002, in exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (2) of section 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 (22 of 2002), the Central Government appointed 1 July 2002, as the date on which the provisions of the said Act came into force.

[s 1.2] Consolidate and Amend

Since the object of the Act, as stated in the preamble is both to consolidate and amend, the Act has to be construed as forming a Code, exhaustive of the matters dealt with therein.[4] To consolidate a law means to collect the statutory law relating to a particular subject and to bring it down to date in order that it may form a useful Code applicable to the circumstances existing at the time when the consolidation Act is enacted.[5] The provisions of the Act have accordingly to be construed with reference to the circumstances existing at the time of its enactment.[6] If the language is plain and unambiguous, resort need not be had to the earlier law; but if it is capable of more than one meaning, it is permissible to refer to the previous state of law to fix the meaning of the provision under construction.[7] This is so because a consolidating Act raises the presumption that it does not intend to alter the earlier law.[8] Yet, the House of Lords spelt out a change in the law from the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908 and one of the Law Lords refused to look into the history of the clauses of the Act.[9] The better view, however, seems to be that when substantial changes have been made, the previous Acts may be looked into in order to find out whether a different construction is required on the same word in different provisions.[10] Since the CPC is both, a consolidating and an amending enactment, where it plainly amends, resort cannot be had to the earlier law.

It has been observed by the Patna High Court that CPC is a complete code in itself. Once proceedings are initiated under the Code, rights and remedies have to be looked thereunder. All other manner and/or procedure are impliedly prohibited.[11]

[s 1.3] Interpretation of the Act

A statute is an edict of the Legislature. The language employed in a statute is the determinative factor of legislative intent. The first and primary rule of construction is that the intention of the legislature must be found in the words used by the Legislature itself.[12] In RMD Chamarbaugwala v UOI,[13] the Supreme Court observed that a statute is to be construed according "to the intention of them that make it". The duty of the judicature is "to act upon the true intention of the Legislature — the mens or sententia legis.[14]

---

4. Ravula Subba Rao v CIT, AIR 1956 SC 604 : (1956) 2 Mad LJ 43 : (1956) 1 SCR 577 : (1956) SCJ 591 : (1956) SCA 1025 : (1956) 30 ITR 163 (SC).
5. Premlal Mullick v The Administrator-General of Bengal, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 788 (PC); Shantha Nand Gir Chela v Basudevanand, AIR 1930 All 225, 230 (FB).
6. Premlal Mullick v The Administrator-General of Bengal, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 788 (PC); Gulabchand Gambhirmal v Kudilal Govindram Seksaria, AIR 1951 MB 1, 5.
7. Venkateswara Sarma v SN Venkatesa Aiyar, AIR 1941 Mad 449 : (1941) ILR Mad 599; Jiban Krishna Dutta v Sailendra Nath Shee, AIR 1946 Cal 272 : (1946) ILR Cal 250 : (1945-46) 50 Cal WN 129 : (1945) 81 Cal LJ 216; SD Krishna Ayyangar v SV Nallaperumal Pillai, AIR 1920 PC 56 : (1920) ILR 43 Mad 550, pp 559, 565 : (1919-20) 47 IA 33, p 42 : (1895) ILR 22 Cal 788 : 22 IA 107 : (1920) Mad WN 419; Narendra v Kamal Basini, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 563 : 23 IA 18; Kondayya Chetti v Narasimhulu Chetti, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 97, p 103; Lala Suraj Prosad v Golab Chand, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 517; Gulabchand Gambhirmal v Kudilal Govindram, AIR 1952 MB 149 (FB) : (1952) ILR MB 15; Harcharan Karanjai v Ulipur Bank Ltd, AIR 1942 Cal 442 : (1941-42) 46 Cal WN 634 : (1942) 75 Cal LJ 203.
8. Gilbert v Gilbert and Boucher, (1928) p 1; Re Turner's Will Trusts, (1937) 1 Ch 15; Poonamchand v Municipal Board, Jhalawar, AIR 1965 Raj 98, p 102 : (1964) Raj LR 620 : (1964) Raj LW 620.
9. Food Controller v Cork, (1923) AC 647.
10. R v Burt, Ex Parte Presburg, (1960) 1 QB 625.
11. Kapildeo Prasad v Ramanand Prasad, AIR 2007 Pat 1 : 2007 (2) AIR Jhar. 231.
12. Padmasundara Rao v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2002 SC 1334, p 1340 : (2002) 3 SCC 533.
13. RMD Chamarbaugwala v UOI, AIR 1957 SC 628, p 631 : (1957) 1 SCR 930.
14. Salmond, Jurisprudence, 11th Edn, p 152.

If a statutory provision is open to more than one interpretation, the court has to choose that interpretation which represents the true intention of the Legislature.[15]

The task is often not an easy one and the difficulties arise because of various reasons. To mention a few of them: words in any language are not scientific symbols having any precise or definite meaning, and language is but an imperfect medium to convey one's thought, much less of a large assembly consisting of various shades of opinion.[16]

The Supreme Court explained it thus:

> The tragedy is that although in the matter of correspondence or conversation the person who has spoken the words or used the language can be approached for clarification, the legislature cannot be approached as the Legislature, after enacting a law or Act, becomes functus officio so far as that particular Act is concerned and it cannot itself interpret it.[17]

Quoting Frankfurther with approval, Pasayat, J, observed in State of Jharkhand v Govind Singh,[18] as follows:

> Where, however, the words were clear, there is no ambiguity and the intention of the Legislature is clearly conveyed, there is no scope for the Court to innovate or take upon itself the task of amending or altering the statutory provisions. In that situation the Judges should not proclaim that they are playing the role of a law-maker merely for an exhibition of judicial valour. They have to remember that there is a line, though thin, which separates adjudication from legislation. That line should not be crossed or erased. This can be vouchsafed by 'an alert recognition of the necessity not to cross it an instinctive, as well as trained reluctance to do so.
>
> The courts are therefore, held as "finishers, refiners, and polishers of legislatures which give them in a state requiring varying degrees of further processing".[19] However, it must be borne in mind that "it is impossible even for the most imaginative legislature to forestall exhaustively situations and circumstances that may emerge after enacting a statute where its application may be called for. It is in such a situation the Courts' duty to expound arises with a caution that the Court should not try to legislate".[20]

The process of construction, therefore, combines both literal and purposive approaches. In other words, the legislative intention, i.e., the true or legal meaning of an enactment is derived by considering the meaning of the words used in the enactment in the light of the discernible purpose or object which comprehends the mischief and its remedy to which the enactment is directed.[21]

The following are some of the leading rules for the construction of statutes:

[s 1.3.1] Literal and Grammatical Construction

The golden rule for the interpretation of this as well as other Acts is to consider the plain meaning of the words used.[22] The court's function is not to say what the Legislature meant but to ascertain what the Legislature has said it meant.[23]

---

15. District Mining Officer v Tata Iron and Steel Co, AIR 2001 SC 3134, p 3152 : (2001) 7 SCC 358.
16. Justice GP Singh, Principles of Statutory Interpretation, 12th Edn, 2010, p 3.
17. JP Bansal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2003 SC 1405, p 1409 : (2003) 45 SCC 134.
18. State of Jharkhand v Govind Singh, AIR 2005 SC 294, p 297 : (2005) 10 SCC 437 (See: Frankfurther, Some Reflections on the Reading of Statutes in "Essays on Jurisprudence", Columbia Law Review, p 51).
19. See Corrocraft Ltd v Pan American Airways, (1968) 3 WLR 714, p 732.
20. Bhatia International v Bulk Trading S.A., AIR 2002 SC 1432, p 1437 : (2002) 4 SCC 105.
21. Justice GP Singh, Principles of Statutory Interpretation (12th Edn, 2010), p 12.
22. Udebhan v Kapoor Chand, AIR 1967 P&H 53, 59 : (1966) 68 Punj LR 591; Moolji Jaitha v Khandesh Spinning and Weaving Mills, AIR 1950 FC 83, 116; Om Prakash v Emperor, AIR 1948 Ngp 199 : (1947) ILR Nag 579; Joseph D'Silva v Emperor, AIR 1947 Bom 310 : (1946) ILR Bom 1069; Sales-tax Officer v Kanhayalal, AIR 1959 SC 135 : (1959) 1 SCR 1350 : (1959) SCJ 53.
23. Tukino v Actea District Mooriland Board, AIR 1941 PC 109; Salish v Sudhir, AIR 1942 Cal 429 : (1942) 46 Cal WN 541, p 543; Lala Suraj v Golab Chand, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 724.

The court cannot proceed on the assumption that the Legislature has made a mistake. Even if there is a defect, it is not for the court to add to or amend the words of a statute or to supply a causus omissus. That is for the Legislature.[24] It is always dangerous to paraphrase an Act.[25] When the language is clear, it is the duty of the court to give effect to it[26] without calling in aid outside considerations to ascertain the intentions of the Legislature.[27] Statutory provisions cannot be whittled down by general principles of equity, justice and good conscience.[28] Nor can they be avoided on the ground of hardship or inconvenience when the meaning is clear on the face of the statute;[29] nor is the court concerned with the motive of Parliament in enacting the statute[30] or its wisdom.[31] It is also well-settled that the true import of provisions which are explicit cannot be limited or controlled by recourse to what is said to be the spirit of the legislation.[32]

Where, however, the language of a provision is of doubtful import, that which advances the object of the statute[33] or its validity has to be preferred.[34] It is then permissible to call in aid the well-settled rules of construction and in particular, the history of the legislation, the mischief intended to be remedied, the scheme of the Act and the consequences which may flow from accepting one or the other of the interpretations, since no legislative body is presumed to confer a power which is capable of misuse.[35] When two constructions are possible, the one which makes the provision legal[36] or which avoids injustice,[37] or absurdity,[38] is to be preferred. In interpreting the provision of a statute, that construction should be adopted which would give effect to all parts thereof and would not render any of them meaningless or inoperative.[39] It is not a sound principle of construction to brush aside words in a statute as being inapposite surplusage if they can have appropriate application in circumstances conceivably within the statute.[40]

---

24. Nalinkya v Sham Sundar, AIR 1953 SC 148 : (1953) 4 SCR 533; British India General Insurance Co Ltd v Itbar Singh, AIR 1959 SC 1331 : (1960 1 SCR 168.
25. Durga Chowdhrani v Jawahar Singh, (1890) ILR 18 Cal 23.
26. Sales-tax Officer v Kanhaya Lal, AIR 1959 SC 135; KM Viswanatha Pillai v KMS Pillai, AIR 1969 SC 493 : (1969) 1 SCC 88; Nandlal More v Ramchandran Mirchandani, AIR 1968 Bom 208 : (1966) 68 Bom LR 871; Bharat Sarvodaya Mills Co Ltd v Mohata Bros, AIR 1969 Guj 178, 186 : (1969) 10 Guj LR 457; Gram Panchayat, Murthal v Land Acquisition Collector, AIR 1972 Punj 36; UOI v Authority under the Minimum Wages Act, AIR 1969 Bom 310; Khusilal v Board of Revenue, AIR 1967 MP 201.
27. New Piece Goods Bazaar Co Ltd, Bombay v CIT, Bombay, AIR 1950 SC 115 : (1950) SCR 513 : (1950) SCJ 437.
28. Jayachand v Doli Govinda, AIR 1944 Cal 272 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 454.
29. CIT, West Bengal v Sri Kishab Chandra Mandal, AIR 1950 SC 265 : (1950) SCR 435 : (1950) SCJ 364.
30. RMDC v State of Mysore, AIR 1962 SC 594; Gajapati Narayan Deo v State of Orissa, AIR 1953 SC 375 : (1954) SCR 1 : (1953) SCJ 592.
31. Srinivasamurthy v State of Mysore, AIR 1959 SC 894.
32. Kesavan Madhava Menon v State of Bombay, AIR 1951 SC 128 : (1951) SCR 228 : (1951) SCJ 182; Rananjaya Singh v Baijnath Singh, AIR 1954 SC 749 : (1955) 1 SCR 671 : (1954) SCJ 838.
33. Kanai Lal v Parammidhi, AIR 1957 SC 907 : (1958) SCR 360; Ganpat Ragho v Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal, AIR 1970 Bom 86 : (1970) ILR Bom 626 : (1969) 71 Bom LR 815.
34. State of Rajasthan v Mewar Sugar Mills Ltd, AIR 1969 SC 880; Corp of Calcutta v Liberty Cinema, AIR 1965 SC 1107.
35. Keshavananda v State of Kerala, AIR 1973 SC 1461, pp 1619, 1934 : (1973) 4 SCC 225.
36. Sushil v Emperor, AIR 1943 Cal 489 : (1943) 47 Cal WN 757.
37. Manindra v Gopi Ballav, AIR 1941 Cal 353 : (1941) 45 Cal WN 44, p 48.
38. Parulekar v District Magistrate, Thane, AIR 1952 SC 324 : (1952) SCR 683 : (1952) SCJ 476; State of Punjab v Ajaib Singh, AIR 1953 SC 10 : (1953) SCR 204 : (1952) SCJ 664.
39. Shiv Bahadur Singh v State of Vindhya Pradesh, AIR 1953 SC 394 : (1953) SCR 1189 : (1953) SCJ 563; Venkataramana v State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 255 : (1958) SCR 895 : (1958) SCJ 382; Sirajul Haq v SC Board of Wakf, AIR 1959 SC 198 : (1959) SCR 1287 : (1959) SCJ 367.
40. Aswini Kumar v Arabinda Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369 : (1953) SCR 1 : (1952) SCJ 568.

[s 1.3.2] Logical Construction

While the duty of the court is to ascertain the intention of the legislature from the words actually used, it does not mean that the decision should rest on a literal interpretation of the words used in disregard of all other materials, to arrive at the real meaning. It would be legitimate to consider what was the law before the Act was passed, and what was the mischief or defect for which the law had not provided, and what remedy the Parliament had appointed, and the reasons for the remedy.[41] The grammatical construction of the words cannot always be treated as invariable, and it must yield to the context when that is required.[42]

[s 1.3.3] Harmonious Construction

The CPC is one continuous whole, the sections being enacted simultaneously;[43] and therefore, in order to ascertain the true legislative intent, the words and phrases are to be taken, not in an isolated and detached manner dissociated from the context, but are to be read together and construed in the light of the purpose and object of the Act itself.[44] Hence, when two procedures or two remedies are provided, one of them is not to be construed as in derogation of the other,[45] and that construction should be adopted which would give effect to all the provisions.[46] The sub-sections of a section must be read as parts of an integral whole and as interdependent, and that construction should be adopted which would reconcile them and avoid repugnancy.[47]

As aptly observed, it should not be lightly assumed that "Parliament had given with one hand what it took away with the other".[48] Venkatarama Aiyar, J, put it thus:

> The rule of construction is well settled that when there are in an enactment two provisions which cannot be reconciled with each other, they should be so interpreted that, if possible, effect should be given to both. This is known as the rule of harmonious construction.[49]

It is a cardinal principle of construction of a statute that effort should be made in construing the different provisions so that each provision will have its play and in the event of any conflict a harmonious construction should be given.[50]

[s 1.3.4] Liberal Construction of Procedure Codes

Procedure is mere machinery and its object is to facilitate and not to obstruct the administration of justice.[51] The CPC should therefore be considered liberally and, as far as

---

41. RMDC v UOI, (1957) SCR 930 : (1957) SCJ 593 : (1957) SCA 912; Bipal Beni v Sawarkar, AIR 1962 Bom 167.
42. Regional Provident Fund Commr v Sri Krishna Metal Mfg Co, AIR 1962 SC 1536.
43. Arjun Rantara v Krishna Chandra, AIR 1942 Pat 1; Janardhan v Ramdhone, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 738, 743.
44. Dharshan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 83 : (1953) SCR 319 : (1953) SCJ 48; Poppatlal Shaw v State of Madras, AIR 1953 SC 274 : (1953) SCR 677 : (1953) SCJ 369.
45. Gaur Chand v Pradyamma, AIR 1945 Cal 6 : (1943) ILR 2 Cal 485; Ram Lakan v Bisweswar, AIR 1948 Nag 214 : (1948) ILR Nag 85; Kishan v Habibullah, AIR 1946 All 448 : (1947) ILR All 63; Ayodhya Prasad v Bala Mukund, (1886) ILR 8 All 354.
46. CV Rama Rao v E Narayana, AIR 1963 AP 168 (FB).
47. Madan Lal v Shree Changdeo Sugar Mills, AIR 1962 SC 1543; Turabuddin v Commr, Meerut Division, AIR 1972 All 146.
48. Dormer v Newcastle-on-Tyne Corp, (1940) 2 All ER 521 p 527 (CA) [Goddard, LJ].
49. Venkataramana Devaru v State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 255, p 268 : (1958) SCR 895.
50. British Airways Plc v UOI, AIR 2002 SC 391 p 393 : (2002) 2 SCC 95.
51. Indrajit Pratap v Amar Singh, (1923) ILR Pat 676, p 684 : 50 IA 183, p 191; Jobnram Bibi v Howrah Jute Mills, AIR 1948 Cal 134 : (1948) ILR 2 Cal 1; Jyoti Bhusan v BN Sarkar, AIR 1945 All 311 : (1945) ILR All 165; Sangram Singh v Election Tribunal, Kotah, AIR 1955 SC 425, p 429 : (1955) 2 SCR 1.

possible, technical objections should not be allowed to defeat substantial justice.[52] A technical construction of sections that leaves no room for reasonable elasticity of interpretation should be guarded against.[53] No defence should be excluded except where to do so would be to negative the provision of a rule of procedure. It is no longer the province of procedure to exclude defences.[54] The CPC is a body of general law, designed to facilitate justice. It should not be treated as an enactment providing for punishment and penalties. The law of justice should be so constructed as to render justice where reasonably possible.[55]

A construction which reduces the statute to a futility has to be avoided. A statute or any enacting provision therein must be so construed as to make it effective and operative on the principle expressed in the maxim ut res magis valeat quam pereat, i.e., a liberal construction should be put upon written instruments, so as to uphold them, if possible, and carry into effect the intention of the parties.[56]

[s 1.3.5] Associated Words

When one or more words which are susceptible of analogous meaning are coupled together noscitur a sociis, they are understood to be used in their cognate sense and accordingly, the more general is restricted to a sense analogous to the less general;[57] but this rule of construction cannot be invoked where the intention of the legislature is clear and unambiguous.[58] Where general words follow particular and specific words of the same nature, the general words must be confined to things of the same kind as those specified.[59]

[s 1.3.6] Legal Fiction

Legal fiction is a statutory creation which helps assume the existence of a fact or taking place of an event which neither exists in reality nor has actually happened. According to dictionary meaning, a legal fiction presupposes the correctness of the state of facts on which it is based and all the consequences which flow from that state of facts have to be worked out to their logical conclusion.[60] When a statute enacts that something shall be deemed to have been done, which in fact and in truth was not done, the court is entitled and bound to ascertain for what purposes and between what person the statutory fiction is to be resorted to.[61] Further, the court is to assume all those facts and consequences which are incidental or inevitable corollaries to giving effect to the fiction.[62] The Supreme Court has held that the Legislature is

---

52. Jyoti Bhusan v BN Sarkar, AIR 1945 All 311; Bhala v Ranrati, AIR 1946 All 425 : (1946) ILR All 615; Ashraj v Karim Bux, AIR 1949 All 198; Punjab Co-op Bank Ltd v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 Punj 71.
53. Sangram Singh v Election Tribunal, AIR 1955 SC 425 : (1955) 2 SCR 1 : (1955) SCJ 431 : (1955) SCA 545; Ramachandra v Gopi Krishna, AIR 1957 Pat 260; Binda Prasad v United Bank Ltd, AIR 1961 Pat 152.
54. Chhatto Lal v Narayan Das, AIR 1930 Cal 53 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 704.
55. Chinnammal v P Arumugham, (1990) 1 SCC 513.
56. CIT v Hindustan Bulk Carriers, AIR 2003 SC 3942 : (2003) 3 SCC 57.
57. Chana Lal v State of Gujarat, AIR 1961 Guj 27.
58. Nagpur Corp v Its Employees, AIR 1960 SC 675 : (1960) 2 SCR 942 : (1961) 2 SCJ 134 : (1960) 1 SCA 596.
59. Kochunni v States of Madras and Kerala, AIR 1960 SC 1080 : (1960) 3 SCR 887 : (1961) 2 SCJ 443 : (1960) 2 SCA 412.
60. P Ramanatha Aiyar's Law Lexicon, (2nd Edn, 1997), p 1099.
61. Ex parte, Walton, Re Ley, (1881) 17 Ch D 746, p 756.
62. East End Dwelling Co Ltd v Finbury Borough Council, (1951) 2 All ER 587, p 599.

quite competent to create a legal fiction, in other words, to enact a deeming provision for the purpose of assuming the existence of a fact which does not really exist.[63]

In State of Travancore-Cochin v Shanmugha Vilas Cashewnut Factory,[64] SR.Das, J, (as he then was) expressed the view that a thoughtful effect must be given to the legal fiction, it should not be extended beyond the purpose for which it is created. Later on he re-affirmed the above view, as Acting CJ, in Bengal Immunity Co Ltd v State of Bihar,[65] wherein he stated that "legal fictions are created only for some definite purpose", and proceeded to add that a "legal fiction is to be limited to the purpose for which it was created and should not be extended beyond that legitimate field".

The general rule is that a legal fiction cannot be extended beyond the specific purpose for which it is enacted; but in construing its scope, it will be proper and even necessary to assume all those facts on which alone the legal fiction can operate.[66]

[s 1.3.7] Judicial Precedents

In procedure, uniformity of decision is important,[67] and if a judge finds a principle laid down by competent authority, it is better to apply it even if his own mind is not satisfied, than to fritter it away in its application to cases which manifestly come within it.[68] This rule, however, will not apply in case of conflicting decision of Benches of equal jurisdiction.[69] It has been observed by the Supreme Court that in cases of conflict among Bench decisions of the same court, the better course for the Bench hearing the case is to refer the question to a Full Bench.[70]

[s 1.3.8] Proceedings of the Legislature

The proceedings of the Legislature in passing an Act are to be excluded in the consideration of the judicial construction of the Act. That was laid down by the Privy Council in Administrator General v Premlal Mullick,[71] and also by the Supreme Court in Aswini Kumar's case.[72] These proceedings include reports of the select committee, statements of objects and reasons attached to bills and debates of the legislature.[73] Thus, the report of the Law Commissioner on which the Indian Penal Code, 1860 was based was held to be inadmissible for construing its provisions, though valuable as a piece of history.[74] It has, however, been held by the federal court that the

---

63. JK Cotton Spinning & Weaving Mills Ltd v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 191, p 202 : (1987) Supp SCC 350.
64. State of Travancore-Cochin v Shanmugha Vilas Cashewnut Factory, AIR 1953 SC 333, p 343 : (1954) SCR 53.
65. Bengal Immunity Co Ltd v State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 661, p 680.
66. CIT v Teja Singh, AIR 1959 SC 352 : (1959) Supp 1 SCR 394 : (1959) SCJ 425; Jumrati v Bannerjee, AIR 1962 Cal 525 (FB).
67. Sadasivan v Ramalinga, 2 IA 219 : 15 Beng LR 383; Ful Kumari v Ghanshyam, (1903) ILR 31 Cal 511.
68. Usil v Hailes, (1877) 3 CPD 327; Harrow Chander v Surodhoni, (1868) 9 WR 402.
69. Peramanayagam v Sivaraman, AIR 1952 Mad 419.
70. Jaisri Sahu v Raj Dewan Debey, (1962) 1 SCJ 578.
71. Administrator General v Premlal Mullick, 22 IA 107.
72. Aswini Kumar Ghose v Arabinda Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369 : (1953) SCR 1 : (1952) SCJ 568.
73. Administrator General v Premlal Mullick, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 788 : 22 IA 107; Krishna Ayyangar v Nallaperumal, 47 IA 33; Midnapur Zamindary v Chandra Singh Dhudhuia, AIR 1943 Cal 544 : (1943) ILR 2 Cal 245 : (1943) 47 Cal WN 733; Queen Empress v Shri Churn, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 1017; Queen Empress v Tilak, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 112; Maharaj Tewari v Har Charan, (1903) ILR 26 All 144.
74. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 : (1958) SCR 328 : (1958) SCJ 111 : (1958) SCA 665.

White Paper and the report of the joint select committee on which the Government of India Act, 1935, was based could be referred to as the historical facts in construing Item 48 of List II of the said Act.[75] It has likewise been held that the report of the drafting committee of the Constituent Assembly may be referred to when there is ambiguity in the meaning of the article in the Constitution of India, but it cannot be read so as to control its meaning.[76]

Statements of Objects and Reasons are inadmissible for construing the plain words of a statute;[77] but it has been observed that they may be used for the limited purpose of ascertaining the conditions which prevailed at the time of passing the legislation.[78] Speeches made by members in the course of debates cannot be used for interpreting a statute.[79] Acceptance or rejection of amendments to a Bill is not admissible as forming history of legislation[80] nor can the fact of deletion of a word from the provisions of the Bill in the course of the debates be relied on as an aid in the construction of the statute as enacted.[81]

[s 1.3.9] Parts of the Statute — Preamble

The preamble of a statute serves as "a key to open the minds of its makers" and shows the general purposes for which they enacted its several provisions.[82] It can be properly resorted to where doubts and ambiguities arise upon the words of the enacting part[83] and to expound in such a case, the nature, extent and application of powers actually conferred, though it cannot be construed as substantively creating them.[84] But, where the language of the enactment is clear, the preamble cannot be used to cut down or limit its operation.[85] Likewise, the long title of an enactment cannot be used for restricting the plain terms of an enactment,[86] though it might throw light on the intent and design of the Legislature and the scope and purpose of the Legislation.[87] Headings prefixed to sections are regarded as preambles to those sections and

---

75. Re CP and Berar Motor Spirit Taxation Act, (1939) 1 FCR 18.
76. AK Gopalan v State of Madras, AIR 1950 SC 27 : (1950) SCR 88 : (1950) SCJ 174.
77. Ashvini Kumar v Arvind Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369.
78. State of West Bengal v Subodh Gopal Bose, AIR 1954 SC 92 : (1954) SCR 587 : (1954) SCJ 127; Ranganathan v Govt of Madras, AIR 1955 SC 604 : (1955) 2 SCR 374 : (1955) SCJ 515 : (1955) SCA 841; Kanga Valley State Co v Kidarnath, AIR 1961 P&H 540 (FB); Re Oriental Gas Co, AIR 1961 Cal 267; Jai Lal v Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1781.
79. State of Travancore Cochin v Bombay Co Ltd, AIR 1952 SC 366 : (1952) SCR 1112 : (1952) SCJ 527; AG of Bengal v Premnath Mullick, 22 IA 107, p 118; Gopalan v State of Madras, AIR 1950 SC 27 : (1950) SCR 88; Keshavananda v State of Kerala, AIR 1973 SC 1461, p 1633; US v Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. (1897) 109 US 290, 318.
80. Aswini Kumar v Arvind Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369.
81. Express Newspapers v UOI, AIR 1958 SC 578 : (1959) SCR 12 : (1958) SCJ 1113 : (1958) SCA 952.
82. Re Berubari Union and Exchange of Enclaves, AIR 1960 SC 845 : (1960) 3 SCR 250.
83. Attorney General v Prince Ernest Augustus of Honover, (1957) 1 All ER 49 : (1957) AC 436 (HL).
84. Keshavananda v State of Kerala, AIR 1973 SC 1461 : (1973) 4 SCC 225.
85. Burrakur Cool Co v UOI, AIR 1961 SC 954 : (1961) 2 SCA 523; Kochunni v States of Kerala and Madras, AIR 1960 SC 1080; Re Kerala Education Bill, AIR 1958 SC 956 : (1959) SCJ 321; Thangal Kunju Musaliar v Venkatachalam, AIR 1956 SC 246 : (1955) 2 SCR 1196 : (1956) SCJ 323 : (1956) SCA 259; Biswambhar Singh v State of Orissa, AIR 1954 SC 139 : (1954) SCR 842 : (1954) SCJ 219; Aswini Kumar v Arvind Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369; Siddhi Vinappa v Sivalingappa, AIR 1951 Bom 137 (FB); CIT v Ahmed Bhai Umar Bhai and Co, AIR 1950 SC 134 : (1950) SCR 333 : (1950) SCJ 374; Harishankar v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 465 : (1955) 1 SCR 380 : (1954) SCJ 637; Bhatnagors v UOI, AIR 1957 SC 478 : (1957) SCR 700 : (1957) SCJ 546 : (1957) SCA 810; Motipur Zamindary Co v State of Bihar, AIR 1962 SC 660; Venkataswami v Narasram, AIR 1966 SC 361, 365.
86. Manoharlal v State of Punjab, AIR 1961 SC 418 : (1961) 2 SCR 343 : (1961) 2 SCJ 17.
87. Poppatlal Shah v State of Madras, AIR 1953 SC 274 : (1953) SCR 677 : (1953) SCJ 369.

cannot control the plain words of the statute, but they can be referred to for resolving doubts where the words of the enactment are ambiguous.[88]

According to Sir John Nicholl:

> It is to preamble more specially that we are to look for the reason or spirit of every statute, rehearsing this, as it ordinarily does, the evil sought to be remedied, or the doubts purported to be removed by the statute, and so evidencing, in the best and most satisfactory manner, the object or intention of the Legislature in making or passing the statute itself.[89]

In the Sussex Peerage case,[90] Tindal, CJ, while delivering the opinion of the Judicial Committee of the House of Lords, stated as follows:

> "If any doubt arises from the terms employed by the Legislature, it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statute, and to have recourse to the preamble. . ."

In the well-known case of Smith v Hughes,[91] Lord Parker, CJ, held that prostitutes who attracted the attention of passers-by from balconies or windows were soliciting "in a street" within the meaning of the Street Offences Act, 1959. It was stated (at p 832):

> For my part, I approach the matter by considering what is the mischief aimed at by this Act. Everybody knows that this was an Act intended to clean up the streets, to enable people to walk along the streets without being molested or solicited by common prostitutes.

It was pointed out that if the Act was intended to clean up the streets, the precise place from which a prostitute addressed her solicitations to somebody walking in the street became irrelevant.

The words of a statute, when there is doubt about their meaning, are to be understood in the sense in which they best harmonise with the subject of the enactment. According to Maxwell, "their meaning is found not so much in a strict grammatical or etymological propriety of language, nor even in its popular use, as in the subject, or in the occasion on which they are used and the object to be attained".[92]

Referring to the question as to how far the enacting provisions are controlled or restricted by the Preamble, Lord Normand observed:

> There may be no exact correspondence between preamble and the enactment, and the enactment may go beyond, or it may fall short of, the indications that may be gathered from the preamble. Again the preamble cannot be of much, or any assistance in construing provisions which embody qualifications or exceptions from the operation of the general purpose of the Act. It is only when it conveys a clear and definite meaning in comparison with relatively obscure or indefinite enacting words that the preamble may legitimately prevail.[93]

N Rajagopala Ayyangar, J, speaking for the three-judge bench of the Supreme Court observed as follows:

> The preamble may, no doubt, be used to solve any ambiguity or to fix the meaning of words which may have more than one meaning, but it can, however, not be used to eliminate as redundant or unintended, the operative provisions of a statute.[94]

---

88. Bhinks v Charan Singh, AIR 1959 SC 960 : (1960) SCJ 892.
89. Brett v Brett, (1826) 3 Adams 210 : (1826) 162 ER 456.
90. Sussex Peerage case, (1844) 11 Cl & F 85 : 8 ER 1034 (HL).
91. Smith v Hughes, (1960) 1 WLR 830.
92. Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edn, p 76.
93. AG v HRH Prince Ernest Augustus of Hanover, (1957) 1 All ER 49, p 57, 58 : (1957) AC 436 (HL).
94. State of Rajasthan v Leela Jain, AIR 1965 SC 1296 : (1965) 1 SCR 276, p 282.

[s 1.3.9.1] Marginal Notes

Marginal notes to the sections of an Act are not to be referred to for the purpose of construing the Act.[95]

[s 1.3.9.2] Illustrations

Illustrations in Acts of Legislature, although not part of the sections, are helpful in the working and application of the Acts, and it is the duty of the court of law to accept them, if they can be done as being both relevant and of value in the construction of the text. The illustrations should, in no case, be rejected because they do not square with the ideas possibly derived from another system of jurisprudence as to the law with which the sections deal; and it would require a very special case to warrant their rejection on the ground of their assumed repugnancy to the sections themselves. It is not to be readily assumed that an illustration to a section is repugnant to it and rejected.[96] In fact, it would be the very last resort of construction to make any such assumption.[97] An illustration can be used, unless it goes beyond the clear language of the section, as an explanation of it;[98] but, it cannot be allowed to control the plain meaning of a section.[99] An illustration does not exhaust the full content of the section nor does it curtail or expand its ambit.[100]

[s 1.3.9.3] Explanation

The true purpose of an explanation is to clarify the section. It should not be construed so as to destroy the meaning of or render nugatory the section of law, which it seeks to explain.[101] Though the description of a provision as an explanation may not be decisive of its true meaning, where two interpretations are possible, that should be adopted which will fit in with the description of the provision as an explanation.[102]

[s 1.3.9.4] Proviso

The proper function of a proviso is to except and deal with a case which would otherwise fall within the language of the main enactment.[103] It cannot be construed as excluding from it by implication whatever clearly falls within its express terms. It is a cardinal rule of interpretation that a proviso to a particular provision of statute only embraces the field which is covered by the main provision. It carves out an exception to the main provision to which it has been enacted

---

95. CIT v Ahmedbhai Umarbhai, AIR 1950 SC 134; Bengal Immunity Co v State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 661 : (1955) 2 SCR 603 : (1955) SCJ 672 : (1955) SCA 1140; WI Theatres v Municipal Corp, Poona, AIR 1959 SC 586 : (1959) SCJ 390 : (1959) 2 SCA 145; Nalinakya v Shyam Sundar, AIR 1953 SC 148; Balraj Kanwar v Jagatpal Singh, (1904) ILR 26 All 393 : 31 IA 132; Dukkimala v Halway, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 55; Punardeo v Ram Sarup, ILR 25 Cal 858; Haridas Mundra v National and Grindlays Bank Ltd, AIR 1963 Cal 132 : (1963) 67 Cal WN 58.
96. Jumma Masjid v Kodimaniandra Deviah, AIR 1962 SC 847; Mahomed Syedol Ariffin v Yeoh Ooi Gark, AIR 1916 PC 242 : 43 IA 256 : (1916) 2 AC 275.
97. Jadarkumar v Pushpabai, AIR 1944 Bom 29 : 45 Beng LR 924; Mahomed v Yeoh, 43 IA 256, p 263; Mulraj Khatau v Vishvanath Prabhuram, (1913) 37 Bom 198 : 40 IA 24, p 30.
98. Ramaswami v Lakshmi, AIR 1962 Ker 313 : (1962) ILR Ker 130.
99. Jadarkumar v Pushpabai, supra; Koylesh Chundar v Sonatun, (1880) ILR 7 Cal 132.
100. Shambunath v State of Ajmer, AIR 1956 SC 404, 406 : (1956) SCR 199.
101. South India Co-op Insurance Society v Bapiraju, AIR 1955 Mad 694 : (1956) ILR Mad 547.
102. State of Bombay v United Motors Ltd, AIR 1953 SC 252 : (1953) SCR 1069 : (1953) SCJ 373.
103. MSM Rly Co v Bezwada Municipality, AIR 1944 PC 71 : (1945) ILR Mad 91 : 71 IA 18; Kedarnath Jute Mfg Co v CTO, AIR 1966 SC 12.

as a proviso.[104] It is foreign to the proper function of a proviso to read it as providing something by way of an addendum or dealing with a subject which is foreign to the main enactment.[105] A proviso may be construed in the light of the section but not a section in the light of a proviso[106] for, a proviso is subservient to the main provision.[107] However, a proviso need not necessarily be read as a limitation. The clear language of the substantive provision as well as the proviso may establish that the proviso is not a limitation but a substantive provision.[108]

A proviso "is of necessity...limited in the scope to the ambit of the section which it qualifies".[109]

According to Lord Russel, although a proviso may well be incapable of putting upon preceding words a construction which they cannot possibly bear, it may without doubt operate to explain which of the possible two meanings is the right one to attribute to them. One must, however, read the whole clause before attempting to construe any portion of it and a perusal of the proviso fixes the meaning of the words which precede it.[110] However, Lord Watson cautioned that it is "a very dangerous and certainly unusual course to import legislation from a proviso wholesale into the body of the statute".[111]

Ayyangar, J, speaking for the Bench, observed in the case of State of Rajasthan v Leela Jain,[112] as follows:

> So far as a general principle of construction of a proviso is concerned, it has been broadly stated that the function of a proviso is to limit the main part of the section and carve out something which but for the proviso would have been within the operative part.

In S Sundaram Pillai v VR Pattabhiraman,[113] Fazal Ali, J, observed as follows:

> ...the well established rule of interpretation of a proviso is that a proviso may have three separate functions. Normally, a proviso is meant to be an exception to something within the main enactment or to qualify something enacted therein which but for the proviso would be within the purview of the enactment. In other words, a proviso cannot be torn apart from the main enactment nor can it be used to nullify or set at naught the real object of the main enactment.
>
> However, if a proviso cannot reasonably be construed otherwise than as contradicting the main enactment, then the proviso will prevail on the principle that it speaks the last intention of the makers.[114]

[s 1.3.9.5] Punctuation

Punctuation in a statute cannot invariably be relied on in construing its provision[115] and should not be used for controlling the plain meaning of the enactment.[116]

---

104. Ram Narain Sons Ltd v Asst Commr of Sales-tax, AIR 1955 SC 765 : (1955) SCR 483 : (1955) SCJ 808 : (1955) SCA 111.
105. CIT v Indo Mercantile Bank Ltd, AIR 1959 SC 713 : (1959) SCJ 655 : (1960) 1 SCA 12.
106. Shankar Iranna v CIT, AIR 1956 Bom 280.
107. South Asia Industries v Sarup Singh, AIR 1966 SC 346, p 350.
108. CIT, Kerala v P Krishna, AIR 1965 SC 59.
109. Lloyds & Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars and Caravans (Kingston) Ltd, (1966) 1 QB 764 : (1964) 2 All ER 732 per Edmund Davies J.
110. Jennings v Kelly, (1939) 4 All ER 464.
111. West Derby v Metropolitan Life Assurance, 1897 AC 647.
112. State of Rajasthan v Leela Jain, AIR 1965 SC 1296 : (1965) 1 SCR 276, p 283. See also Nagar Palika Nigam v Krishi Upaj Mandi Samiti, AIR 2009 SC 187, para 8 : (2008) 12 SCC 364.
113. S Sundaram Pillai v VR Pattabhiraman, AIR 1985 SC 582 : (1985) 1 SCC 591.
114. Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edn, pp 190–191.
115. Maharani of Burdwan v Krishna Kamini Dasi, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 365; Louis Pugh v Asitosh Sen, AIR 1929 PC 69 : (1929) ILR 8 Pat 516 : 56 IA 93.
116. Mukherjee and Dass JJ. in Aswini Kumar Ghose v Arabinda Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369.

[s 1.3.10] Code Exhaustive

The essence of a Code is to be exhaustive of the matters in respect of which it declares the law and it is not the province of the judge to disregard or go outside the letter of the enactment according to its true construction.[117] Where there is no specific provision in the Code, the court has the power, and it would seem it is its duty to act according to justice, equity and good conscience.[118]

[s 1.3.11] Retrospective Operation

Every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under the existing law must be presumed to be intended not to have retrospective operation,[119] but this presumption does not apply to enactments affecting procedure or practice, such as the CPC. The reason is that no person has a vested right in any course of procedure. The general principle indeed seems to be that alterations in the procedure are always retrospective unless there be some good reasons against it,[120] but an appellate court cannot reverse an order made under an old Code on the ground that the new Code has enacted a different rule.[121] The right of appeal however, is in the nature of a vested right.[122] Hence, the provision in section 154 of the CPC declares that nothing in this Code shall affect "any present right of appeal which shall have accrued to any party at its commencement". Thus, the amendment of a statutory rule made by a high court giving a right of appeal to a bench of two judges cannot take away a vested right of appeal to the Supreme Court.[123] Though matters relating to limitation and forum are regarded as matters relating to procedure and are governed by the law in force at the date of the institution of the action, where limitation prescribed by a statute makes it impossible to enforce a claim which has arisen prior to the coming into force of the statute, the statute must be construed as inapplicable to such an action.[124] The CPC is thus not retrospective so as to affect vested rights, except where the amendment has been expressly or by necessary implication been made retrospective.[125]

A thing for which provision is made in the CPC must be done in the prescribed way or not at all.[126]

---

117. Gupteswara Missir v Chaturnand Missir, AIR 1950 Pat 309 : (1950) ILR 29 Pat 381; Gokul Mandar v Pundmanund, (1902) 29 ILR Cal 707, p 715 : 29 IA 196, p 202; Shibo v Baban, (1908) 35 ILR Cal 353.
118. Gupteswar Missir v Chaturnand Missir, AIR 1950 Pat 309; Hukumchand v Kamalanand, (1906) 33 ILR Cal 927, pp 931–32, 948; Abdul Rahman v Shana, (1920) ILR 1 Lah 339, 341; Rasik Lall v Bidhu Mukt, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 1094; Panchanan v Dwarkanath, (1905) 3 Cal LJ 29; Murahari v Bapayya, AIR 1949 Mad 743. See section 151.
119. Keshavan Madhava Menon v State of Bombay, AIR 1951 SC 128 : (1951) 2 SCR 228 : (1951) SCJ 182; Madhavalal v Administrator of West Bengal, AIR 1960 SC 936 : (1960) 3 SCR 578 : (1960) 1 SCJ 15; ITO, Tuticorin v TS Devinatha Nadar, AIR 1968 SC 623, p 628 : (1967) 1 SCJ 733.
120. Saratchandra v Santosh Kumar, AIR 1944 Cal 145 : (1943) 47 Cal WN 544; Hajrat Akrammisa v Valiunnisa, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 429; Balakrishna v Bapu, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 204; Girish Chandra v Apurba, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 940, 955; Bisweswar v Jasoda Lal, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 704.
121. Shyam Sundar v Ramdas, AIR 1951 Pat 52 (FB); Gurumurthi Naidu v Varadappa Chetti, (1911) 2 Mad WN 386; Nani Gopal Mitra v State of Bihar, AIR 1970 SC 1636.
122. See commentary under section 96.
123. Gordhan Das v Governor-General in Council, AIR 1952 Punj 103; Mahendra v Daisen, AIR 1952 Pat 341.
124. Natwarlal B Shah v Thakorda Khodaji, (1967) ILR Guj 495.
125. Chhabildas v Luhar Kohan, AIR 1967 Guj 7; Mohanlal v Sawai Mansinghji, AIR 1962 SC 73, 76; Gokaldas v Parmanand, AIR 1967 MP 265.
126. Nazir Ahmed v King Emperor, 63 IA 372; Ballabhdas Agarwala v JC Chakravarty, AIR 1960 SC 576; Shri Krishna Gupta v Ram Babu, AIR 1967 All 136, 140 : (1966) All LJ 990.

The statement of law given by Maxwell in this regard is stated thus:

> Perhaps no rule of construction is more firmly established than this—that a retrospective operation is not to be given to a statute so as to impair an existing right or obligation, otherwise than as regards matter of procedure, unless that effect cannot be avoided without doing violence to the language of the enactment. If the enactment is expressed in language which is fairly capable of either interpretation, it ought to be construed as prospective only.[127]

As laid down by the Supreme Court, "the golden rule of construction is that, in the absence of anything in the enactment to show that it is to have retrospective operation, it cannot be construed as to have the effect of altering the law applicable to a claim in litigation at the time when the Act was passed".[128] In another case, the Supreme Court held that courts have looked with disfavour upon laws which take away vested rights or affect pending cases. Matters of procedure are, however, different, and the law affecting procedure is always retrospective.[129]

In Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v State of Maharashtra,[130] the Supreme Court laid down the ambit and scope of an amending Act and its retrospective operation and gave five broad guidelines for construing a statute one way or the other.

While dealing with the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1913, the Supreme Court held that the new provision substituted by an amending Act was not retrospective.[131]

The Halsbury's Law of England states the law on retrospective operation of statutes thus:

> "The general rule is that all statutes, other than those which are merely declaratory, or which relate only to matters of procedure or of evidence, are prima facie prospective, and retrospective effect is not to be given to them unless, by express words or necessary implication, it appears that this was the intention of the legislature. Similarly, the courts will construe a provision as conferring power to act retrospectively only when clear words are used."[132]

Francis Bennion states thus:

> The true principle is that lex prospicit non respicit (law looks forward not back). Retrospective legislation is 'contrary to the general principle that legislation by which the conduct of mankind is to be regulated ought, when introduced for the first time, to deal with future acts, and ought not to change the character of past transactions carried on upon the faith of the then existing law'. The basis of the principle against retrospectivity 'is no more than simple fairness, which ought to be the basis of every legal rule'.[133]

[s 1.4] Courts of Civil Judicature

The CPC applies to all the proceedings in courts of civil judicature, except that it does not affect any special or local law; or any special jurisdiction or power conferred; or any special form of procedure prescribed by or under any other law for the time being in force.[134] It applies to high courts except where otherwise provided by Letters Patent or the rules for the exercise of original jurisdiction.[135] Insolvency courts are courts of civil judicature, but their procedure

---

127. Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edn, p 216.
128. Garikapati Veeraya v N Subbiah Choudhry, AIR 1957 SC 540 : 1957 SCR 488.
129. Dayawati v Inderjit, AIR 1966 SC 1423 : (1966) 3 SCR 275.
130. Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1994 SC 2623 : (1994) 4 SCC 602.
131. Shyam Sundar v Ram Kumar, AIR 2001 SC 2472 : (2001) 8 SCC 24.
132. Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn, vol 44, para 922.
133. Bennion on Statutory Interpretation, 5th Edn, p 316.
134. Savitri Thakurani v Savi, AIR 1921 PC 80.
135. Ashoka Marketing v Rothas Kumar, AIR 1966 Cal 591, p 594; Kamalamma v Ismail Ispahani, AIR 1951 Mad 895.

both in the mofussil and in presidency towns is regulated by special Acts.[136] The CPC applies to proceedings on the admiralty side of the high court.[137] It also applies to proceedings in the testamentary and intestate jurisdiction of the high courts and mofussil courts, except as otherwise provided by the Indian Succession Act, 1925[138] and, subject to the provisions of the Divorce Act, 1869, to proceedings under it. It applies to proceedings under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, subject to the other provisions of that Act and to such rules as may be made by the high courts.[139] As to small cause courts, there is a special provision in sections 7 and 8. Revenue Courts are civil courts and it has been held that they are governed by the CPC except in matters where a special procedure is enacted by a local Act.[140] Special provision is made in section 5 for such courts in order to preserve the summary character of rent litigation under local laws. The controller of patents is not a court, and the CPC is not applicable to proceedings before him.[141] Income-tax proceedings are not civil proceedings. Hence, rules relating to suits and appeals are not applicable to those proceedings.[142] The CPC also does not apply to proceedings under the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952,[143] nor to proceedings before the rent controller under the rent Acts.[144]

The State Legislature of Maharashtra, by amending section 34(1) of the Maharashtra Industrial Development Act, 1961 (the Amendment Act of 1974), made its intention clear that the provisions of Part III of the Land Acquisition Act shall mutatis mutandis apply to the proceedings of reference to district courts under section 34(1). The state legislature was fully conscious that the decision of the court would be a "decree" under the CPC and that the grounds for the award would be a "judgment" under the CPC. Such award for judgment would be appealable under section 96 of the CPC, if delivered by a district court. It would fall under clause 15 of the Letters Patent (if delivered by a single judge of the high court). The reference under section 34(1) was to be made to the "court", as defined in the Land Acquisition Act, and that meant a principal civil court of original jurisdiction. The expression "decision of the court" in section 34(2) cannot be restricted only to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction but must be extended to the decision of the court in accordance with the hierarchy of courts.[145]

[s 1.5] Extent Clause

Prior to its amendment by Act II of 1951, section 1, clause 3, stood as follows:

> (3) This section and sections 155 to 158 extend to the whole of British India, the rest of the Code extends to the whole of British India except the Scheduled Districts.

Under this section, the CPC was applicable to the whole of British India, except the Scheduled Districts to which area sections 155–158 were made applicable.

---

136. See section 5 of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920, and section 90 of the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act 1909.
137. Bombay and Persia SN Co v Shepphard, (1887) 12 ILR Bom 237, p 240.
138. Raoji Ranchod v Vishnu, (1884) ILR 9 Bom 241; Esoof Hasshim v Fatima, (1896) ILR 24 Cal 30.
139. Section 21 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.
140. Nilmoni v Taranath, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 295.
141. Re National Carbon Co, AIR 1934 Cal 725 : (1935) ILR 61 Cal 450.
142. Amalgamated Commercial Traders Pvt Ltd v ACK Krishnaswami, AIR 1965 Mad 337, p 340 : (1965) 2 Mad LJ 275.
143. Allem Berry and Co v Vivian Bose, AIR 1960 P&H 86, p 94.
144. Rayala Corp v Syed Bawkar and Co, AIR 1957 Mad 385 : (1975) ILR Mad 856.
145. State of Maharashtra v Chandrakant Pomaji Vasudev Somshelli, AIR 1991 Bom 245 (DB).

By the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950, the following was substituted for section 1(3):

> (3) This section and sections 155 to 158 extend to the whole of India except Part B States; the rest of the Code extends to the whole of India except Part B States and the Scheduled Districts.

The change introduced by this section was formal. The word "India" was substituted for "British India", but the operation of the Act was limited to Part A and Part C States which correspond to British India, and the Scheduled Districts were as before, outside the CPC, excepting sections 155–158.

Then came the Amendment Act II of 1951, which repealed section 1(3) and substituted the following:

> (3) It extends to the whole of India except—
>
> (a) the tribal Areas in the State of Assam,
>
> (b) save as hereinafter provided, the Scheduled areas in the State of Madras,
>
> (c) the State of Jammu and Kashmir,
>
> (d) the State of Manipur.
>
> Provided that sections 36 to 43 and O 34 in the First Schedule shall extend also to the Amindivi Islands and the East Godavari, West Godavari and Vishakapatnam Agencies in the State of Madras, and s 48 shall extend also to the said Agencies.

As a result of this amendment, the CPC came into force over the whole of Indian Union consisting of Part A, Part B and Part C States, excepting Jammu and Kashmir, the State of Manipur, the Tribal Areas in Assam, and Scheduled Areas in Madras.

Section 20 of Act II of 1951 contained a saving as regards—

The previous operation of the law, previously in force in those States or anything duly done or suffered thereunder, or any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred thereunder.

After the enactment of the States Reorganisation Act, 1956, the words "State of Andhra Pradesh" were introduced by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1956. By an Amendment Act (68 of 1956), clause "d" excluding the State of Manipur was repealed. In view of section 1(3)(b), it has been held that section 115 has no application to orders passed by the courts in the Agency Tracts in Andhra Pradesh.[146] It has been held that the law in force in the Kolhan Area in Singhbum District, Bihar, is not the CPC but Wilkinson's Rules for Administration of Civil Justice.[147]

The rules of Civil Procedure which were in force in Part B States were repealed with the usual savings mentioned in section 20 of Act II of 1951, that is to say, the previous operation of the law hitherto in force in those States or anything duly done or suffered thereunder or any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred thereunder have been saved.

The Amendment Act, 1976 has substituted new sub-sections (3) and (4) in place of the old sub-section (3). Sub-section (3) as it stood before its amendment read as follows:

> (3) It (i.e. the Code) extends to the whole of India except—
>
> (a) the tribal areas in the State of Assam;

---

146. Lakshmi Devi v Venkatakrishnan, (1958) (1) Andh WR 213.
147. Dulichand v State of Bihar, 1958 AP 366; Mahendra Singh v Commr of Chota Nagpur Division, (1958) AP 603.

(b) save as hereinafter provided, the Scheduled Areas in the State of Andhra as it existed immediately before 1 November 1956, and in the State of Madras;

(c) the State of Jammu and Kashmir;

Provided that sections 36–43 and O 34 in the First Schedule shall extend also to the Amindivi Islands and the East Godavari, West Godavari and Vishakapatnam Agencies in the State of Andhra Pradesh and s 48 shall extend also to the said agencies.

Now the entire CPC has been made applicable to the scheduled areas, viz; the Amindivi Islands, the East Godavari, West Godavari and Vishakapatnam agencies. The State of Nagaland includes the Naga Hills District and the Naga Tribal Areas. Administration of civil justice in the Naga Hills District is governed by the rules made by the Governor of Assam. Therefore, it has been provided that the CPC will not initially apply to the state of Nagaland or the tribal areas as defined in para 20 of the Sixth Schedule to the Constitution of India as in force before 21 January 1972. Power has, however, been reserved to the concerned state government to extend the CPC to the state of Nagaland or the tribal areas with such supplemental, incidental and consequential modifications as that government may think fit.

A two-judge bench of the Supreme Court has held that the provisions of the CPC are not applicable to the jurisdiction covered by the United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953 (and also other similarly crafted rules) drafted under para 4 of Schedule VI to the Constitution.[148]

There are in force the Laccadive, Minicoy and Amindivi Islands (Laws) Regulation, 1956 and the Laccadive, Minicoy and Amindivi Islands (Civil Courts) Regulation, 1965 promulgated by the President, under which the CPC applies to these islands subject to certain conditions. It has therefore, been made clear that the application of the CPC to these islands shall be without prejudice to the provisions contained in those regulations for the time being in force.

The Andhra Pradesh Agency Rules do not bar jurisdiction of the civil courts in respect of disputes between non-tribals, even though they reside in, or these disputes relate to lands situated in scheduled areas.[149]

Rules for the administration of justice and police in the Nagaland Hills District, 1937, govern civil disputes in Nagaland. Provisions of the CPC are not applicable in all their force and vigour. Provisions in CPC as to the abatement of appeal was not applied to the appeal in question.[150]

[S 2] Definitions.—In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "Code" includes rules;

(2) "decree" means the formal expression of an adjudication which, so far as regards the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit and may be either preliminary or final. It shall be deemed to include the rejection of a plaint and the determination of any question within [151][] section 144, but shall not include—

(a) any adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order, or

---

148. Westarly Dkhar v Sehekaya Lyngdoh, (2015) 4 SCC 292.
149. Ashifaquddin v Mohd Azizuddin, AIR 1978 AP 354.
150. Changki Village v Tibreigba, AIR 1960 SC 73.
151. The words "section 47 or" omitted by Act 104 of 1976, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

(b) any order of dismissal for default.

Explanation.—A decree is preliminary when further proceedings have to be taken before the suit can be completely disposed of. It is final when such adjudication completely disposes of the suit. It may be partly preliminary and partly final;

(3) "decree-holder" means any person in whose favour a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made;

(4) "district" means the local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction (hereinafter called a "District Court"), and includes the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a High Court;

[152][(5) "foreign Court" means a Court situate outside India and not established or continued by the authority of the Central Government;]

(6) "foreign judgment" means the judgment of a foreign Court;

(7) "Government Pleader" includes any officer appointed by the [153]State Government to perform all or any of the functions expressly imposed by this Code on the Government Pleader and also any pleader acting under the directions of the Government Pleader;

[154][(7A) "High Court", in relation to the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, means the High Court in Calcutta;

(7B) "India", except in sections 1, 29, 43, 44, [155][44A,] 78, 79, 82, 83 and 87A, means the territory of India excluding the State of Jammu & Kashmir;]

(8) "Judge" means the presiding officer of a Civil Court;

(9) "judgment" means the statement given by the Judge of the grounds of a decree or order;

(10) "judgment-debtor" means any person against whom a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made;

(11) "legal representative" means a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and where a party sues or is sued in a representative character the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued;

(12) "mesne profits" of property means those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession;

(13) "moveable property" includes growing crops;

(14) "order" means the formal expression of any decision of a Civil Court which is not a decree;

---

152. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951, section 4, for clause (5) (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
153. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO 1950.
154. Inserted by Act 2 of 1951, section 4 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
155. Inserted by Act 42 of 1953, section 4 and Sch III (w.e.f. 23-12-1953).

(15) "pleader" means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in Court, and includes an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court;

(16) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules;

(17) "public officer" means a person falling under any of the following descriptions, namely:—

(a) every Judge;

(b) every member of [156][an All-India Service];

(c) every commissioned or gazetted officer in the military, [157][naval or air] forces of [158][the Union] [159][] while serving under the Government;

(d) every officer of a Court of Justice whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order, in the Court, and every person especially authorised by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties;

(e) every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement;

(f) every officer of the Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience;

(g) every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of the Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of the Government, or to execute any revenue process, or to investigate, or to report on, any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of the Government or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of the Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of the Government; and

(h) every officer in the service or pay of the Government, or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty;

(18) "rules" means rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125;

(19) "share in a corporation" shall be deemed to include stock, debenture stock, debentures or bonds; and

(20) "signed", save in the case of a judgement or decree, includes stamped.

[160][* * *]

---

156. Substituted for "the Indian Civil Service" by section 3 Act 104 of 1976 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
157. Substituted for "or naval" by Act 35 of 1934, section 2 and Schedule.
158. Substituted for "His Majesty" by AO 1950.
159. The words "including His Majesty's Indian Marine Service", omitted by section 2 Act 35 of 1934 and Schedule.
160. Clause (21) inserted by the AO 1950 and omitted by Act 2 of 1951, section 4 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

SYNOPSIS

[s 2.1] Definition Clause: Meaning, Object and Interpretation 22
[s 2.2] Code: Section 2(1) 22
[s 2.3] Decree: Section 2(2) 24
[s 2.3.1] Scope 24
[s 2.3.2] Essentials 24
[s 2.3.3] Judgment, Order and Decree 25
[s 2.3.4] "Formal Expression" 26
[s 2.3.5] "Conclusively Determines" 26
[s 2.3.6] "Rights of Parties With Regards to All/Any of Matters in Controversy" 27
[s 2.3.7] "In the Suit" 29
[s 2.3.8] Preliminary and Final Decree 29
[s 2.3.9] Preliminary Decree in Partition Suit 31
[s 2.3.10] Partly Preliminary/Final decree and More Than One Preliminary/Final Decrees 32
[s 2.3.11] Order of Company Law Board as Preliminary Decree 32
[s 2.3.12] Deemed Decree 32
[s 2.3.13] Orders Which Are Decree 34
[s 2.3.14] Orders Which Are Not Decree 36
[s 2.3.15] Order As to Costs 37
[s 2.3.16] Finding On Issue 38
[s 2.3.17] Rejection of Plaint 39
[s 2.3.18] Order Returning Plaint 40
[s 2.3.19] Rejection of Memorandum of Appeal 40
[s 2.3.20] Order Returning Memorandum of Appeal 41
[s 2.3.21] Omission of the Words "Section 47 or" Effect of 41
[s 2.3.22] Section 144: Restitution 43
[s 2.3.23] Order of Dismissal for Default 43
[s 2.3.24] Non-Appealable Orders 44
[s 2.4] Decree-Holder: Section 2(3) 44
[s 2.5] District: Section 2(4) 45
[s 2.6] Foreign Court: Section 2(5) 46
[s 2.7] Foreign Judgment: Section 2(6) 46
[s 2.8] Government Pleader: Section 2(7) 46
[s 2.9] India: Section 2(7B) 47
[s 2.10] Judge: Section 2(8) 47
[s 2.11] Judgment: Section 2(9) 48
[s 2.11.1] Meaning 48
[s 2.11.2] Every Order not Judgment 49
[s 2.11.3] Judgment, Order and Decree 49
[s 2.11.4] Decision at the Back of a Person 49
[s 2.11.5] Contradictory Judgments/Decisions 49
[s 2.11.6] Reasoning 50
[s 2.11.7] Pronouncing Judgment 51
[s 2.11.8] Order of a Single Judge 51
[s 2.11.9] Words in Judgment Cannot be Interpreted as Statutes 51
[s 2.11.10] Ratio Decidendi 52
[s 2.11.11] Judgment — Letters Patent 52
[s 2.12] Judgment-Debtor: Section 2(10) 53
[s 2.13] Legal Representative: Section 2(11) 53
[s 2.13.1] Scope 53
[s 2.13.2] Strictest Sense 55
[s 2.13.3] Finding of Fact 56
[s 2.13.4] Persons not Legal Representatives 56
[s 2.13.5] Deceased Parties Name Cannot be Washed Off 57
[s 2.13.6] Party in a Representative Character 57
[s 2.13.7] Intermeddles with the Estate 58
[s 2.14] Mesne Profits: Section 2(12) 60
[s 2.15] Movable property: Growing Crops: Section 2(13) 62
[s 2.16] Order: Section 2(14) 63
[s 2.17] Pleader: Section 2(15) 63
[s 2.17.1] Advocate 63
[s 2.17.2] "Pleader" 64
[s 2.17.3] Authority to Compromise 64
[s 2.17.4] Power to Refer to Arbitration 66
[s 2.17.5] Authority to Withdraw Suit 66
[s 2.17.6] Power to Bind Client by Admission 66
[s 2.17.7] Power to Abandon Issue 67

[s 2.18]	Prescribed: Section 2(16)	67	[s 2.21]	Share in a Corporation: Section 2(19)	69
[s 2.19]	Public Officer: Section 2(17)	67
[s 2.20]	Rules: Section 2(18)	69	[s 2.22]	Signed: Section 2(20)	70

[s 2.1] Definition Clause: Meaning, Object and Interpretation

It is common for all statutes to contain a small dictionary of their own in the form of a definition clause to endeavour to interpret, define and explain important terms used therein. The definition clause serves two-fold purpose. Firstly, it provides for proper interpretation of an enactment and secondly, it shortens the language of the enacting part and helps avoid repetition of the same words and expressions whenever the Legislature wants to use that term. The object of the definition clause is to declare that the words and expressions used in the Act have the meaning assigned to them by their definition.

According to Craies, there are two modes of defining a word in a statute, restrictive or extensive. Where the word "means" is used, it is in a restrictive way and where the word "includes" is used, it is an extensive way.[161] The Legislature uses the word "means" where it wants to exhaust the significance of the term defined and the word "includes" where it intends that while the term defined should retain its ordinary meaning, its scope should be widened by specific enumeration of certain matters which its ordinary meaning may or may not comprise, so as to make the definition enumerative but not exhaustive.[162] Sometimes, it is provided that a word shall "mean" what the definition says it shall mean and in that case, the word is restricted to the scope indicated in the definition section.[163] Sometimes, however, the word "include" is used "in order to enlarge the meaning of words or phrases occurring in the body of the statute; and when it is so used these words or phrases must be construed as comprehending, not only such things as they signify according to their natural import, but also those things which the interpretation clause declares they shall include."[164]

Justice GP Singh, in his book on interpretation,[165] has explained it thus:

> A definition section may borrow definitions from an earlier Act and the definition so borrowed may not necessarily be in the definition section but may be in some other provisions of the earlier Act. A definition borrowed by incorporation or reference may be sometimes found in the rules made under the referred statute. For example, Article 366(1) of the Constitution defines 'agricultural income' to mean 'agricultural income as defined for the purpose of enactments relating to Indian Income-tax'.

The Supreme Court, while dealing with a case under the West Bengal Government Premises (Tenancy Regulation) Act, 1976, observed that "any" is a word of very wide meaning, and prima facie the use of it in definition clause excludes limitation.[166]

[s 2.2] Code: Section 2(1)

"Code" includes rules

---

161. Craies, Craies on Statute Law, 6th Edn, Sweet & Maxwell, (1963), p 212.
162. Province of Bengal v Hingul Kumari, AIR 1946 Cal 217.
163. R v Britton, (1967) 2 QB 51.
164. Dilworth v Commr of Stamps, (1899) AC 99 at p 105, 106 (Per Lord Watson).
165. Justice GP Singh, Principles of Statutory Interpretation, 12th Edn 2010, p 179.
166. Associated Indem Mechanical Pvt Ltd v West Bengal Small Scale Industries Development Corp. Ltd. AIR 2007 SC 788 : (2007) 3 SCC 607.

HIGH COURT AMENDMENT

Calcutta.—In clause (1) after the words "includes rules" add the words "and, in its application to Courts other than the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta, means the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908; and, in its application to that Court, means the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, as adopted, modified and extended by the provisions of notifications issued from time to time under the provisions of Section 8 of that Code" vide Cal. Gaz., Pt I, April 20 April 1967.

The chief feature of this Act is its division into two parts on the lines of the Judicature Acts, the body of the CPC and rules framed under the Act. The main body of the CPC is in the sections and the rules refer to matters of mere machinery which the high court may adapt to local conditions.

Explaining the nature and scope of this distinction, it was observed in Sesha Giridas Sambhog v Sunder[167] that:

The CPC consists—

(i) of that which is termed the body of the CPC; and

(ii) of the rules.

The body of the CPC is fundamental and is unalterable except by the Legislature, and the rules are concerned with the details and machinery and can be more readily altered. Thus, it will be found that the body of the CPC creates jurisdiction, while the rules indicate the mode in which it is to be exercised.[168] It follows that the body of the CPC is expressed in more general terms, and it has to be read in conjunction with the more particular provisions of the rules.[169] The CPC includes not only the sections of the CPC but also the orders and rules contained in Sch 1 and also the civil rules of practice framed by the high court under section 122 by virtue of the definitions in sections 2(1) and 2(18).[170] The rules should, by reason of this provision, be deemed to be enacted in the body of the CPC itself and that construction should be adopted which would reconcile both, the body of the Act and rules.[171] Section 73 should accordingly be read subject to O XXI, rule 89;[172] but, where there is clear conflict between the body of the CPC and the rules, the former must prevail;[173] and it has likewise been held that the form appended to the CPC should not be allowed to extend the meaning of the sections and the rules in the CPC.[174] The scheme of sections 2(1), 121–22, 126 and 127 make it clear that the alterations by the high court in the rules become part of the CPC.[175]

---

167. Sesha Giridas Sambhog v Sunder, AIR 1946 Bom 361 : (1946) ILR Bom 756 : (1946) 48 Bom LR 252.
168. Menkabai Manohar v M Deshpande, AIR 1971 Bom 21 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 473.
169. Karam Singh v Kunwar Sen, AIR 1942 All 387 : (1942) ILR All 862; Mani Mohan v Ram Taran, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 148, p 152 per Jenkins CJ; Nabin Chandra v Pran Krishna De, (1914) ILR 41 Cal 108; Ghuznavi v Allahabad Bank Ltd, AIR 1917 Cal 44 (FB) : (1917) ILR 44 Cal 929; Satyanarayana v Venkata, AIR 1957 AP 172 (FB); Lakshmi Kumar v Krishna Ram, AIR 1950 MB 156.
170. Papathi Ammal v Sivagnanam, AIR 1954 TC 526; Manikyam v Narasimhan, AIR 1956 AP 108.
171. Mani Mohan v Ramanarain, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 148, p 52; Ghuznavi v Allahabad Bank Ltd, (1917) ILR 44 Cal 929 (FB).
172. Pannalal v Lakshmi Sona, AIR 1952 Cal 840.
173. Basavayya v Venkatappiah, AIR 1926 Mad 676; Ram Dayal v Shiv Dayal, AIR 1939 Ngp 186 : (1939) ILR Nag 250 (FB); Karan v Kanwar, AIR 1942 All 387.
174. Somasundaram Chettiar v Arunachalam Chettiar, AIR 1932 Mad 523 : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 982 : (1932) 63 Mad LJ 28.
175. State of Uttar Pradesh v Chandra Bhusan Misra, AIR 1980 SC 591 : (1980) 1 SCC 198 : (1980) 1 SCR 113.

[s 2.3] Decree: Section 2(2)

"decree" means the formal expression of an adjudication which, so far as regards the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit and may be either preliminary or final. It shall be deemed to include the rejection of a plaint and the determination of any question within [176][* * *] section 144, but shall not include—

(a) any adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order, or

(b) any order of dismissal for default.

Explanation.—A decree is preliminary when further proceedings have to be taken before the suit can be completely disposed of. It is final when such adjudication completely disposes of the suit. It may be partly preliminary and partly final;

HIGH COURT AMENDMENT

Calcutta.—In clause (2) insert a full stop after "matters in controversy in the suit"; substitute. "In Courts other than the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta it" for "and" after "matters in controversy in the suit"; insert a semi-colon and the word "and" in place of the full stop after "preliminary or final" vide Cal. Gaz., Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 2.3.1] Scope

It matters not that the judgment is headed as an order, for, if it in fact fulfils the conditions of the definition under section 2(2), it is a decree and an appeal lies.[177]

In the definition, some orders which otherwise do not constitute decree are also included, and certain orders which constitute decree have been excluded from it. Merely because there exists some order captioned as a decree drawn up even in the form of decree, it would not make such an order "decree" unless the court has satisfied the requirement of section 2(2) of the CPC.[178] A decree or order becomes enforceable from its date, but in appropriate cases, the court passing the decree may prescribe the time wherefrom the decree becomes enforceable on a future date. In a case where the language of the decree is capable of two interpretations, one of which assists the decree-holder to obtain the fruits of the decree, and the other which prevents him from taking the benefits of the decree, the interpretation which assists the decree-holder should be accepted. The policy of law is to give a fair and liberal, and not a technical construction, enabling the decree-holder to reap the fruits of his decree.[179]

Where the question was whether the Award of an Arbitrator tantamounts to a decree or not, it was held that section 36 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 makes it very clear that such an award has to be enforced under the CPC in the same manner as if it were a decree of a court. Accordingly, it was held that the said language leaves no room for doubt as to the manner in which the Award is to be accepted.[180]

[s 2.3.2] Essentials

It is evident from a bare reading of the definition that "decree" has the following essential elements:

---

176. The words and figures "section 47 or" omitted by Act 104 of 1976, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
177. Adinarayan v Narasimha, AIR 1931 Mad 471 : (1931) ILR 54 Mad 337.
178. Chelaram v Manak, AIR 1997 Raj 284.
179. Deep Chand v Mohal Lal, [2000] 4 LRI 875.
180. Leela Hotels Ltd v Housing & Urban Development Corporation Ltd, AIR 2012 SC 903.

(i) there should be an adjudication;

(ii) the adjudication should determine the rights of parties regarding the matter in controversy;

(iii) the adjudication should be in a suit and the adjudication should be formal and conclusive so far as that court is concerned.[181]

For determining the question as to whether an order passed by a court is a decree or not, it must satisfy the following tests:

(i) there must be an adjudication;

(ii) such adjudication must have been given in a suit;

(iii) It must have determined the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit;

(iv) such determination must be of a conclusive nature; and

(v) there must be a formal expression of such adjudication.[182]

In paragraph 14 of the judgment in the above case,[183] SB Sinha J, (speaking for the Bench), observed as follows:

> A decree is defined in section 2(2) of the Code of Civil Procedure to mean the formal expression of an adjudication which, so far as regards, the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matter in controversy in the suit. It may either be preliminary or final. It may be partly preliminary and partly be final. The Court with a view to determine whether an order passed by it is a decree or not must take into consideration the pleadings of the parties and the proceedings leading up to the passing of an order. The circumstances under which an order had been made would also be relevant.

[s 2.3.3] Judgment, Order and Decree

"Judgment" stands on a different footing from the "order" and the "decree". The Legislature has avoided the use of words "formal expression" in the definition of "judgment", though the words "formal expression" have been used in the definition of "order" in section 2(14). Conversely, it is not necessary that in a decree, there should be a statement of reasons given by the judge. Statement of reasons is to be given by the judge, only in the "judgment". The decree is the formal expression of conclusions arrived at in the judgment. So, a formal expression of the order in the judgment is not necessary, though it is desirable.[184]

However, the Supreme Court has laid down that an order admitting a second appeal is neither a final order nor an interlocutory/interim order. It does not amount to a judgment, decree, determination, sentence or even "order" in the traditional sense. It does not decide any issue but merely entertains an appeal for hearing.[185]

---

181. Dewan Brothers v Central Bank of India, AIR 1976 SC 1503 : (1976) 3 SCC 800; R Rathinavel Chettiar v V Sivaraman, (1999) 4 SCC 89; Ratansingh v Vijaysingh, AIR 2001 SC 279 : (2001) 1 SCC 469.
182. S Satnam Singh v Surender Kaur, AIR 2009 SC 1089 : (2009) 2 SCC 562 : (2009) 1 Civil Court Cases 597 (SC).
183. S Satnam Singh v Surender Kaur, AIR 2009 SC 1089 : (2008) 2 SCC 562 : 2009 (1) Civil Court Cases 597 (SC). See also Parayya Allayya Hittalamani v Sri Parayya Gurulingayya Poojari, (2007) 14 SCC 318 : 2008 (1) Civil Court Cases 172 (SC) .
184. Boards & Boards Pvt Ltd, Jaipur v Himalaya Paper Pvt Ltd, New Delhi, AIR 1990 Raj 120 (DL Mehta, J).
185. SB Minerals v MSPL Ltd, AIR 2010 SC 1137 : (2010) 12 SCC 24.

An order disposing of a suit deciding the question of maintainability, hearing only the defendant in absence of the plaintiff is to be treated as dismissal for default and is not a decree.[186]

[s 2.3.4] "Formal Expression"

All requirements of form must be complied with. Accordingly, it was said that if no decree has been drawn up, no appeal will lie from the judgment.[187] It has however, been held that the right of a party to prefer an appeal is not affected by the failure to draw up a decree as that is only formal.[188] In some courts, the practice is not to draw up a decree embodying an adjudication under section 47. In such a case, the decision is both, a judgment and a decree and filing the certified copy of the decision is sufficient compliance of O XLI, rule 1.[189] It has also been held that a party in whose favour a final adjudication has been made is entitled to apply for its enforcement in execution even though no formal decree has been drawn up.[190] Where an order has been made dismissing a suit and a formal decree has been drawn up, it does not cease to be a decree merely because reasons for the dismissal have not been given and the provisions of O XX, rules 4(2) and 4(5) have not been complied with.[191]

An order must satisfy the requirements of section 2(2) in order to become a decree. Merely labelling it as a decree does not make it a decree.[192]

When a decree is challenged in appeal, the appellate hearing is a re-hearing of the subject matter. The lower court decree is merged in the appellate decree.[193]

When an appeal is declared as having abated, there is no question of drawing up a decree. There is no adjudication of any question in such a case.[194]

The concept of "judgment" in section 2(2) of the CPC is narrow and cannot be applied for interpreting the word "judgment" in the Letters Patent.[195]

[s 2.3.5] "Conclusively Determines"

This expression implies that the decision must be one which is complete and final as regards the court which passed it. The decree may conclusively determine the rights of the parties, although it does not completely dispose of the suit.[196]

When any order decides only the question of limitation, such an order will not be a "decree" within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC because such an order does not result in

---

186. Smt Purabil Dasgupta (Sarkar) v Arun Kumar, AIR 2010 Gau 66 (Agartala Bench).
187. Mt Chauli Subhadra Devi v Mt Meghoo, AIR 1945 All 268 : (1945) ILR All 798; Baliram Ganpatrao v Monohar Damodur, AIR 1943 Ngp 204 : (1943) ILR Nag 241; Bai Divali v Shah Vishnu, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 182; Sakharam v Sadashiv, (1913) ILR 37 Bom 480; Jothi Prasad v Ganeshi Lal, AIR 1961 P&H 120.
188. Parasuram v Heera Bai, AIR 1957 Bom 59.
189. Shakuntala Devi v Kuntal Kumari, AIR 1969 SC 575 : (1969) 1 SCR 1006.
190. Rajeswara Rai v Sohanlal, AIR 1957 Pat 398.
191. Peethambar v Sohanlal, AIR 1957 All 107.
192. Bal Kishan v Tulasi Bai, AIR 1987 MP 120.
193. Sadhu Singh v Dharam Dev, AIR 1980 SC 1654 : (1981) 1 SCC 510.
194. Madan Naik v Hansubala Devi, AIR 1983 SC 676 : (1983) 3 SCC 15.
195. Shah Babulal Khimji v Jayaben D Kania, AIR 1981 SC 1986 : (1981) 1 SCC 8 : (1982) 1 SCR 87.
196. Srijib v Dandi Swami Jagganath Asram, AIR 1941 Cal 618. See note below "Preliminary Decree".

conclusive determination of the right of the parties envisaged by section 2(2) with regard to all or any matter in controversy in a suit.[197]

An order allowing withdrawal of suit, without liberty to file fresh suit and without adjudication, does not constitute a decree.[198]

An order dismissing an application under O XXII of the CPC on the ground that the adoption deed was not executed in accordance with the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956, does not amount to a decree as defined in the CPC, since it does not determine the question finally as to who is the legal representative of the deceased.[199]

In a suit for permanent prohibitory injunction, an order of dismissal directing the plaintiff to remove unauthorised construction on the suit property put up during the pendency of the suit does not amount to a decree, as defined in the Code, but it certainly amounts to an executable order in favour of the defendant.[200]

[s 2.3.6] "Rights of Parties With Regards to All/Any of Matters in Controversy"

There must have been an adjudication on the rights of the parties.[201] Any adjudication which conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to any of the matters in controversy in the suit, is a decree within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC and an appeal lies against it under section 96. The judgment and decree rendered inter partes is binding on inter partes.[202] The expression "matter in controversy in the suit" means such matter as has been brought up for adjudication by the court through the pleadings. Hence, the conclusive determination, in order to amount to a decree must be on matters in controversy in the suit. A compromise collateral to a suit offered by one party and accepted by the other, where the document of compromise is not recorded through a decree but is merely drawn up, cannot attract the provisions of O XXIII, rule 3 of the CPC and the court should not make a decree. An order refusing to record a compromise cannot be tantamount to a decree within the meaning of section 2(2) and is not therefore, appealable under section 96. The order cannot be held to be an adjudication which conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to any of the matters in controversy in the suit.[203]

Where redemption was claimed by certain plaintiffs (as heirs of mortgagors) and others, on the application for substitution by legal representatives of one of the deceased original plaintiffs, the trial court directed that all the other plaintiffs except the sons of the mortgagor were not necessary parties to the suit and, therefore, their names were struck out. After this, the suit proceeded in the absence of those plaintiffs and ended in a decree. The rights of those plaintiffs were not determined. It was held that the order directing striking out the names of parties was not a decree. All that the order means, is that those plaintiffs were improperly joined in the suit and their names were struck out. This order contains a mere finding that those persons were not necessary parties to the suit and hence, is not a decree. Consequently, they could not appeal against it.[204] Thus, a decision on the question of possession as between the landlord and his tenant in a suit under the Rent Act is a decision on the rights of the parties

---

197. Chelaram v Manak, AIR 1997 Raj 284.
198. Kandapazha Nadar v Chitraganiammal, AIR 2007 SC 1575 : (2007) 7 SCC 65.
199. Ashwani Kumar v Smt Vidya, AIR 2007 All 105.
200. KM Basheer v Trie-Tee Trading Co Ltd, AIR 2007 Ker 291 : 2007 (4) Ker LT 113.
201. Ma Chon v Maung Myint, AIR 1927 Rang 148 (PC) : (1927) ILR 5 Rang 838.
202. MS University v Kumara Gurubara Swamigal Arts College, AIR 1997 Mad 386.
203. Gopupeddireddi v Gopu Tirupathy Reddy, AIR 1981 AP 362.
204. Anjeeni Prasad v Ishwardin, AIR 1982 MP 10.

and is a decree.[205] An order of dismissal for default of appearance is no determination of the rights of the parties and, therefore, is not a decree.[206] So also, an order under O IX, rule 2, dismissing a suit when summons is not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay court-fee.[207] Special provision is made in the definition of a decree for orders of dismissal for default, apparently because the previous cases were not uniform. An order rejecting an appeal under O XLI, rule 10 for failure to furnish security is not a decree as it does not determine the rights of the parties in controversy in the appeal.[208] An order granting leave to withdraw a suit with leave to file a fresh suit is not a decree, for the rights of the parties are left open for determination in the subsequent suit.[209] Also, dismissal of a suit as withdrawn under O XXIII, rule 3, is not a decree;[210] but an order dismissing the appeal on a prayer for withdrawal is a decree, for the appeal is brought before the court and finally disposed of.[211] The right in controversy must be a substantive right, and not merely a processual right, for a finding on a processual right is only to enable the court to inquire into the rights in controversy in the suit.[212] Thus, an order that a plaint should be stamped with a higher court-fee is not a decree.[213] It is only an order which may be open to revision.[214] An order directing stay of a suit is not a decree;[215] nor an order refusing stay in an appeal under O XLI, rule 5;[216] nor an order remanding a suit for fresh disposal.[217]

A divorce petition under section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 cannot be treated as a plaint and the proceeding a suit and an order passed thereunder is not a "decree" under the CPC.[218] However, an order dismissing a suit under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 on the ground of res judicata is a decree and is appealable.[219]

When an application for the grant of probate or letter of administration is contested, such application is automatically converted into a regular suit and a final decision thereon results in the form of a decree.[220]

---

205. Kanji Hirji v Jivraj Dharamshi, AIR 1976 Guj 152.
206. Gauhati Bank Ltd v Baliram, AIR 1950 Assam 169; Rulaninimayi v Chandra, (1912) ILR Cal 341; Shyam Mandal v Satinath, (1917) ILR 44 Cal 954; Gajrap Mati v Shami Nath, (1916) ILR 39 All 13; Suraj Deo v Pratap Rai, AIR 1923 Pat 514 : (1923) 2 Pat 739; Abdul Majid v Jawahir, (1914) ILR 36 All 350. contra Balaramdas v Harak Chand, AIR 1949 All 754.
207. Lachmi Narain v Darbari Lal, (1916) ILR 38 All 357; Lucky Chum v Budurunnissa, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 627.
208. Lekha v Bhauna, (1896) ILR 18 All 101; Ramesh v Moindra, AIR 1922 Cal 246 : (1921) ILR 49 Cal 355; Nazim v Abdul, AIR 1922 Lah 87 : (1922) ILR 3 Lah 30.
209. Genda Mal v Pirbhu Lal, (1895) ILR 17 All 97; Jogodindro v Sarup Sundari, (1801) ILR 18 Cal 322; Abdul Hossein v Kasi Sahu, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 362; Patloji v Ganu, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 370.
210. Devenssi v Anthoni, AIR 1969 Ker 78.
211. Mahapatrao v Magata Patrao, AIR 1933 Mad 442 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 520.
212. Dattatraya v Radhabai, AIR 1921 Bom 220 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 627, 634; Danduppa v SG Motor Transport Co, (1966) 1 Mys LJ 786.
213. Mir Umar Ali v Nasib-un-nissa, (1911) PR 82.
214. Murthi Raju v Subbaraju, (1944) ILR Mad 626.
215. Narayana v Rama, AIR 1953 TC 367.
216. Rangasami Chettiar v Ishwaramurthi Gounder, AIR 1954 Mad 1053 : (1953) ILR Mad 1104.
217. Sivalal v Jugal Kishore, AIR 1940 Ngp 340 : (1940) ILR Nag 538; Zanab Bi v Wajahat Hussain, AIR 1959 MB 384; but see Paras Das v Premchand, AIR 1935 Pat 456.
218. Smt Baby Deb v Ajit Deb, AIR 2008 Gau 49.
219. Bimalendu Ghose v Smt Mukti Ghosh, AIR 2008 (NOC) 1461 (Cal).
220. Miss Pressy Pinto v Rony Maxim Pinto, AIR 2009 Kant 157 (DB).

Where an attachment of perishable goods was ordered, an order directing the party to furnish security for raising attachment cannot be treated as an order adjudicating rights of the parties and as such cannot be called a decree.[221]

Where in a suit for partition, directions are given for issuance of final decree on production of stamp paper, an adjudication on objections raised in relation to process of engrossment cannot be said to be determination of rights of parties leading to a decree.[222]

Suit for partition was decreed by the high court on second appeal by the plaintiff. The question of arrears of rent and mesne profit was not raised. This question was also not raised in first appeal or before the trial court. It was held that it could not be said that the high court had passed a decree for rent and mesne profits. The trial court could not grant relief in that respect. The high court observed as under:

> I am, therefore, of the opinion that the High Court passed the decree for partition of the two shops only and by implication, the other reliefs were denied. The execution application filed by the decree-holders for arrears of rent and mesne profit was clearly in excess of the decree passed by this court and the trial court could not have granted any relief in this respect.[223]

[s 2.3.7] "In the Suit"

Every suit is commenced by a plaint,[224] and when there is no civil suit there is no decree.[225] Some proceedings commenced by an application are statutory suits so that the decision is a decree, eg a contentious probate proceeding[226] or an application to file an agreement to refer to arbitration.[227] It has been held in Bewri v Suwalal[228] that the decision in an application for probate cannot be held to be a decree by virtue of section 295 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, which enacts that an application for probate is to be regarded, where contested, as a regular suit, as it is only an adjudication given in a suit, commencing with the presentation of a plaint that is a decree under section 2(2). A contrary view has been taken by the Allahabad and Madras High Courts.[229]

[s 2.3.8] Preliminary and Final Decree

The explanation in section 2(2) of the present CPC has been newly added and so also, the provision in the main definition that a decree may be either preliminary or final. In a preliminary decree, certain rights are conclusively determined and unless the preliminary decree is challenged in appeal, the rights so determined become final and conclusive and cannot be questioned in the final decree.[230] A preliminary decree is one which declares the rights and liabilities of the parties leaving the actual result to be worked out in further proceedings. Then,

---

221. Siddaganga Oil Extraction Pvt Ltd, Tumkur v Pioneer Foods and Paultry Products Pvt Ltd, AIR 2009 (NOC) 344 (Kar).
222. Arun Kumar Singh v Col Hari Singh, AIR 2009 Raj 18 : 2009 (1) Raj LW 18.
223. Ummed Mal v Kundan Mal, AIR 1981 Raj 202.
224. Venkata v Venkatarama, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 256; Upadhya v Peridh Singh, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 723; Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269, 274 : 11 IA 37; Jagdishwar Sahai v Surjan Singh Pal, AIR 1977 All 554.
225. Minakshi v Subramanaya, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 26, 35 : 14 IA 160.
226. Umrao Chand v Bindraban Chand, (1895) ILR 17 All 475, p 477.
227. Guru Charan v Uma Charan, (1921) 26 Cal WN 940; contra Rajmal v Maruti, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1377; Satish Chandra v Pali Ram, AIR 1921 Pat 161 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 287 — submitted to be incorrect.
228. Bewri v Suwalal, AIR 1951 Raj 1919.
229. E Moah Stephens v HG Orme, 35 All 448; Rodriguez v Mathews, (1911) 21 Mad LJ 431.
230. Parvathamma v A Muniyappa, AIR 1997 Ker 37.

as a result of the further inquiries conducted pursuant to the preliminary decree, the rights of the parties are finally determined, and a decree is passed in accordance with such determination. That is the final decree. Both the decrees are in the same suit and if the preliminary decree is set aside, the final decree is superseded.[231] Final decree may be said to become final in two ways:

(i) when the time for appeal has expired without any appeal being filed against the preliminary decree or a matter has been decided by the highest court;

(ii) when as regards the court passing the decree, the same stand completely disposed of.

It is in the latter sense that the word "decree" is used in section 2(2) of the CPC. The appealability of the decree will, therefore, not affect its character as a final decree. The final decree merely carries into fulfilment the preliminary decree.[232] It has been further observed in the above case that final decree may be said to become final in two ways: (i) when the time for appeal has expired without any appeal being filed against the preliminary decree or the matter has been decided by the highest court; (ii) when, as regards the court passing the decree, the same stands completely disposed of. In the case of Hasham Abbas Sayyad v Usman Abbas Sayyad,[233] the Supreme Court has explained that preliminary decree declares the rights and liabilities of parties; however, in a given case a decree may be both preliminary and final. There can be more than one final decree. A decree may be partly preliminary and party final, but what can be executed is a final decree and not a preliminary decree, unless final decree is a part of the preliminary decree. Preliminary decree is a decree within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC, but it is not capable of execution, normally, till a final decree is passed.[234] Order XX enumerates the classes of suits in which preliminary decrees are to be passed but this is not exhaustive and does not preclude the court from passing a preliminary decree in cases not expressly provided for in the CPC.[235] Even in suits of the nature mentioned in O XX, if the matters in dispute are simple and do not involve elaborate scrutiny of accounts, the court is not bound to pass a preliminary decree and may proceed straightaway to pass a decree for the amount determined as due.[236] The question has sometimes arisen for decision whether there can be more than one preliminary decree and one final decree in a suit. On that, judicial opinion was divided; some decisions took the view that there could be only one preliminary decree and one final decree,[237] while others held that there was nothing in the CPC prohibiting the passing of more than one preliminary or final decree.[238]

---

231. S Talabali v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1920 Cal 689 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1013.
232. S Balwant Lokhande v Chandrakant Shankar Lokhande, AIR 1995 SC 1211 : (1995) 3 SCC 413.
233. Hasham Abbas Sayyad v Usman Abbas Sayyad, AIR 2007 SC 1077 : (2007) 2 SCC 355 : 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 793.
234. A Akkukamma v G Papi Reddy, AIR 1995 AP 166.
235. Dattatreya v Radhabai, AIR 1921 Bom 220 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 627, 633; Raja Peary Mohan v Manohar, AIR 1924 Cal 160 : (1923) 27 Cal WN pp 989, 992–93; Abdul Shukur v Abdul Rehman, AIR 1923 Mad 284 : (1928) ILR 46 Mad 148; U Ba Pe v U Pe Seon, AIR 1928 Rang 168 : (1928) ILR 6 Rang 97; Narayanan Thampi v Lakshmi Narayana, AIR 1953 TC 220 : (1953) ILR TC 89 (FB); UOI v Khetra Mohan, AIR 1960 Cal 190.
236. Purushotam Haridas v Amruth Ghee Co Ltd, Guntur, (1960) Andh LT 524 : (1960) 2 Andh WR 115.
237. Rudhra Pratap Singh v Sarada Mahesh Prasad Singh, AIR 1925 All 588 : (1925) 47 All 543; Bhawar Indo v Yakub Hassan, (1913) ILR 35 All 159; Banwarilal v Beni Prasad, AIR 1937 All 694; Kedernath v Parsu Lal, (1945) ILR 20 Luck 557.
238. Kasi v Ramanathan, (1947) 2 Mad LJ 523; Basavayya v Gunnayya, AIR 1951 Mad 938 : (1952) ILR Mad 173; overruling Ghulsuma Bibi v Ahmeda Rowther, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 296; Virayya v Viswanathayya, AIR 1957 Pat 25; Nallaswami v Avadayammal, AIR 1958 Mad 462; Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee v Manohar Mookerjee, (1923) 27 Cal WN 989.

In accordance with this view, where the plaintiff was found to be entitled to contribution, but the amount was left to be determined later on, it was held that the order was a preliminary decree.[239]

[s 2.3.9] Preliminary Decree in Partition Suit

Where the preliminary decree in a suit for partition, while declaring the shares to which the parties were entitled, failed to give any direction as to profits after the institution of the suit, it was held that it was competent for the court in a subsequent application to pass an order directing inquiry into such profits and that it was, in substance, a preliminary decree.[240] Likewise, a supplemental order determining the period for which the party is liable for mesne profits was held to be a preliminary decree.[241] In a suit for partition, a preliminary decree was passed declaring the plaintiff entitled to one-eighth share and thereafter, one of the parties having died, an application was put in by the plaintiff claiming that his share had become thereby augmented to one-seventh. An adjudication of that question was held to be a further preliminary decree.[242] It has also been held that whether an order is a preliminary decree or is merely an interlocutory order, must depend upon its substance and not the form.[243]

SB Sinha, J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench observed as follows:

> A decree therefore may denote final adjudication between the parties and against which an appeal lies, but only when a suit is completely disposed of thereby a final decree would come into being. There cannot be any doubt whatsoever that a decree may be partly preliminary and partly final.[244]

The bench went on to observe further as follows:

> It is now well settled that for the purposes of construing the nature of the decree one has to look to the terms thereof rather than speculate upon the Court's intentions.[245]

The conflict of view has been set at rest by the Supreme Court at least as regards partition suits. The court has observed that there is nothing in the CPC prohibiting the passing of more than one preliminary decree, if circumstances so justify. In some cases, it may even be necessary so to do, particularly in partition suits where after a preliminary decree has been passed, some parties die resulting in the shares of the other parties being augmented. In such an event, the court can and indeed should pass a second preliminary decree correcting the shares. If there is a dispute in that regard, the order of the court deciding that dispute and altering the shares set out in the previously passed preliminary decree is a decree in itself which is subject to an appeal.[246]

See also notes under O XX, rule 18.

---

239. Nawab Mirza Md Sadiq Ali Khan v Nawab Fakir Jahan Begum, 9 Luck 701: PC Appeal No. 131 and 132 of 1929, decided on 19 October 1931 (PC).
240. Basavayya v Guruvayya, (1952) ILR Mad 173.
241. Pulwa v Brijnandan Prasad, AIR 1959 Pat 397.
242. Parasuram v Heera Bai, AIR 1957 Bom 59.
243. Kasi v Ramanathan, (1947) 2 Mad LJ 523.
244. Bikoba Deora Gaikwad v Hirabai Marutirao Ghorgare, AIR 2009 SC (Supp) 454 : (2008) 8 SCC 198 : (2008) 3 Civil Court Cases 310 (SC).
245. Bikoba Deora Gaikwad v Hirabai Marutirao Ghorgare, (2008) 8 SCC 198, para 11 : 2008 (3) Civil Court Cases 310 (SC).
246. Phoolchand v Gopal Lal, AIR 1967 SC 1470 : (1967) 3 SCC 153; Mayimu v Chariya Malayammal Mayimu, AIR 1968 Ker 282; Ram Kishore v Kesho Ram, AIR 1972 All 336. See also O XX, rule 18.

[s 2.3.10] Partly Preliminary/Final decree and More Than One Preliminary/Final Decrees

The explanation to the sub-section makes it clear that a decree is preliminary when further proceedings have to be taken before the suit can be completely disposed of. It is final when such adjudication completely disposes of the suit. A decree may be partly preliminary and partly final.

It is settled law that there can be more than one preliminary decrees in a suit. Similarly, there can be more than one final decree in a suit.[247]

[s 2.3.11] Order of Company Law Board as Preliminary Decree

Where the dispute between parties was resolved with the persuasion of company law board and a family settlement was executed by parties, terms of which were set down in Memorandum of Family Arrangement and transfer document which provided for transfer of some of properties of company to one of the groups on its paying certain amount and that the other group would retain remaining assets and the order of the company law board which was passed on consent of parties, recorded that the said Memorandum of Family arrangement and transfer document would form integral part of the order, the order could not be refused to be executed on application by one of parties under section 634A. It was not an interim order but a final one because operative portion of the order directed the execution of the Memorandum and transfer document by the parties after completion of the schedules thereto. Moreover, the word "any order" used in the opening of section 634A, indicates that all orders made by the company law board on an application under sections 397 and 398 of the Companies Act, 1956 are enforceable like decrees without any limit on the nature of the order passed by the company law board. Moreover, the order was in fact a preliminary decree. Final disposal of the matter or the final decree would be after full implementation of the terms of the Memorandum and transfer document. Further, since the company law board when it deals with an application under section 634A sits as an executing court it is subject to all the limitations to which a court executing a decree is subject.[248]

[s 2.3.12] Deemed Decree

Order made under rule 58(2) of O XXI of the amended CPC adjudicating the claim made against attachment of property in execution, therefore, has only the status of "deemed decree" and not a "decree" by itself. Such orders are not covered by the definition under section 2(2) namely, of "decree" so as to attract the provisions of section 96 of the CPC. Only a "miscellaneous appeal" lies against such "order" and not a "regular appeal".[249]

Where, in a case under the Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interests Act, 2002, the borrower approached the Lok Adalat and an award was passed with the consent of the Bank, no further action under the Act can be taken as the award is a deemed decree.[250]

---

247. Rachakonda Venkat Rao v R Satya Bai, AIR 2003 SC 3322 : (2003) 7 SCC 452.
248. Manish Mohan Sharma v Ram Bahadur Thakur Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 1690.
249. B Nookaraju v MSN Charities, AIR 1994 AP 334.
250. Rajan Kakar v Vijaya Bank, AIR 2008 Del 17. See also United India Insurance Co Ltd v Master Jaseem Khan, AIR 2008 Del 26 : (2007) 144 DLT 406.

Award of the Lok Adalat was deemed to be decree of a civil court and executable as a legally enforceable debt when the decree is for recovery of money or repayment of debt.[251]

In an interesting case, the high court held that for dismissal of a suit, framing of the issues is necessary, whereas for rejection of a plaint, it is not necessary, and it can be done at any stage. It was further held that the order rejecting the plaint is appealable, but dismissal of a suit, without framing an issue and before trial as not maintainable, is not appealable. The Supreme Court[252] setting it aside held that in terms of section 2(2), in case, the court adjudicating the case, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to any one or more or all of the matters in controversy in the suit, the requirement of the decree is satisfied. It was further held by the Supreme Court that such determination can be preliminary or final.

In the instant case,[253] it was found that the order had conclusively determined the rights of the parties with regard to one of the matters in controversy in the suit, viz., res judicata. Although it was not an order passed on framing an issue, but at the same time, there was adjudication on the controversy as to whether the suit was barred by res judicata in the sense that there was a judicial determination of the controversy after referring to the materials on record and after hearing both sides. The court held that the impugned order dismissing the suit on the ground of res judicata did not cease to be a decree on account of a procedural irregularity of non-framing an issue. Courts ought to treat the decree as if the same has been passed after framing the issue and on adjudication thereof, in such circumstances. Therefore, even if there is a procedural irregularity in the process of passing such order, if the order passed is a decree under law, no revision lies under section 115 of the CPC in view of the specific bar under sub-section (2) thereof. It is only appealable under section 96 read with O XLI of the CPC. The order passed by the trial court was found to be a composite order on rejection of the plaint by the Supreme Court as there was no cause of action and dismissal of the suit was not maintainable on the ground of res judicata. Both aspects were held to be covered by the definition of decree under section 2(2) of the CPC and, therefore, it was concluded that the remedy was only appeal and not revision even if there was any irregularity in passing the order.

An award rendered under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, is a deemed decree only for the purpose of enforcement under section 36 of the Act. The enforcement is done by taking steps under CPC for the realisation of money. The use of the words "as if" in section 36 of the Act demonstrates that it is a decree only by a legal fiction and the said legal fiction is created only for the purpose of its enforcement as decree cannot be extended beyond the purpose for which it was created.[254]

By virtue of the deeming provision in section 26(2) of the Land Acquisition Act, an award made either under sections 18, 28A or 30 is deemed to be a decree as defined in the CPC and the reasons for such decree constitute "judgment" for the purpose of section 2(9) of the CPC.[255]

A division bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that an arbitral award is not a decree within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC, but for the purpose of execution/ enforcement it shall be deemed to be decree.[256] When in a case of theft of electrical energy, civil liability against the consumer is determined by the Special Court, that by itself is not a

---

251. Arun Kumar v Anita Mishra, AIR 2019 SC 5745 : (2020) 16 SCC 118 : ICL 2019 SC 1217;.
252. Rishabh Chand Jain v Ginesh Chand Jain, AIR 2016 SC 2143 : (2016) 6 SCC 675.
253. Supra Note 62.
254. Paramjeet Singh Patheja v ICDS Ltd, AIR 2009 SC 168.
255. Fertilisers and Chemical Travancore Ltd v Kumaran, AIR 2009 Ker 182 : (2009) 2 Ker LT 936.
256. Lakhamraju Sujatha v Yuvraj Finance Pvt Ltd, AIR 2010 (NOC) 276 (AP—DB).

decree and it is only by a fiction of law that such a liability would be recovered as if it were a decree of civil court.[257]

A full bench of the Patna High Court has held that appeals filed under section 19 of the Family Courts Act, 1984 cannot be treated as appeals against a decree having been passed in exercise of original jurisdiction as the omission of the word "decree" in section 19 is deliberate and intention.[258] Speaking for the full bench, Shiva Kirti Singh, Acting CJ, in the above case, explained it as follows:

> The word decree is conspicuous by its absence in Section 19(1) of the Act and the non obstante clause noticed above clearly means that the distinction made in the Code of Civil Procedure between appeals from original and those from Orders have been done away with. As a result, the provision for appeal under Section 19 of the Act is meant to take care of all kinds of judgments and orders of the Family Courts, not being interlocutory in nature, regardless of the fact whether such judgments and orders amount to a decree as defined under the Code of Civil Procedure or not.

[s 2.3.13] Orders Which Are Decree

The following have been held to be decrees within this sub-section:

(a) An order under section 24 of the Bombay Money Lenders Act, 1946 granting or refusing to grant instalments for payment of the decretal amount;[259]

(b) an order rejecting the application of tenants under section 6 of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Amendment) Act, 1950, for rescission of a decree in ejectment;[260]

(c) an order under section 14 of the Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1863;[261]

(d) an order transmitting a decree to the collector for execution under section 19 of the UP Encumbered Estates Act, 1934 with the information that the debt is reduced;[262]

(e) an order declaring the defendant a debtor under section 3(c) of the Karnataka Debt Relief Act, 1976, with the consequence that the debt advanced to him stood discharged under section 4(a) of the Act is a decree.[263]

(f) a modification in a decree is also a "decree".[264]

(g) An award under Pt III of the Land Acquisition Act by a civil court is by reason of section 26 of that Act, a decree.[265]

(h) An order made in winding up proceedings under the Indian Companies Act, 1956;[266]

(i) An order setting aside an ex parte decree is a decree and the plaintiff aggrieved by such an order can appeal against it.[267]

---

257. BSES Rajdhani Power Ltd v State, NCT of Delhi, AIR 2010 Del 91 : (2011) 121 DRJ 34.
258. Sunita Kumari v Prem Kumar, AIR 2009 Pat 183 : (2010) 2 DMC 264 (FB).
259. State of Bombay v Narayan Pure, AIR 1960 Bom 334; Mohan Lal v Bunshi Lal, AIR 1961 Raj 13; dissenting from Danuk Dhari Singh v Ram Ratan Singh, AIR 1941 Pat 1 : (1940) ILR 8 Pat 862.
260. Gobardan Dutta v Pramoda, AIR 1953 Cal 412; Radharani v Sisir Kumar, AIR 1953 Cal 524.
261. Ram Narain v Jai Narain, AIR 1961 All 125.
262. Chief Inspector of Stamps v Uggar Sen, AIR 1965 All 298 : (1964) All LJ 977.
263. Kariyaiah v Puttathayamma, AIR 1977 Kant 32 : (1976) ILR Kant 1294.
264. Panneshwar Lal v Gokula Nandan Prasad, AIR 1984 Pat 344, pp 346–47.
265. Louis Pascal v Spl Land Acq Officer, (1970) 72 Bom LR 703.
266. Pushpabai v Offl Liquidator, AIR 1970 Bom 271, 274 : (1969) 71 Bom LR 372.
267. Bhim Rao v Laxmibai, AIR 1966 Mys 112 : (1965) 1 Mys LJ 786.

(j) The determination of a question under section 47 was expressly included in the definition of a decree, although such determination was not made in a suit and sometimes not drawn up in the form of a decree.[268]

(k) It is no longer so in view of deletion of the words "section 47 or". A right of appeal had been provided to a party litigant to go up in appeal against an order passed under section 47, before the Amending Act of 1976, by virtue of the legal fiction introduced in the definition of the term "decree" as including any order passed in the execution proceedings. This right had been taken away by a valid enactment and it no longer survived after the execution was levied on 4 January 1979, as the Amending Act had already come into force with effect from 1 February 1977. No appeal would lie against any order passed under section 47 of the CPC.[269]

(l) An order modifying a scheme under section 92 of the CPC, which is part of a decree, constitutes an amendment in decree against which an appeal would lie;[270]

(m) An order rejecting an application for modification of such a scheme.[271]

(n) An adjudication under section 5(2) of the Malabar Tenancy Amendment Act, 1956, is in substance the final adjudication of a matter in controversy and is a decree, although the proceedings thereunder were initiated by an application.[272]

(o) The High Courts of Gujarat and Punjab have taken the view, that adjudications under sections 9–11 and 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, are decrees for the purposes of those provisions only, but are not decrees within the meaning of this sub-section as they are not passed in a suit.[273] But, a contrary view was earlier taken by the High Court of Allahabad.[274]

The Jammu and Kashmir High Court has held that where the husband's petition for divorce is dismissed for default, it will not amount to a decree and hence no independent application under section 33 of the J&K Hindu Marriage Act is maintainable for recovering "Streedhan".[275]

(p) An order rejecting a plaint is a decree and is not revisable under section 115 of the CPC but appealable under section 96 of CPC.[276]

(q) When a criminal case is referred by a criminal court and is settled by the Lok Adalat, its award cannot be executed as a decree passed by a civil court. The reason behind this view is that when a reference is made to Lok Adalat, that authority is exercising the powers enjoyed by the reference court and can only pass such order which the reference court was competent to pass.[277]

---

268. Shakuntala Devi v Kantal Kumar, AIR 1969 SC 575 : (1969) 1 SCR 1006.
269. Babulal v Ramesh Babu Gupta, AIR 1990 MP 317 (FB).
270. Bhogaraju v J Rama Rao v Board of Commrs for Hindu Religious Endowments, AIR 1965 SC 231 : (1964) 5 SCR 270.
271. Shree Kalimata v RC Chatterjee, AIR 1970 Cal 373, 376 : (1971) 75 Cal WN 1.
272. Vamanan Nambudiri v Narayan, AIR 1965 Ker 1 : (1964) Ker LT 516.
273. Bai Umiyaben v Ambalal, AIR 1966 Guj 139; Daljit Singh v Shamsher Kaur, AIR 1969 P&H 69; Gurbachan Kaur v Swaran Singh, AIR 1978 All 255.
274. Kusumlata v Kamta Prasad, AIR 1965 All 280, p 283.
275. Jai Krishna Pandita v Nana Kumari, AIR 2008 J&K 21.
276. Meera Sinha v Girja Sinha, AIR 2009 Pat 19 (DB); Sonama Devi v Urmila Devi, AIR 2009 Pat 71.
277. KN Govindan Kutty Menon v CD Shaji, AIR 2010 Ker 97.

[s 2.3.14] Orders Which Are Not Decree

The following are instances of orders which are not decrees:

(a) An order rejecting an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis for no suit has till then been filed;[278]

(b) An order refusing leave to institute a suit for accounts of religious endowments;[279]

(c) An order on a petition to appoint a new member on the committee of a religious endowment;[280]

(d) An order under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 dismissing an application for the removal of a trustee;[281]

(e) An order on a settlement case under section 104(2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 3 of 1898 as the proceeding is instituted not by a plaint but by an application;[282]

(f) An order made on an application to the District Court under section 84(2) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act 2 of 1927;[283]

(g) An order for ejectment in a proceeding under Chapter VII of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act, 1882;[284]

(h) An Award by the Calcutta Improvement Trust Tribunal;[285]

(i) An order rejecting a petition on the ground that the Madras Act IV of 1938 is not appealable;[286]

(j) An order under section 7 of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890 on an application under section 10 of that Act;[287]

(k) An order under section 10 of the Disabled Persons Act, 1951;[288]

(l) An order passed on an application made to the Insolvency Court under sections 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920;[289]

(m) An order granting interim relief under section 24 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955;[290]

---

278. Secretary of State v Jillo, (1899) ILR 21 All 133; Narasinga Das v Ratiram Gupta, AIR 1965 Hyd 41.
279. Mozaffer Ali v Hedayet, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 584; Kazem Ali v Azim Ali, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 382: Protab v Brojanath, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 275, p 288; Re Venkateswara, (1886) ILR 10 Mad 98.
280. Minakshi v Subramanya, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 26, p 35 : 14 IA 160; Somasundara v Vythilinga, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 285; Habibun Rahman v Saideursa, (1923) 38 Cal LJ 358; Santappa v Gobinda Swamy, (1916) ILR 40 Mad 791; Srijib v Dandi Swami Jagganath Asram, AIR 1941 Cal 618 : (1941) 73 Cal LJ 532, p 536.
281. Nathu Wilson v McAfee, (1897) ILR 19 All 131.
282. Upadhya Thakur v Persidh Singh, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 723, p 729; Lala Kirut v Palukdhari, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 326.
283. Rajagopala v Hindu Religious Endowments Board, AIR 1934 Mad 103 (FB) : (1934) ILR 57 Mad 271.
284. Madhav Prasad v SG Chandravarkar, AIR 1949 Bom 104 : (1950) ILR Bom 326 : (1948) 50 Bom LR 747.
285. AK Hossain v Province of Bengal, AIR 1942 Cal 569 : (1942) ILR 2 Cal 528 : (1942) 46 Cal WN 927.
286. Lakshmi Devi v Raja Rao, (1954) 2 Mad LJ 192.
287. Wahid v Jabida Begum, AIR 1952 Ngp 190 : (1951) ILR Nag 780.
288. Punjab National Bank v Firm of Iswardas Kaluram, AIR 1957 Raj 146.
289. Lakshmi Devi v Varada Reddi, 1958 Andh LT 896.
290. Mansingh v Siva Prabakumari, AIR 1960 Bom 315.

(n) An order passed on an application for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, declaration of nullity of marriage or divorce under sections 9– 12 respectively of the said Act;[291]

(o) An order under section 34 of the Malabar Tenancy Act;[292]

(p) An order under section 17(1) of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947, directing the landlord to restore possession of the premises to the tenant;[293]

(q) An order passed under section 52 of the Malabar Tenancy Act 33 of 1951 for restoration of a holding;[294]

(r) An award by the Debt Board under the Hyderabad Agricultural Debtors Relief Act, 1956;[295]

(s) An order passed in proceedings under section 25 of the Guardian and Wards Act;[296]

(t) The award given by the motor accident claim tribunal does not have the status of a "judgment", "decree" or "order" as contemplated by the CPC;[297]

(u) An order refusing to wind up a company is not decree, since such an order does not adjudicate upon any right of a party;[298]

(v) A decision on a reference under section 49(1) of the Land Acquisition Act;[299]

(w) Rejection of application for condonation of delay and consequent dismissal of appeal as time barred;[300]

(x) Decision of water disputes tribunal as notified;[301]

(y) Order passed by high court under contempt proceedings on consent terms;[302]

(z) Order of dismissal of suit for default or non-prosecution is not appealable as a decree;[303]

[s 2.3.15] Order As to Costs

It has been held in some cases that an order for costs is not a decree as defined in section 2(2). It is said in support of this view that an order involves no adjudication of any of the matters in controversy in the suit and that further, no party has a vested right to costs.[304] As a broad statement of the law, this proposition is open to question. A suit for costs alone, it is true, is not maintainable, but a claim for costs is incidental to the enforcement of substantive claims

---

291. Varalakshmi v Veera Reddy, AIR 1961 AP 359.
292. Nicholas v Yasamma, AIR 1961 AP 359.
293. Vishnumurthi v Lakshminarayana, (1961) 63 Bom LR 106.
294. Choyikutty v Vasu, (1962) Ker LJ 517.
295. Dattu Apparao v DG Shengde, AIR 1968 Bom 361.
296. Kiran Devi v Abdul Wahid, AIR 1996 All 105.
297. Oriental Insurance Co Ltd v Sardar Sadhu Singh, AIR 1994 Raj 44.
298. Dundappa v SG Motor Transport Co, (1966) 1 Mys LJ 786.
299. Deepchand v LA Officer, AIR 1975 MP 55.
300. Ratansingh v Vijaysingh, AIR 2001 SC 279 : (2000) 1 SCC 469.
301. State of Andhra Pradesh v State of Karnataka, AIR 2001 SC 1560.
302. Re Siddharth Srivastava, AIR 2002 Bom 494.
303. Firdous Omer v Bankim Chandra Daw, AIR 2006 SC 2759.
304. Dhudhewala and Co Ltd v Govindram Rameswarlal, AIR 1953 Cal 13 : (1954) ILR 1 Cal 438; Golab v Janki Kuer, AIR 1920 Pat 622 : (1920) 5 Pat LJ 472 (FB).

in a suit and therefore, an adjudication as to costs must stand in the same position as a decision on those claims. If the adjudication in a suit is a decree within section 2(2), the order for costs being part of the same, must likewise be a decree; but, if the adjudication is an order not amounting to a decree, the order for costs comprised therein must also amount to an order. This is so for the purpose of appeal — vide commentary under section 35. Therefore, whether an order for costs is a decree must depend upon whether the adjudication of which it is a part is a decree or not. Reviewing the authorities in the light of the above, an order directing the defendants to pay the costs of the day in a pending suit was rightly held to be not a decree.[305] Where the court granted permission to the plaintiffs to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh one and as a part of the same order directed their costs to come out of the temple funds, the order as to costs would not amount to a decree and so, it was held.[306] Likewise, when an order was made permitting the appellants to withdraw the appeal, the order for costs which was incidental to that order was held to be not a decree;[307] but, where an order in appeal was not one of withdrawal but of dismissal, the order for costs made therein would amount to a decree.[308] In Rustomji v Fezel Rahim,[309] it was held that a provision for costs embodied in a consent decree was itself a decree. In Dhudhewala Co v Govindram Rameswarlal,[310] the order for costs was part of the order disposing off the revision petition itself and it is submitted that on the principles stated above, there is no reason why that portion of the order should be treated differently from the rest of the order. Again, the fact that no party has a vested right to costs is not a ground for holding that what would otherwise be a decree is not a decree. On this reasoning, an adjudication in a suit for specific relief must be held not to be a decree. It is indeed well-settled that a party is entitled to file an appeal against a decree for costs even though the superior court might be slow to interfere with the exercise of discretion by the lower court.[311]

An application in the civil court for executing an order of costs passed by the high court in a writ petition is not maintainable because such order is neither a decree under section 2(2) nor an order under section 2(14).[312] Similarly, an order dismissing a suit for non-payment of costs is essentially an order of dismissal for non-prosecution and as such it would not amount to a decree.[313]

[s 2.3.16] Finding On Issue

It was at one time held by the High Court of Bombay that a finding on a preliminary issue that a suit was not bad for misjoinder or that it was not barred by limitation or that the court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit was in the nature of a preliminary decree and appealable as such.[314] These decisions have since been overruled by a full bench of the same high court, and it has been held that a finding on an issue cannot be the subject of an appeal until it has been embodied in the judgment and decree. It was accordingly held in that case that a

---

305. Shanks v Secy of State for India in Council, ILR 12 Mad 120.
306. Ramakissor Dossji v Srirangacharlu, (1898) ILR 21 Mad 421.
307. Mathura Lal v Chiranji Lal, AIR 1962 Raj 109 : (1962) ILR Raj 933.
308. Jujitsu Mahapatrao v Kora Magatapatro, AIR 1933 Mad 442 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 520 : (1933) 64 Mad LJ 695.
309. Rustomji v Fezel Rahim, AIR 1932 Bom 378.
310. Dhudhewala Co v Govindram Rameswarlal, AIR 1953 Cal 13 : (1954) ILR 1 Cal 438.
311. See commentary under section 35.
312. Manoj Pandarakathil v Kollamthodi Narayanan, AIR 2008 Ker 132 : (2008) 1 Ker LT 810.
313. Piaro Devi v Anant Ram, AIR 2008 HP 107.
314. Sidhnath v Ganesh, (1913) ILR 37 Bom 60; Narayan v Gopal, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 392.

finding that the questions in dispute were not caste related questions and were not, therefore, outside the jurisdiction of civil courts, and did not amount to a preliminary decree and that no appeal lay from such a finding.[315] It has similarly been held that a finding that the matter is not res judicata,[316] or that the plaintiff can maintain the suit[317] or that the defendant is not an agriculturist under the Deccan Agriculturist Relief Act, 1879,[318] and that the trial can proceed, or that the court has jurisdiction to try the suit,[319] is not a preliminary decree. A finding that the defendant is an agriculturist under that Act is not by itself an adjudication, and so not a decree, though it may result in the plaint being returned for presentation to the proper court under O VII, rule 10.[320]

Again, no appeal lies from a finding that an execution application is not barred by limitation and the execution proceedings are to go on till the final determination.[321] Where it was found on a preliminary issue that some defendants were not liable for the plaintiff's claim and upon this finding the court discharged those defendants from the suit, and the suit proceeded against the remaining defendants alone, it was held that the order was a decree.[322]

[s 2.3.17] Rejection of Plaint

The definition of "decree" provides that the rejection of a plaint shall be deemed to be a decree. Such adjudication, therefore, is appealable as a decree.[323] An order rejecting a plaint for failure to pay additional court fee as required by the court, is a decree[324] and the court has no power to set it aside except on review or under section 152 of the CPC.[325] Where a plaintiff was dispaupered and ordered to pay court fees and on failure to comply with the order, the suit was dismissed, it was held that the order was one of dismissal for default under section 2(2)(b) and therefore, not a decree.[326] The ground of this decision is that there is a distinction under the CPC between rejection of a plaint and dismissal of a suit and that while the rejection of a plaint for non-payment of additional court fees falls under O VII, rule 11, and would be a decree, the dismissal of a suit under O XXII, rule 11, would not be covered by it and would be an order within section 2(2)(b). It is submitted that there is on principle, no distinction between rejection of a plaint for non-payment of additional court fee under O VII, rule 11, and dismissal of a suit under O XXXIII, rule 11 for non-payment of court-fees, and that the 315. Chanmalswari v Gangadharappa, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 339; Mst Chauli v Mst Meghoo, AIR 1945 All 268.

---

316. Bhama v Bhimagavda, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 421.
317. Kamini Devi v Promotha, (1914) 19 Cal WN 751.
318. Rupchand v Bhogilal, AIR 1926 Bom 237 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 307.
319. Manash Ranjan v Tropical Accumulations Ltd, AIR 1957 Cal 135.
320. Dattatraya v Radhabai, AIR 1921 Bom 220 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 627; Gulab v Baliram, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 423; Vamanacharya v Govind, AIR 1924 Bom 33 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 826, 834; Murali Panda v Khoshi Naiko, AIR 1947 Pat 255 : (1946) 12 Cut LT 85.
321. Barkat Ram v Bhagwan Singh, AIR 1949 EP 222; Kamaraja Pandia v Kamaraja Pandia, AIR 1933 Mad 500 : (1933) 64 Mad LJ 735.
322. Nand Kumar v Parupati, AIR 1941 Pat 385 : (1940) ILR 20 Pat 417; Chitanlal Purshottam v GS Gupta, AIR 1938 Nag 233; Mt Phool Sundri v Gurban Singh, AIR 1957 Raj 97 : (1956) ILR Raj 1104.
323. Nand Kumar v Pashupati, AIR 1941 Pat 385 : (1940) ILR 20 Pat 417; Sada Kaur v Buta Singh, (1914) PR 80; Saratchandra v Murtyunjay, AIR 1935 Cal 336 : (1935) ILR 62 Cal 61; Puranmasi Yadav v Narbadeshwar Tripathi, AIR 1998 All 260.
324. Shamrao Janrao v Amolak, AIR 1949 Ngp 373 : (1949) ILR Nag 391; Ganpathi v Venkatesh, AIR 1938 Ngp 83 (FB); Satyanarayana v Ramalinga, AIR 1952 Mad 86 : (1952) ILR Mad 77 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 74; Re Ramayamma, AIR 1954 Mad 888 : (1953) 1 Mad LJ 544; Kamalamma v Batchi Marianna, AIR 1960 Mys 140; Bilas Mohan v Haricharan, AIR 1961 Cal 491; Kadar Bai v Husenali, AIR 1962 Guj 59.
325. Kishorelal v Surajmal, AIR 1956 Raj 164 : (1956) ILR Raj 736; Md Yunus v Sangra Begum, AIR 1955 Hyd 156 : (1956) ILR Hyd 56.
326. Re Subrahmanyam, AIR 1955 AP 75.

rejection of a plaint will be a decree even though it is not under O VII, rule 11, provided it is authorised by the CPC[327] and that the decision aforesaid, requires reconsideration.

[s 2.3.18] Order Returning Plaint

A plaint may be returned for amendment (O VI, rule 17) or for presentation to the proper court (O VII, rule 10). In either case, the decision returning the plaint is an order as distinguished from a decree. An order returning a plaint is appealable under CPC (O XLIII, rule 1, clause (a)). An order returning a plaint for amendment was appealable under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882; it is no longer appealable under this CPC.[328]

[s 2.3.19] Rejection of Memorandum of Appeal

On the question whether an order rejecting a Memorandum of Appeal is a decree, the decisions are conflicting. The controversy centres around the express inclusion of rejection of plaint in the definition of "decree". One view is that on a reading of O VII, rule 11, with section 107(2), an order rejecting a plaint must include an order rejecting an appeal; and, that further, the latter order would be a decree on the terms of the definition, for it has the effect of finally disposing off the proceedings.[329] As against this, it is said that an order rejecting a plaint will not, but for its inclusion in the definition, be a decree and that the words "shall be deemed to include rejection of plaint" imports a legal fiction which could not be extended to an order rejecting the appeal.[330] The Calcutta High Court has held that an order rejecting a Memorandum of Appeal as insufficiently stamped, is not appealable as a decree, and that the effect of O VII, rule 13 read with section 107(2) is that the appellant may present a fresh Memorandum of Appeal.[331] An order rejecting a Memorandum of Appeal or dismissing an appeal following the rejection of an application under section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 (for condonation of delay in preferring the appeal) is not a "decree" within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC. It is only an order against which an application in revision under section 115 of the CPC may lie.[332] The Allahabad High Court has held that an order rejecting a Memorandum of Appeal for reasons for which rejection is not prescribed by the CPC, is not a decree;[333] but, there have been decisions allowing an appeal when the Memorandum of Appeal was rejected as not duly presented,[334] or as scandalous,[335] or as insufficiently stamped.[336] A Memorandum of Appeal which is time-barred is dismissed under the Limitation Act, 1963

---

327. Harihar Baksh Singh v Jagannath Singh, AIR 1924 Oudh 413; Badrinath v State of Pepsu, AIR 1957 Pepsu 14.
328. Gurdas v Bhag, (1911) PR 96.
329. Kanthimathi v Ganesa Iyer, AIR 1936 Mad 101; Ram Savari Jovar v Dulecm Muthuraj Kovar, AIR 1939 Pat 83 : 17 Pat 687; Mt Burket v Nasseer 1942 Lah 64; Lachayya v Veeriah, AIR 1961 AP 112; Raghunath v Nilkantji , 9 Bom 453; Ramdhari v Khader, AIR 1938 Pat 461 : (1938) 17 Pat 245.
330. Lekha v Bowna, (1896) 18 All 111 (FB); Chausila v Abhiles, AIR 1936 Cal 804 : (1937) ILR 1 Cal 103; Balaji Dhumraji v Muktha Bai, AIR 1938 Ngp 122 : (1938) ILR Nag 106; Re Kayambu Pillai, AIR 1941 Mad 836 : (1941) ILR Mad 954; Gyasiram v Brij Bhushan Das, AIR 1962 MP 237.
331. Jnanasundari v Madhab Chandra, AIR 1932 Cal 482 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 388; dissenting from Rupsing v Mukhraj Singh, (1885) ILR 7 All 887.
332. Ainthu Charan Parida v Sitaram Jayanarayan, AIR 1984 Ori 230 (FB).
333. Amba Shankar v Mt Sheoti, AIR 1937 All 280 : (1937) All LJ 171; Rajballam Singh v Madhu Sudan, AIR 1950 Pat 443.
334. Ayyanna v Nagabhooshanam, (1893) ILR 16 Mad 285.
335. Zamindar of Tuni v Bennayya, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 155.
336. Abdul Majid v Amina Khatun, AIR 1942 Cal 539 : (1942) ILR 2 Cal 253 : (1942) 75 Cal LJ 393 : (1942) 46 Cal WN 697; Rupsing v Mukhraj Singh, (1885) ILR 7 All 887; Mela Mal v Hardeo, (1884) PR 115 and such dismissal disposes off the appeal and is appealable as a decree.[337] When an appeal is rejected under O XLI, rule 10(2) for failure to furnish security for costs, there is no appeal, the order does not determine the rights of the parties.[338] An order dismissing an appeal on the ground that it is barred by limitation is a decree;[339] so also, an order dismissing an appeal in limine under O XLI, rule 11.[340] An order that a suit abates, is a decree. Similarly, an order directing that an appeal or a cross-objection abates is also a decree.[341]

[s 2.3.20] Order Returning Memorandum of Appeal

No appeal lies from an order returning a Memorandum of Appeal to be presented to the proper court.[342] Nor does an appeal lie from an order returning a Memorandum of Appeal for amendment.

[s 2.3.21] Omission of the Words "Section 47 or" Effect of

An execution proceeding, though a proceeding in a suit, is not a suit.[343] Therefore, an order passed in such a proceeding was treated as a decree from which an appeal would lie; but, under the definition of "decree" as it stood when this sub-section contained the words "under section 47 or", the expression "decree" included an order passed in execution proceedings under section 47 if : (i) the executing court therein conclusively determined a question; (ii) it arose between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives; and (iii) it related to the execution of the decree.[344] If it decided a question relating to the rights and liabilities of the parties with reference to the relief granted by the decree, it fell within the scope of section 47 and was tantamount to a decree; but orders which were merely incidental and referred to the conduct of the proceedings were held not to be within the section.[345] Thus, a decision refusing to recognise the transferee of a decree,[346] or on the question whether a person was a representative of a party under section 47(1),[347] or to record an adjustment of a

---

337. Gulab Rai v Mangli Lal, (1885) ILR 7 All 42; Raghunath v Nilo, (1885) ILR 9 Bom 52; Ganga Dass v Ramjoy, (1880) ILR 12 Cal 30; Saminatha v Venkatasubha, (1903) ILR 27 Mad 21; Rakhal v Ashutosh, (1913) 17 Cal WN 807.
338. Rakhal v Ashutosh, (1913) 17 Cal WN 807; Lekha v Bhauna, (1896) ILR 18 All 101; Romesh v Monindra, AIR 1922 Cal 246 : (1921) ILR 49 Cal 355.
339. Somba Keshao v Rodrigues, AIR 1938 Ngp 322.
340. Hakam Singh v Jaswant Singh, AIR 1974 P&H 235.
341. Purushottamdas v Devkaran Keshaoji, AIR 1939 Ngp 39.
342. Raghunath v Shamo Joeri, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 344; Mahabir v Behari, (1891) ILR 13 All 320.
343. Venkata v Venkatarama, (1898) ILR 22 Mad 256, 258.
344. RMARA Adaikappa Chettiar v R Chandra Sekhara, AIR 1948 PC 12 : (1948) ILR Mad 505 : 74 IA 264; Mst Durga Devi v Hansraj, AIR 1930 Lah 187 : (1930) ILR 11 Lah 402; Sarasvati v Moti, (1913) ILR 41 Cal 160.
345. Kedarnath v Pattu Lal, AIR 1945 Oudh 312 : (1945) ILR 20 Luck 557; Jogodishury v Kailash, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 725, 729; Sivagami v Subrahmania, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 259 (FB); Deoki v Bansi, (1912) 16 Cal WN 124; Mukhtar v Muqurrah, (1912) ILR 34 All 530; Srinivas v Kesho, (1911) ILR 38 Cal 160; Hussain Bhai v Batul Shah, AIR 1924 All 808 : (1924) ILR 46 All 733, p 737; Sardarni v Ram Rattan, (1920) 2 Lah LJ 398; Surendra Nath v Mritunjay, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 270; Tipan Raut v Raj Kumar, AIR 1977 Pat 53.
346. Badri Narain v Jai Kishen, (1894) ILR 16 All 483; Tameshar v Thakur, (1903) ILR 25 All 3; Ganga Das v Yakub, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 670; Subbuthayammal v Chidambaram, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 383; Hariditta v Nigahia, AIR 1922 Lah 396 : (1922) 4 Lah LJ 259; Run Bahadur v Bajrangi, AIR 1925 Pat 16 : (1924) ILR 3 Pat 344.
347. Ghanshiam Singh v Har Piarey, AIR 1974 All 229 : (1974) All WR 194.

decree,[348] fell within section 47 and was appealable as a decree. An order directing an execution application to be converted into a suit was held to be in substance an order refusing to execute the decree and therefore, appealable as such a decree;[349] but an order refusing leave to bid at an execution sale was treated as a mere interlocutory order and therefore not appealable.[350] The Bombay High Court accordingly held an order staying execution of a decree on security being furnished to be an interlocutory order.[351] On the other hand, the Lahore High Court after a review of authorities, had found that such an order fell under section 47 and was appealable.[352] An order refusing to stay execution was held to be an interlocutory order;[353] so also, an order refusing execution on the ground that it had been attached.[354] But, an order that certain property was liable to attachment and sold in execution, was held to be a decree.[355]

These controversies, whether an order passed in execution proceedings was tantamount to a decree or was only an interlocutory order, arose by reason of the words "Section 47" occurring in the definition of a decree. The omission of these words by the Amendment Act, 1976, means that such orders, even though they are made under section 47, are not decrees[356] and are therefore, not appealable. A party aggrieved by an order passed in execution proceedings can challenge its correctness only by a revision, provided such an order satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 115.

Where all defendants submit to the jurisdiction of a court, the decree of that court cannot be treated as a nullity.[357]

Order passed under section 47 by the executing court is not appealable as a decree, unless it is expressly provided for in other provisions of the CPC.[358]

A plea that the decree is contrary to law is not the same thing as a decree that is a nullity. To render a decree a nullity, it must be shown that the court lacked inherent jurisdiction in the sense that it was incompetent to try the suit.[359]

Adjudication in execution is not a "decree".[360] The omission of the words "section 47 or" from section 2(2) (in 1976), clearly shows that an order under section 47 is no longer appealable as a decree as held by the Bombay High Court.[361]

The Bombay view points out that but for the words "section 47 or" occurring (prior to 1976) in section 2(2), an order under section 47 would not have been a "decree". These words gave an extended connotation to "decree"; but that extension itself has now been deleted. As a result, orders under section 47 are not "decrees" and are not subject to appeal under section 9.

---

348. Jamna v Mathura, (1894) ILR 16 All 129; Ranji v Bhaiji, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 57; Guruvayya v Vudayappa, (1895) ILR 18 Mad 26; Jadunandan v Sheonandan, AIR 1922 Pat 276 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 644.
349. Mani Shankar v Niranjan Sarup, AIR 1955 All 686.
350. Jodoonath v Brojo Mohun, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 174; Ko Tha Hayin v Ma Hnin, (1911) ILR 38 Cal 717 : 38 IA 126.
351. Janardhan v Martand, AIR 1921 Bom 208 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 241.
352. Mst Durga Devi v Hansraj, AIR 1939 Lah 187 : (1930) ILR 11 Lah 402; dissenting from Janardan v Martand, AIR 1921 Bom 208; distinguishing Saraswati v Moti, (1914) ILR 41 Cal 160.
353. Rajendra Kishore v Mathura Mohan, (1919) 25 Cal WN 555.
354. Lala Narotam Dass v Thakurain Sri Ram Kunwar, AIR 1936 Oudh 272 : (1936) 11 Luck 26.
355. Bhagwat Prasad v Abdul Basit, AIR 1962 P&H 379; S Appanna v R Narsinga Rao, AIR 1975 AP 304.
356. Md Khan v State Bank of Travancore, AIR 1978 Ker 201; Mohan Das v Kamala Devi, AIR 1978 Raj 127.
357. Re Soumitra Kumar De, AIR 1982 Cal 34, pp 37–38.
358. Hasumatiben v Ambalal Krishanlal Parikh, AIR 1982 Guj 324 (DB)
359. Director, Railway Movement v Akashwani Works, AIR 1985 All 314, p 320, paras 17–18.
360. Ramamurthy v P Adinarayanan & Sons, AIR 1985 AP 42, p 45, paras 7–9 (DB).
361. RS Sancheti v RV Batwal, AIR 1983 Bom 378 (DB).

The high courts enumerated hereinafter, have taken the same view, namely, that there is (after 1976), no appeal against an order in execution under section 47:

(i) Allahabad;[362]

(ii) Andhra Pradesh;[363]

(iii) Gauhati;[364]

(iv) Gujarat;[365]

(v) Kerala;[366]

(vi) Orissa;[367] and,

(vii) Rajasthan;[368]

A Patna judgment, however, takes a different view.[369]

[s 2.3.22] Section 144: Restitution

An order passed on an appeal setting aside the sale of a judgment-debtor's property is a decree and section 144 is wide enough to cover such an order.[370] An order for restitution of costs is a decree.[371]

[s 2.3.23] Order of Dismissal for Default

A suit may be dismissed for default of appearance under O IX, rule 8. Such a dismissal is not a decree and is not appealable. Under the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, there was a conflict of decisions. The Madras High Court held that the order was not appealable[372] while the other high courts held that it was appealable.[373] An appeal may be dismissed for default of appearance under O XLI, rules 11(2) or 17. Such an order of dismissal is not a decree and is not appealable.[374]

There may also be a dismissal for default under O IX, rule 3, if neither party appears when the suit is called on for hearing. This is also excluded from the definition of "decree". It has been held that the expression "dismissal for default" includes not only dismissal for default of appearance but also for default in the prosecution of a suit or appeal.[375] An order dismissing a

---

362. Pratap Narain v Ram Narain, AIR 1980 All 42 (FB).
363. M Janakiamma v Pardesi Sanna, AIR 1980 AP 209.
364. Tapan Chandra v Dulal Chandra, AIR 1980 Gau 3.
365. Hasumatiben v Ambalal, AIR 1982 Guj 324.
366. Kuraikose v PK Narayana, AIR 1981 Ker 18.
367. Sarabai Agarwalla v Haradhan Mohapatra, AIR 1982 Ori 9.
368. Mohan Das v Kamla Devi, AIR 1978 Raj 127.
369. Parshwa Properties v AK Bose, AIR 1979 Pat 308.
370. Baldevdas v Vallabdas, AIR 1947 Bom 462 : 49 Beng LR 306; contra where the order for restitution does not strictly fall within section 144; Sayyed Usman v Vegisena, AIR 1950 Mad 463 : (1950) Mad WN 196; Telu v Raja Ram, AIR 1938 Lah 456.
371. Suryanarayana v Lakshminarayana, AIR 1960 AP 544.
372. Gilkinson v Subramania, (1899) ILR 9 All 427.
373. Gosto Behari v Hari Mohan, (1903) 8 Cal WN 313; Ramchandra v Madhav, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 23; Ablakh v Bhagirathi, (1887) ILR 9 All 427.
374. Rukminimayi v Paran Chandra, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 341; Surujdev v Partap, AIR 1923 Pat 514 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 739.
375. Re Subramaniam, (1955) ILR Andhra 75; Re Kayambu Pillai, AIR 1941 Mad 836 : (1941) ILR Mad 954; Tufasal v Shah Mahamad, AIR 1949 All 261.

suit for failure by the plaintiff to furnish particulars has been held to amount to dismissal on default and therefore, not a decree.[376]

[s 2.3.24] Non-Appealable Orders

Orders that are not appealable are, generally speaking, orders that are processual; that is, interlocutory or incidental orders regulating procedure but not deciding any of the matters in controversy in the suit. Such orders occur both, in suits and in execution proceedings. Their number is legion, and the following are cited merely by way of illustration:

[s 2.3.24.1] In Suits

Under section 148 for enlargement of time;[377] under section 152 for amendment of a clerical error in a judgment;[378] under O IX, rule 9, granting an application for restoration of a suit;[379] under O IX, rule 13, granting an application to set aside an ex parte decree;[380] O XIV, rule 9, refusing to frame an issue.[381]

[s 2.3.24.2] In Execution Proceedings

Under O XXI, rule 40, refusing an application to arrest a judgment-debtor;[382] under O XXI, rule 66, settling the terms of a sale proclamation[383] or declining to set aside an ex parte order settling the terms of sale proclamation under O XXI, rule 66,[384] or an order holding on preliminary issues that the execution application was maintainable.[385]

An order passed by the court on an objection to the commissioner's report is not a decree and therefore, not appealable.[386]

[s 2.4] Decree-Holder: Section 2(3)

> "Decree-holder" means any person in whose favour a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made.

The definition in the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, included a transferee of a decree: but this was inconsistent with the provisions relating to execution whereby an oral transferee has no locus standi; under the present section, a transferee is not a decree-holder unless he has been recognised by the court. A decree for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of immovable property may be executed either by the plaintiff or the defendant, either

---

376. Chamarin v Bhudhiyarin, AIR 1975 MP 75 : (1975) MP LJ 82. See also "Rights of Parties".
377. Suranjan v Ram Bahal, (1913) ILR 35 All 582.
378. Nalinakshya v Matakshar, (1900) ILR 28 Cal 177; Narayanasami v Natesa, (1892) ILR 16 Mad 424; Bai Shri Vakuba v Agarsangji, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 447; Bava Singh v Lachman Singh, (1911) PR 24.
379. Hirdaman v Jinghoo, (1880) ILR 5 Cal 711; Fazal v Hashmati, (1916) PR 40 and under O IX, rule 4: Alwar v Seshmma, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 270; Wahidunnissa v Kundan Lal, (1913) ILR 35 All 427.
380. Shama Dass v Hurbuns, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 426.
381. Tulijaram v Alagappa, (1912) ILR 35 Mad 1; Ebrahim v Fuckrunnissa, (1879) 4 ILR Cal 531.
382. Lala Das v Mina Mal, AIR 1922 Lah 259 : (1922) 4 Lah LJ 266; Abdul Rahiman v Mahomed, (1908) 21 ILR Mad 29.
383. Sivagami v Subramama, (1904) 27 ILR Mad 259; Indrani v Babu Bimla, AIR 1930 Oudh 81 : (1930) ILR 5 Luck 481; Ramanathan v Venkatachala, AIR 1923 Mad 619 : (1923) 44 Mad LJ 599; Panch v Mani, (1912) 16 Cal WN 970.
384. Premavathi v Satyavathi, AIR 1953 Ngp 55.
385. Sivanarayan v Khemraj, AIR 1954 Ngp 31.
386. M Damodaran v M Kesavankutty, AIR 1975 Ker 16 : ILR 2 Ker 472.

party being a "decree-holder" in such a case.[387] Where the defendant is a public officer and the government undertakes his defence as provided in O XXVII, rule 8(1), a decree for costs passed in his favour might be executed by the government as a decree-holder.[388] In short, a decree-holder is one whose name is inscribed on the decree and in whose favour such decree has been passed.[389]

Where a suit for permanent prohibitory injunction was dismissed directing the plaintiff to remove the unauthorised construction on the property given in plaint put up during the pendency of the suit, the said direction does not amount to a decree as defined in the Code; but it certainly amounts to an executable order in favour of the defendant, who qualifies as a decree-holder within the meaning of the CPC.[390]

[s 2.5] District: Section 2(4)

> "District" means the local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction (hereinafter called a "District Court"), and includes the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a high court.

Following this definition, the expression "District court", as used in the Inventions and Designs Act 6 of 1888, has been held to include a high court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction;[391] but it has since been held in Hyath v Shake,[392] that this is not necessarily so. In a suit for infringement of copyright under the Copyright Act 1957, if the subject matter is valued at less than Rs 50,000, it would be the City Civil Court of Calcutta and not the high court which would have jurisdiction.[393] In the absence of such a court having the jurisdiction, a high court having the ordinary original civil jurisdiction would be deemed to be the district court.[394] If a high court does not possess the ordinary original civil jurisdiction, it would not, though at the apex of the civil courts, be the district court for the purposes of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958.[395] The expression "District Court" includes the court of the additional district judge.[396]

The original jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras in matters of appointment of guardian of a child is lost after the establishment of family courts under the Family Courts Act, 1984. Therefore, the petition filed by foreign nationals for appointment of guardian to an Indian female child, is not maintainable before the original side of the high court and has to be transferred to a proper court. Even assuming that the jurisdiction of the high court under clause17 of Letters Patent 1865, still existed, it would be as per the appellants, a jurisdiction of general nature applicable to all, then section 15 of the CPC will come into play, and the appellants should approach the lowest grade court competent, viz the family court. The proper forum for the parties in the matter is the family court wherever and whenever it is established

---

387. Bai Karimabibi v Abderehman, AIR 1923 Bom 26 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 990; Heramba Chandra v Jyotish Chandra, AIR 1932 Cal 579 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 501.
388. Ajudhia v Government of Uttar Pradesh, (1947) ILR All 390.
389. Bajirao v Kashirao, AIR 1978 Bom 350.
390. KM Basheer v Trie-Tee Trading Co Ltd, AIR 2007 Ker 291 : (2007) 4 Ker LT 113.
391. Kedarnath v Ganesh, (1907) 12 Cal WN 446.
392. Hyath v Shake, AIR 1927 Cal 290 : (1927) AC 290.
393. Maheswar Swain v Bidyut Prabha Art Press, AIR 1971 Cal 455.
394. Daily Calendar Supplying Bureau v United Concern, AIR 1967 Mad 381.
395. Raja Soap Factory v Shantharaj, AIR 1965 SC 1449.
396. Bezharva v State of Assam, AIR 1954 Assam 161; Munshi v Evankhan, (1961) Jab LJ 1431.

and till then, the respective District Courts, with, of course, the right of appeal before this court.[397]

[s 2.6] Foreign Court: Section 2(5)

> [398]["Foreign Court" means a Court situate outside India and not established or continued by the authority of the Central Government].

This sub-section has been substituted by section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951, for the old sub-section which, after the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, ran as follows:

> 'Foreign Court' means a Court situated beyond the limits of British India which has no authority in British India and is not established or continued by the Central Government.

The Privy Council, which was not within the definition of a foreign court as it stood originally,[399] is now to be regarded so. The High Court of Justice in England, whether it be the Chancery Division[400] or the King's Bench Division,[401] is a foreign court. The Ceylon Court also is a foreign court[402] and so is the Supreme Court of Mauritius.[403]

[s 2.7] Foreign Judgment: Section 2(6)

> "Foreign judgment" means the judgment of a foreign court.

A foreign judgment as defined in this sub-section creates a new right in favour of the creditor and a new obligation imposed by the foreign court on the debtor. A judgment given by a foreign court does not cease to be so, when as a consequence of political change, the territory where the court was situated at the time of the judgment becomes part of India.

An interim order passed by a court in USA directing the mother to hand over the interim custody of minor child to the father until further orders, cannot assume the characteristic of a foreign judgment as it is not a final order. More so, when such order was passed, the wife had left the territorial jurisdiction of the court.[404]

[s 2.8] Government Pleader: Section 2(7)

> "Government Pleader" includes any officer appointed by the [405][State Government] to perform all or any of the functions expressly imposed by this Code on the Government Pleader and also any pleader acting under the directions of the Government Pleader.

A person appointed as a special government pleaders under O XXVII, rule 8(B) to conduct a particular case specified in the notification appointing him does not hold the office of the government pleader.[406]

---

397. Re Patrick Martin, AIR 1989 Mad 231.
398. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951, section 4(5), for the original clause (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
399. Bowles v Bowles, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 571.
400. London Bank v Hormasji, (1871) 8 BHC 200.
401. See Deep Narain v Dietert, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 274.
402. Shaik Atham v Davud, (1909) ILR 32 Mad 469, p 471.
403. Kassim v Isuf, (1904) ILR 29 Cal 509. As to suit on judgments of the High Court of Justice in England, see notes to section 13, "An Indian court will not give effect to a foreign judgment, etc.".
404. Ramakrishna Balasubramanian v Priya Ganeshan, AIR 2007 Mad 210 (DB) : (2007) 5 All LJ (NOC) 790.
405. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO 1950.
406. Kanta Kathuria v Manak, AIR 1970 SC 694, p 700.

Section 2(7) defines "government pleader". According to this provision, "government pleader" includes any officer appointed by the State Government to perform all or any of the functions expressly imposed by the CPC on the government pleader and also any pleader acting under the directions of the government pleader. Section 2(15) defines "pleader" which means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in court, and includes an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a high court. Where Law Officers for Government were Assistant District Attorney, Public Prosecutor and Deputy Advocate General appearing on behalf of their respective States, primarily in criminal/civil cases and their appointments were basically under the CPC or CrPC, the Supreme Court held them eligible for appointment to the office of Additional District and Sessions Judge.[407]

The government can have as many government pleaders as it likes. The definition is inclusive. It must be read with O XXVII, rules 4 and 8B.

It is not obligatory to have only one government pleader. The government is also free to put a particular government pleader in charge of a particular case or cases.[408]

[s 2.9] India: Section 2(7B)

> "India" except in sections 1, 29, 43, [409][44A], 78, 79, 82, 83 and 87A, means the territory of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

These two sub-sections namely, (7A) and (7B), were inserted by section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951.

By the Constitution (Seventh Amendment) Act, 1956, Jammu and Kashmir, is a state and its government, a state government. Therefore, notice under section 80 of the CPC would be necessary if a suit is filed against that state in a place where the Code applies. But, if such a suit is filed within that state, the suit would be governed by the law prevailing there and a notice may not become necessary.[410]

[s 2.10] Judge: Section 2(8)

> "Judge" means the presiding officer of a Civil Court.

No judge can act in any matter in which he has any pecuniary interest, nor where he has any interest, though not a pecuniary one, sufficient to create a real bias.[411] An arbitrator is neither a judge nor a court.[412]

The members of Administrative Tribunals cannot be considered to be judges and their statement cannot be treated as a decree.[413]

However, it has been held that a tribunal may be termed as a court if it has all the trappings of a court. Every court may be a tribunal, but every tribunal need not necessarily be a court. Once the essential features of "court" are satisfied, then it will have to be termed as a "court". The statutory provisions of the family court squarely satisfy the ingredients of a court and the 407. Deepak Aggarwal v Keshav Kaushik, (2013) 5 SCC 277 : (2013) 1 SCR 402.

---

408. Mundrika Prasad Sinha v State of Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1871 : (1979) 4 SCC 701 : (1980) 1 SCR 759.
409. Inserted by the Repealing and Amending Act 42 of 1953, Sch III and section 4 (w.e.f. 23-12-1953).
410. State of Jammu & Kashmir v Lucky Glass Works, AIR 1969 Cal 11, p 12.
411. Aloo v Gagubha, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 608; Frome United Breweries Co v Borth Justices, AIR 1926 Cal 596.
412. Anand Prakash v Asst Registrar Co-op Societies, AIR 1968 All 22.
413. State of Tamil Nadu v S Thangavel, AIR 1997 SC 2283 : (1997) 2 SCC 349.

Presiding Officers of family courts perform judicial and determinative functions and, as such, are judges.[414]

The word "court" is generic term and embraces a judge but the vice versa is not true. A "court" is an agency created by the sovereign for the purpose of administrating justice. It is a place where justice is judicially administered. It is tribunal presided over by one or more judges on whom are conferred certain judicial powers for administrating justice in accordance with law. When a judge takes a seat in the court, the court is set to have assembled for administrating justice. Therefore, the word "court" and judge are frequently used interchangeably because a judge is an essential constituent of the court since there can be no dispensation of justice without a judge. But that is not to say that, when a judge demits office, the court ceases to exist. While the word "court" and judge are frequently used interchangeably, they are not stricto sensu synonyms for the simple reason that a judge by himself does not constitute a court, being only an essential part of the court.[415]

[s 2.11] Judgment: Section 2(9)

> "Judgment" means the statement given by the judge on the grounds of a decree or order.

[s 2.11.1] Meaning

In England the word "judgment" is generally used in the same sense as a decree in the CPC. A judgment must contain the grounds of the decision.[416]

In the Chambers Dictionary (Deluxe Edition),[417] the meaning of the word "judgment" given is "the act of judging; comparing of ideas to find out the truth, the faculty by which this is done, an opinion formed; a legal verdict or sentence etc". In The New Shorter Oxford English Dictionary,[418] some of the meanings given are; the sentence of court of justice, a judicial decision or order in court. One of the meanings given to the word "judgment" in Webster's Comprehensive Dictionary[419] reads thus: the result of judging, the decision or conclusion reached as after consideration or deliberation.[420] In his concurring judgment, SB Sinha, J, observed:

> We however, need not go into the aforementioned question in view of the order proposed to be passed by us, in our opinion the learned Tribunal failed to assign sufficient or cogent reasons in support of its findings. In relation to some issues, no reason has been assigned. Some issues although noticed have not been adverted to. Some issues have even not been noticed. The impugned order of the TDSAT, therefore, does not fulfil the criteria of a judgment.[421]

---

414. SD Joshi v High Court of Bombay, (2011) 1 SCC 252.
415. Supreme Court Legal Aid Committee Representing Undertrial Prisoners v UOI, (1994) 6 SCC 37.
416. Vidyacharan v Khulachand, AIR 1964 SC 1099 : (1964) 6 SCR 129; Anjan Dass v Jagannath, AIR 1966 P&H 227.
417. Chambers Dictionary (Deluxe Edition), Sixth reprint, p 905.
418. New Shorter Oxford English Dictionary, 1993 Edn, p 1459.
419. Webster's Comprehensive Dictionary, International Edition, vol 1, 1984.
420. Cellular Operators Association of India v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 899 : AIR 2003 SCW 366.
421. Cellular Operators Association of India v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 899, para 21 : AIR 2003 SCW 366.

[s 2.11.2] Every Order not Judgment

An order passed by an appellate court calling for a finding on an issue framed by it in an appeal is not a judgment; nor is a direction to pass a final decree after the deficit court-fees are paid,[422] nor an order summarily dismissing an appeal or a revision.[423]

When a trial judge at the request of the parties sits extra cursum curiae, his decision is not an award by an arbitrator but a judgment.[424]

The award given by the motor accident claim tribunal does not have the status of a "judgment", "decree" or "order" as contemplated by the CPC.[425]

[s 2.11.3] Judgment, Order and Decree

"Judgment" stands on a different footing from the "order" and the "decree". The Legislature has avoided the use of words "formal expression" in the definition of "judgment", though the words "formal expression" have been used in the definition of "order" in section 2(14). Conversely, it is not necessary that in a decree, there should be a statement of reasons given by the judge. Statement of reasons is to be given by the judge, only in the "judgment". The decree is the formal expression of conclusions arrived at in the judgment. So, a formal expression of the order in the judgment is not necessary, though it is desirable.[426]

[s 2.11.4] Decision at the Back of a Person

Any decision which has been given by any court or authority behind the back of a person cannot be binding upon him being violative of the principle of natural justice and a person, who has been put in such a disadvantageous position by the judgment passed, beyond his back has a right to ignore the same.[427]

[s 2.11.5] Contradictory Judgments/Decisions

No learned judge would consciously author a judgment which is itself inconsistent or incorporates passages repugnant to each other.[428]

There can be only one judgment in a case. Two contradictory judgments or judgments in variance with each other will not have the effect of deciding any question or issue in the case or of deciding any of the rights of the parties. It is also plain that such judgments can neither be enforced nor be given effect to. Therefore, if two judges constituting a division bench give contradictory decisions or decisions in variance with each other, in law, such decisions cannot be called as judgments as they do not decide any question or issue in the case or proceeding nor do they decide any of the rights of the parties, the real test being what is the effect of the two decisions on the case or proceedings in which it is made, the language or phraseology used being wholly immaterial having no bearing. In such a situation, the decisions so rendered will only amount to opinions of the respective judges. This principle will, however, not apply where on account of some statutory provisions like section 98 of the CPC, contradictory decisions

---

422. Kamala Mining Corp v Rameshwarlal, AIR 1968 AP 138.
423. V Gokul v State of Gujarat, (1966) ILR Guj 1189.
424. Arati Paul v Registrar, High Court, AIR 1965 Cal 3.
425. Oriental Insurance Co Ltd v Sardar Sadhu Singh, AIR 1994 Raj 44.
426. Boards & Boards Pvt Ltd, Jaipur v Himalaya Paper Pvt Ltd, New Delhi, AIR 1990 Raj 120.
427. Temple of Thakurji v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 Raj 85.
428. State of West Bengal v Kesoram Industries Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 1646 : (2004) 10 SCC 201.

by their own force lead to decision of any question or issue in the case or any of the rights of the parties.[429]

[s 2.11.6] Reasoning

What a judgment should contain is indicated in O XX, rule 4 (2) which says that a judgment "shall contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision." It should be a self-contained document from which it should appear as to what were the facts of the case and what was the controversy which was tried to be settled by the court and in what manner. The process of reasoning by which the court came to the ultimate conclusion and decreed the suit should be reflected clearly in the judgment.[430]

Dr. Pasayat J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench, expressed it in the following way in the case of KV Rami Reddy v Prema:[431]

> 11. The declaration by a Judge of his intention of what his judgment is going to be, or a declaration of his intention of what the final result it is going to embody, is not a judgment until he had crystallised his intentions into a formal shape and pronounced it in open court as the final expression of his mind.
>
> 12. The CPC does not envisage the writing of a judgment after deciding the case by an oral judgment and it must not be resorted to and it would be against public policy to ascertain by evidence alone what the 'judgment' of the Court was, where the final result was announced orally but the judgment as defined in the CPC embodying a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for such decision, was finalised later on.

The meaning, attributes and contents of a "judgment" have been explained by the Supreme Court in the following words in Smt Swaran Lata Ghosh v Harendra Kumar Banerjee:[432]

> Trial of a civil dispute in Court is intended to achieve, according to law and the procedure of the Court, a judicial determination between the contesting parties of the matter in controversy. Opportunity to the parties interested in the dispute to present their respective cases on question of law as well as fact, ascertainment of facts by means of evidence tendered by the parties and adjudication by a reasoned judgment of the dispute upon a finding on the facts in controversy and application of the law to the facts found, are essential attributes of a judicial trial. In a judicial trial, the judge not only must reach a conclusion which he regards as just, but, unless otherwise permitted, by the practice of the Court or by law, he must record the ultimate mental process leading from the dispute to its resolution. A judicial determination of a disputed claim where substantial question of law or fact arise is satisfactorily reached, only if it be supported by the most cogent reasons that suggest themselves to the Judge; a mere order deciding the matter in dispute but not supported by reasons is no judgment at all. Recording of reasons in support of a decision of a disputed claim serves more purposes than one. It is intended to ensure that the decision is not the result of whim or fancy, but of a judicial approach to the matter in contest, it is also intended to ensure adjudication of the matter according to law and the procedure established by law. A party to the dispute is ordinarily entitled to know the grounds on which the Court has decided against him, and more so, when the judgment is subject to appeal. The Appellate court will then have adequate material on which it may

---

429. Shriram Industrial Enterprise v UOI, AIR 1996 All 135.
430. Balraj Taneja v Sunil Madan, AIR 1999 SC 3381 :: AIR 1999 SCW 3345 : (1999) 8 SCC 396; See also Cellular Operators Association of India v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 899 :: AIR 2003 SCW 366 : (2003) 3 SCC 186.
431. KV Rami Reddy v Prema, (2009) 17 SCC 308 : 2008 (3) Civil Court Cases 012 (SC). See also Surendra Singh v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 194.
432. Smt Swaran Lata Ghosh v Harendra Kumar Banerjee, AIR 1969 SC 1167 : (1969) 1 SCC 709.

> determine whether the facts are properly ascertained, the law has been correctly applied and the resultant decision is just. It is unfortunate that the learned trial Judge has recorded no reasons in support of his conclusions, and the High Court in appeal merely recorded that they thought that the plaintiff had sufficiently proved the case in the plaint.

The Bombay High Court has held that a judgment should be reasoned. The facts of the case, the matter in controversy, and the manner in which it was settled by the court must appear from the judgment, notwithstanding whether the case was proceeded ex parte or whether written statement therein was filed or not.[433]

[s 2.11.7] Pronouncing Judgment

Before pronouncing judgment, the court has to apply its mind to arrive at the conclusion whether there is any cause to modify or remit the award. Further the phrase "pronounce judgment" would itself indicate judicial determination by reasoned order for arriving at the conclusion that decree in terms of award be passed. One of the meanings given to the word "judgment" in Webster's Comprehensive Dictionary[434] reads thus: "the result of judging; the decision or conclusion reached, as after consideration or deliberation". Further, O XX rule 4 (2) CPC in terms provides that "judgment" shall contain a concise statement of case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision. This is antithesis to pronouncement of non-speaking order.[435]

[s 2.11.8] Order of a Single Judge

Order of single judge is judgment if not decree. Against the judgment of the learned single judge of the high court under section 299 of Indian Succession Act, 1925 a Letters Patent appeal is maintainable. The orders passed under section 299 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 may be an interlocutory order determining the rights of the parties or a final order. When a final order is passed in a contentious suit, as would be evident from the provisions contained in section 295 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, the procedures of the CPC are required to be followed. Therefore, a final order passed between the parties adjudicating upon the rights and obligations which are binding between the parties thereto and are enforceable, although may not be, stricto sensu a decree within the meaning of section 2(2) of the CPC but it is beyond any cavil that the same would be a judgment within the meaning of section 2(9) thereof.[436]

Order passed by a single judge in an appeal under section 173 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 is a judgment.[437]

[s 2.11.9] Words in Judgment Cannot be Interpreted as Statutes

Courts should not place reliance on decisions without discussing as to how the factual situation fits in with the fact situation of the decision on which reliance is placed. Observations of courts are not to be read as Euclid's theorems nor as provisions of the statute. These observations must be read in the context in which they appear. Judgments of courts are not to

---

433. Meditronics Corp of India v Salima A Rais, AIR 2007 (NOC) 735 (Bom).
434. Webster's Comprehensive Dictionary, International Edition, vol 1, 1984.
435. UOI v Manager, Jain & Associates, AIR 2001 SC 3381: AIR 1999 SCW 3345 : (2001) 3 SCC 277; See also Cellular Operators Association of India v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 899 : AIR 2003 SCW 366.
436. Subal Paul v Malina Paul, AIR 2003 SC 1928 : (2003) 10 SCC 361 : AIR 2003 SCW 1412.
437. RSRTC v Vaibhav Kumar, AIR 2007 Raj 147 : (2007) Raj LW (4) Raj 3022 (DB – Jaipur Bench).

LIBRARY
NARAYAN RAO MELGI
National Law School

be construed as statutes. To interpret words, phrases and provisions of a statute, it may become necessary for judges to embark into lengthy discussions, but the discussion is meant to explain and not to define. Judges interpret statutes, they do not interpret judgments. They interpret words of statutes; their words are not to be interpreted as statutes. Circumstantial flexibility, one additional or different fact may make a world of difference between conclusions in two cases. Disposal of cases by blindly placing reliance on a decision is not proper.[438]

In a decision, a division bench of the Jharkhand High Court has observed that judgments should not be couched in a language which the ordinary people would find difficult to comprehend. It was observed:

> A common man cannot and shall not be able to understand the abbreviation and the words used in the impugned judgment. It is well settled that the use of abbreviations or code words should be strictly avoided. It is equally well settled that the judgment should be so precise and so clear that a common man or a litigant must understand the judgment. The language should be sober, temperate and clear.[439]

[s 2.11.10] Ratio Decidendi

A judgment, it is trite, is not to be read as a statute. The ratio decidendi of a judgment is its reasoning which can be deciphered only upon reading the same in its entirety. The ratio decidendi of a case or the principles and reasons on which it is based is distinct from the relief finally granted or the manner adopted for its disposal. Answers given in judgment to the question is not the ratio to a judgment. The answers to the questions are merely conclusions. They have to be interpreted, in a case of doubt or dispute with the reasons assigned in support thereof in the body of the judgment, wherefor, it would be essential to read the other paragraphs of the judgment also. It is also permissible for this purpose to look to the pleadings of the parties.[440]

[s 2.11.11] Judgment — Letters Patent

The concept of "judgment" in section 2(2) of the CPC is narrow and cannot be applied for interpreting the word "judgment" in the Letters Patent.[441] Definition of judgment in CPC does not apply to the expression judgment occurring in clause (10) of Letters Patent, Patna.[442] To determine the question as to whether an interlocutory order passed by one judge of a high court falls within the meaning of "judgment" for purposes of Letters Patent, the test is: whether the order is a final determination affecting vital and valuable rights and obligations of the parties concerned. This has to be ascertained on the facts of each case. The order passed by the learned single judge determines the entitlement of the workmen to receive benefits and imposes an obligation on the appellant to pay such benefits provided in the said section. That order cannot but be "judgment" within the meaning of clause (10) of Letters Patent, Patna. The order of the learned single judge passed on an application under section 17B of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 on 26 April 1999 is a judgment within the meaning of clause 10 of the Letters Patent of Patna and is, therefore, appealable.[443]

---

438. Ashwani Kumar Singh v Uttar Pradesh Public Service Commission, AIR 2003 SC 2661 (para 11, 13) : (2003) 11 SCC 584.
439. Smt Hina Singh v Satya Kumar Singth, AIR 2007 Jhar 34 (DB) : AIR Bom R 370 (NOC) : (2007) 1 JCR 570 Jhr.
440. Islamic Academy of Education v State of Karnataka, AIR 2003 SC 3724 : (2003) 6 SCC 69.
441. Shah Babulal Khimji v Jayaben D Kaine, AIR 1981 SC 1986 : (1981) 1 SCC 8 : (1982) 1 SCR 87.
442. Mine Planning & Design Institute Ltd v UOI, AIR 2001 SC 883 : (2001) 2 SCC 588.
443. Mine Planning & Design Institute Ltd v UOI, AIR 2001 SC 883 : (2001) 2 SCC 588.

[s 2.12] Judgment-Debtor: Section 2(10)

> "Judgment-debtor" means any person against whom a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has been made.

The word "judgment-debtor" as used in this rule has been held not to include the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor.[444] A surety of a judgment-debtor is not himself a judgment-debtor.[445]

[s 2.13] Legal Representative: Section 2(11)

> "Legal representative" means a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and where a party sues or is sued in a representative character the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued.

[s 2.13.1] Scope

The definition of "legal representative" is inclusive in character and its scope is wide. It is not confined to legal heirs only. It stipulates a person who may or may not be an heir if he is competent to inherit the property of the deceased, but he should represent the estate of the deceased person. It includes heirs, those in possession bona fide, without there being any fraud or collusion and are also entitled to represent the estate. Under the Portuguese law of inheritance, the wife represents the estate of her deceased husband. When a suit is filed against the husband of such Portuguese widow and after the death of the husband, wherein the name of the widow is brought on the record within time, the abatement of the suit would be liable to be set aside, and the suit would proceed on the merits, notwithstanding the fact that the remaining legal representatives of the deceased were brought on record at a subsequent stage.[446]

Where a person severed all connections with his natural family and became disciple of a Guru, other disciples of the said Guru would be his spiritual brothers. Therefore, on his death one of the spiritual brothers can maintain an application as his legal representative.[447]

The Supreme Court has held that in the case of death of a person due to motor vehicle accident, a legal representative is a person who suffers on account of death of that person and need not be a wife, husband, parent and child.[448] The Madhya Pradesh High Court has held that the brother of the deceased, who was a handicapped person and was dependent on him can be considered as a "legal representative".[449]

The adjudication contemplated under O XXII of the CPC does not finally determine the question as to who is the legal representative of the deceased. This determination is only for the purpose of continuing the proceeding that had already begun.[450] While dealing with an application under O XXII of the CPC, the courts are not required to delve into the question of title. The court is only required to see whether the person sought to be substituted has any

---

444. Iaq v Ramji, (1952) ILR All 618.
445. Vijay Raj v Lal Chand, (1966) ILR Raj 194.
446. Custodian of Branches of BANCO National Ultramarino v Nalini Bai Naique, AIR 1989 SC 1589 : 1989 Supp 2 SCC 275; Indira Vinayak Sawant v Vijayendra Umakan Shety, AIR 2007 Bom 87.
447. Mahant Shyamdas Guru Mohandas v Lalaram M. Kori, AIR 2008 MP 47 (DB).
448. Gujarat State Road Transport Corp v Ramanbhai Prabhatbhai, AIR 1987 SC 1690 : (1987) 3 SCC 234.
449. Smt Amma v Royal Transport Services, AIR 2008 MP 213.
450. Ashwani Kumar v Smt. Vidya, AIR 2007 All 105.

right or whether he is the legal representative of the heirs, as defined in section 2(11) of the CPC. Thus, where a petitioner claimed to be legal representative of the deceased plaintiff on the basis of a registered adoption deed, it was held that for the purposes of O XXII it was sufficient to allow the prayer.[451]

The decision as to who is the legal representative for the purpose of proceedings is necessarily limited for the purpose of carrying on the proceedings and cannot have the effect of conferring of any right of heirship to the estate of the deceased. It is true that all legal heirs are ordinarily also legal representatives, but the converse is not true. All legal representatives are not necessarily legal heirs at will.[452]

A legal representative in a given case need not be a surviving spouse, son, daughter, father or mother of a deceased tenant living with the tenant in the petition schedule property up to the death of the tenant. Legal representative, ordinarily means, a person who in law, represents the estate of the deceased persons or persons on whom the said estate devolves on the death of the individual.[453]

Of many heirs, those in possession bona fide without any element of fraud or collusion represent the estate of the deceased.[454] It has been held by the Supreme Court that legatees of portions of estate are legal representatives.[455]

In a suit by a benamidar, the real owner is not the legal representative on his death.[456] Even if the real owner is in possession, he is not the legal representative of the benamidar, as he is in possession in his own right. There is no question of any estate of the benamidar devolving upon him or his representing it. A benamidar, on the other hand, represents the real owner. During an action between a benamidar and a third party, the benamidar died and his heirs were brought on record. An application by the real owner for being brought on record was dismissed. The decree passed against the heirs of the benamidar was held to be binding on the real owner since the benamidar, and after his death, his heirs, represent the real owner.[457] It has been held that to decide whether a person is a legal representative or not, it is not unnecessary to inquire whether the deceased had left the estate.[458] Where the assessee had individual income from business and properties, and on his death, his eldest son voluntarily filed returns on behalf of the deceased assessee, the return filed by the eldest son were scrutinised by the Income-tax officer, who also issued notice to him to appear and produce certain documents and other material. The deceased left behind 10 legal representatives. Except the eldest son who filed the returns, no notices were served on the remaining nine representatives. It was held in the circumstances that it could not be said that the assessment orders are null and void on account of non-service of notice on nine out of 10 legal representatives of the assessee.[459]

---

451. Brijesh Kumar v District Judge, Azamgarh, 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 072 (All).
452. Kaluram v Chaman Singh, AIR 1994 Raj 31.
453. Vrishendramani v K Venugopal Rai, AIR 1995 Kant 230; Sarada v Chakunny, AIR 1992 Ker 249.
454. Manranjan v Rani Brigaraj, AIR 1947 Pat 365 : (1946) ILR Pat 550.
455. Andhra Bank v Srinivasan, AIR 1962 SC 232; overruling Natesa v Alamelu, AIR 1950 Mad 541; Natesa v Sundaram, AIR 1953 Mad 622; where Natesa v Alamelu, AIR 1950 Mad 541 is discussed.
456. Shakuntala Bai v Shankar Rao, AIR 1949 Ngp 176; Navaneetham v Gangan, AIR 1961 Mad 376.
457. Ragho Prasad Gupta v Krishna, AIR 1969 SC 316 : (1969) 1 SCR 884.
458. Dhool Chand v Ganpat Lal, AIR 1957 Raj 283 : (1957) ILR Raj 543 : (1957) Raj LW 187.
459. CIT, Shillong v Jai Prakash Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1303. See also notes to sections 50, 52 and O XXII rule 3.

[s 2.13.2] Strictest Sense

The expression "legal representative" in its strictest sense was limited to executors and administrators only,[460] and in cases under the Indian Succession Act, 1925 that is still the case.[461] But, its meaning was extended after many conflicting decisions to include heirs and also persons who, without title either as executors, administrators or heirs, were in possession of the estate of the deceased. All these earlier cases are reviewed in Dinamoni v Elahadut Khan,[462] and the definition settles the meaning of the term as explained there.[463] Universal legatee under a will executed by the deceased is his legal representative.[464] Under the Portuguese law of inheritance, the widow acquires meeira rights, according to which she gets one-half share in the estate left by her deceased husband. She therefore represents her husband's estate. If, in a suit against a male governed by Portuguese law, on his death, his widow is substituted within time, the suit can proceed on the merits, even if other representatives are brought later.[465] A suit was filed for declaration of title and recovery of possession. The defendants constituted a joint Hindu family. One minor defendant died, leaving his mother and father. The father was already on record as Karta, but the mother was not substituted. It was held that by virtue of section 6, Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the minor's interest in the joint family property devolved on his mother. If a person is survived by a female relative specified in the Sch 1 to the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, (the mother, in this case), then the coparcenary, to the extent of the interest of the deceased minor, ceased to exist immediately upon his death. Hence, the minor's interest devolved upon his mother. If the mother is not substituted, the suit would abate.[466]

The Gauhati High Court has held that brothers of a deceased in a motor accident are entitled to share in compensation along with widow of the deceased, irrespective of the fact that they are not dependent on the deceased.[467] This point has been clarified by the Supreme Court in Manjuri Bera's case,[468] that a claim petition filed by a married daughter of a motor accident victim is maintainable regardless of the fact that she is not dependent on him.

Where the husband and wife along with their son died simultaneously in a motor accident, it was held by the Himachal Pradesh High Court that the son being the youngest of all, by virtue of the presumption under section 21 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, would be deemed to survive his parents on the principles of Commorientes. Thus, the son being the only legal heir, his maternal grandmother would be the legal representative.[469]

A legatee under a Will executed by a deceased landlord is competent to maintain an application for execution of a decree as he is covered under the definition of "legal representative" of the deceased decree-holder. It is not mandatory for him to obtain a probate certificate before enabling him to file an execution petition.[470]

---

460. Price v Strange, (1882) ILR 6 Mad 159.
461. Framji v Adarji, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 377; Barnett Bros v Fowle, AIR 1925 Rang 186 : (1925) 3 Rang 46.
462. Dinamoni v Elahadut Khan, (1904) 8 Cal WN 843.
463. Shakuntala Bai v Shanker Rao, AIR 1949 Ngp 176 : (1904) 8 Cal WN 843, p 858; Abdul Jabbar v Manomani Pictures, AIR 1976 Mad 368.
464. Shantha v Natarajan, (1960) 1 Mad LJ 318; L Sreenivasulu v D Muniratnam, AIR 1978 AP 173.
465. Custodian of Branches of BANCO National Ultramarino v Walini Bai Naique, AIR 1989 SC 1589.
466. Jiba Devi v Satya Nand Roy, AIR 1982 Pat 177 (DB).
467. Hafizun Begum v Member, Motor Vehicle Claim Tribunal, AIR 2009 Gau 4 (DB) : (2009) 5 Gau LR 823.
468. Manjuri Bera v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 1474 : (2007) 10 SCC 643.
469. Raman Khanna v Sham Kishore Khanna, AIR 2009 HP 42 : (2009) 1 Shim LC 200.
470. Smt. Gauri Bahu v Gopaldas Potoram Jaiswani, AIR 2008 (NOC) 1708 (MP).

This view has been approved and confirmed by a recent decision of the Supreme Court. It has been held that in an eviction proceeding, when a legatee under a Will intends to represent the interests of the estate of the deceased, he will be a legal representative within the meaning of section 2(11) of the CPC for which it is not necessary to decide whether the Will is genuine or not.[471]

[s 2.13.3] Finding of Fact

Finding of fact as to whether property is or is not ancestral, is essentially a question of fact. It cannot be interfered with in second appeal.[472] A person on whom the estate of the deceased devolves would be his legal representative even if he is not in actual possession of the estate.[473]

[s 2.13.4] Persons not Legal Representatives

A mere trespasser, however, cannot be said to be the legal representative of the deceased as he holds adversely to him and does not intermeddle with the intention of representing the estate.[474]

In case of a joint family property, a minor's interest, who was survived by mother (female relatives) specified in Sch I to Hindu Succession Act, 1956, if the mother is not substituted, the suit would abate.[475] The father is not an "intermeddler" and cannot be regarded as a legal representative.

The expression "legal representative" has not been defined in the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 but in ordinary parlance it is understood in the same way it has been defined in the CPC. Ordinarily, heirs of the deceased are the persons who represent the estate of the deceased, but where parents of the deceased, who are preferential heirs, are alive, brothers and sisters of the deceased cannot be considered as legal representatives.[476]

The Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that though the married sister may be the legal representative of the deceased/injured, she is not entitled to claim compensation in terms of rule 2(g) of the Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicle Rules.[477]

The matters in relation to tenancy and rent control are different as cases relating to tenancy and eviction are governed by special enactments and the rules framed thereunder. Even though tenancy rights are heritable, unless the person claiming to be legal representative of a deceased tenant was carrying on business with the deceased tenant, he cannot fall within the definition of tenant.[478]

This issue has been further clarified by the Supreme Court. It was held that for substitution as legal representative it is not enough that the persons seeking impleadment are legal heirs

---

471. Suresh Kumar Bansal v Krishna Bansal, AIR 2010 SC 344 : (2010) 2 SCC 162. See also Jaladi Suguna deceased through LRs v Satya Central Trust, AIR 2008 SC 2866 : (2008) 8 SCC 521.
472. Ram Sarup v Patto, AIR 1981 P&H 68.
473. Javarimal v Mangilal, (1961) Raj LW 132.
474. Satyanarayana v Sarat Chandra, AIR 1926 Cal 825 : (1926) 30 Cal WN 565; Nagendranath v Hyat, AIR 1933 Cal 865 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 758.
475. Jiba Devi v Satya Nand Roy, AIR 1982 Pat 177 (DB).
476. PN Unni v Baby John, AIR 2008 Ker 157 : (2008) 2 Ker LT 78 (DB).
477. Seshapu Ramulamma v Doppalapudi Raju, AIR 2009 (NOC) 1336 (AP).
478. LRs of Tribuvan Dutt v Jai Narayan, AIR 2009 Raj 174.

of the deceased tenant, but it has to be seen whether they were carrying on business with the deceased tenant till the time of his death or had separated from the joint family.[479]

The Karnataka High Court held that when the sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff dies and the "right to sue" survives on class I legal heirs, the action brought about by the deceased plaintiff devolves on them when they acquire that "right to sue" and it is this right which clothes them with the power to continue the suit/appeal which the plaintiff/appellant possessed against the defendant respondent. Where it was brought on record that one of the legal representatives was acting against the interests of other legal representatives, it was held that she does not possess a "right to sue" or the right to prosecute the claim of the plaintiff.[480]

[s 2.13.5] Deceased Parties Name Cannot be Washed Off

The judgment should contain full particulars of the parties and decree has to follow the judgment. In case name of a deceased party (originally impleaded) is washed off while substituting legal representatives it is likely to mislead as it shall not be possible in future to ascertain extent of rights to be determined with respect to the estate of a deceased party. It may be reiterated that when a person dies, right of substitution is not on the basis of succession, but a person, who is competent to represent the estate of a deceased party and has no interest adverse to the deceased's estate will be permitted to be substituted as his legal representative.[481]

To keep the record straight and to avoid misconception and/or ambiguity in future, statutory provisions specifically provide that when a party to a suit/ proceeding dies, a note be made to that effect against said party and "legal representatives" be brought on record as per rule 37, general rules (civil) and Allahabad High Court Rules.[482]

It therefore, naturally follows that in an application for substitution of legal representatives prayer for deletion/striking off/or washing off/to erase/removal of the name of "deceased party" on record, is misconceived, untenable and not approved in law, prayer to the above effect in the amendment application for substitution of legal representatives is totally misconceived and cannot be legally allowed. It is not permissible in law to erase the name of original deceased party and to do the contrary is also being uncalled for.[483]

Once a party is impleaded and/or brought on record, proceedings started must be concluded with their names and continue till perpetuity. In the matter of death of any such party, in case of substitution of legal representative "on an application made in that behalf, court shall cause legal representative of the deceased, plaintiff/defendant to be made a party to proceed with the suit" and if legal representatives are not be substituted, then a note shall be made against a party of his death, but in no case name of deceased party shall be deleted or removed or struck-off.[484]

[s 2.13.6] Party in a Representative Character

Where a person is a party in a representative character, the legal representative is the person who, after his death, represents the estate that is the subject matter of the suit.[485] Thus, where

---

479. Kanhiya Singh Santok Singh v Kartar Singh, AIR 2009 SC 1600 : (2009) 4 SCC 155.
480. Chandralekha v BV Sujatha, AIR 2010 Kant 104.
481. New Okhla Industrial Development Authority v Pooran Singh, AIR 2004 All 218.
482. New Okhla Industrial Development Authority v Pooran Singh, AIR 2004 All 218.
483. New Okhla Industrial Development Authority v Pooran Singh, AIR 2004 All 218.
484. New Okhla Industrial Development Authority v Pooran Singh, AIR 2004 All 218.
485. Rao Bhimsingh v Sher Singh, AIR 1948 PC 1 : (1947) ILR Nag 820 : 74 IA 247 : (1948) 52 Cal WN 109; Lala Radharaman v Anant Singh, AIR 1945 Oudh 196 : (1945) ILR 20 Luck 305.

the owner of an ancestral impartible estate is sued as representing the estate, his successor taking by survivorship is his legal representative; so also, where the manager of a joint Hindu family dies, the next manager is his legal representative and where there is no such manager, all the coparceners are his legal representatives.[486] Thus, on the death of a trustee, or of a shebait of a muth, his successor in office and not his executor or heir is the legal representative, and the suit would be continued by or against the successor under O XXII, rule 3 or rule 4. A reversioner sues in a representative character as representing the reversionary right to the estate of the last male owner. The legal representative of such a reversioner is the next reversioner; and a suit by a reversioner to set aside an adoption by widow may be continued on his death by the next reversioner.[487] Where pending a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell by a party, the latter died and the reversioner sought to raise the question of the binding character of the agreement, it was held that he was entitled to do so as he was the legal representative of the last full owner and not of the limited owner.[488] A suit by a Hindu daughter,[489] or by a Hindu widow[490] to recover the father's or husband's estate is continued after her death by the next heirs entitled to come in after her, except in Bombay where the daughter takes an absolute estate. It has been held that a coparcener leaves no estate in the coparcenary property at his death and so, the surviving coparcener is not his legal representative with reference to that property;[491] but, a son who has inherited the property of his father is his legal representative against whom the decree can be executed under section 50 of the CPC.[492] The correctness of the decision that a surviving coparcener is not a legal representative has been doubted and it has been said that the son who takes the joint family estate by survivorship should be regarded as a person who in law represents the estate of the deceased person.[493] The widow of a coparcener is also his legal representative under the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, 1937,[494] and that would also be the position under Hindu Succession Act, 1956.[495] The official assignee has been held to be the legal representative of the insolvent judgment-debtor within the meaning of O XXI, rule 22 of the CPC.[496] Where a lunatic whose estate had been taken over by the court of wards died, it was held that the person competent to represent the estate thereafter was not the manager appointed previously but the court of wards.[497]

[s 2.13.7] Intermeddles with the Estate

One who intermeddles with the estate of a deceased person, even though it may be with part thereof, is a "legal representative" within the meaning of this clause and is liable to the extent of

---

486. Alek Chandra v Krishna Chandra, AIR 1941 Pat 596 : (1941) ILR 20 Pat 755, p 763.
487. Venkatanarayana v Subhammal, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 406 : 42 IA 125.
488. Kailas v Sheo Pujan, AIR 1952 Pat 380.
489. Mahadeo v Sheo Karan, (1913) ILR 35 All 481; Jadubansi v Mahpal Singh, (1916) ILR 38 All 111; Rama Swami v Podamunayya, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 382.
490. Premmoyi v Preonath, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 636; Tribhuwan v Sri Narain, (1898) ILR 20 All 341; Rikhai Rai v Sheo Pujan, (1910) ILR 33 All 15.
491. Chunilal v Bai Mani, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 504; Dwarka Das v Krishnan, AIR 1921 Lah 34 : (1921) 2 Lah 114.
492. Jambirao v Annapa, AIR 1941 Bom 23 : (1941) ILR Bom 177 (FB); Sakarlal v Parvatibai, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 283.
493. Alekh Chandra v Krishna Chandra, AIR 1941 Pat 596 : (1941) ILR 20 Pat 755; Ganesh v Narayan, AIR 1931 Bom 484 : (1931) ILR 55 Bom 709.
494. Bishan Narayan v Om Prakash, AIR 1952 Punj 167.
495. See note "Legal Representative" under O XXII, rule 3.
496. Raghunath Das v Sundar Das, AIR 1914 PC 129 : (1915) ILR 42 Cal 72, p 88 : (1914) 41 IA 251, p 257.
497. Kutty Kunhunniraja v Kuthiravattathu Nair's Estate, AIR 1960 Ker 288.

the property taken in possession by him.[498] He would, however, not be a legal representative in respect of properties not in his possession.[499] However, it has been held that a mere trespasser is not a legal representative as he has not intermeddled with the intention of representing the estate.[500] If a person, who is not the heir, wrongly brings himself on the record of a suit after the death of a party, he does not become a legal representative, unless he in fact takes possession and so, intermeddles with the estate of the deceased.[501]

The averment in a plaint filed by a bank for the recovery of a loan advanced to a sole proprietary concern was that certain relations of the proprietor (since deceased) were intermeddling with the estate of the deceased, and that is why the intermeddlers were made parties. It was held that their names could not be struck off.[502]

In a suit for partition filed by the father and a minor, the suit was decreed, but during the pendency of the appeal by defendants, the minor died and his mother, who was a class I heir was not brought on the record within time. A Full Bench of Patna High Court held that the appeal did not abate as father became his legal representative as intermeddler on the minor's death and as such the mother was allowed to be brought on the record.[503] Where, in an appeal arising out of a decree passed in a suit for obtaining possession by ejecting trespassers, one of the co-owners died during pendency of the appeal, another Full Bench of the same high court reiterated the above view and held that since other co-owners, apart from being brothers were intermeddlers to the estate, the whole appeal would not abate. It was observed that the definition of "legal representative" in section 2(11) of the CPC includes intermeddlers.[504]

In a case before the Karnataka High Court, where on the death of the plaintiff the suit had abated, some person claiming to be trustees of a trust constituted through a Will executed by the deceased plaintiff moved for substitution as legal representatives and for setting aside abatement. The high court held that the definition in section 2(11) of the CPC includes intermeddlers and the prayer of substitution cannot be refused simply because they were strangers.[505]

The Supreme Court has held that the term "legal representative" is wide and inclusive of not only the heirs but also intermeddlers of the estate of the deceased as well as the persons who in law represent the estate of the deceased. The executor, administrators, assignees or persons acquiring interest by devolution under O XXII, rule 10 or legatees under a Will are legal representatives.[506]

---

498. Woomesh v Jabed Ali, AIR 1944 Cal 42 : (1950) ILR Cut 413 : (1943) 77 Cal LJ 155; Daropdi v Sada Kuar, (1913) PR No 115, p 436; Ram Singh v Saryan Singh, AIR 1924 Lah 251 : (1923) 5 Lah LJ 459, (no intermeddling); Chacko v Iype, AIR 1956 TC 147; Andhra Bank Ltd v Srinivasan, AIR 1962 SC 232 : (1962) 2 SCR 391.
499. Ram Prasad v Jumna Prasad, AIR 1952 MB 153.
500. Chockalingam v Karuppan, AIR 1948 Mad 386; Satya Ranjan v Sarat Chandra, AIR 1926 Cal 825 (1926) 30 Cal WN 565; Nagendra Nath v Haran Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 865 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 758; Ram Prasad v Jumna Prasad, AIR 1952 MB 153; Kalyanmal Mills Ltd v Volimohammad, AIR 1965 MP 72 : (1965) MPLJ 452.
501. Natesa Sastrigal v Alamemachi, AIR 1951 Mad 541; Baliram v Mukinda, AIR 1951 Ngp 145; Manikya v Lakshminarasimha, AIR 1933 Mad 43.
502. State Bank of India v Indian Apparel Industries, AIR 1989 Del 299–300.
503. Sudama Devi v Jogendra Chaudhary, AIR 1987 Pat 239 : 1987 BLJR 724 (FB).
504. Yogendra Bhagata v Pritlal Yadava, AIR 2009 Pat 168 (FB).
505. K Shankarappa v KG Gangadharaiah, AIR 2001 Kant 203 : (2001) (3) Kant LJ 647. See also Baikunth Nath Das v VII ADJ, Gorakhpur, AIR 2004 All 382 : 2004 All LJ 3288.
506. Chiranjilal Shrilal Goenka v Jasjit Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 507 : (1993) 50 Del LT 266.

The Supreme Court has permitted borrowing of definition of "Legal Representative" from section 2(11) of the Code to MACT claims and also affirmed the decision in Sudama Devi[507] approving inclusion of even "intermeddlers" in the definition of "Legal Representatives".[508]

In a recent decision, the Supreme Court has confirmed the above view. It has been observed by Raveendran J, as follows:

> 8. 'Legal representative' according to its definition in section 2(11) of the CPC, means a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased person. Thus a legatee under a Will, who intends to represent the estate of the deceased testator, being an intermeddler with the estate of the deceased, will be a legal representative.[509]

[s 2.14] Mesne Profits: Section 2(12)

"Mesne profits" of property means those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession.

The Code of Civil Procedure 1882, for the first time, included interest in the definition of mesne profits. It was rightly done because interest is an integral part of mesne profits and has therefore, to be allowed while computing items.[510]

The main object of awarding mesne profits is to compensate the person entitled to be in possession of the property. The very foundation of a cause of action for mesne profits is the wrongful possession of the defendant. Mesne profits are actually in the nature of damages which can be claimed by a landlord at reasonable letting out value of suit premises.[511]

The expression "mesne profits" as defined in section 2(12) of the CPC means those profits which a person in wrongful possession of such property either actually received or might have received with due diligence. It is not always necessary that there should be proof of actual receipt.[512]

For entitling him to grant of mesne profits, the plaintiff must lead evidence to prove what would be the compensation the defendant might have received with due diligence for his wrongful possession. Where the plaintiff did not lead any evidence, it was held that he was not entitled to claim mesne profits.[513]

The observations made in the above case,[514] are worth nothing:

> However, the concept of mesne profits appear to be different. Section 2(12) of Civil Procedure Code, defines mesne profits to mean those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession. The words 'Mesne Profits' suggest value of house for occupation of land during the time it was held by one in

---

507. Sudama Devi v Jogendra Choudhary, AIR 1987 Pat 239.
508. Montford Brothers of St Gabriel v United India Insurance, AIR 2014 SC 1550 : (2014) 3 SCC 394.
509. Jaladi Suguna (Dead) through I Rs v Satya Sai Central Trust, AIR 2008 SC 2866 : (2008) 8 SCC 521.
510. N Dasji v Tirupathi Devasthanam, AIR 1965 SC 1231.
511. Kamakhya Singhdeo v Modula India, AIR 2008 (NOC) 2582 (Cal).
512. Mohadei v Kaliji Birajman, 1969 All LJ 896.
513. Kishen Kumar Navandas Jobanputra v Purushottam Mathuradas Ratbatba, 2006 (2) Civil Court Cases 600 (Bom).
514. Kishen Kumar Navandas Jobanputra v Purushottam Mathuradas Ratbatba, 2006 (2) Civil Court Cases 600 (Bom), p 603.

wrongful possession and is commonly measured in terms of rent and profits (See Black's Law Dictionary). The Apex Court in the case of Fateh Chand v Balkrishna Dass, AIR 1963 SC 1405 observed that the normal measure of mesne profits is the value of the user of the land to the person in wrongful possession.

The criteria for calculation of mesne profits is not what the owner loses by reason of deprivation from possession but what the trespasser received or might have received with ordinary diligence.[515] Where sale deed in respect of half portion of a property was declared void, the vendee cannot be said to be in wrongful or unlawful possession and as such mesne profits cannot be claimed.[516]

In Thammana Nukiah Shetti v Velapa Appalaraju,[517] a Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court, relying on the decision of the Supreme Court in Siddeshwar Mukherjee v Bhubaneshwar Prasad Narain,[518] observed as follows:

Going by the principle, a purchaser of an undivided share will not be entitled to possession until he is allotted a specific share in the property. Mesne profits can be claimed by him only from the date when he is deprived of his lawful possession. Section 2(12) of CPC defines mesne profits of property as profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might have received with ordinary diligence from it. A person is said to be in wrongful possession when he enjoys such possession despite, another person is entitled to it under law. A purchaser is entitled to lawful possession only when allotment of a specified portion is made to him. In this case, the finding is that there was a division in status, but there was no division by metes and bounds. A mere division in status does not bring about the consequences of the different sharers being entitled to specific portion of property. The only legal consequence of a division in status of a joint Hindu family is that the erstwhile coparceners become 'tenants in common' without any member becoming entitled to a specific portion or item of the properties that belonged to the joint family. In the absence of a specified allotment, no member is entitled to claim possession of any item of the property or any specified portion of the property of the joint family. He will have to file a suit to enforce that right, a purchaser from such a member cannot have a higher right than the member of such a family.

Where in a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession of immovable properties, the plaintiff did not claim either past or future mesne profits or rent, but the preliminary decree directed an enquiry to be made under O XX, rule 12, the Supreme court held that the high court was in error in awarding mesne profits when they had not been claimed in the plaint.[519]

In a later decision, the Supreme Court clarified that though the plaintiff must plead in order to enable him to get a decree for past mesne profits, with regard to future mesne profits, since the plaintiff would have no cause of action on the date of the institution of the suit it was not necessary for him to plead in the plaint and in all cases where there is a prayer for past mesne profits, the court had ample jurisdiction to direct an enquiry to be made into future mesne profits in the preliminary decree.[520]

The possession of a co-sharer can never be wrongful within the meaning of section 2(12) as he has a right and interest in every inch of the undivided property. Therefore, one co-sharer cannot claim mesne profits against the other, on the ground that the latter was in wrongful possession.[521]

---

515. PL Kapur v Jia Rani, AIR 1973 Del 186; Dwaraka Rai v Lakshmi Narayan, AIR 1979 Pat 11.
516. Neeraj Lunawat v Gyanchand Chawrdia, 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 340 (Raj).
517. Thammana Nukiah Shetti v Velapa Appalaraju, AIR 1975 AP 208 (DB).
518. Siddeshwar Mukherjee v Bhubaneshwar Prasad Narain, AIR 1953 SC 487 : (1954) SCR 177.
519. Md Amin v Vakil Ahmad, AIR 1952 SC 358 : (1952) SCR 1133.
520. Gopal Krishna Pillai v Meenakshi Aval, AIR 1967 SC 155 : (1966) Supp SCR 128.
521. Shambhu Dayal Khetan v Motilal Murarka, AIR 1980 Pat 106.

Having regard to the definition of "mesne profits" in section 2(12), the grant of interest is implicit in mesne profits. Where the court did not grant interest while passing the order for payment of mesne profits and did not take into consideration the question of ordering payment of interest at all, a review petition for the grant of interest on mesne profits would be maintainable. Non-award of interest is a patent and glaring mistake. That the applicant did not make a claim for interest or did not agitate the point during the course of the hearing, is not a valid argument against review.[522]

The criterion for assessing mesne profits is not what the plaintiff might have got had he been in possession, but the value of the user of the tenement to the defendant after termination of his tenancy.[523]

Wherein partition suit was filed where the co-sharer was admittedly in possession of disputed premises, he is accountable for the receipt of profits during the disputed period. Claim for profits in that period by other co-sharers cannot be regarded as a claim for mesne profits as defined in section 2(12) or O XX, rule 12. Possession by the co-owner cannot be termed as unlawful possession and therefore, section 2(12) of the CPC, can have no application. So understood, future mesne profits mentioned in the preliminary decree could only mean the actual profits received by the person in possession.[524]

It cannot be said that mesne profits can be calculated only on the basis of the maximum rent that the premises could have fetched if let out.[525]

Mesne profits can be claimed only when there is wrongful possession of the defendant. But, where dispossession is a joint or concerted act of several persons, each of them who participates in the commission of that act would be liable for mesne profits even though he was not in possession and the profits were received not by him but by some of his confederates.[526]

Measure of mesne profits is the value of wrongful possession. Rent could be a relevant factor for considering such a value, but not a decisive matter.[527] In terms of the definition of mesne profits under section 2(12) of the CPC, the question of proprietary of the valuation on account of the same can be decided at the time of trial on evidence where the court can pass a decree for mesne profits or can direct the inquiry, or, can reject a prayer of mesne profits.[528]

The reservation as to profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession is new.[529]

[s 2.15] Movable property: Growing Crops: Section 2(13)

Movable property includes growing crops.

---

522. Tarquino Raul Henriques v Damodar Mongalji & Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 1989 Bom 309.
523. Kesardeo v Nathmal, AIR 1966 Bom 226.
524. Muhammed Hanifa Rowther v Sara Umma, AIR 1991 Ker 94.
525. Purificacao v Hugo, AIR 1985 Bom 202.
526. Luaj Kochuvareed v P Mariappa Govinder, AIR 1979 SC 1214 : (1979) 3 SCC 150 : (1979) 3 Mah LR 229.
527. Ratilal v Vithaldas, AIR 1985 Bom 134, p 136, para 8.
528. Surender Kumar Grover v Jayanta Roy, AIR 1996 Cal 88.
529. See section 144 and notes to O XX, rule 12.

HIGH COURT AMENDMENT

Calcutta.—In clause (13) insert the words "except in suits or proceedings in the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta" after the words "growing crops" vide Cal. Gaz. Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

Growing crops are now movable property and cases in which crops were held to be immovable property until reaped, are obsolete. The definition must be limited to the CPC, for under section 3(26) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, standing crops are immovable property.

[s 2.16] Order: Section 2(14)

"Order" means the formal expression of any decision of a civil court which is not a decree.

Order in contempt proceedings is an order within the meaning of this section.[530] But it may be noted that contempt is a matter essentially between the court and condemner. The party filing an application seeking action against the contemnor is only informant. Once the court admits the contempt petition, then the petitioner really has no effective role to play, though usually he is given a hearing in such a petition. The contempt alleged may be a contempt of civil nature, but by exercising its jurisdiction to deal with the alleged contempt, the court does not become a civil court within the meaning of section 2(2) and section 2(14) of the CPC. It remains as a court exercising contempt jurisdiction. The court either punishes the condemner or discharges him or remedies punishment of apology being made to its satisfaction. No other order is contemplated in such a proceeding. If, in such a proceeding, the parties file certain consent terms, they do not form the part of the final order which is contemplated in contempt proceedings. Filing of the consent terms by the parties is only a consideration which prompts the court not to proceed further in the matter and terminate the proceedings by disposing of the petition. Therefore, it can hardly be said that the consent terms in terms of which the petition is "disposed of" form the part of the final order of the couart. The court, in exercise of its contempt jurisdiction, does not decide any issue or question much less on merits. Therefore, the consent terms incorporated in the final order passed in contempt petition do not amount to a decision within the meaning of the term as used in section 2(14) of the CPC and therefore, it is not an order within the meaning of that section. Consequently, such an order cannot be said to be executable under O XXI read with section 36 of the CPC.[531] The award given by the motor accident claims tribunal does not have the status of a "judgment", "decree" or "order" as contemplated by the CPC.[532]

[s 2.17] Pleader: Section 2(15)

"Pleader" means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in court and includes an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court.

[s 2.17.1] Advocate

An advocate is defined in section 22(a) of the Bar Councils Act, 1926, as one whose name is "entered on the rolls of an advocate of the high court". An advocate whose name has been

---

530. Onkermull v Padampat, AIR 1994 Raj 44 : (1944) 53 Cal WN 310. See notes under clause (3) of this section.
531. Re Siddharth Srivastava, AIR 2002 Bom 494.
532. Re Siddharth Srivastava, AIR 2002 Bom 494.

removed from the roll is not within this definition.[533] The position would be the same under section 2 of the Advocates Act, 1961, wherein an "advocate" is defined as one whose name is "entered in any roll under the provisions of this Act".

[s 2.17.2] "Pleader"

The term "pleader" is, here, used in a much larger sense than its ordinary signification as a convenient term to designate all persons who are entitled to plead for others in court. "Pleader", in its ordinary sense, is synonymous with vakil.[534]

[s 2.17.3] Authority to Compromise

The extent of the implied authority to compromise varies with the different grades of legal practitioners.

[s 2.17.3.1] Counsel and Advocate

Counsel and advocates have an implied authority to compromise in all matters connected with the action and not merely collateral to it.[535] In Sourendra Nath v Tarubala,[536] the Privy Council said that "their Lordships regard the power to compromise a suit as inherent in the position of an advocate in India". The Rangoon High Court has, however, held that a barrister in Burma has no power to compromise without the express consent of his client;[537] but, the correct view is that counsel and advocates derive their authority from their retainer by reason of being briefed in the suit.[538] Therefore, the consent of a client is not needed for a matter which is within the implied authority of his counsel or advocate.[539] The authority of counsel or advocate may, however, be expressly limited by the client. If such limitation is communicated to the other side, the consent of counsel outside the limits of his authority is of no effect.[540]

Difficult questions, however, arise if the limitation has not been communicated to the other side and counsel consents in spite of dissent or on terms different from those his client authorised.[541]

---

533. Jethanand v Hon'ble Judges of the Punjab High Court, AIR 1962 SC 742.
534. Re Pleaders of the High Court, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 145.
535. Jivibai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Sourendra Nath v Tarubala, AIR 1930 PC 158 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1311 : (1930) 57 IA 133; reversing Taru Bala v Sourendra Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 866 : (1925) 41 Cal LJ 213; Shepherd v Robinson, (1919) 1 KB 474; Jang Bahadur v Shankar, (1891) ILR 13 All 272; Nundo Lal v Nistarini, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 428; Nilmoni v Kedar Nath, AIR 1922 Pat 232 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 489.
536. Sourendra Nath v Tarubala, AIR 1930 PC 158 : (1930) 57 IA 133, p 139 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1311.
537. Desram v Baswa, AIR 1930 Rang 313 : (1930) 8 Rang 290.
538. Sourendra Nath v Tarubala, AIR 1930 PC 158 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1311 : (1930) 57 IA 133; Matthews v Munster, (1888) 20 QBD 141; Surendra v Lakshmia Singh, AIR 1960 Bom 20; Lakshmi Das v Savitha Bai, AIR 1956 Bom 54.
539. Jivabai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Bholanath v Pannalal, AIR 1947 All 382 : (1947) ILR All 706; Matthews v Munster, (1888) 20 QBD 141; Jang Bahadur v Shankar, (1891) ILR 13 All 272; Carrison v Rodrigues, (1886) ILR 14 Cal 115; BN Sen & Sons v Chunilal, AIR 1924 Cal 651 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 385; Muthiah Chettiar v Karuppan Chetti, AIR 1927 Mad 852 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 786.
540. Jivabai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Ramappayya v Subbamma, (1948) ILR Mad 647; Strauss v Francis, (1866) LR 1 QB 379, p 382.
541. Shepherd v Robinson, (1919) 1 KB 474.

In some cases, courts have refused to inquire if there is such a limitation,[542] and have refused to set aside a compromise entered into by counsel;[543] but, the true rule seems to be that the court has power to interfere, and the House of Lords has held that the court is not prevented by agreement of counsel from setting aside or refusing to enforce a compromise, that it is a matter for the discretion of the court and that, when in the particular circumstances of the case grave injustice would be done by allowing the compromise to stand, the compromise may be set aside even though the limitation of counsel's authority was unknown to the other side.[544] Similarly, if the consent is given under a misapprehension or mistake and the other party acts on the ostensible authority of counsel, the client will be bound; but in such a case the consent given under a misapprehension may be withdrawn and the compromise set aside if the application is made before the order is actually drawn up and perfected.[545] The application to have the suit restored to the list should be made before the decree is sealed.[546] If the client is present in court at the time of the compromise, it is not open to him to say that he did not consent; for if he desires the case to go on and the counsel refuses, and if after that, he does not withdraw his authority from counsel to act for him, he must be taken to have agreed.[547]

The implied authority of counsel is limited to the issues in the suit. A compromise will not, therefore, be binding, if it extends to matters outside the scope of the suit.[548] The appointment of a receiver of debtor's property in a partition suit is a collateral matter and not within the scope of counsel's authority; and an arrangement for the appointment of a party's attorney as receiver interrupts the relationship of attorney and client and will be set aside.[549]

The implied authority of counsel is limited to acts and admissions coram judice or in court, and a compromise effected out of court is not binding upon a client;[550] but a compromise is not vitiated merely because counsel considered the matter in the corridor of the court or in the Bar library.[551]

[s 2.17.3.2] Attorney or Solicitor

An attorney or solicitor is entitled in the exercise of his discretion, to enter into a compromise on behalf of his client, if he does so in a bona fide manner.[552] A solicitor has implied authority by virtue of his position as agent in relation to his client,[553] and his authority is limited to the issues in the suit.

---

542. Re Hobler, (1844) Beav 101; Mole v Smith, (1820) 1 Jac & W per Lord Eldon, LC at p 673.
543. Strauss v Francis, (1866) LR 1 QB 379; Rumsey v King, (1876) 33 LT 728.
544. Neale v Gordon Lennox, (1902) AC 465, p 470; Chunilal v Hiralal, AIR 1928 Cal 378 : (1927) 32 Cal WN 44.
545. Hickman v Berens, (1895) 2 Ch 638; Wilding v Sanderson, (1897) 2 Ch 534; Huddersfield Banking Co v Lister, (1895) 2 Ch 273; Bibee Solomon v Abdool Azeez, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 687, p 706; Kyone Hoe Twee v Kyon Soon Sun, AIR 1925 Rang 314 : (1925) 3 Rang 261.
546. Berry v Mullen, (1971) 5 Ir Rep 368; Jang Bahadur v Shankar, (1891) ILR 13 All 272; Carrison v Rodrigues, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 115.
547. Berry v Mullen, (1971) 5 Ir Rep 368; Jang Bahadur v Shankar, (1891) ILR 13 All 272; Carrison v Rodrigues, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 115.
548. Ambalal v Somabhai, AIR 1944 Bom 46 : (1943) 45 Bom LR 1045; Nundo Lal v Nistarini, (1800) ILR 27 Cal 428; Swinfein v Lord Chelmsford, (1859) 29 LJ (Ex) 382.
549. Johurmull v Kedar Nath, AIR 1927 Cal 714 : (1927) ILR 55 Cal 113.
550. Askaram v EI Rly Co, AIR 1925 Cal 696 : (1925) ILR 52 Cal 386.
551. Johurmull v Kedar Nath, AIR 1927 Cal 714 : (1927) ILR 55 Cal 113.
552. Fray v Voules, (1859) 1 E&E 839; Jaganathdas v Ramdas, (1870) 7 HCOC 79; Re Newen, (1903) 1 Ch 812; Little v Spreadburg, (1910) 2 KB 658 (apparent authority but misunderstanding on part of client as to terms of compromise).
553. Matthews v Munster, (1888) 20 QBD 141; Jang Bahadur v Shankar, (1891) ILR 13 All 272.

[s 2.17.3.3] Pleader

Different considerations apply in the case of a pleader who derives his authority from an express writing, the vakalatnama.[554] A pleader cannot enter into a compromise on behalf of his client without his client's express authority.[555]

[s 2.17.4] Power to Refer to Arbitration

The law is the same as regards reference to arbitration. Counsel has an implied power to consent to a reference and so has a solicitor on the record,[556] but, the authority does not extend to referring the case to arbitration on terms different from those which the client has authorised.[557] A pleader or vakil has no power to refer a case without the express authority of his client;[558] nor to settle a case by the oath of the opposite party.[559] It has however, been held by the Allahabad High Court that a power to settle the case by oath can be implied when the vakalat is in wide and general terms.[560]

[s 2.17.5] Authority to Withdraw Suit

Counsel has an implied power to withdraw an action.[561] As regards vakils or pleaders, it has been held that a vakalatnama couched in general terms suffices prima facie to authorise him to apply on behalf of his client for leave to withdraw a suit, and in the absence of anything to show that the vakil had acted contrary to the client's instructions, or otherwise was guilty of misconduct in making the application, the client is bound by the act of his vakil.[562] Neither an advocate nor an attorney who has entered appearance on behalf of a client in a cause is entitled to withdraw from it on the ground that he had not been put in possession of funds by the client unless the warrant of authority authorises him to do so. In the absence of such authorisation, the attorney or advocate can only move to get himself discharged and until that is done, he is bound to appear for the client and to take the necessary steps to protect his interests.[563]

[s 2.17.6] Power to Bind Client by Admission

Counsel,[564] solicitors,[565] and pleaders or vakils,[566] have an implied authority to bind their clients by admissions of fact, provided such admissions are made during the actual progress of 554. Sourendra Nath v Tarubala, AIR 1930 PC 158 : (1930) 57 Cal 1311 : (1930) 57 IA 133.

---

555. Ramappayya v Subbamma, AIR 1949 Mad 98 : (1948) ILR Mad 647; contra Jiwabai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Jagapati v Ekambara, (1898) ILR 21 Mad 274; Thenal v Sokkammal, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 223; Ramasamy Chettiar v Jai Hind Talkies, AIR 1956 Mad 596; Govindammal v Marimuthu, AIR 1959 Mad 7.
556. Jiwibai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Smith v Tromp, (1849) 7 CB 757; Faviell v Eastern Countries Ry Co, (1848) 2 Ex 344.
557. Neale v Gordon Lennox, AIR 1902 Cal 465.
558. Thekur Persad v Kalka, (1874) 6 NWP 210; contra Jiwibai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824.
559. Sadashiv v Maruti, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 455; contra Jiwibai v Ram Kumar, AIR 1947 Ngp 17 : (1946) ILR Nag 824; Bunzi Lal v Jasraj, AIR 1961 Raj 209.
560. Hemalatha v Jambu Prasad, AIR 1959 All 383.
561. Chambers v Mason, (1858) 5 CBNS 59; Strauss v Francis (1866) LR 1 QB 379.
562. Ram Coomar v Collector of Beerbhoom, (1866) 5 WR 80.
563. Re An Attorney, AIR 1955 Cal 113; Re Mahboob Ali Khan, AIR 1958 AP 116; Ali Mahomed v An Advocate, AIR 1960 All 660.
564. Haller v Worman, (1860) 2 F&F 165; Stracy v Blake, (1836) 1 M & W 168.
565. Wagstaff v Watson, (1883) 4 B&Ad 339; Patch v Lyon (1846) 9 QB 147.
566. Kower Narain v Sreenath, (1868) 9 WR 485; Rajunder v Bijai, (1839) 2 Moo Ind App 253; Hingan Lan v Mansa Ram, (1896) ILR 18 All 384; Venkata v Bhashyakarlu, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 538.

the litigation and not in mere conversation.[567] A verbal admission by a pleader must be taken as a whole and must not be unduly pressed;[568] but an admission of liability by a vakil is sufficient to warrant a decree against his client in the suit.[569] The result is that the client will be bound by the admission even though it may be erroneous; but, counsel, solicitor, or vakil cannot bind his client by an admission on a point of law. Hence, if the admission be erroneous, the client is free to repudiate it.[570] It may here be observed that the omission of a pleader or counsel to argue a question of law, or his abandoning a question of law, does not preclude the court from dealing with the question.[571]

[s 2.17.7] Power to Abandon Issue

A pleader's general powers in the conduct of a suit include the power to abandon an issue which, in his discretion, he thinks it inadvisable to press.[572]

[s 2.18] Prescribed: Section 2(16)

"Prescribed" means prescribed by rules.

[s 2.19] Public Officer: Section 2(17)

"Public officer" means a person falling under any of the following descriptions, namely:—

(a) every Judge;

(b) every member of [573][an All India Service];

(c) every commissioned or gazetted officer in the military, [574][naval or air] forces of [575][the Union], [576][] while serving under the Government;

(d) every officer of a Court of Justice whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order, in the Court, and every person especially authorised by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties;

(e) every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement;

(f) every officer of the Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience;

---

567. Markanda v Varada Kameshwar, AIR 1949 Pat 197 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 717; Young v Wright, (1807) 1 Cam 139; Parkins v Hawkshaw, (1817) 2 St 239; Patch v Lyon (1846) 9 QB 147.
568. Natha v Jodha, (1884) ILR 6 All 406.
569. Sreemutty Dossee v Pitamber, (1874) 21 WR 332.
570. Markanda v Varada Kameshwar, AIR 1949 Pat 197 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 717; Pearylal v Bhaman Lal, AIR 1950 All 433; Dwar Bux v Fatik, (1898) 3 Cal WN 222 (pleader); Beni Pershad v Dudhnath, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 156 : 26 IA 216 (counsel); Krishnaji v Rajmal, (1899) ILR 24 Bom 360, p 363; Narayan v Venkatacharya, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 408; Morannar Basilias Catholicas v Most Rev Pulerus, AIR 1954 SC 526.
571. Beni Pershad v Dudhnath, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 156.
572. Venkata v Bhashyakarlu, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 367, p 377 (PC); Mallapa v Shivappa, AIR 1962 Mys 140.
573. Substituted for "the Indian Civil Service" by section 3, Act 104 of 1976 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
574. Substituted for "or naval" by section 2 and Schedule by Act 35 of 1934.
575. Substituted for "His Majesty" by AO 1950.
576. The words "including His Majesty's Indian Marine Service", omitted by Act 35 of 1934, section 2 and Schedule.

(g) every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of the Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of the Government, or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report on, any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of the Government or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of the Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of the Government; and

(h) every officer in the service or pay of the Government, or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty.

The definition very nearly corresponds to that of a public servant in the Indian Penal Code 1860, but a person may be a public servant and not a public officer, eg, a municipal commissioner and engineer.[577] The following have been held to be public officers: a collector and agent for the court of wards;[578] the Official Trustee of Bengal;[579] an officer of the Indian Staff Corps;[580] an officer in the Indian Army;[581] an Official Assignee;[582] the Administrator-General of Bengal;[583] a cantonment committee;[584] a receiver in insolvency;[585] a receiver appointed in a suit;[586] a Wakf Commissioner of Bengal;[587] a village panchayat for a limited purpose,[588] a manager of the estate of a deceased in an administration suit,[589] but a liquidator appointed by registrar of a co-operative society is not a public officer.[590] A public officer on deputation to other work does not cease to be a public officer.[591] The commissioner of the corporation under the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 (33 of 1951), is a public officer,[592] and so also an officer constituting the Board under section 18 of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950.[593] A sarpanch of a mandal panchayat is not a public officer.[594]

The definition of Government does not include Bihar State Electricity Board. Its officers also cannot be considered as "Public Officers" for the purposes of section 80. Accordingly, in a suit against the Electricity Board, the service of notice as contemplated under section 80 upon its officers was held to be not necessary.[595]

---

577. Narendra v Jankikuer, AIR 1947 Pat 385 : (1946) ILR 25 Pat 739, p 741; Reg v Nantamram, (1869) 6 Bom HCR 64 (Cr Cas).
578. Gokulchandra v Manager, Baniachong Mozumdari Estate, AIR 1939 Cal 720 : (1940) ILR 1 Cal 73 : (1939) 43 Cal WN 1212 : (1942) 76 Cal LJ 11; Charu Chandra v Snigdhendra, AIR 1948 Cal 150 : (1948) ILR 2 Cal 77 : (1930) 52 Cal WN 212; Collector of Bijnor v Munuwar, (1880) ILR 3 All 20; Narsingrav v Lakshmanrao, (1876) ILR 1 Bom 318; Bhau v Nana, (1888) ILR 13 Bom 343.
579. Shahebzadde v Ferguson, (1881) ILR 7 Cal 499; Abdul v Doutre, (1889) 12 ILR Mad 250; Muthu Ramalinga v Shanmuga, AIR 1928 Mad 175 : (1928) ILR 51 Mad 242.
580. Watson v Lloyd, (1901) ILR 25 Mad 402.
581. Shingarao v Callaghan, AIR 1946 Lah 247 : (1947) ILR Lah 22 (FB); Kering v Murray, (1919) ILR 42 Bom 716; Husain Baksh v Brigen Shaw, AIR 1933 All 597 : (1933) ILR 55 All 648.
582. Joosub v Kemp, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 809.
583. Bholaram v Administrator-General, (1904) 8 Cal WN 913.
584. Cecil Gray v Cantonment Committee, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 583.
585. De Silva v Govind, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 895.
586. Prasaddas v KS Bannerjee, AIR 1931 Cal 61 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1127; Radharam v Purna Chandra, AIR 1930 Cal 737 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 671.
587. Commr of Wakf, Bengal v Shaheb Zada Md Zahangir Shah, AIR 1944 Cal 206 : (1928) 48 Cal WN 157.
588. Mukunda Rao Ganpat Rao v Durga Prasad, AIR 1944 Nag 130 : (1944) ILR Nag 687.
589. Hiralal v Mangtulal, AIR 1947 Cal 221 : (1944) ILR 2 Cal 513.
590. Abdul Ghani v Imdad, AIR 1942 Lah 287 : (1943) ILR Lah 389.
591. Vishnu Wasudeo v TLH Smith Pearse, AIR 1949 Ngp 362 : (1949) ILR Nag 232.
592. Sivanandam v Corp of Calcutta, (1960) 64 Cal WN 60.
593. Re Court-fee Matter under BLR Act, AIR 1958 Pat 235.
594. Mata Prasad v Mandal Panchayat, AIR 1959 MP 342.
595. Chairman, Electricity Board, Bihar v Binay Kumar Jha, AIR 2011 Pat 187.

The word "service" in section 2(17)(h) must necessarily mean something more than being merely subject to the orders of the government or control of the government. To serve means "to perform function; do what is required for". The coal mines provident fund commissioner appointed by the government performs the functions as envisaged in the Coal Mines Provident Fund and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1948 and the scheme thereunder. When he is actually acting in the capacity of provident fund commissioner, he does not cease to be an officer in the service of the government. The coal mines provident fund commissioner is a public officer. A suit filed against such officer without notice under section 80 of the CPC is not maintainable.[596]

[s 2.20] Rules: Section 2(18)

"Rules" means rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125.

HIGH COURT AMENDMENT

Calcutta.— In clause (18) insert the words "in its application to courts other than the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta" after the word "rules" and before the words "means rules and forms"; and the words "of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and, in its application to that court means the Rules of Practice and Procedure of that court made under section 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, and includes the rules and forms contained in the First Schedule of that Code which are made applicable to that court by virtue of the provisions of Order LI of that schedule" after the words "Section 122 or Section 125" vide Cal. Gaz., Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

The civil rules of practice framed under sections 122 or 125 would by reason of this provision read along with section 2(1) fall within the definition of the CPC.[597] Not only rules in First Schedule but also the rules made by the high court amending rules in the First Schedule.[598]

On the question that the Letters Patent, and the rules made thereunder by the high court for regulating its procedure on the original side, were subordinate legislation and, therefore, must give way to the superior legislation, namely, the substantive provisions of the CPC. There are two difficulties in accepting this argument. In the first place, section 2(18) of the CPC defines "rules" to mean "rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125". The conspicuous absence of reference to the rules regulating the procedure to be followed on the original side of a Chartered High Court makes it clear that those rules are not "rules" as defined in the CPC. Secondly, it is not possible to accept that the Letters Patent and rules made thereunder, which are recognised and specifically protected by section 129, are relegated to a subordinate status.[599]

[s 2.21] Share in a Corporation: Section 2(19)

"Share in a corporation" shall be deemed to include stock, debenture stock, debentures or bonds.

---

596. Coal Mines Provident Fund Commr v Ramesh Chander Jha, AIR 1990 SC 648 : (1990) 1 SCC 589.
597. Manickam v Narasimhan, AIR 1956 AP 108; Menkabai v MM Deshpande, AIR 1971 Bom 21 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 473. As to the relation of the body of the Code of Civil Procedure to the rules, see notes to section 2(1).
598. State of Uttar Pradesh v Chander Bhushan Mishra, (1980) 1 SCC 198.
599. Iridium India Telecom Ltd v Motorola Incorporated, AIR 2005 SC 514 : AIR 2005 SCW 138 : (2005) 2 SCC 145.

[s 2.22] Signed: Section 2(20)

"Signed", save in the case of a judgment or decree, includes stamped.

The definition is wider than in the General Clauses Act, 1897. Indians of rank sometimes use a stamp instead of signing, and the inability to write is not a condition precedent to the use of a stamp.[600] The Madras High Court has observed that there is no provision that initials may be made by a stamp.[601]

[S 3] Subordination of Courts.—For the purposes of this Code, the District Court is subordinate to the High Court, and every Civil Court of a grade inferior to that of a District Court and every Court of Small Causes is subordinate to the High Court and District Court.

SYNOPSIS

[s 3.1]	High Court Amendment	70	[s 3.4]	Supreme Court	71
[s 3.2]	Subordination of Courts	70	[s 3.5]	Courts and Tribunals — Distinction	72
[s 3.3]	Different Rulings of Different High Courts	71

[s 3.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.— Insert the words "and the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta" after the words "District Court" and before the words "are subordinate to"; and the words "other than the court of Small Causes of Calcutta" after the words "Court of Small Causes" and before the words "is subordinate"; substitute "are" for the word "is" before the words "subordinate to the High Court, and every Civil Court; vide Cal. Gaz. Pt I, April 20 April 1967.

[s 3.2] Subordination of Courts

The high court with reference to civil proceedings is the highest court of appeal in the part of India in which the Act or regulation containing the expression operates.[602] The enumeration of subordinate courts is not exhaustive and a collector exercising judicial functions under the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906 is subject to the superintendence and control of the high court.[603] The expression "civil court" includes revenue courts.[604] A collector acting under section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is not a civil court;[605] nor a tribunal constituted under the Displaced Persons Debt Adjustment Act 70 of 1951.[606] An arbitrator for settling compensation payable under section 19 of the Defence of India Act, 1962 is not a civil court, although he is deemed to be a court and a decree passed by him is enforceable in the same manner as a decree of a civil court.[607] The court of additional district judge cannot be said to be subordinate to the district court under this section.[608]

---

600. Maharaja of Benaras v Debi Dayal, (1881) ILR 3 All 575; Nirmal v Savathamani, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 911.
601. Venkanna v Parasuram, AIR 1929 Mad 522 : (1929) 56 Mad LJ 633, p 720.
602. See section 3(25) of the General Clauses Act, 1897.
603. Purshottam v Mahadu, (1912) ILR 37 Bom 114; Narayan N Hegde v Shankar Narasimha Bhatt, AIR 1966 Mys 5.
604. Raja of Venkatagiri v Sheik, AIR 1944 Mad 139 : (1944) ILR Mad 595.
605. Re Kosi Prasad, (1932) ILR 54 All 282 (FB).
606. Sundara Das v Lachman, AIR 1957 All 352.
607. Sailaja Kanta v State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 Cal 137.
608. Gauri Shankar v Firm Dulichand, AIR 1959 MP 188.

The subordination of courts as specified in section 3 is only for the purpose of the CPC and not for the purpose of a special Act. A court of Subordinate Judge in relation to a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act is not subordinate to the district judge. Therefore, an inquiry conducted by the district judge under section 340 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 for offences under section 195 in relation to payment of compensation under the Land Acquisition Act, was held to be impermissible.[609]

A full bench of the Calcutta High Court has held that section 20 of the Civil Courts Act makes it clear that if a decree or order of a district judge is not appealable to the high court then from a decree and/or order of Additional District Judge no appeal would lie to the high court, which makes it abundantly clear that for the purpose of exercising judicial power, the Additional District Judge is equivalent and/or equated to a district judge. However, the General Administrative Power rests with the district judge in terms of section 9 of the Civil Courts Act as also the general power and jurisdiction of withdrawal under section 24 of the CPC. It was also held that if Additional District Judges were to be deemed subordinate to the district court for all purposes, it would not have been necessary to insert section 24(3) in the CPC.[610]

[s 3.3] Different Rulings of Different High Courts

Where there are different rulings of different high courts on a particular point, a subordinate judge should follow the decision in law of a bench of the high court to which he is subordinate unless the decision of the bench has been overruled by a decision of a full bench of that court or unless it has been over-ruled expressly or impliedly on an appeal to his majesty in council, or by the Federal or the Supreme Court or unless the law has been altered by a subsequent Act of the legislature.[611]

[s 3.4] Supreme Court

Article 141 of the Constitution of India enacts that the law declared by the Supreme Court shall be binding on all courts within the territory of India. The courts of India are therefore bound to follow the decisions of the Supreme Court even though they are opposed to the decisions of the Privy Council or the House of Lords.[612] The Supreme Court is not bound by the decisions of the Privy Council or the Federal Court.[613] It is also free to reconsider its own decisions;[614] but, before a previous decision is pronounced to be erroneous, the court would satisfy itself with a fair amount of unanimity among its members that a revision of its view is necessary. Such satisfaction would be firstly, as to the error in the earlier decision and secondly of its baneful effect on the general interest of the public.[615]

---

609. State of Andhra Pradesh v V Sarma Rao, AIR 2007 SC 137 : (2007) 5 SCC 510 : (2007) 1 Mad LJ (Cri) 591 (SC).
610. West Bengal Housing Infrastructure Development Corp v Impression, AIR 2016 Cal 236 : (2016) 4 ALR 435 (Cal).
611. Puttu Lal v Parbati, (1915) ILR 37 All 359, p 366 : (1915) 42 IA 155, p 160; Korban Ally v Sharoda Proshad, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 82; Swamirao v Kashinath, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 419; Balaji v Sakharam, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 555; Kamla Prasad v Pandey Ram, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 565.
612. Punjabi v Shama Rao, AIR 1955 Ngp 293; ITC v Shirinibai, AIR 1956 Bom 586.
613. Srinivasa v Narain, AIR 1954 SC 379 : (1955) 1 SCR 1 : (1954) SCJ 408 .
614. Bengal Immunity Co v State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 661 : (1955) 2 SCR 603 : (1955) SCJ 672 : (1955) SCA 1140.
615. Keshav Mills Co Ltd v CIT, AIR 1965 SC 1636 : (1965) 2 SCR 908; Supdt and Legal Remembrancer, State of West Bengal v Corp of Calcutta, AIR 1967 SC 997; Golak Nath v State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1643, p 1670.

[s 3.5] Courts and Tribunals — Distinction

According to the decision in Associated Cement Companies Ltd's case,[616] the word "court" and "tribunal" are not synonymous. It is well settled that the word "court" is used to designate those forums which are set up in an organised state to exercise judicial powers of the state to maintain and uphold rights and punish wrongs that is for administration of justice and the word "court" would denote "ordinary courts of civil judicature". The judicial power of the government is exercised by establishment of hierarchy of courts, to decide disputes between its subjects and the subjects and state. The powers, which these courts exercise, are judicial powers; the functions, which they discharge, are the judicial functions; and the decision, which they reach and pronounce, are judicial decisions. However, with the growth of civilisation and problems of modern life and to avoid delay caused in disposal of cases by ordinary courts due to heavy pendency and wrangles of procedure in the CPC and provision for appeals and revision under the CPC and to decide disputes requiring specialised justice several tribunals have been established under various Acts, to implement administrative policy or determine controversies arising out of some administrative law. These tribunals have also been invested with judicial power of state by divesting ordinary civil courts of the power to decide these matters which are required to be decided by the tribunal. The distinction between court and tribunal is well known and their composition and formation is distinct and separate, though both of them have similar functions to perform as tribunals are clothed with trappings of the court. Though all the "courts" are tribunals all the "tribunals" are not courts. The distinguishing feature between the courts and tribunal or special forum is that the court is constituted by a state as a part of the normal hierarchy of courts of civil judicature maintained by the state under its constitution exercising judicial power of the state except those which are excluded by law from their jurisdiction, whereas tribunal is constituted under the special Act to exercise special jurisdiction in order to decide certain controversy arising under special laws.[617]

The district judge who functions as a Claims Tribunal is not only within the administrative control of the high court, but also subordinate to it under section 115 of the CPC. Therefore, the order passed by the tribunal is revisable under section 115.[618]

It follows from the above that wherever special statute confers or clothes any authority with powers of a civil court for decision of civil disputes in general, the orders passed by such authorities would be revisable in the absence of any provision for appeal against the same. What is important is that the authority exercising the power must be constituted as a civil court for decision of civil disputes in general and not for decision of only special category of civil disputes. The tribunals in the instant case are meant to deal with only specific class of cases arising out of special enactments. They do not and cannot exercise powers vested in a civil court for decision of civil disputes in general within the meaning of section 9 of the CPC. Such tribunals cannot therefore be termed as civil courts subordinate to the high court within the meaning of section 115 of CPC.[619]

[S 4] Savings.—(1) In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any special or local

---

616. Associated Cement Co Ltd v PN Sharma, AIR 1965 SC 1595.
617. UOI v Mysore Paper Mills Ltd, AIR 2004 Kant 1.
618. Darshan Singh v Ghevarchand, AIR 1993 Raj 126 (DB); see also Noreen v L Dasaiah, AIR 1985 Kant 208 : (1985) 1 Kar LJ 278 (DB).
619. UOI v Mysore Paper Mills Ltd, AIR 2004 Kant 1.

law now in force or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by or under any other law for the time being in force.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the proposition contained in sub-section (1), nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any remedy which a landholder or landlord may have under any law for the time being in force for the recovery of rent of agricultural land from the produce of such land.

SYNOPSIS

[s 4.1] Special or Local Law 73
[s 4.2] Any Special Form of Procedure..... 74

[s 4.1] Special or Local Law

The section does not mean that the CPC does not apply to proceedings under special or local laws, but only enacts that where there is an inconsistency, the rules of the CPC do not prevail.[620] There is no inconsistency between the CPC and section 77 of the Railways Act 9 of 1890; and if a railway is owned by the secretary of state in council, notice of a claim to the railway administration under section 77 of the Railways Act 1890 will not dispense with the necessity of a notice under section 80 of the CPC.[621] The same rule will apply when the railway is owned by the government. For instances of such inconsistencies, the undermentioned cases[622] may be referred to. The Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906 enacts its own special procedure which excludes that of the CPC.[623]

The provisions of the CPC will apply to all matters on which the special or local law is silent. Therefore, O IX, rule 13, is applicable to proceedings under the Bengal Premises Rent Act 17 of 1950, and an order passed on such an application is appealable under section 104(1) of the CPC.[624]

The Arbitration and Conciliation Act (26 of 1996) is a special statute, and it provides for a complete machinery for the resolution of disputes. Therefore, provisions of the CPC would not apply to any proceeding under the Act. When the remedy of appeal is provided under the Act, revision under the CPC would not be maintainable.[625]

Rules framed by the Supreme Court with reference to appeals to it are a special law within this section and should take precedence over section 114 or O XLVII of the CPC.[626]

The section gives a local Act local validity and the special procedure therein prescribed validity within its own sphere. By virtue of sub-section (1), the provisions of the Punjab

620. Abdul Alim v Mohd Saeed, AIR 1951 P&H 43; Aga Mahomed v Cohen, (1887) ILR 13 Cal 221, 223.
621. Ali Asmat v GIP Railway, AIR 1930 All 476 : (1930) ILR 52 All 837; Hirachand v GIP Railway, AIR 1928 Bom 421 : (1928) ILR 52 Bom 548.
622. Velli v Moidin, (1886) ILR 9 Mad 332; Appandai v Srihari, (1890) ILR 16 Mad 451; Venkatanarasimha v Suranna, (1891) ILR 17 Mad 298; Gadhavi v Shivuba, AIR 1956 Sau 29; Allen Berry & Co v Vivian Bose, AIR 1960 P&H 86 : (1960) ILR 1 Punj 416; Seetharam Rao v Raj Kumar, AIR 1961 AP 399; Chaboo Devi v Ram Sarup, AIR 1965 All 79; Ram Abhilakh v Ram Jas, AIR 1966 All 218, p 220; Chandmal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1968 Raj 20.
623. Kasam v Maruti, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 552.
624. Sahadat Khan v Md Husain, AIR 1954 Cal 347 : (1953) 57 Cal WN 948; Sunanda v Gundapart, AIR 1961 Bom 225; Ram Singh v State, AIR 1969 Raj 41, p 48; Sardar Begum v JC Bhandari, AIR 1967 Del 61.
625. Ashok Kumar Singh v Shanti Devi, AIR 2010 Pat 1.
626. Deities v Hanumanthacharlu, AIR 1962 AP 245; Abdul Aleem v Sheikh Mahomed, AIR 1951 P&H 42.

Courts Act, 1918, are saved and are not affected by the CPC. Therefore, the provisions as to second appeal in section 41 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1918 are not affected by section 100 as now amended.[627] No local legislature can prescribe procedure for any court beyond its own jurisdiction.[628]

Letters Patent as applicable to the High Court of Gujarat is a special law in force which confers special jurisdiction or power and lays down special form of procedure prescribed therein for governing the cases where the two judges forming the division bench of the high court deferred on a question of law or fact. In view of the provisions of section 4(1) of the CPC, therefore, clause 36 of the Letters Patent laying down the special procedure for meeting such a contingency was required to be followed without in any way being impeded or restricted or being cut across by the procedural requirement laid down by O XLVII, rule 6 of the CPC.[629] On the question that the Letters Patent, and the rules made thereunder by the high court for regulating its procedure on the original side, were subordinate legislation and, therefore, must give way to the superior legislation, namely, the substantive provisions of the CPC. There are two difficulties in accepting this argument.

In the first place, section 2(18) of the CPC defines "rules" to mean "rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125". The conspicuous absence of reference to the rules regulating the procedure to be followed on the original side of a Chartered High Court makes it clear that those rules are not "rules" as defined in the CPC. Secondly, it is not possible to accept that the Letters Patent and rules made thereunder, which are recognised and specifically protected by section 129, are relegated to a subordinate status.[630]

Even if section 46(B) of the State Financial Corporation Act, 1951 was not there, the provisions of CPC for the execution of a decree against a surety who had given only personal guarantee would, in the absence of any provision to the contrary in the State Financial Corporation Act, 1951, be applicable. Since the term used in section 31(1) of the State Financial Corporation Act, 1951 Act, that is, "District Judge", is not a persona designata but a court of ordinary civil jurisdiction, while exercising jurisdiction under sections 31 and 32, therefore, the ordinary rules of procedure, orders and decrees under CPC will apply to such court.[631]

It is for the party who asserts that the procedural law applicable to a particular proceeding as something different from that contained in the CPC to affirmatively establish it.[632] When the special or local law is not in force at the relevant time, this section cannot apply.[633]

[s 4.2] Any Special Form of Procedure

It has been held, having regard to these words, that where two judges differ in an appeal from the original side of the high court, the special procedure laid down in clause 36 of the Letters Patent should be followed, and not the rule laid down in section 98 of the CPC.[634] Section 98(3) was added by the Act 18 of 1929, and gives effect to these decisions.

---

627. Ganpat v Rama Devi, AIR 1978 P&H 137 (FB).
628. Chhatto Lal v Naraindas, AIR 1930 Cal 53 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 704.
629. Reliance Industries Ltd v Praveen Bhai Jas Bhai Patel, (1997) 7 SCC 300.
630. Iridium India Telecom Ltd v Motorola Inc, AIR 2005 SC 514 : AIR 2005 SCW 139 : (2005) 2 SCC 145
631. Maharashtra State Financial Corp v Jaycee Drugs and Pharmaceuticals Pvt Ltd, (1991) 2 SCC 637.
632. Girdharlal v Krishna Dutt, AIR 1960 P&H 575.
633. Jalejr Hormasji v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1965 AP 288.
634. Bhaidas v Bai Gulab, AIR 1921 PC 6 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 718 : (1921) 48 IA 181; Surajmal v Hiralal, supra, (1918) 20 Bom LR 185, p 217; Empress v Protab Chandra, AIR 1924 Cal 668 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 504.

[S 5] Application of the Code to Revenue Courts.—(1) Where any Revenue Courts are governed by the provisions of this Code in those matters of procedure upon which any special enactment applicable to them is silent, the [635]State Government [636][] may, by notification in the official Gazette declare that any portions of those provisions which are not expressly made applicable by this Code shall not apply to those Courts, or shall only apply to them with such modifications as the [637]State Government [638][] may prescribe.

(2) "Revenue Court" in sub-section (1) means a Court having jurisdiction under any local law to entertain suits or other proceedings relating to the rent, revenue or profits of land used for agricultural purposes, but does not include a Civil Court having original jurisdiction under this Code to try such suits or proceedings as being suits or proceedings of a civil nature.

[s 5.1] Object of the Section

The object of this section is to preserve the summary character of rent litigation under local laws.

[S 6] Pecuniary jurisdiction.—Save in so far as is otherwise expressly provided, nothing herein contained shall operate to give any Court jurisdiction over suits the amount or value of the subject-matter of which exceeds the pecuniary limits (if any) of its ordinary jurisdiction.

SYNOPSIS

[s 6.1]	"Otherwise expressly provided".....	75	[s 6.4]	Mesne profits After Suit do not Affect Pecuniary Jurisdiction.....	77
[s 6.2]	Pecuniary Limits of Jurisdiction.....	76	[s 6.5]	Section Applicable only to Suits.....	77
[s 6.3]	Court May Pass a Decree in Excess of its Pecuniary Jurisdiction	76

[s 6.1] "Otherwise expressly provided"

The expression "subject matter" means not the property involved in the suit but the relief claimed and it is its value that determines the jurisdiction.[639] The Suits Valuation Act 7 of 1887, prescribes the mode of valuing certain suits for purposes of determining jurisdiction and the present section must be read subject to its provisions. Under section 8 of Suits Valuation Act, 1887 the valuation for court fees and the valuation for jurisdiction in certain suits is the same. Under section 7 clause (iv)(f) of the Court Fees Act, 1870, the valuation for purposes of court fees in a suit for accounts lies in the discretion of the plaintiff. Therefore, in a suit for accounts, the plaintiff's valuation in the plaint fixes the jurisdiction of the court.[640] In a suit for unsettled accounts, fixed court fee is payable and for jurisdictional purposes, such a suit can

635. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO 1950.
636. The words "with the previous sanction of the G.G. in C", omitted by Act 38 of 1920, section 2 and Sch I.
637. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO 1950.
638. The words "with the sanction aforesaid" omitted by Act 38 of 1920, section 2 and Sch I.
639. Chandi Charan Das v Susila Bala Dasi, AIR 1955 Cal 144 : (1955) 59 Cal WN 606.
640. Ganpatrao v Sham Rao, AIR 1941 Ngp 138 : (1941) ILR Nag 194; Ishwarappa v Dhanji, AIR 1932 Bom 111 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 23.

be valued in terms of valuation as fixed by the plaintiff.[641] In a suit for partition, the value for the purpose of jurisdiction is the value of the share claimed by the plaintiff and not the value of the entire estate in which the partition is sought.[642] In a suit for recovery of property from the tenant whose tenancy has been terminated, the valuation of suit for jurisdictional purposes should be on the basis of annual rent or profit. Suit so valued along with the claim of damage exceeding pecuniary jurisdiction of the court is liable to be returned for prosecution before the proper court.[643]

[s 6.2] Pecuniary Limits of Jurisdiction

Pecuniary jurisdiction of a court-suit valued less than Rs 50,000 is to be instituted before the court of the lowest grade competent to try, that is, additional district judge. The subsequent amendment increasing pecuniary jurisdiction of civil judge (class I) from Rs 20,000–Rs 50,000. It cannot be said that the additional district judge who discharges powers of district court are not varied, and pecuniary jurisdiction of the district judge was not registered.[644]

The exercise of option by a plaintiff to value his claim for the purpose of court-fees, determines the value for the purpose of pecuniary jurisdiction.[645]

A subsequent increase in the value of the property takes away the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court.[646]

[s 6.3] Court May Pass a Decree in Excess of its Pecuniary Jurisdiction

Section 6 refers to the court's power to entertain a suit. It is the plaintiff's valuation in his plaint which prima facie determines the jurisdiction of the court and not the amount which may be found or decreed by the court.[647] If the plaintiff's valuation in his plaint in a suit for accounts is within the pecuniary limits of the court's jurisdiction, the court may pass a decree for the sum in excess of the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction.[648] The court has no jurisdiction to grant reliefs not claimed in the plaint if by reason of their inclusion, the suit would be beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court.[649] Where different suits which are severally within the jurisdiction of the court are consolidated for hearing, the court does not lose its jurisdiction to hear it by reason of the value of all the suits exceeding its jurisdiction if taken together.[650]

The Bombay High Court has held that in a case of damages, the amount of damage which the court can award is limited to the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court.[651]

---

641. PM Diesels Ltd v Patel Field Marshal Industries, AIR 1998 Del 225.
642. Bhairab v Narain, AIR 1953 Pat 342.
643. Narender Kumar Soni v Sunshine Roadways, AIR 1999 Del 189.
644. Gopalkrishna Sharma v Bhagirath Prasad Sharma, AIR 1998 MP 264. See note to section 15 under the head "Court of Lowest Grade Competent to Try a Suit".
645. Jhari Mahto v Sagar Mahto, AIR 2009 (NOC) 913 (Jhar).
646. Ramesh Goel . Dwinderpal Singh, AIR 2008 (NOC) 889 (Cal).
647. Lakshman v Babaji, (1883) ILR 8 Bom 31; Mahabir Singh v Behari Lal, (1891) ILR 13 All 320; Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) 16 ILR All 286; Ishwarappa v Dhamji, AIR 1932 Bom 111 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 23.
648. Ishwarappa v Dhamji, AIR 1932 Bom 111 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 23; Kalyan Das v Ganga Bai, AIR 1961 MP 67.
649. Nain Singh v Mahendra, AIR 1952 All 196.
650. Jaya Krishna v Bajrang Lal, (1961) ILR Raj 1173.
651. Shaikh Gafoor v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 (NOC) 1637 (Bom — Aurangabad Bench).

ILLUSTRATION

A sues B in the court of second-class subordinate judge for an account and values his suit for a court fee at Rs 130. Under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, the value of the subject matter of the suit is Rs 130. The parties arrive at a compromise whereby the first defendant is to pay Rs 6,000 and the second defendant Rs 5,000 to the plaintiff. The court may pass a decree in terms of the compromise, although it has jurisdiction limited to suits of which the value of the subject matter does not exceed Rs 5,000.[652]

The forum of appeal also is determined by the value of the suit and not by the amount decreed.[653]

[s 6.4] Mesne profits After Suit do not Affect Pecuniary Jurisdiction

The value of a suit for the recovery of possession and mesne profits is the value of the immovable property plus mesne profits up to the date of the suit. Mesne profits after suit do not form part of the cause of action even though there be a prayer in the plaint for mesne profits after suit. If the suit is properly brought in the court of a munsiff for the recovery of possession of land and mesne profits prior to the date of the suit, and there is also a prayer for mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit, which are claimed or assessed at a sum beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the munsiff, the munsiff has jurisdiction to fix the mesne profits from and after the date of the institution of the suit and to pass a decree therefore although the amount may be beyond his pecuniary jurisdiction.[654]

A sues B for possession of land valued at Rs 686 and for the mesne profits up to the date of the suit valued approximately at Rs 200 and for mesne profits subsequent to the date of the suit not valued at all. The suit is brought in the court of a munsiff whose pecuniary jurisdiction is limited to Rs 1,000. A decree is passed in the suit for the plaintiff for possession and for mesne profits upto the date of the suit. Subsequently, the plaintiff applies to the munsiff for assessment of mesne profits after the date of the suit claiming Rs 60,000 for such profits. The munsiff can pass a decree for Rs 60,000 though the amount exceeds his pecuniary jurisdiction.

[s 6.5] Section Applicable only to Suits

This section has no application to proceedings other than suits.[655] But proceedings in execution are included in the word "suit" and will be governed by the provisions of the CPC.

[S 7] Provincial Small Cause Courts.—The following provisions shall not extend to Courts constituted under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 (9 of 1887), [656][or under the Berar Small Cause Courts Law, 1905], or to Courts exercising the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes [657][under the said Act or Law], [658][or to

---

652. Ishwarappa v Dhanji, AIR 1932 Bom 111 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 23 : 137 IC 702.
653. See notes to section 38, "Jurisdiction of court executing decree" and notes to section 96, "Forum of Appeal".
654. Ganeshilal v Snehalata, AIR 1947 Cal 68 : (1947) 51 Cal WN 136; Bidyadhar v Manindra Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 1076 : (1926) ILR 53 Cal 14; Sundarshan Das v Ram Prasad, (1911) ILR 33 All 97; Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) ILR 16 All 286; Arogya v Appachi, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 543; Kannayya v Venkata, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 1, pp 7–8; Sheikh Mohammad v Mahtab, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 394; Dinanath v Mayawati, AIR 1921 Pat 118 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 54.
655. Nandlal v Nritya Kali, (1927) 31 Cal WN 142.
656. Inserted by Act 4 of 1941, section 2 and Sch III.
657. Substituted by Act 4 of 1941, section 2 and Sch III for "under that Act".
658. Inserted by Act 2 of 1951, section 5 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

Courts in] [659][any part of India to which the said Act does not extend] exercising a corresponding jurisdiction] that is to say.—

(a) so much of the body of the Code as relates to—

(i) suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes;

(ii) the execution of decrees in such suits;

(iii) the execution of decrees against immovable property; and

(b) the following sections, that is to say,— section 9,

sections 91 and 92,

sections 94 and 95 [660][so far as they authorize or relate to—

(i) orders for the attachment of immovable property,

(ii) injunctions,

(iii) the appointment of a receiver of immovable property, or

(iv) the interlocutory orders referred to in clause (e) of section 94], and sections 96 to 112 and 115.

SYNOPSIS

[s 7.1] Changes in the Section 78
[s 7.2] Attachment Before Judgment by Small Cause Court..... 78

[s 7.1] Changes in the Section

The words "or under the Berar Small Cause Courts Law 1905", were inserted after 1887 and the words "the said Act or Law" were substituted in place of the words "that Act" by the Act 4 of 1941, Sch 3. The words "or to courts in Part B States exercising a corresponding jurisdiction" have been inserted after the words "the said Act or law" by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act, 2 of 1951. The words in sub-clause (b) from "so far as they authorize or relate to" upto the words "of section 94" were substituted by Act 1 of 1926, for the words "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders" which occurred in clause (b) of the original section after the words and figures "sections 94 and 95". Act 1 of 1926 is the Small Cause Courts (Attachment of immovable property) Act, 1926, but Adaptation Laws Order No 2 of 1956, the words "any part of India to which the said Act does not extend" were substituted for the words "Part B States".

[s 7.2] Attachment Before Judgment by Small Cause Court

By reason of clause (a)(iii) of this section read with O L. rule 1, clause (a)(ii), the small cause courts do not have the power to execute decrees against immovable property in accordance with the provisions of the CPC and the rules.[661] A provincial small cause court has, however, jurisdiction to attach movable property before judgment. An attachment before judgment is not one of the interlocutory orders referred to in clause (b) of the section.[662]

---

659. Substituted by the Adaptation of Laws (No. 2) Order, 1956, for "Part B States".
660. Substituted by Act 1 of 1926, section 3, for "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders".
661. Sarjoo Prasad v Second Addl District Judge, Kanpur, AIR 1975 All 13.
662. Kumud v Hari, (1919) ILR 46 Cal 717.

As regards immovable property, there were conflicting decisions of the Calcutta High Court on the question whether a provincial small cause court had jurisdiction to order an attachment of such property before judgment. The whole question was considered by a full bench of that high court in the undermentioned case,[663] and it was held by a majority that a court of small causes has such jurisdiction but expressed a doubt as to the intention of the legislature in the matter when the CPC was passed in 1908. To resolve that doubt, the above stated words were substituted by Act 1 of 1926, for the words "so far as they relate to injunctions and interlocutory orders", which occurred in clause (b) of the original section after the words "sections 94 and 95". To make the matter clearer, a new rule, being rule 13, was added to O XXXVIII by the same Act.

Under section 37(2) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, the rent controller appointed under that Act has to follow the practice and procedure of a court of small causes as prescribed by the CPC and the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887. Therefore, if any of the provisions of the CPC are not applicable to a court of small causes, the same will not be applicable to proceedings before the rent controller. Under section 15(1) of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 read with Article 4 of Sch 2 thereto, a suit for possession of immovable property or for recovery of an interest in such property is excepted from the cognisance of a court of small causes. An application under section 14 of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958 is in the nature of a suit for possession of immovable property. Therefore, O XXIII, rule 3 of the CPC, providing for recording a compromise in so far as it relates to a suit for possession of immovable property, cannot apply to an application under the proviso to section 14 of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958. Such an application is not maintainable.[664]

A suit instituted on the original side and subsequently transferred to the small cause court retains its character as an original suit and it is competent to the court to order attachment before judgment of immovable property.[665]

The provisions of O XXIII, rule 3 of the CPC are applicable to revisions under section 25 of the Presidency Small Causes Courts Act, 1887, also. The court must see that if the parties have entered into a lawful compromise which is not otherwise forbidden by any law, the case is decided in terms of the compromise.[666]

A final decree was passed in a suit for partition. Subsequently, there was interference with the plaintiff's possession over the allotted portion. It was held that the suit filed by the plaintiff for injunction to restrain the defendant from interference with possession was not barred. Subsequent acts of the defendant give rise to a fresh cause of action.[667]

[S 8] Presidency Small Cause Courts.—Save as provided in sections 24, 38 to 41, 75, clauses (a), (b) and (c), 76, [668][77, 157 and 158], and by the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 (15 of 1882), the provisions in the body of this Code shall not extend to any suit or proceeding in any Court of Small Causes established in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay:

---

663. Barada Kanta Saha Roy v Sheikh Moijuddin, AIR 1925 Cal 1 : (1925) ILR 52 Cal 275 (FB); approving Sadek Ali v Samad Ali, AIR 1924 Cal 193 : (1923) 28 Cal WN 16; overruling Kararnath v Hem Nath, AIR 1923 Cal 176 : (1922) ILR 49 Cal 994.
664. Springdales School v S Tahilramani, AIR 1969 Del 7, p 10.
665. Venkateswara v Sriramamurtho 1952 AP LT 558.
666. Naresh Kumar Gupta v Third Addl. District Judge, Bulundshahar, AIR 1990 All 23.
667. Ramlakhan Tewari v Ram Samju Tewari, AIR 1981 All 211.
668. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 4, for "77 and 155 to 158" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[669][Provided that—

(1) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay, as the case may be, from time to time, by notification in the Official Gazette, direct[670] that any such provisions not inconsistent with the express provisions of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 (15 of 1882), and with such modifications and adaptations as may be specified in the notification, shall extend to suits or proceedings or any class of suits or proceedings in such Court;

(2) all rules heretofore made by any of the said High Courts under section 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 (15 of 1882), shall be deemed to have been validly made.]

[s 8.1] State Amendment

Gujarat.—In section 8, in the opening para, after the words "Calcutta, Madras and Bombay", insert the words "and in the city of Ahmedabad"—Gujarat Act XIX of 1961 as amended by Gujarat Act XXXII of 1961, section 21 and Schedule (w.e.f. 1-11-1961).

The Gujarat Act 19 of 1961 as amended by Gujarat Act 32 of 1961, has inserted the words "and in the City of Ahmedabad" after the words "Calcutta, Madras and Bombay".

The proviso was inserted in the section by section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act 1 of 1914. The words "official gazette", were substituted for the words "local official gazette" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937.

The word "suit" in the expression "shall not extend to any suit or proceeding" includes any decree that may be passed in such a suit.[671] The court of small causes has jurisdiction to pass a garnishee order and to set it aside when passed ex parte of proper reasons,[672] but such an order would not be appealable.[673] The presidency small cause court has no jurisdiction to execute the decree of a foreign court.[674] The period of 12 years prescribed in section 48 for execution of a decree has no application to a decree passed by the presidency small cause court.[675] Section 48 has been deleted by the Limitation Act, 1963.

On account of extension by the high court of certain provisions of the CPC to the Small Causes Court of Bombay, O IX with certain modifications is applicable to that court but not section 104 or O XLIII, rule 1 of the CPC. An appeal against an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree against a tenant for possession passed under section 28 of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates (Control) Act, 1947, is not maintainable under O XLIII, rule 1 of the CPC; but such an appeal is maintainable under section 29 of the Rent Act as the impugned order was passed under section 28 of the Act.[676] Similarly, the small causes court at Calcutta can grant interim injunction in cases provided by the rules framed by the high court empowering it to do so, but not under O XXXIX, rule 2 of the CPC, which does not apply.[677]

---

669. Added by Act 1 of 1914, section 2.
670. For instance of such direction, see Calcutta Gazette, 1910, Pt I, p 814.
671. Ranganathan v Poonacharamma, AIR 1942 Pat 128.
672. Bank of Jeypore v Davey, AIR 1957 Mad 353.
673. Sankaran Nair v Krishna Pillai, AIR 1962 Ker 233.
674. Subramanyam v Srinivasan, AIR 1951 Mad 289.
675. Bava C Gopalaswamy v Abhisheka Kattalai, AIR 1950 Mad 504 : (1951) ILR Mad 1.
676. Hemchand v Subhkaran, AIR 1967 Bom 361 : (1966) 68 Bom LR 857.
677. Rameshwar Dubey v Jogindra Lal Saha, AIR 1968 Cal 234, p 237.

PART I

SUITS IN GENERAL

Jurisdiction of the Courts and Res Judicata

[S 9] Courts to try all civil suits unless barred.—The courts shall (subject to the provisions herein contained) have jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature excepting suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred.

[1][Explanation I.]—A suit in which the right to property or to an office is contested is a suit of a civil nature, notwithstanding that such right may depend entirely on the decision of questions as to religious rites or ceremonies.

[2][Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, it is immaterial whether or not any fees are attached to the office referred to in Explanation I or whether or not such office is attached to a particular place.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 9.1]	State Amendment	82
[s 9.2]	Alterations in the Section	82
[s 9.3]	Scope	82
[s 9.4]	Section 9 and Section 115	86
[s 9.5]	Bar of Jurisdiction — Ascertainment	86
[s 9.6]	Choice of Forum	88
[s 9.7]	Order of Court Lacking Jurisdiction to Be Respected till Set Aside	88
[s 9.8]	Suits of a Civil Nature	89
[s 9.9]	Caste Question	94
[s 9.10]	Caste Certificate	94
[s 9.11]	Suits in Which the Principal Question Is a Caste Question, Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature	95
[s 9.12]	Expulsion from Caste	95
[s 9.13]	Suits in Which the Principal Question Relates to Religious Rites or Ceremonies Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature	96
[s 9.14]	Suits for Vindication of Mere Dignity Attached to an Office Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature	97
[s 9.15]	Office	97
[s 9.16]	Suits for Secular Offices	98
[s 9.17]	Suits for Religious Office	99
[s 9.18]	Wakf	101
[s 9.19]	Suits for Recovery of Fee Attached to an Office Are Suits of a Civil Nature, but Not Suits for Recovery of Gratuities	104
[s 9.20]	Suits Relating to Caste Property	105
[s 9.21]	Suits for Inspection of Accounts of Caste Property	105
[s 9.22]	Insurance	105
[s 9.23]	Marine Insurance	106
[s 9.24]	Interference With Temple Property	106
[s 9.25]	Interference with Right of Worship	107
[s 9.26]	Date of Birth	108
[s 9.27]	Rights of Burial	109
[s 9.28]	Deities	109
[s 9.29]	Religious and Other Processions	109
[s 9.30]	Education	109
[s 9.31]	Arbitration	110

1. Explanation re-numbered as Explanation I thereof by Act 104 of 1976, section 5 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
2. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 5 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 9.32]	Societies	111
[s 9.33]	Removal of an Executor	113
[s 9.34]	Election Matters	113
[s 9.35]	Suit to Set Aside Election of Directors	113
[s 9.36]	Tax	113
[s 9.37]	Suit for Administration of Estate of a Living Hindu Debtor	115
[s 9.38]	Suits Expressly Barred	115
[s 9.39]	Exclusion of Jurisdiction of Civil Courts	124
[s 9.40]	Tribunals and Jurisdiction of Civil Courts	128
[s 9.41]	Tribunals of Limited and Specified Jurisdiction — Jurisdiction of Civil Court Barred	136
[s 9.42]	Civil Courts Jurisdiction Not Found Barred — Instances	139
[s 9.43]	Decision of Tribunals on Question of Jurisdiction	141
[s 9.44]	Bar with Respect to Revenue Matters	141
[s 9.45]	Title Watan Land	147
[s 9.46]	Trust Matters	148
[s 9.47]	Suits Between Landlords and Tenants	150
[s 9.48]	Civil Court's Jurisdiction Barred by Rent Act — Counter Claim If Maintainable	155
[s 9.49]	Ownership Certificate Issued by Rent Tribunal — Civil Court's Decree Not Executable	155
[s 9.50]	Suits Impliedly Barred	156
[s 9.51]	Family Courts	157
[s 9.52]	Chit Fund	159
[s 9.53]	Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898	159
[s 9.54]	Electricity Cases	160
[s 9.55]	Acts of State	161
[s 9.56]	Political Questions	163
[s 9.57]	Encroachment on Statutory Right	163
[s 9.58]	Debt Relief	164
[s 9.59]	Debt Recovery Tribunal Not Subordinate to High Court	167
[s 9.60]	Finality	168
[s 9.61]	Partition	169
[s 9.62]	Amalgamation of Plots	169
[s 9.63]	Deemed Sanction of Construction	170
[s 9.64]	Restrictive Covenant	170
[s 9.65]	Assignment	170
[s 9.66]	Special Statutes	170
[s 9.67]	Mines and Minerals	173
[s 9.68]	Hard Coke Plant	173
[s 9.69]	Service Matters	173
[s 9.70]	Service Matters Between Workmen and Management	175
[s 9.71]	Consumer Protection Matters	178
[s 9.72]	Corporate	179
[s 9.73]	Land Grabbing	180
[s 9.74]	Constitutional Matters	181
[s 9.75]	Equity Jurisdiction — Adjudicatory Fact-Jurisdictional Fact	183
[s 9.76]	Land Acquisition Matters	184

[s 9.1] State Amendment

Maharashtra.—Section 9 has been inserted by Maharashtra Act 65 of 1977. For text of Amendment and Commentary thereon, see Notes at the end of commentary of section 9, post.

[s 9.2] Alterations in the Section

The words "either expressly or impliedly barred" were substituted in 1908 for the words "barred by any enactment for the time being in force" which occurred in section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882. The latter words were held to mean expressly barred.[3] The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), has re-numbered the existing explanation as Explanation I and added a new explanation as Explanation II.

[s 9.3] Scope

The test of jurisdiction over the subject matter is whether the court or tribunal can decide the case at all and not whether the court has authority to issue a particular kind of order in the course of deciding the same. A court is said to have jurisdiction of the subject matter of a particular controversy if the court has authority to hear and decide causes of a class to which the particular controversy belongs. In defining jurisdiction of the subject matter in these terms, the courts have emphasised that the jurisdiction of a court depends upon the right to decide the case and not upon the merits of its decision.[4] It is well-settled law that jurisdiction of the court is to be determined on the basis of allegations made in the plaint. The pith and substance of the plaint allegations have to be kept in mind; so also, the pith and substance of the relief sought. It is the choice of the plaintiff to choose his forum. It is another thing that the plaintiff fails to establish his case before such forum. The plea of lack of jurisdiction can be raised at any time even in second appeal, so also on the execution side.[5] There is no denying the fact that the allegations made in the plaint decide the forum. The jurisdiction does not depend upon the defence taken by the defendants in the written statement.[6] A litigant having a grievance of civil nature has, independently of any statute, a right to institute a suit in the civil court unless its cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred. Exclusion of jurisdiction of civil court is not to be readily inferred and such exclusion must be either express or implied.[7] In all types of civil disputes, civil court has inherent jurisdiction as per section 9, unless a part of that jurisdiction is curbed out from such jurisdiction, expressly or by necessary implication, by any statutory provision and conferred on any other tribunal or authority.[8] It is no doubt true that the jurisdiction of the civil court cannot be easily excluded in every case, but the jurisdiction of the civil court is excluded where the statute gives finality to the orders and to find the same, the scheme of the Act has to be necessarily taken into consideration. The second thing to be considered is, if under the statute a liability is created, then it is necessary to find out as to whether the statute creates an effective machinery for the redressal of the grievances pertaining to any law and facts arising therein.[9] Section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (CPC) provides that whenever a question arises before the civil court whether its jurisdiction is excluded expressly or by necessary implication, the court naturally feels inclined to consider whether the remedy afforded by an alternative provision prescribed by a special statute is sufficient or adequate. In cases, where inclusion of civil court's jurisdiction is expressly provided for, the consideration as to the scheme of the statute in question and the adequacy or sufficiency of the remedy provided for by it, may be relevant, but it cannot be decisive. Where exclusion is pleaded as a matter of necessary implication, such consideration would be very important and inconceivable and it might become even decisive.[10]

3. Kishori Mohun v Chundra Nath, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 644, 648.

The Andhra Pradesh High Court took a contrary view in Yadamma v K Mallesh,[11] wherein it was held that when on the date of filing of the suit, particular right which is available to a party would be continued to be available till the disposal of the suit, though such benefits are taken away later, hence, it was held that the civil court shall have the jurisdiction to entertain the suit for eviction.[12]

A suit for declaration that they were tenants in respect of the suit property and for recovery of possession of the suit property from the defendants and mesne profit was not barred either expressly or impliedly by section 13-A of the Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1963. Under the scheme of the Act, any suit regarding the rights of a tenant including the question, whether a

---

4. Pankaj Bhargav v Mohinder Nath, (1991) 1 SCC 556.
5. Bharvad Chotta Bhaga v Bharvad Jagadahya, AIR 1999 Guj 17.
6. Abdullah Bin Ali v Galappa, (1985) 2 SCC 54.
7. Nagri Pracharini Sabha v Fifth Addl District and Sessions Judge, Varanasi, (1991) Supp 2 SCC 36.
8. Sanker Naryan Potti v K Sreedevi, (1998) 3 SCC 751.
9. Dr. Devidas Lotu Bhirud v Pachora Municipal Council, AIR 1998 Bom 363.
10. Vatticherukuru Village Panchayat v Nori Venkatarama Deekshithulu, (1991) Supp 2 SCC 228.
11. Yadamma v K Mallesh, AIR 1994 AP 272.
12. Jaya P Hemarajani v Rose Elvina D'souza, AIR 1995 AP 189.

person is a tenant, will have to be referred by the civil court to the Land Tribunal and after the Land Tribunal decides the question, the civil court will decide the suit in accordance with the decision of the Land Tribunal. Therefore, a civil court has jurisdiction to entertain such a suit filed by a tenant.[13]

Where a suit was filed by a minor against his father for restraining the father from alienating family property and other reliefs and a question arose whether the mother of the minor act as his guardian without the permission of the court, it was held by Delhi High Court that there was no clash of interest between the minor and his mother and she can become next friend of minor by virtue of O XXXII, rule 4 of CPC. It was also held that the provisions of section 50(4) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958 does not bar the jurisdiction of civil court.[14]

The Supreme Court has reiterated that maintainability of a suit is a question of law. As per section 9, civil courts have jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature unless barred by law either expressly or impliedly. Thus, in a case, when a specific stand was taken that in view of the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 the suit was not maintainable, it shall be a question of law.[15]

Where the subscriber under the Telecom Department did not raise any objection to bills issued by the Telecom Department and the bills remained unpaid for nearly two years, it was held that the civil suit for recovery of amount covered under the bills of the Department would not be barred. The Department would have referred the matter for arbitration under section 7-B of the Telegraph Act, 1885 only if the consumer had objected to the bills.[16]

Where the sum in respect of which the Zila Panchayat issued a recovery certificate to the collector, was not a tax or rent as referred to in section 158(2) or section 159 of the CPC nor it was a sum of the nature mentioned in section 148(1)(a)(b), such sum could not be recovered as land revenue by resorting to a term in agreement between the parties, especially when there was dispute between the parties as to question whether infact there was such agreement between the parties. Filing of a civil suit in such cases, for recovery of the sum due, is the only remedy.[17] Intricate questions of cancellation of sale deed are to be decided by judicially trained minds of civil courts, it cannot be left to be decided by the revenue courts which are obviously not well-acquainted to try such intricate questions of law.[18] If the document is treated as void, the suit for cancellation of such deed will lie in a civil court and the civil court will have jurisdiction to try the suit.[19] A suit for declaration on grounds that the sale deed of the agricultural land was non est was instituted before the civil court. In the suit no relief other than declaration was sought. It was held that the civil court and not the revenue court has the jurisdiction to try the suit.[20] In this case, an earlier judgment of the high court, that the jurisdiction of the civil court to decide disputed question of title was not barred under sections 163 and 171 of the Himachal Pradesh Land Revenue Act, 1953, was challenged. It was held that the jurisdiction of the civil court cannot be challenged in the subsequent proceedings on the same ground.[21] In this case, a suit for recovery of arrears of land revenue was filed. In the suit, no declaration

---

13. Amina Beevi v Thachi, (2010) 12 SCC 679.
14. Rajendra Kumar v Deepak Makwana, AIR 2008 Del 92.
15. Jyoti Ltd v Bharat J Patel, (2015) 14 SCC 566 : (2015) 191 CC 343 : (2015) 4 Comp LJ 199 : (2015) 128 CLA 248.
16. Smt. Tulasi Yellappa Pawaskar v Deptt. of Telecommunication, AIR 2008 Kant 3 : (2008) 1 Kar LJ 582.
17. Mahesh Chandra v Zila Panchayat, Mainpuri, AIR 1997 All 248 (DB).
18. Khema v Shri Bhagwan, AIR 1995 Raj 94.
19. Vishram Singh v District Judge, Etawah, AIR 1996 All 90.
20. Dwarika Singh v District Judge, AIR 1996 All 325.
21. Hari Nath v Raghu Nath, AIR 1998 HP 28.

was claimed in respect of land, that it be declared as bhumidhari land or abadi land. It was held that the civil court should have the jurisdiction to try this suit and the bar of Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 shall not be applicable.[22] Sometimes, it does happen that an application is filed under a particular provision of a statute and it is found to be non-maintainable thereunder, or the court or tribunal has no power to grant the relief asked for thereunder, but the said application is maintainable under some other provisions of the statute before the same court or tribunal and it has power to grant the relief asked for. In such cases, it has always been held that the "label" or the "nomenclature" of the application or petition should not matter and after seeing the substance or content of the application, if it is possible to grant the relief under some other provisions of the statute, such a relief should not be denied to a party. Such a recourse can be taken only when it is found that the relief asked for cannot be granted under the provision under which the jurisdiction of the court or tribunal is invoked, much less when the result would be to deprive the party of a right of an appeal provided against the order passed under such a provision.[23] The Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable under Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950. Reference of CPC in section 6 of Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 is also for limited purpose of indicating that a small cause court is to be a court within the meaning of the CPC.[24] In view of sections 11 and 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, there is no remedy in case a husband marries another woman. However, in common law, a wife has a right to file a suit for declaration that the marriage of her husband with the second wife is illegal and void.[25]

A suit for land is a suit in which the relief claimed relates to the title or delivery of possession of land or immovable property. In determining whether a suit is a "suit for land", the court shall look into the plaint only and will not consider any other evidence. It is an established rule. If the averments in the plaint and prayers therein indicate that the suit is one for land, it shall be so held. As far as the suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell the land is concerned, in view of section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, it cannot be considered as a "suit for land" unless such suit contains a prayer for delivery of possession. But such a prayer need not be explicit. Even if the prayer for delivery of possession is implicit in a suit for specific performance, such suit can be considered as "suit for land".[26]

The appellant had filed a suit seeking a declaration that the decree passed by the Assistant Collector, Class I, in a suit under sections 176, 178 and 182 of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 was fraudulent, inoperative and not binding upon him, on the ground that the defendants had instituted the suit before the Assistant Collector in which his father was made an opposite party and a compromise petition was filed with the fake signature his father, on the basis of which, a compromise decree was passed. It was the case of appellant that no notice of the suit was ever served upon his father, he never appeared in the proceeding, he was not even aware of it, he did not sign any compromise petition and his alleged signature on the compromise petition was faked. The appellant claimed that his father had passed away much earlier and was not even alive in 1979 when the decree was passed. The appellant, accordingly, sought a declaration that the decree passed by the Assistant Collector be cancelled or it may be declared as void ab initio, inoperative and not binding upon him. The defendants filed a written statement in which they questioned the maintainability of the suit.

---

22. Jyoti Ram v District Judge, Saharanpur, AIR 1996 All 28. See also Horil v Keshav, (2012) 5 SCC 525.
23. Jagdish Balwant Rao v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1994 Bom 141 (FB).
24. Saiyad Mohmed Bakar El. Edroos v Abdulhabib Hassan Arab, (1988) 4 SCC 343.
25. Birendra Bikram Singh v Kamala Devi, AIR 1995 All 243.
26. Excel Dealcomm Pvt Ltd v Asset Reconstruction Co (India) Ltd, (2015) 8 SCC 219 : (2015) 4 Scale 403.

It was contended on their behalf that as the suit related to agricultural lands; it was beyond the jurisdiction and competence of the civil court and could only be tried by the Revenue Authorities. It was held by the Supreme Court that the bar against filing of suit for setting aside compromise decree on the ground of its being unlawful does not apply to a civil court. A civil court has inherent jurisdiction to try all types of suits. Accordingly, the suit challenging compromise decree was restored with direction to the civil court to expedite the hearing. It was observed by Aftab Alam J as follows:[27]

> 15. We are of the view that the Revenue Courts are neither equipped nor competent to effectively adjudicate on allegations of fraud that have overtones of criminality and the courts really skilled and experienced to try such issues are the courts constituted under the Code of Civil Procedure.
>
> 16. It is also well settled that under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, the civil court has inherent jurisdiction to try all types of civil disputes unless its jurisdiction is barred expressly or by necessary implication, by any statutory provision and conferred on any other tribunal or authority. We find nothing in Order XXIII Rule 3-A to bar the institution of a suit before the civil court even in regard to decrees or orders passed in suits and/or proceedings under different statutes before a court, tribunal or authority of limited and restricted jurisdiction.

In a suit for declaring Marriage Certificate under the Special Marriage Act, 1954 as null and void, the marriage itself was denied and the Marriage Certificate was challenged on the ground of being obtained by practicing fraud. It was held by the Orissa High Court that there being no provision on the Act to decide such dispute, the civil court's jurisdiction cannot be ousted. The question of applicability of section 24 of the Act dealing with grounds for declaring the marriage void arises only if the solemnisation of marriage is admitted.[28]

[s 9.4] Section 9 and Section 115

A revision petition under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code lies to the high court as against an order made by a civil court in an appeal preferred under section 37 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act 26 of 1996. The fact that a second appeal is statutorily barred under the Act and the CPC is not specifically made applicable, notwithstanding.[29] However, the Supreme Court has recently held that the analysis made in ITI Ltd[30] (because the 1996 Act does not provide the CPC to be applicable, it should not be inferred that the Code is inapplicable) seems to be incorrect, as the scheme of the 1996 Act envisages otherwise and the legislative intendment also postulates similarly and has referred the same to a larger bench for reconsideration.[31]

[s 9.5] Bar of Jurisdiction — Ascertainment

The question as regards ouster of a jurisdiction of a civil court must be construed having regard to the scheme of the Act as also the object it seeks to achieve. The law in this regard is no longer res integra. Wherever there is a complete and express bar on the jurisdiction of the civil

---

27. Horil v Keshav, (2012) 5 SCC 525.
28. Suresh Chandra Nayak v Shantilata Bhoi, AIR 2009 Ori 14.
29. ITI Ltd v Siemens Public Communications Network Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 2308 : (2002) 5 SCC 510 : (2002) 4 Andh LD 47.
30. Supra note 27.
31. MTNL v Applied Electronics Ltd, (2017) 2 SCC 37 : (2016) 8 Supreme 693.

court, an examination of the nature of the act and the provisions of the adequate remedies can be relevant but cannot be considered as a sole ground to withstand the jurisdiction of civil court.[32]

Any order passed by the revenue authority is passed in violation of the principle of natural justice, section 9 of the Code will be attracted and the bar imposed by section 158 of the Land Revenue Act will not applicable.[33]

A plea of bar to jurisdiction of a civil court must be considered having regard to the contentions raised in the plaint. For the said purpose, averments disclosing cause of action and the reliefs sought for therein must be considered in their entirety. The court may not be justified in determining the question, one way or the other, only having regard to the reliefs claimed de hors the factual averments made in the plaint. The rules of pleadings postulate that a plaint must contain material facts.[34]

In a suit, where there are several reliefs claimed in the plaint. If the main relief is cognizable by civil court, the suit would be maintainable. Thus, where the main relief of the plaintiff of injunction and protection against demolition, it was held that such relief can be granted only by civil court, the relief of possession being merely ancillary relief which civil court could grant after taking cognizance of the suit for injunction and demolition.[35] Where the property in suit is situated within the limits of the city and the land was not agricultural land which required to be declared abadi land, it was held that civil court will have jurisdiction to grant relief of possession in respect of suit property.[36]

In a suit for declaration and injunction and for other incidental relief, issue was framed as to whether the jurisdiction of civil court to entertain the suit was barred under the Delhi Land Reforms Act, 1954. The high court found that section 185 of the Act could not be applied to the suit in view of the nature of relief claimed in the plaint and therefore, the suit should be heard on merit. On appeal the Supreme Court held that considering the facts and circumstances and allegations in the plaint, the trial court should decide the suit not only on other issues on merits but also on issue regarding jurisdiction of civil court to entertain the suit in view of section 185 of the Delhi Land Reforms Act.[37]

It has been held by the Supreme Court that it is a well-settled principle of law that mentioning of a wrong provision or non-mentioning of any provision of law would, by itself, be not sufficient to take away the jurisdiction of a court if it is otherwise vested in it by law.[38]

Hon'ble Supreme Court while interpreting the word "jurisdiction" under the purview of section 9 inter alia noted that section 9 of the CPC deals with jurisdiction and empowers the courts to try all civil suits unless barred. The words used in section 9 of the CPC "barred by any enactment for the time being in force" are substituted by "either expressly or impliedly barred", Thus, the word jurisdiction under section 9 of the CPC correlated with the cognizance, i.e., is not barred either expressly or impliedly.[39]

---

32. M Hariharasudhan v R Karmegam, Civil Appeal No. 8069 of 2019, decided on 17 October 2019 (SC).
33. Om Singh v Kamlesh Singh, Civil Revision No.8280 of 2018, decided on 25 November 2019 (Punjab and Haryana HC).
34. Church of North India v Lavajibhai Ratanjibhai, AIR 2005 SC 2544 : (2005) 10 SCC 760 : (2005) 2 UJ 945 (SC).
35. Shankar v Surendra Singh Rawat, AIR 2007 Uttr 15 : (2007) 1 All WC 125.
36. Chandra Shekhar Joshi v Chandra Ballabh Pant, AIR 2007 Uttr 25 : (2007) 3 All LJ 624.
37. Rajender Singh v Vijay Pal alias Jai Pal, AIR 2008 SC 1691 : (2008) 4 SCC 36.
38. J Kumaradasan Nair v IRTC Sohan, AIR 2009 SC 1333 : (2009) 12 SCC 175.
39. Nusli Neville Wadia v Ivory Properties, (2020) 6 SCC 557.

Section 9 of the CPC provides that a civil court shall have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature excepting suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred. It is no doubt true that ordinarily the averments in the plaint will have to be taken into consideration to find out that the suit is cognizable by a regular civil court.[40] The plaint cannot be rejected on the grounds that suit is barred, the provisions of sections 17 and 18 of the Recovery of Debts and Bankruptcy Act, 1993 (DRT Act) as jurisdiction of civil court is not barred in following events[41]—

1. To pass declaratory order as the DRT has no jurisdiction to issue declaration in respect of title.
2. Where a question of fraud or misrepresentation is involved in the case.
3. Where the case would be resolved on the basis of extravagant evidence or trial.

Wherever there is no explicit exclusion of jurisdiction of civil court, the examination of the scheme of act in order to relegate the intention behind such non-exclusion is sine qua non and the conclusion of such examination may be pivotal. Only where sufficient remedy is provided to the aggrieved party and proper procedure has been prescribed to determine the right and liability of the parties, the jurisdiction of civil court is barred.[42]

[s 9.6] Choice of Forum

We have to keep in mind that there is difference between inherent lack of jurisdiction of any court on account of some statute and the other where parties through agreement bind themselves to have their dispute decided by any one of the courts having jurisdiction. Thus, the question is not whether the Odisha courts have the jurisdiction to decide respondent's suit but whether the respondent could have invoked the jurisdiction of that court in view of the aforesaid clause 34. A party is bound either by the provisions of the Constitution of India, statutory provisions or any rule or under terms of any contract which is not against the public policy. It is open for a party for his convenience to fix the jurisdiction of any competent court to have their dispute adjudicated by that court alone. In other words, if one or more court has the jurisdiction to try any suit, it is open for the parties to choose any one of the two competent courts to decide their disputes. In case parties under their own agreement expressly agree that their dispute shall be tried by only one of them then the party can only file the suit in that court alone to which they have so agreed. Once parties bound themselves as such it is not open for them to choose a different jurisdiction. Such a suit if filed would be in violation of the said agreement.[43]

[s 9.7] Order of Court Lacking Jurisdiction to Be Respected till Set Aside

A judicial order, not invalid on its face, must be given effect entailing all consequences, till it is declared void in a duly constituted judicial proceedings. It cannot be said that a civil court cannot under any circumstances entertain a civil suit in respect of proceedings pending before the registrar, co-operative society. Even where exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil court is statutorily provided still on availability of requisite grounds, the civil court can entertain a civil

---

40. Laxminarayana Rao, Mangalore v Janardhana Shettigara, AIR 1994 Kant 105.
41. Prime Cottex Pvt Ltd v Bank of Baroda, R/First Appeal No. 5349 of 2019, decided on 18 December 2019 (Gujarat HC).
42. M Harihavasudhan v R Karmegam, Civil Appeal No. 8069 of 2019, decided on 17 October 2019 (SC).
43. Shriram City Union Finance Corp Ltd v Rama Mishra, AIR 2002 SC 2402 : (2002) 9 SCC 613.

suit on well-defined parameters settled by Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court in Dhula Bhai v State of Madhya Pradesh.[44] The registrar of co-operative society should not ignore the order of the civil court as not binding on him in view of the provisions contained in sections 93(3), 93(1)(c) and 60 of the Delhi Co-operative Societies Act, 1972 (35 of 1972). It will be a dangerous proposition to be laid down as one of the laws that any individual or authority can ignore the order of the civil court by assuming authority upon itself to decide that the order of civil court is one by coram non-judice. The appropriate course in such cases for the person aggrieved is first to approach the civil court inviting its attention to the relevant provisions of law and call it to adjudicate upon the question of its own jurisdiction and to vacate or recall its order if it be one which it did not have jurisdiction in law to make. So long as this is not done, the order of competent court must be obeyed and respected by all concerned.[45]

[s 9.8] Suits of a Civil Nature

Suits fall under two categories: those which are of a civil nature and those which are not. Suits falling under the first category only can be entertained by civil courts. Explanation I clarifies as to what a suit of a civil nature is. If the principal or the only question in the suit is a question relating to a caste or one relating to religious rites or ceremonies, the suits does not deal with the rights of the citizen but with matters which are either social or religious. On the other hand, if: (i) the question relating to a caste or religious rites or ceremonies is not the principal question in the suit but only a subsidiary or an incidental one; (ii) the principal question is one relating to a right to property or office or any other civil right; and (iii) such a question cannot be decided without determining the question relating to the caste or religious rites or ceremonies, the court can decide the question as to the caste, religious rites or ceremonies to enable it to adjudicate the principal question.[46] Accordingly, a suit is of a civil nature if the principal question therein relates to a civil right. The fact that the determination of such a question depends upon the decision of a caste question or a question as regards religious rites or ceremonies, does not take out the suit from the category of civil suits. Thus, where one sect of a religious community alleged certain acts of the other sect of the same community as acts of desecration, it was held that whether such acts were sacrilegious or not was a matter for the community to decide and that a court would only be concerned with such a question to the extent only of its being relevant to questions of a civil right, eg, the right of worship. The issue would be not whether the alleged acts were in accordance with the orthodox tenets or with the previous practice, but whether they interfered with the plaintiff's right of practice.[47] Courts will refuse to try suits where the main question is a caste question or one relating to religious rites or ceremonies. An apprehension that exhibition of a film certified by the board of censors will hurt the religious feelings of the plaintiff and his co-religionists, does not give rise to a legal right.[48]

Where no customary right or easement of privacy is pleaded or proved, the plaintiff cannot get an injunction against the opening of a window by the defendant in the latter's wall, on the basis of a natural right of privacy. There is no natural right of privacy. The further fact that a

---

44. Dhula Bhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78.
45. Prakash Narain Sharma v Burmah Shell CHS Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 3062 : (2002) 7 SCC 46.
46. Sarda Kunwar v Gajanand, AIR 1942 All 320 : (1942) ILR All 821; Thiruvenkata Ramanuja v Venkatacharlu, AIR 1947 PC 53 : (1947) ILR Mad 436 : 73 IA 156; Lalji v Walji, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 507; Pragji v Govind, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 534; Ramakrishna v Gangadhar, AIR 1958 Ori 26; PN Nair v EA Nair, AIR 1974 Ker 51 : (1972) Ker LJ 769 : (1973) Ker LT 297.
47. Hukumchand v Maharaj Bhadur, AIR 1933 PC 193 : (1933) ILR 12 Pat 681 : 60 IA 313.
48. Ushaben v Bhagyalaxmi Chitra Mandir, AIR 1978 Guj 13.

municipal bye-law is violated, does not give a cause of action, where there is no right of the plaintiff infringed.[49]

Where the high court in a writ petition transferred two suits and appeals involving similar issues, to itself and application for recall of the said order of transfer was made by the appellant pointing out that in appeals arguments had been heard and order was to be pronounced therein, however, in the meantime the high court withdrew the appeal to itself and then without passing any order on the recall application, dismissed the suits on the ground that the issues raised in the suits were being examined in the writ petition, it was held by the Supreme Court that the procedure adopted by the high court was unknown to law.[50] DK Jain J, speaking for the Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> We are conscious of the fact that the object of filing of the suits could be a dubious and indirect attempt on the part of Tekchand, respondent No. 4, to derive some undue advantage in connivance with the plaintiffs, yet that was no ground to dismiss the suits summarily in the aforenoted manner. It must be kept in mind that one of the fundamental norms of judicial process is that arguable questions either legal or factual, should not be summarily dismissed without recording a reasoned order. A mere entertainment of the Writ Petition, to which appellants herein were not parties, even if it involved determination of similar issues, in our opinion, was not a good ground to dismiss the two suits without granting opportunity to the parties to prove their respective stands. Moreover, the scope of the writ petition and the two suits also seem to be different.[51]

In the above case, the Supreme Court quoted its observation from an earlier decision in Smt. Ganga Bai's case,[52] wherein it was observed as follows:

> There is an inherent right in every person to bring suit of a civil nature and unless the suit is barred by statute one may, at ones peril, bring a suit of one's choice. It is no answer to a suit, howsoever frivolous the claim, that the law confers no such right to sue. A suit for its maintainability requires no authority of law and it is enough that no statute bars the suit.

In another earlier decision quoted by the Division Bench, Lahoti J, (as he then was), observed as follows:

> Plaintiff is dominus litis, that is, master of, or having dominion over, the case. He is the person who has carriage and control of an action. In case of conflict of jurisdiction the choice ought to lie with the plaintiff to choose the forum best suited to him unless there be a rule of law excluding access to a forum of plaintiff's choice or permitting recourse to a forum will be opposed to public policy or will be an abuse of the process of law.[53]

Where a suit was filed for compensation for breach of contract and a contract had been entered into in Tamil Nadu, it was held that the same is enforceable in Tamil Nadu. Provisions relating to arbitration in section 69, Kerala Co-operative Societies Act, 1969, are not attracted. Suit filed in Tamil Nadu was not without jurisdiction.[54] In a contract, there is offer and acceptance. If offer and acceptance were complete earlier and placing of order is only a formality, jurisdiction of courts would be where the agreement was complete by acceptance. Offer having been sent by post, place of acceptance is the place of contract. Court at the place of contract, can entertain a suit for recovery of consideration money.[55]

---

49. IC Krishnamurthy v U Rajlingam, AIR 1980 AP 69.
50. Abdul Gafur v State of Uttarakhand, AIR 2009 SC 413 : (2008) 10 SCC 97.
51. Abdul Gafur v State of Uttarakhand, AIR 2009 SC 413, p 417, para 18 : (2008) 10 SCC 97.
52. Smt. Ganga Bai v Vijay Kumar, AIR 1974 SC 1126 : (1974) 2 SCC 393.
53. Dhannalal v Kalawatibai, AIR 2002 SC 2572, p 2580, para 23 : (2002) 6 SCC 16.
54. ITK Sundaram v Co-op Sugars Ltd, Chittor, AIR 1988 Mad 167.
55. State of Orissa v Prathiba Prakash Bhavan, AIR 1995 Ori 62.

In KA Annamma v Cochin Co-op Hospital Society Ltd,[56] the Supreme Court considered the question as to whether a service dispute between a co-operative society and its employee is triable by the labour court established under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 or by an authority under the Kerala Co-operative Societies Act, 1969 or do both have concurrent jurisdiction leaving the choice with an aggrieved person to select which forum to be approached? Interestingly, this was a question on which different benches of the High Court of Kerala had expressed different opinions in the past. Even the five-judge bench of the High Court of Kerala did not render a unanimous verdict on this question. The majority had held that such service dispute is triable only by the forum established under the Kerala Co-operative Societies Act, 1969 (KCS Act) and not under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (ID Act), whereas the minority had held that both have concurrent jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court did not agree with the above majority view. Agreeing with the minority, it ruled that, "the KCS Act and the ID Act both possess and enjoy the concurrent jurisdiction to decide any service dispute arising between the cooperative society's employee and his/her employer (cooperative society)". The court also ruled that it is the choice of the employee to choose any one of the two forums available under the two Acts. However, approaching the forum under the ID Act is subject to the tests laid down therein i.e., "the employee concerned is a 'workman', the dispute raised by him/her is an 'industrial dispute' and the cooperative society (employer) is an 'industry' as defined under the ID Act".

A suit for correcting the date of birth in the record would be maintainable in a civil court. In fact, asking for a correction of that type may be for various purposes and need not be confined to the question of claiming the relief (superannuation as per corrected date of birth in the instant case) available under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. Where the suit for correction of date of birth filed before an employee is superannuated on the basis of the date of birth on record, one of the situations contemplated under section 2A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 gives the employee a cause of action to approach the industrial court. The maintainability of the suit has to be decided with reference to the date of institution of the proceedings; and since, on the date when the civil suit was filed, none of the eventualities covered by section 2A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 had happened, he could not have approached the forum under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 for relief. Thus, the civil suit would not be barred by section 2A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.[57]

When the suit for maintenance is not filed under any provision of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, it is a suit of a civil nature. The civil court has jurisdiction to entertain and try the suit under section 9. The prayer for interim maintenance in such a suit cannot be one under section 24 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.[58] Since no forum is prescribed under the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956 to enforce the right recognised under section 18 of the said Act, the only forum available to enforce the said right is the civil court, where a suit cannot as such be instituted for enforcement of the said right, though the civil court in exercise of its inherent powers can grant interim maintenance.[59] The provisions of section 19 of the Family Courts Act, 1984, provides specific remedy by way of appeal from every judgment or order to the high court, both on facts and law, and without exhausting the remedy as provided under the statute, the proceedings instituted challenging the order passed by the family court, ipso facto the proceedings are not tenable. The petitioner is not entitled to file a civil suit for

---

56. KA Annamma v Cochin Co-op Hospital Society Ltd, (2018) 2 SCC 729 : LNIND 2018 SC 10.
57. Ishar Singh v National Fertilizer, AIR 1991 SC 1546 : (1991) 2 SCC 649.
58. Khadal Penthi v Hulash Dei, AIR 1989 Ori 137 (FB).
59. Purusottam Mahakud v Annapurna Mahakud, AIR 1997 Ori 73.

declaration without setting aside the decree or order passed by the family court. Similarly, the petitioner cannot bring any hurdle or raise any objection to the execution of the decree, which is in force.[60]

Civil courts cannot issue injunction order in respect of the action already taken in the matter of grant of permit by the regional transport authority or preventive orders in connection therewith. The only situation in which the civil court can interfere in the matter of grant of such permission is when the transport authorities, which had granted the permit or likely to grant permit are not duly constituted. If the decree of the civil court is implemented despite the express provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, the transport authorities can never grant permanent and temporary permit in future till eternity. Such a decree is absolutely without jurisdiction and outside the scope of the powers of the civil court.[61] Where facts on record, clearly demonstrate that a prima facie case has been made out which requires investigation and consideration towards jurisdictional issue on the question of competence of the committee to decide the question of expulsion of members. The question of mala fide and violation and natural justice were also there. Therefore, at the stage of decision of application under O XXXIX, rules 1 and 2, it cannot be said that the court has no jurisdiction to interfere in the case of expulsion of the appellant.[62]

The ouster of jurisdiction of civil court under section 125(1) of the Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1963 (No 1 of 1964) does not extend to the question relating to fraud or/and collusion. It is limited only to matters which are by or under the Act required to be settled, decided or dealt with by the land tribunal or the appellate authority. Those questions which fall outside the same, naturally should be decided by civil court as section 9 of the CPC. In other words, civil court will be competent to decide disputes which cannot be decided by the statutory tribunals.[63] Where the extent of shares of evacuee and non-evacuee property in a composite property were specified and the property was sold, the jurisdiction of civil court would not be barred to decide the question as to what was the extent of property that was sold. This question was not one to be determined by any of the authorities under Evacuee Property Act, 1950. Moreover, rule 92 also cannot be invoked in such a case to challenge the jurisdiction of civil court.[64]

In Madhavi Amma v S Prasannakumari,[65] the Supreme Court examined the question as to the extent to which section 125 of the Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1963 barred the jurisdiction of the civil courts both at the initial stage as well as at the appellate stage. It was held that:

> Section 125 stands apart from the above provisions which creates a bar of jurisdiction of civil court to settle, decide or deal with any question or to determine any matter which is by or under the 1963 Act required to be settled, decided or dealt with or to be determined by the Land Tribunal or the Appellate Authority or the Land Board or the Taluk Land Board or the Government or an officer of the Government. Further the proviso to section 1 to section 125 excludes such a bar of civil court jurisdiction in respect of proceedings pending in any court at the commencement of the Kerala Land Reforms Amendment Act, 1969. Even while creating such a bar of jurisdiction of civil courts, the law makers wanted to ensure that no person is allowed to abuse or misuse the benefits conferred under 1963 Act while claiming rights as a "kudikidappukaran" and with that laudable object engraved sub-section (3) in section 125 itself by which any civil court or authority before whom

---

60. Shahnaz Shaharyari v Dr. Vijay Yashwant Gawande, AIR 1995 Bom 30.
61. Omkar Singh v Regional Transport Authority, Bareilly, AIR 1991 All 239.
62. Kalyan Kumar Dutta Gupta v BM Verma, AIR 1995 Cal 140 (DB).
63. Maickan v Kanakam, AIR 1991 Ker 316.
64. Jamil Ahmed v Kumud Rajdeo Singh, AIR 1997 All 374.
65. Madhavi Amma v S Prasannakumari, AIR 2013 SC 1384 : (2013) 4 SCC 77 : JT 2013 (8) SC 85.

any other proceedings regarding rights of a tenant or of a 'kudikidappukaran' arise for consideration, enjoins upon such civil court or other authority to stay the proceedings temporarily and also simultaneously make a reference to the Land Tribunal having jurisdiction over the area in which the land or part thereof is situate along with the relevant records for the decision of the question as to whether a person is a tenant or a "kudikidappukaran". Sub-section (8) of section 125 which was introduced in the statute book w.e.f. 2.11.1972 made it clear that civil court would include a Rent Control Court as defined in the 1965 Act. Sub-section (4) enjoins upon the Land Tribunal to decide the question referred to it under sub-section (3) and return the records together with his decision back to the civil court/rent control court. Under sub-section (5) of section 125 the civil court/rent control court should then proceed to decide the suit or other proceedings by accepting the decision of the Land Tribunal on the question referred to it. Sub-section (6) of section 125 makes the position clear that while the decision of the Land Tribunal on the question referred to it should be accepted by the concerned civil court/rent control court which refers the question, the further determination as to the correctness or otherwise of such decision by the Land Tribunal can be examined in the channel of appeal provided in the respective jurisdictional appellate court of the civil court/rent control court.

Thus, the Supreme Court held that the bar of jurisdiction under section 125 operates only at the first instance and not at the appellate stage.

Application was made by the creditor for attachment, before judgment, or movable property (car, in the instant case). An undertaking was given by the judgment-debtor, that he would not alienate it. Conditional order to furnish security and to produce the car was passed. Evidence disclosed that the judgment-debtor had sold the car prior to the passing of attachment order to another person, who, in turn, had sold it to a third party. Application was made by the third party to raise the attachment. It was held that the application should be allowed, since the third party had no knowledge of the undertaking given by the judgment-debtor and was guided by entries in the registration certificate of the car. Course open to the creditor was, to take action against the judgment-debtor for disobedience of the undertaking given by him to the court.[66]

The prayer for disbursal of interest free sales tax loan, either in whole or in part cannot be enforced by issue of a writ of mandamus in a proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. Normally, a civil suit is the remedy in such situation. The purpose of Article 226 of the Constitution of India is not to supersede the normal remedy available under law by way of a suit.[67] Where the dispute between the contractor and a corporation, assumed to be a state within the meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution of India has arisen from general law of contract i.e. where relief is claimed on the basis of general law of contract, and neither any fundamental right of the contractor is claimed to have been violated nor constitutionality of any statute or statutory is involved for determination, the writ court would not be a proper forum for adjudication of the disputes. The dispute between the contractor and the respondent being one arising out of a contract/qua-contract can be adjudicated either in a properly constituted civil suit or by resort to arbitration.[68]

Where it was alleged that the permanent tenant allegedly transferred the land, a controversy involving pretender tenant was not beyond the jurisdiction of the civil court.[69] Where it is only an acquisition of the property by two members of the joint family, certainly the civil court has the jurisdiction to decide the same.[70] In any event, the relief of injunction cannot be granted

---

66. AC Thrugnanamurthy v Jamuna Bail, AIR 1990 Mad 242.
67. Shakti Tubes Ltd v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 Pat 162 (FB).
68. Padmavathi Constructions v AP Industrial Infrastructure Corp Ltd, AIR 1997 AP 1.
69. N Sudershan Reddy v Kannamma, AIR 1994 AP 116.
70. Veerabhadrappam v Virupaxappa Totappa Bilebal, AIR 1998 Kant 346.

by the revenue authority constituted under the record of Tenancy Act and it could be granted only by the civil court.[71]

Civil court has jurisdiction to examine whether action or decision of an administrative authority was intra vires the relevant rules even if the rules are in the nature of administrative or departmental instructions.[72] The payment of the money claimed under the insurance policies in a petition filed under Article 226 is not maintainable. The only remedy available in such a case is institution of a suit before civil court.[73] In the light of the constitutional scheme provided in Constitution (Scheduled Caste) Order 1950, the civil court has no jurisdiction under section 9 of CPC, to entertain the suit for declarations.[74] The suit in civil court challenging the order of termination by the services of an employee of a regional rural bank is maintainable.[75]

[s 9.9] Caste Question

A caste is any well-defined community, be it Hindu or Mohammedan, governed for certain internal purposes by its own rules and regulations.[76] A caste question is one which relates to matters affecting the internal autonomy of the caste and its social relations.[77] If a court does not have jurisdiction, it does not have jurisdiction, regardless of the fact that one of the parties involved, is a gram panchayat or the period involved is very short, or the amount involved is very small.[78]

To determine whether a question is a caste question or not, the test is whether its cognizance constitutes interference with the caste's autonomy. In other words, it is a question which the caste as a self-governing body is entitled to decide for itself and not the court.[79]

[s 9.10] Caste Certificate

In view of the legal position emerging from the various judgments, it is clear that the judgment rendered in Madhuri Patil's case[80] being the law laid down by the Supreme Court is binding on all the persons under Article 141 of the Constitution of India. In revisional jurisdiction, the Supreme Court may take into consideration any change in law as held in Gummolapura Taggina Matada Kotturuswami v Selra Veeravva.[81] In appeal and/or revision, the court can take judicial notice of the law prevailing on the date of the order or judgment and mould the relief accordingly taking judicial notice of change in law during pendency of appeal and/or revision as laid down by the Supreme Court in Karansing v Bhagwansing[82] and P Venkateswarlu v Motor and General Traders[83] the civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain and try the suit in question.[84]

---

71. Kousalya Ammam v Valliammai Ammal, AIR 1998 Mad 287.
72. Anne Besant National Girls' High School v Deputy Director of Public Instruction, (1983) 1 SCC 200.
73. LIC of India v Kiran Sinha, (1986) 2 SCC 553.
74. S Suvigaradoss v Zonal Manager, FCI, AIR 1996 SC 1182 : (1996) 3 SCC 100 : (1996) 1 CTC 257.
75. Prathama Bank, Head Office, Moradabad v Vijay Kumar Goel, (1989) 4 SCC 441.
76. Abdul Kadir v Dharma, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 190.
77. Appaya v Padappa, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 122, 130; Nagindas v Somnath, AIR 1932 Bom 122 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 242.
78. State of Gujarat v Rajesh Kumar, AIR 1996 SC 2664 : (1996) 5 SCC 477.
79. Murari v Suba, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 725, 727.
80. Kumari Madhuri Patil v Addl. Commr, AIR 1995 SC 94 : (1994) 6 SCC 241 : JT (1994) 5 SC 488 : (1994) 28 ATC 259.
81. Gummolapura Taggina Matada Kotturuswami v Selra Veeravva, AIR 1959 SC 577.
82. Karansing v Bhagwansing, (1965) 7 SCC 559.
83. PVenkateswarlu v Motor and General Traders, AIR 1975 SC 1409 : (1975) 1 SCC 770 : (1975) SCR 3 958.
84. Pralhad Banduji Lodhi v Collector & the Disrict Magistrate, AIR 2001 Bom 416.

The question as to who is a member of the Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe is governed by the President's Order issued under Articles 341 and 342 of the Constitution. A person is a member of the Scheduled Caste if the caste to which he belongs is included in the list contained in the constitution (Scheduled Castes) Order, 1950 as amended from time to time. Similarly, a person is a member of the Scheduled Tribe if the tribe to which he belongs is included in the Constitution (Scheduled Tribes) Order, 1950 as amended from time to time. The Constitution imparts finality and exhaustiveness to these orders and it is the President's notification issued under these Articles which is to determine who is deemed to be a member of a Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe. The courts have no power to go beyond the orders and a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court has held that the courts cannot hold any inquiry or to let in any evidence to determine whether or not any particular community falls within the order or not.[85]

In the undernoted cases,[86] it has been held that such questions do not fall within the domain of civil courts.

[s 9.11] Suits in Which the Principal Question Is a Caste Question, Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature

A resolution by a caste depriving its members of man-pan invitation or an invitation to the caste dinner or to munj or other ceremonies for an alleged breach of a caste rule does not entitle the excluded member to seek a remedy from a civil court.[87] Neither can a court compel barbers attached to the caste to shave a casteman,[88] nor can it compel other castemen to go to the house of a casteman on the occasion of death in his family and assist him in the removal of the dead body, though in doing so they may break a caste rule;[89] nor can it compel a defaulting member to pay to the caste a contribution levied by a caste resolution on certain auspicious occasions.[90] The reason is that these are social privileges as against legal rights and as such are matters of caste autonomy which the caste can deny or enforce. The question as to the status of a caste also is not one for the court to decide. Hence, the question whether bhumidars are brahmins or not is one which has to be decided by the bhumidars themselves and relatively by the other sections of the Hindu society and not by the court.[91]

[s 9.12] Expulsion from Caste

Exclusion from social privileges such as caste dinners, etc. and expulsion from the caste are two different concepts and involve different considerations. The former deprives the aggrieved person of a social privilege, the latter a legal right which forms part of his status. Hence, a suit will lie for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to be re-admitted into the caste and also for damages for expulsion from the caste.[92] The general principles applicable to the expulsion of members from a club govern cases of expulsion of persons from caste,

---

85. Palghat v State of Kerala, (1994) 1 SCC 359.
86. Marimuthu v Savarimuthu, (1999) 1 Mad LJ 480 (Mad); UOI v Registrar, CAT, Chennai, (2001) 2 Mad LJ 110 (Mad); P Maragathamani v General Manager, BHEL, Tiruchirapalli, (2006) 1 Mad LJ 480 (Mad) F.B.
87. Raghunath v Janardan, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 599; Mayashankar v Hari Shankar, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 661.
88. Raj Kisto v Nobaee, (1864) 1 WR 351.
89. Kanji v Arjun, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 115.
90. Abdul Kadir v Dharma, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 190.
91. Ram Dulari Saran v Yogeshwar, (1969) Cr LJ 133.
92. Jagganath v Akali, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 463.

and those principles, so far as relevant, require that the expulsion must be in accordance with rules of natural justice.[93] The important question is whether there has been due inquiry.[94] A suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs were wrongfully excluded from the membership of a community by the chief priest, and for a declaration of their rights to property and other privileges is a suit of a civil nature;[95] but, to entitle the plaintiff to a decree, it must be shown that his ex-communication was wrongful, and the court will in such cases enquire into the validity of the sentence of ex-communication. Ex-communication is wrongful, if a member is expelled from the caste without opportunity of explanation being offered to him.[96] It is also wrongful if a member is expelled for an alleged breach of a caste rule which, as a matter of fact, he has not broken.[97] In the mofussil of Bombay, however, a suit does not lie for restoration to caste, the cognizance of such a suit being expressly barred by Bombay Regulation Act 2 of 1827, section 21;[98] but, a suit is maintainable for "damages" on account of an alleged injury to the caste and character of the plaintiff arising from some illegal act or unjustifiable conduct of the other party.[99]

[s 9.13] Suits in Which the Principal Question Relates to Religious Rites or Ceremonies Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature

Accordingly, a suit will not lie to establish a right to parade bullocks on certain days;[100] but, a declaratory suit in respect of a right to run a customary bull race during the thaimasi month in front of a temple and for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with that right, even though such a right is not one of any office or in relation to the right of worship in the temple has been held to be maintainable on the ground that it deals with a right of a civil nature.[101] A suit to compel pujaris to adorn an idol at certain seasons,[102] or to install it in a particular temple instead of in another[103] is not maintainable. There is no right of a civil nature involved in these cases, and the court will not pronounce on any religious doctrine unless it is necessary to do so in order to determine rights of property.[104] Where the right of worship was not in dispute but the area of controversy relates to the rituals of following baptism by immersion on personal confession of faith and breaking of bread on the first day of the week in the commemoration of Lord's death, the dispute related merely to the performance of rituals, and the suit in civil court was not maintainable, as performance of mere rituals is not a civil right enforceable in civil court. The civil court has no jurisdiction to decide the question of rituals in temple except in so far as decision of such question is incidental to decision of civil

---

93. Ratansey v Meghji, AIR 1934 Bom 43 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 901; Abdul Razak v Adam Usman, AIR 1935 Bom 35 : (1935) 37 Bom LR 603.
94. Ambalal Sarabhai v Phiroz, AIR 1939 Bom 35 : (1938) 40 Bom LR 1213.
95. Mansoorali v Taiyabali, AIR 1935 Ngp 156.
96. Appaya v Padappa, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 122; Keshavlal v Bai Girja, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 13, pp 22–23; Vallabha v Madhusudanan, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 495; Ganapati v Bharati, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 222.
97. Krishnasami v Virasami, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 133.
98. Nathu v Keshawji, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 174.
99. As to defamation for expulsion from caste, see the cases : Raghunath v Janardan, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 599; Nathu v Keshawji, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 174; Gobind Das v Bishamber Das, AIR 1917 PC 203 : (1917) ILR 39 All 561 : 44 IA 192.
100. Rama v Shivram, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 116.
101. Srinivasalu Naidu v K Munnuswami Naidu, AIR 1967 Mad 451.
102. Vasudev v Vamanji, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 80.
103. Radha Krishna Das v Ramana Swami, AIR 1949 Ori 1; Loke Nath v Dasarath, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 1072.
104. Advocate-General of Bombay v Yusuf Ali, AIR 1921 Bom 338 : (1922) 24 Bom LR 1060.

rights.[105] A suit to have it decided whether the satpanth cult is within the Vedic religion, or not, or is abhorrent to the feelings of the leva patidar community as a whole is not a suit of a civil nature.[106]

[s 9.14] Suits for Vindication of Mere Dignity Attached to an Office Are Not Suits of a Civil Nature

A claim by a swami (arch-priest) that he is entitled to be carried on a high road of a town or village in a palanquin on ceremonial occasions will not be entertained by a civil court.[107] What is claimed by the plaintiff in such a case is a mere mark of honour appended to the office of a swami. Civil courts should discourage as much as possible claims of so unsubstantial and objectionable a nature and they ought not to get involved in the determination of trivial questions of dignity and privilege although connected with an office. For the same reason, a suit will not lie for a declaration that the plaintiff as gurukkal or spiritual leader is entitled to be received at a pagoda by the wardens of the pagoda with the honours and emoluments due to his rank on the occasion of the annual festival of the pagoda. The duty of individuals to submit to and perform certain religious observations in accordance with the ritual or conventional practices of their race or sect is, in the absence of express legal recognition and provisions, an imperfect obligation of a moral and not a civil nature. Of such obligations the present civil court cannot take cognizance.[108] Following this rule, the courts have declined to entertain claims made by holders of religious office to precedence in worship, such as a claim to be the first to worship the deity and to receive gifts of rice and coconuts on certain public religious ceremonies.[109] They have likewise declined to decide disputes as to precedence or privilege between purely religious functionaries.[110] It is important to note that the suit in each of the above cases was not to establish a right to an office, but for a declaration that the plaintiff was, by virtue of his office, entitled to certain tokens of dignity or to votive offerings. In other words, the suit was not for a claim to an office but to vindicate an alleged dignity attached to an office. A suit for an office is of a civil nature, but a suit for vindication of a mere dignity though connected with an office, is not; but, if honours be attached to an office by way of remuneration, in other words, as part of its emoluments, a civil court can entertain a suit for such honours.[111] The expression "right to property" does not only mean right to ownership of property. The right to have the offerings in a durgah distributed among certain families, according to custom, is a right to property.[112]

[s 9.15] Office

Suits in which the principal question is as to a civil or legal right are suits of a civil nature. The right to an "office" is a right of a civil nature. Therefore, suits in which the principal question relates to the right to an "office" are suits of a civil nature; and they are not less so

---

105. Koil Pillai v Territorial Commandor, Territorial Head Quarters, Salvation Army, AIR 1994 Mad 27.
106. Devchand v Ghanashyam, AIR 1935 Bom 361 : (1935) 37 Bom LR 417.
107. Sri Sunkar v Sidha, (1843) 3 Moo Ind App 198; Shankara v Hanma, (1878) ILR 2 Bom 470; Andaniswami v Todadswami, AIR 1921 Bom 140 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 590, pp 595–96.
108. Striman Sadagopa v Kristna, (1863) 1 Mad HC 301, p 308.
109. Narayan v Krishnaji, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 233; Karuppa v Kolanthayan, (1884) ILR 7 Mad 91; Sangapa v Gangapa, (1878) ILR 2 Bom 476; Babu v Thukra, (1921) 41 Mad LJ 287.
110. Madhusudan v Shankaracharya, (1909) ILR 33 Bom 278.
111. Rungacharyar v Rungasami, (1909) ILR 32 Mad 291.
112. Sardruddin v H.P.S.M.S. Durga, AIR 1977 Bom 38.

because the right claimed may depend on the decision of the caste questions or questions as to religious rites or ceremonies or even religious tenets.[113]

Explanation II makes it clear that a suit to recover an office is maintainable even though no fees are attached to it. It was so held in a number of decisions long before explanation II was added to the section.[114] To constitute an office there must be duties attached to it which the holder can be compelled to perform. It has accordingly been held that the right which a person claims to lead a horse in a religious procession was not an office but merely an honour because he could not be compelled to do so.[115] So also, the right to hold a lighted torch inside the chariot during a rathothsavam was a mere dignity not attached to an office as there was no obligation to perform the service.[116] A suit for declaration of the right to receive prasadam while the image of the deity was taken in procession was held to be barred under this section.[117] The law on the subject was considered by the Supreme Court in Sri Sinna Ramanuja Jeer v Sri Ranga Ramanuja Jeer[118] and summed up as below:

(i) A suit for a declaration with respect to religious honours and privileges simpliciter will not lie in a civil court;

(ii) but, a suit to establish one's right to an office in a temple and to honours, privileges, remuneration or perquisites attached to the said office is maintainable in a civil court;

(iii) the essential condition for the existence of an office is that the holder of the alleged office shall be under legal obligation to discharge the duties attached to the said office and for the non-observance of which he may be visited with penalties.

It was accordingly held that a theerthakar who had no obligations to perform did not hold an office and a suit by him for honours was not maintainable.

[s 9.16] Suits for Secular Offices

When no remuneration attaches to the office of the secretary of an association (registered under Act 21 of 1860), a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is the secretary of the association and that his dismissal from the office was not justified by the rules of the association is not maintainable in a civil court, especially if the association has the power to alter its rules from time to time. The reason is that in such a case no decree which a civil court may pass in plaintiff's favour could prevent the association from altering its rules and then dispensing with the plaintiff's services and employing someone else.[119]

---

113. Ramachandra Tripathy v Maguni Tripathy, AIR 1951 Ori 64; Krishnasami v Krishnamachariyar, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 313; Srinivasa v Thiruvengada, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 450. See Explanation I to the section.
114. Mamat Ram v Bapuram, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 159; Dinonath v Pratap Choudhry, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 30; Debendra v Satyacharan, AIR 1927 Cal 783 : (1927) ILR 54 Cal 614; Sayad Hasheem v Husai Sha, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 429; Tolapala v Venkata, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 62; Subba Raju v Venkatachariar, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 23; Hira v Bachu, AIR 1916 Pat 215; Luton v Prayag 4 Pat LJ 531.
115. Ramaswamy v Lakshman, AIR 1939 Mad 886 : (1940) ILR Mad 40.
116. Suryanarayana v Rama Rao, AIR 1953 Mad 701; Sarvar Lal v Ram Narain, AIR 1959 AP 307; Ramaswamy v Lakshmanan, AIR 1939 Mad 886.
117. Sivagnana v Chidambara, (1954) ILR 1338.
118. Sri Sinna Ramanuja Jeer v Sri Ranga Ramanuja Jeer, AIR 1961 SC 1720 : (1962) 2 SCR 509; G Naik v Hazania Temple of Shri Maya Quelbai, AIR 1976 Goa 20.
119. Maharaj Narain v Shashi, (1915) ILR 37 All 331; Shridhar Misra v Jaichandra Vidyalankar, AIR 1959 All 598.

[s 9.17] Suits for Religious Office

Quaere (Query) whether every suit for a religious office is a suit of a civil nature? Explanation I to the section stated that a suit in which the right to an "office" is contested is a suit of a civil nature. A suit for the removal of the defendant as a de facto mutawalli and for substitution of the plaintiff in his place and for accounts is clearly one of a civil nature and therefore maintainable.[120] An office may be either secular or religious in its character. The prime concern here is to focus on an office of a religious character, for the question as to religious rites and ceremonies contemplated by Explanation I can only arise when the right to a religious office is contested. Religious offices may be divided into two classes namely viz:

(i) Those to which fees are appurtenant as of right; such as the office of the kazi of Bombay, or of the joshi of a village, or the upadhyaya of a caste.

(ii) Those to which no fees are attached, but which entitle the holder thereof to receive such gratuities as may be paid to him; such as the office of pujari or of an officiating priest in a temple, or of the aya of a math.

Fees are to be distinguished from gratuities. When fees are attached to an office the holder of the office is entitled on performance of the services to the stipulated or customary fees. Thus, a kazi or a joshi is entitled on performing a marriage ceremony to the marriage fee, and if the fee is not paid to him, he may enforce payment by a suit. In fact, a fee is a sum which the holder of an office is entitled to demand as payment for the execution of functions attached to the office. Besides, the fee paid to a kazi or to a joshi on the occasion of a marriage, there may be gratuities paid to him which are entirely voluntary in their character. If a person invites a joshi for performing a marriage ceremony at his place and pays him the fee but no gratuity, a suit will not lie at the instance of the joshi for payment to him of any sum by way of gratuity though it may be usual to pay gratuities on such occasions. The reason is that there is no obligation in law on the part of the person inviting a joshi to make any payment by way of gratuity.[121] The same remark applies to holders of religious offices referred to in class II above.

Before Explanation II was added to the section by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), a distinction was sometimes made between an office to which fees were attached and an office to which they were not. As regards offices of class I, there was no doubt that a suit did lie against an intruder disturbing the holder of such office in the exercise of his office for a declaration that he was entitled to the office and the fees attached to it. Such a suit was held to be a suit of a civil nature and therefore maintainable under this section.[122] As regards an office to which fees were not attached, there used to be a difference of opinion between different courts. The Calcutta High Court held that a suit by a person claiming to be entitled to a religious office against a usurper for a declaration of the right to such office was a suit of a civil nature though no emoluments were attached to it. The reason given for such a conclusion was that a religious office, though no fees were attached to it, was an "office" within the meaning of the explanation (now explanation I) and that the section assumed that a suit for an "office" was a suit of a civil nature. The office in that case was that of musicians who chanted holy songs in a satra at a village.[123] The same high court in another case, where the office was that of a shebait and the suit was by a member of the family against another

---

120. Khalil Ahmed v Siddiq Ahmad, AIR 1974 All 382.
121. Muhammad v Sayad Ahmed, (1861) 1 Bomb HC App xviii.
122. Muhammad v Sayad Ahmed, (1861) 1 BHC App xviii; Ghelabhai v Hargowan, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 94; Girjashankar v Murlidhar, AIR 1921 Bom 209 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 234.
123. Mamat Ram v Bapu Ram, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 159.

member for a declaration of a hereditary right to officiate as a shebait at the worship performed by the votaries at the foot of a particular tree, held that the suit was of a civil nature within this section and was maintainable. In this case also there were no fees attached to the office but voluntary offerings used to be made by the votaries.[124] In yet another case the right claimed by the plaintiff was one of worship of Saradiya Haragouri Thakurani and to make certain offerings to the image installed in the place of worship. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit against the usurper.[125] In all these cases the office in respect of which the suit was instituted was the office attached to a place as distinguished from an absolutely personal office.

The Madras High Court, on the other hand, took the view that a suit would not lie in respect of a religious office to which no fees were attached and that such an office was not an "office" within the meaning of this section.[126] The office in one of these cases was that of the priest of samayacharm, whose duty was to exercise spiritual and moral supervision of a certain class of persons. In a later case, however, the high court followed the Calcutta decisions and held that the right to lead a horse at religious processions was an office and that a suit was maintainable though no fees were attached to it.[127] The Bombay decisions were so conflicting that if an attempt were to be made to reconcile them, it would be necessary to divide them, though no such distinction is made in those decisions, into two categories:

(i) those in which the religious office was attached to a place, such as a temple or a sacred place; and

(ii) those in which the office was entirely personal in character. As regards offices which were attached to a place there was no difficulty or doubt, that a suit would lie though no fees were appurtenant to the office, such as the office of an officiating priest in a temple or of the aya of a math;[128] but, as regards an office to which no fees were attached and was personal in character, such as the office of chalwady.[129] (Bearer of the insignia of a caste on public occasions) or the office of guru,[130] the view taken was that it was not an office within this section and a suit in respect of it was not maintainable; but, in a later case such a distinction was in fact approved of where it was held that a right to perform urus ceremonies and to collect offerings at the shrine of a saint appertained to a religious office and was enforceable by a suit.[131]

In one case, however, this distinction was not observed by the high court where the office was personal and no fees were attached to it and yet the high court held that a suit would lie in respect of such an office.[132] The question there was whether a suit would lie for the office of Khatib (preacher) regard being had to the fact that no fees were attached to it. It was held that such a suit did lie. The high court observed: "Had it been the intention of the Legislature

---

124. Dino Nath v Pratap Chandra, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 30; Gadadhar v Puna Bewa, AIR 1971 Ori 155.
125. Debendra v Satya Charan, AIR 1927 Cal 783 : (1927) ILR 54 Cal 614.
126. Tholappala v Venkata, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 62; Subbaraya v Vedantachariar, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 23.
127. Ramlingachi v Elayyaperuma, AIR 1937 Mad 403 : (1937) Mad WN 143.
128. Lima v Rama, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 548; Gursangaya v Tamana, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 281.
129. Shankara v Hanma, (1878) ILR 2 Bom 470.
130. Murari v Suba, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 725; Gadigeya v Basaya, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 455.
131. Kasam Khan v Kaji Isub, AIR 1926 Bom 161 : (1926) ILR 50 Bom 148; Debendra v Satya Charan, AIR 1927 Cal 783 : (1927) ILR 54 Cal 614, 623; Syad Hashim v Husseinsha, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 429, 433; Narasimma v Kristna, (1871) 6 MHC 449; Krishnama v Krishnasami, (1879) ILR 2 Mad 62 : 656 IA 120; Shankar v Malhar, AIR 1931 Bom 273 : (1931) ILR 33 Bom LR 479; Chunnu Dat v Babu Nandan, (1910) ILR 30 All 527; Hira v Bachu, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 381; Lutan v Prayag, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 53; Gopal Rao v W Siva Ramiah, AIR 1953 Hyd 1 : (1952) ILR Hyd 481.
132. Sayad Hashim v Husseinsha, (1889) 13 Bom 429, 433.

that such a suit should not lie, the same would have been clearly provided for". But if it was a question of intention of the Legislature, it may be said that the Explanation (now Explanation I), which did not occur in the Code of 1877, appears to have been suggested directly by a passage in a Madras decision decided in 1871,[133] which was approved by the Privy Council in a later decision[134] and the religious office in both the cases was one to which fees were attached. The Bombay High Court also held in another case that a suit would not lie for recovery of monies paid as haks or babs to watandars on the occasion of a fair and which were not connected with any office or performance of any function at a fair.[135]

The Allahabad High Court took the view that a mere right to perform Ram Lila (religious pageants) which did not carry with it any right to emoluments nor was attached to a shrine or temple or a sacred spot was not enforceable at law.[136] A similar view was also taken by the Patna High Court in a case where it held that a right to officiate at funeral ceremonies performed on the banks of the Ganges between certain points but which did not carry any fees with it but only gratuities could not be enforced in a civil suit.[137] The Hyderabad High Court took the view that a suit would not lie for a declaration of the right to perform Purohit service in a village to the exclusion of others.[138]

The conflict of opinion between different high courts on the question of religious offices to which fees are attached or not and the distinction amongst them made by the Bombay High Court between offices being attached to a sacred place or not have been done away with by the new explanation II which declares that it is immaterial whether or not any fees are attached to a religious office or whether or not such an office is attached to a particular place or spot.

[s 9.18] Wakf

As per section 85 of the Wakf Act (43 of 1995) no suit or other legal proceedings shall lie in any civil court in respect of any dispute, question or other matter relating to any Wakf, Wakf property or other matter which is required by or under this Act to be determined by a tribunal. Therefore, it is only to those matters which are required, by or under this Act to be determined by a tribunal that the bar under section 85 applies. It could also be seen from the scheme of the Act that the jurisdiction of the civil court is not completely ousted. Even a matter which may otherwise fall under the purview of any authority other than the tribunal is not taken away from the jurisdiction of the civil court. On a careful analysis of the provisions of the Wakf Act it can be seen that a dispute which relates to the management of the affairs of the mosque is not specifically dealt with in any of the provisions of the Act to be adjudicated upon by the tribunal. Further, an injunction is a relief which can be granted by the civil court and that power is not conferred on the tribunal.[139]

The words used in section 85 of the Wakf Act, "no suit shall lie", means no fresh suit can be filed in the civil court in relation to Wakf property and the pending suits will not be affected, particularly when there is no provision in the Act for transferring existing pending suits to Wakf Tribunal.[140]

---

133. Narasimma v Kristna, (1871) 6 MHC 449.
134. Krishnama v Krishnasami, (1879) ILR 2 Mad 62 : 656 IA 120.
135. Shankar v Malhar, (1931) 33 Bom LR 479 : (31) AB 273.
136. Chumu Dat v Babu Nandan, (1910) 30 All 527.
137. Hira v Bachu, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 381; Lutan v Prayag, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 53.
138. Gopal Rao v W Siva Ramiah, 1952 Hyd 481 : (1953) A Hyd. 1.
139. Abdul Rahiman Musaliar v TK Muhammed Sahib, AIR 2003 Ker 84.
140. TM Muhammad Sahib v Arakkal Mohammad Ibrahim, AIR 2007 (NOC) 1104 (Ker) : (2007) 2 Ker LT 56 (DB).

In Faseela M v Munnerul Islam Madrasa Committee,[141] the Supreme Court held that a suit for eviction against the tenant relating to a wakf property is exclusively triable by a civil court as such suit is not covered by the disputes specified in sections 6 and 7 of the Wakf Act, 1995. The court relied upon its earlier decision in Ramesh Gobindram,[142] to support this view. It was further held that going by the ratio of Ramesh Gobindram,[143] suit for possession and rent is to be tried by the civil court. However, suit pertaining to removal of trustees and rendition of accounts would fall within the domain of the tribunal. In so far as relief of cancellation of the sale deed is concerned, it is to be tried by the civil court as it is not covered either by section 6 or 7 of the Wakf Act, 1995. Relief of possession, which can be given by the civil court, depends upon the question as to whether the sale deed is valid or not. Thus, the court held that an issue of the sale deed and possession are inextricably mixed with each other. In the instant case, the suit was filed much before the Act came into force, therefore going by the ratio of Sardar Khan,[144] it was held that the civil court where the suit was filed would continue to have the jurisdiction over the issue and it would be competent to decide the same.

Where suit property had been declared to be Wakf property and proceedings in respect of the same were already pending before the Wakf Tribunal, a suit for bare injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with possession cannot be filed in civil court.[145]

However, it has been held by the Punjab and Haryana High Court that where suit in respect of Wakf property was pending in civil court and the notification constituting the Wakf Tribunal and ousting the jurisdiction of civil court was issued later on, the order of civil court transferring the case to court of competent jurisdiction was proper.[146]

The Allahabad High Court has held that the bar created by section 85 of the Wakf Act, 1995 does not apply to a suit for ejectment of a tenant as tenancy/lease is not covered under the provisions of the Act.[147]

However, a Division Bench of the Kerala High Court has held that the Wakf Tribunal has jurisdiction not only on matters specifically conferred on tribunal by the provisions of the Act but also on matters relating to Wakf or Wakf property[148] The observations of the Division Bench in the above case deserve notice:

> We are therefore, of the considered view that the words any dispute, question or other matters relating to Wakf or Wakf property under section 85 are wide enough to take in within its sweep not only matters which are specifically conferred on the Tribunal by the various provisions of the Act but also any dispute, question or any other matter relating to any Wakf or Wakf property since those powers have also been conferred on the Tribunal by the Wakf Act itself. On examining the scheme of the Act and various provisions we are of the view that the intention of the legislature is to resolve all disputes by one machinery and forum provided in the Act itself, that is, the Wakf Tribunal and not by the civil courts in the State.[149]

---

141. Faseela M v Munnerul Islam Madrasa Committee, (2014) 16 SCC 38 : (2014) 1 RCR(Rent) 404.
142. Ramesh Gobindram v Sugra Humayun Mirza Wakf, (2010) 8 SCC 726 : (2010) 6 Mad LJ 527 (SC) : (2010) 8 Scale 698.
143. Ramesh Gobindram v Sugra Humayun Mirza Wakf, (2010) 8 SCC 726 : (2010) 6 Mad LJ 527 (SC) : (2010) 8 Scale 698.
144. Sardar Khan v Syed Nazmul Hasan (Seth), AIR 2007 SC 1447 : (2007) 10 SCC 727.
145. Abdul Suban v Syed Tharu Hussain, AIR 2007 (NOC) 817 (Mad) (Madurai Bench) : (2007) 1 Mad LJ 138 (Mad).
146. Punjab Wakf Board v Satish Kumar, AIR 2007 P&H 141 : (2008) 149 Punj LR 201.
147. Yashpal Lala Shiv Narain v Allatala Lala Malik Wakf Ajakhan Mus, AIR 2006 All 115 : (2006) 2 All LJ 204.
148. Aliyathammada Beethathabiyyapura Pookoya Haji v Pattakkal Cheriyakoya, AIR 2003 Ker 366 (DB).
149. Aliyathammada Beethathabiyyapura Pookoya Haji v Pattakkal Cheriyakoya, AIR 2003 Ker 366 (DB) p 372.

The Division Bench went on to hold that the tribunal was justified in holding that it has got jurisdiction and rightly granted a decree to the plaintiff to evict the defendant.[150]

Similar view has been expressed by a Division Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court wherein it has been held that a suit for the ejectment of a tenant from Wakf property is maintainable before the Wakf Tribunal and not the civil court.[151] It has been observed by the Division Bench as follows:

> The Legislative intention is clear from reading of sections 83 and 85 the Tribunal is deemed to be a civil court and exercises similar powers as may be exercised by the civil court under the CPC while trying a suit, execute a decree or order. We cannot confine the bar created by section 85 with respect to dispute as to title of the Wakf property or with respect possession based on title of the Wakf Property as suggested by the learned counsel. The word "any" qualifies the "dispute" which would include suit for ejectment of a tenant from Wakf premises. In any view of the matter such a suit for ejectment would be covered under the phrase 'other matter relating to Wakf property'.[152]

But in a suit where the question was whether the property in dispute was Wakf property or private trust property and whether civil court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the Madras High Court held that before settling all other issues, the issue regarding maintainability of the suit should be framed by the court and that issue should be decided by the court as a preliminary issue by allowing the parties to place evidence on record.[153]

Under section 36-B of the Wakf Act, 1952 (as amended by Act 34 of 1964) the jurisdiction of civil court is barred and it provides an alternative remedy providing for Wakf Board to get possession of property unauthorisedly alienated. But the Madras High Court has held that it does not bar the jurisdiction of civil court to entertain suit for possession.[154]

In a case under the Wakf Act, 1995, the Madras High Court held that all the Wakf properties in the State vest with the Wakf Board. It is for the Board to decide as to how the properties should be managed. The civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain and decide disputes relating to Wakf properties. Any person aggrieved by the Order of the Board can approach only the tribunal constituted under the Act and the jurisdiction of civil court in such matters is ousted.[155]

Wakf tribunals are constituted to try the suit and other proceedings relating to the Wakf. Naturally, the bar of jurisdiction provided for under section 84 of the Wakf Act (43 of 1995) will be in respect of such suits and proceedings which are pending. It cannot have any effect on the appellate jurisdiction exercised by the district court in terms of the CPC. The Wakf Act does not in any way affect the appellate jurisdiction exercised by the district court.[156]

Where the dispute between the parties in the suit was whether the property was Wakf property or private trust property as well as with respect to rendition of accounts regarding trust and further as to whether civil court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it was held that before settling all other issues the issue regarding maintainability of suits should be framed and decided as preliminary issue.[157]

---

150. Aliyathammada Beethathabiyyapura Pookoya Haji v Pattakkal Cheriyakoya, AIR 2003 Ker 366 (DB) p 373.
151. Wakf Imambara Imlipura, Khandwa v Smt. Khursheeda Bi, AIR 2009 MP 238 (DB).
152. Wakf Imambara Imlipura, Khandwa v Smt. Khursheeda Bi, AIR 2009 MP 238 (DB), p 340.
153. Sheik Mohammed v Shah Abdul Aul Aulad Family Charitable Trust, AIR 2004 Mad 287 : (2004) 1 Mad LJ 477.
154. Tamil Nadu Wakf Board v SA Syed Massod, (1995) 2 Mad LJ 514 : 2 LW 308.
155. Janab Dr. Hisamuddin Papa Saheb v E. Niyamathulla, (2007) 2 Mad LJ 1069 (Mad).
156. Abdul Majeed Musliyar v MT Mammad Koya, AIR 2002 Ker 71.
157. S Mohammed v Shah Abdul Anl Anlad Family Charitable Trust, AIR 2004 Mad 287.

[s 9.19] Suits for Recovery of Fee Attached to an Office Are Suits of a Civil Nature, but Not Suits for Recovery of Gratuities

It is settled law that if a person usurps an office to which another person is entitled and receives the fees of the office, he is bound to account to the rightful owner for them, and the rightful owner may sue the usurper to recover the fees properly payable to him; but, the case is different where the payments are merely voluntary, and a suit will not lie to recover voluntary gratuities that may have been received by the usurper.[158] The reason is that where voluntary offerings are made, they must be taken to have been intended for the very person who was then actually performing the ceremony, whether rightfully or wrongfully, and, further, that it is quite possible that no gratuities would have been given at all if the rightful owner officiated at the ceremony instead of the usurper.[159] The same principles apply when a suit is brought by the lawful holder of an office against a member of the caste for employing the usurper for performing ceremonies which the rightful holder was entitled to perform. Thus, a village priest may be entitled by hereditary right to officiate and take fees in the families of a particular caste in the village, and if a member of the caste employs an intruder in the office to perform the ceremonies, the village priest is entitled to recover from the casteman the fee which would properly be payable to him if he had been employed to perform those ceremonies.[160] On this principle, it has been held that a right to officiate as priest during certain festivals could be enforced in a court, where such services were remunerated from the temple funds but that a claim to be declared guru of the archakas in the temple could not be entertained;[161] but, a suit will not lie against a casteman for a gratuity which the party might have refused to give.[162] If for determining the plaintiff's right to the fees claimed it becomes necessary to determine incidentally the right to perform the ceremonies, the courts should try and decide that right.[163] The above principles have been held to apply to vatandar barbers who are entitled to render services as barbers on ceremonial occasions and to receive the customary fees.[164]

The cases in which a suit by the rightful owner of a religious office against an usurper for recovery of voluntary gratuities has been held not to be maintainable must be distinguished from those where a suit is brought by a sharer in a religious office against his co-sharers for recovery of his share of the voluntary gratuities. In the latter class of cases, it has been held that a suit will lie, for the basis of the claim in such cases in an agreement. Expressed or implied, that all the sharers should have a share in the gratuities.[165] If the sharer is a woman, she is not disqualified from suing to enforce her right to a share of the offerings.[166]

Dues paid by baqqals and shopkeepers to chowdhris of bazars are in the nature of voluntary payments; hence a suit will not lie to recover such dues or for a declaration of the right to recover them.[167]

---

158. Sitaram Bhat v Sitaram Ganesh, (1869) 6 BHC 250; Raja Valad v Krishnabhat, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 232; Hira v Bachu, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 381; Chunnu v Babu, (1910) ILR 32 All 527.
159. Kashi Chandra v Kailash Chandra, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 356.
160. Ramchandra Tripathy v Maguni Tripathi, AIR 1951 Ori 64; Dinanath v Sadashiv, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 9; Ghelabhai v Hargowan, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 94; Kali Kanta v Gouri, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 806.
161. Tripathy v Tripathy, (1950) ILR Cut 337.
162. Murari v Suba, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 725; Dhadphale v Gurav, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 122.
163. Krishnama v Krishnasami, (1879) ILR 2 Mad 62 : 6 IA 120.
164. Bhagoji v Babu, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 733 : (1920) 22 Bom LR 410; Chandi v Ramprasad, (1953) ILR Raj 144; Khairathi v Devi Sahai, (1974) ILR Raj 131 : 1974 Raj LW 99.
165. Dino Nath v Pratap Chandra, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 30; Bheema Charyulu v Kothakota, (1907) 17 Mad LJ 493; Durga Charn v Rajbala, (1906) 4 Cal LJ 469; Re Venkata Rao, AIR 1954 Mad 346.
166. Kunj Behari v Mst Naraini, AIR 1923 All 425 : (1923) ILR 45 All 437.
167. Barsati v Chamru, (1907) ILR 29 All 683.

[s 9.20] Suits Relating to Caste Property

Where the question at issue is not a matter relating to the internal administration and affairs of a caste, but to the property of the caste, the civil court has jurisdiction to interfere, although there has been a division of opinion in the caste.[168] Suppose that a caste is divided into two factions, F1 and F2, and that F1 owns certain property which stands in the names of some of its members. If these members secede from faction F1 and go over to faction F2, a suit will lie to recover the property from them at the instance of faction F1.[169] Here, the subject matter of the suit is property belonging to one section of the caste, and the claim is against persons outside that section. Suppose, next, that a caste owns a property purchased out of the caste funds, and that it is subsequently divided into two factions, F1 and F2. If faction F2 happens at the time of the division to be in possession of the caste property, faction F1 cannot maintain a suit against faction F2 for recovery of one half of the caste property or its value.[170] Here, the subject matter of the suit is caste property, and the claim is not against an outsider, but against another section of the caste.

As regards user of caste property, it has been laid down that the majority of a caste has the right to regulate the use of the property, and the minority is bound by the resolution of the majority, provided the resolution is not so subversive of the interests of the minority as to amount to a complete denial of their rights. Thus, if the majority of a caste passes a resolution that the oart should not be used for feasting any brahmans, and the minority invites brahmans to a feast in the oart, a suit will lie to restrain the minority from using the oart in contravention of the resolution.[171]

[s 9.21] Suits for Inspection of Accounts of Caste Property

Every member of a caste is, at all reasonable times and on proper demand, entitled to full and free inspection of all account books, papers and vouchers relating to the management of a caste property. This is a legal right which does not interfere with the autonomy of the castes. It is preliminary to a right to assert a claim to property and is incidental to the right to recover property which may be lost to the caste by misuse or misappropriation. A suit to enforce such a right is maintainable.[172]

[s 9.22] Insurance

The dispute was in regard to the consent of the deceased for dating back the policy. Such a question cannot be decided by affidavits or the records alone. The same has to depend upon the evidence that has to be let in by the respective parties for the purpose of finding out as to whether there is such a consent. Even the plea that there was no notice as required under section 50 of the Insurance Act could be agitated before the civil court. Simply because a defect is alleged in non-issuance of the notice, the same cannot be a subject matter of writ proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. Such a question, on the facts and circumstances of the case, can, as well, be agitated before the civil court, when the main issues are contested before the civil court.[173]

---

168. Fulchand v Harilal, AIR 1926 Bom 69 : (1926) ILR 50 Bom 124.
169. Mehta Jethalal v Jamiatram, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 225; Pragji v Govind, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 534.
170. Girdhar v Kalya, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 83; Nemchand v Savaichand, (1866) ILR 5 Bom 84.
171. Lalji v Walji, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 507.
172. Nagindas v Somnath, AIR 1932 Bom 122 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 242.
173. Shardaben Kantilal Panchal v Life Insurance Corp of India, AIR 1989 Guj 1 (DB); LIC of India v Kiran Sinha, (1986) 2 SCC 553.

The claim made by the heir of the deceased for payment of the amount under the life insurance policies taken out by the deceased, after his death, was repudiated or denied by the Life Insurance Corporation of India on the ground that the deceased while filling up the proposal form for the policies was guilty of fraudulent behaviour, misrepresentation and suppression of material facts, with regard to his health. The matter involved serious questions of disputed facts, which cannot be decided in the writ jurisdiction and they have to be examined on the basis of the evidence to be adduced by the parties at a trial. No question of violation of any statutory duty on the part of insurer is involved. It cannot be said that the claim made by the heir of the deceased is either misconceived or untenable, but since it involves disputed questions of facts, writ court cannot go into the question of disputed facts. It could only be decided in a regularly drawn trial between the parties before a competent civil court.[174]

The term "cause of action" used in section 20(c) of the CPC denotes the whole bundle of material facts based on which the plaintiff claims the relief as prayed for. The term "cause of action", therefore, indicates not a piece of evidence on events, but a bundle of events. It has no relation to the evidence set up by the defendant nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for. In the instant case, the first plaintiff entrusted the suit consignment to the defendant, to transport the same from Bangalore to Calicut, only after insuring the same.[175]

That apart, pursuant to the appointment of the surveyor (P-W2) by the second plaintiff and the report of the surveyor (ex A4), a sum of Rs 56,307.55 p was paid by the second plaintiff on 14 March 1983 at Madras, in consideration of which a letter of subrogation (ex A8) was executed by the first plaintiff in favour of the second plaintiff to lay the above suit. It is, therefore, evident that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the trial court.[176]

Under such circumstances, the trial court has got jurisdiction to deal with the suit.[177]

[s 9.23] Marine Insurance

Where there was a breach of contract of marine insurance, the suit for damages against Bombay Port Trust and the clearing agent before the Delhi High Court was found maintainable as the contract of insurance was entered at Delhi and the jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court was invoked against two of the defendants solely on the basis of the correspondence made by them with the plaintiff.[178]

[s 9.24] Interference With Temple Property

Removal or alteration of nemams or religious marks in a temple, which are recognised as the badges of a particular religious denomination, amounts to an interference with property, and is a ground of action in civil courts.[179]

By sections 5 and 108 of the Tamil Nadu Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act 22 of 1959, the jurisdiction which would otherwise have vested in the civil courts to grant relief under section 92 of the CPC in respect of public, religious or charitable trusts

---

174. LIC v Ajit Gangadhar Shanbhag, AIR 1997 Kant 157 (DB).
175. Bond Food Products Pvt Ltd v Planters, Airways Ltd, AIR 2004 Mad 538.
176. Bond Food Products Pvt Ltd v Planters, Airways Ltd, AIR 2004 Mad 538.
177. Bond Food Products Pvt Ltd v Planters, Airways Ltd, AIR 2004 Mad 538.
178. General Commerce Ltd. v National Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2003 Del 419.
179. Krishnaswami v Samaram, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 158.

has been taken away and vested in authorities constituted under the Tamil Nadu Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1959.[180] Where the properties were recorded in settlement register in the name of temple, the pattas were granted under Tamil Nadu Minor Inam (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1963 in the name of temple till the year 1968 and thereafter, the pattas were granted to the defendants in settlement proceedings on impression that the properties were originally given to them and they were in possession of the same in view of the services rendered, the plea that the proceedings under Tamil Nadu Minor Inam (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1963 had become final and civil court had no jurisdiction to go into question of title, cannot be allowed.[181]

[s 9.25] Interference with Right of Worship

Suits for a declaration of the right to worship or to offer prayers at a certain place are suits of a civil nature.[182] It often happens that the members of a particular class are alone entitled to worship in the sanctuary of a temple, and to perform certain portions of the religious worship. Such a right is one of a civil nature, and it may be enforced by a suit in a civil court.[183] It is the right of every citizen to carry on the worship in such methods as he likes so long as he does not invade the rights of other persons. A suit is accordingly maintainable for declaration that plaintiff is entitled to carry on worship bareheaded and for an injunction restraining the authorities of a mandir from interfering with such a right.[184] Where the members of a sect have the right to worship the idol in a particular temple, the members of the rival sect cannot interfere with that right by making alterations or additions to the idol, such as fixing chakshus (eyes) on it or by affixing dwajadand (flagstaff) or kalash over the temple as if the temple was a Swetambari Jain temple.[185] Similarly, members of the Bees Panthi Amnai, who constructed a temple and worshipped there according to their mode of worship, can maintain a suit where such right is denied or interfered with, notwithstanding that adjudication of such right involves questions relating to religious rites and ceremonies.[186] The right to worship in a temple includes the right to take assistance of a panda or other persons, even if such assistance is given for consideration. However, the temple authorities are at liberty to make proper regulation regarding the exercise of these rights.[187]

Where a suit was filed for declaration that the suit property was an old Hindu Hemadpanthi temple of Shri Mahadeo, i.e., a shivalaya which was also known in the past as Siddeshwar temple in which Hindus have right to worship Shri Mahadeo and other deities in that temple, and founded on that relief was the relief claimed against the defendants for not to interfere or disturb Hindus of village in general and the plaintiffs in particular in their vahivat and worship of all the deities in the Hindu temple described in the suit, and there was also a prayer for alternative relief to the effect that the Muslims of that village in general and the defendants

---

180. AVGP Chettiar & Sons v T Palanisamy Gounder, AIR 2002 SC 2171.
181. Chinnasamy Naidu v KS Sengoda Gounder, AIR 2004 Mad 370.
182. Ratan Singh v Bailey Ram, AIR 1952 P&H 163; Mana Gobinda v Sachidanandaswami, AIR 1953 Ori 151, (1953) ILR Cut 423; Kuber Mohapatra v Nilakantheswar Deb, AIR 1974 Ori 21; District Council of UBMC v Salvador N Mathias, (1988) 2 SCC 31.
183. Thiruvenkata Ramanuja v Venkatacharlu, AIR 1947 PC 53 : (1947) ILR Mad 436 : 73 IA 156; Anandrao v Shankar, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 323; Krishnasami v Krishanama, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 313; Vengamuthu v Pandaveswara, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 151; Venkatachalapat v Subbarayudu, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 293; Kalidas v Gor Parjaram, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 309.
184. Ratan Singh v Bailey Ram, AIR 1952 P&H 163.
185. Ugam Singh v Kesrimal, AIR 1971 SC 2540 : (1970) 3 SCC 831 : (1971) 2 SCR 2 836.
186. Dayalal v Pyarchand, (1972) ILR Raj 149, 151.
187. Narahari v Badrinath Temple Committee, AIR 1952 SC 245 : (1952) 1 SCR 849 : (1952) SCJ 310.

in particular be ordered to deliver possession of the said property in suit to the plaintiffs as representatives of deity and of the Hindus of village, in the event, court finds that the plaintiffs were not in possession of the suit property on the date of institution of the suit by virtue of section 19 read with sections 79 and 80 of the Bombay Public Trusts Act (29 of 1950), the suit as filed is clearly barred by law, because the reliefs claimed by the plaintiffs would require the court to examine as to whether the trust exists and whether such trust is a public trust and whether suit property is the property of such trust, and it was not only suit for declaration of title of suit property.[188]

Suit claimed right to appoint competent persons for recitation of Divya Prabandam in Adyabaga Goshti before the deity. Right was neither attached to any office in temple, nor was its non-performance liable to any punishment. The claim was not for a civil right. The suit was not maintainable.[189] A public mosque belonged to Sunnis. Defendants (State and Police Superintendent) restrained the plaintiffs (Muslim members belonging to another community) from entering the mosque through the main gate and offering their prayers, by illegally locking the gate. Infringement of fundamental right to worship was involved. Suit by the plaintiff for restraining the defendants from interfering with their right to enter into the mosque, is maintainable.[190]

[s 9.26] Date of Birth

A suit for declaration of correct date of birth and for rectifying the date of birth, is maintainable, according to a Division Bench of the Karnataka High Court,[191] overruling the single judge ruling in State of Karnataka v Vishwanath Rao.[192] The division bench dissented from the contrary view of the Patna High Court.[193] The Patna High Court had held that date of birth was merely an event in a person's life and did not constitute his "legal character" within the meaning of section 34, Specific Relief Act, 1963. Dissenting from this view, the Karnataka High Court further held that in section 9 of CPC, the words "suits of a civil nature" are comprehensive enough to include relief of this nature, since a declaration that a person was born on a particular date, clothes him with various legal rights, immunities, privileges and powers and refusal of such a declaration may visit him with certain duties, liabilities and disabilities. Date of birth is not merely an event. Declaration of date of birth is a declaration of legal status. Whether a person is a major or minor is a matter of status under the Indian Majority Act, 1875. In such a dispute, the incidental question will always be the person's age in relation to his status—whether he is a major or minor under to exclude its jurisdiction for making a declaration as to a person's age with a view seeking other consequential reliefs.

A connected question with the date of birth is the question of registration of birth. Where a suit was filed under the Registration of Births and Deaths Act, 1969 for cancellation of the birth certificate registering the appellant in a particular village, it was held by the Madras High Court that the order of the Magistrate directing registration of birth can bind only the Registrar and not others. Thus, the suit is not maintainable as there is no cause of action.[194]

---

188. Bashir Abbas Kudale v Shri Mahadeo, the main deity in temple, AIR 2003 Bom 224 : (2003) 2 Mh LJ 246.
189. Sadhu Sri Vaishnavar Nambi Srinivasa Iyengar v KKV Annah Srinivasachariar, AIR 1990 Mad 375 (Ratnam J.).
190. Shah Abdul Bagi v State, AIR 1988 All 1.
191. State of Karnataka v T Srinivas, AIR 1988 Kant 67 (DB); See also State of Karnataka v Shivanand Fakirappa Naik, AIR 2003 Kant 185.
192. State of Karnataka v Vishwanath Rao, (1985) ILR Kant 2460.
193. Tata Iron & Steel Co Ltd v Padala Appanna, (1984) 48 Fac LR 202 : (1984) BLJR 26.
194. Harikrishan v James Trinite, (2001) 3 Mad LJ 291 (Mad).

[s 9.27] Rights of Burial

Right of burial is a civil right. Interference with the right of the relatives of a deceased Mohammedan to recite prayers over his body before burial in front of a particular mosque, is an invasion of a civil right and can be enforced by suit.[195] It is not sufficient for the plaintiff to show that the members of their family have always been buried in the first row of the church cemetery but it is also necessary for them to show that search right had been denied to others though not for so long that memory of man runneth not to be contrary but for sufficiently long to prove that same has acquired the force of a custom.[196]

[s 9.28] Deities

Right to take a deity from one temple to another and to worship at the latter temple is a civil right (customary right). The word "ritual" means "pertaining or relating to, connected with rites". The word "rites" is a formal procedure or act, in a religious or other solemn observance. Suits relating to rites or rituals in temple are not of a civil nature. However, a civil right can be agitated in civil court. There is no "ritual" in carrying or taking of a deity from one temple to another.[197]

[s 9.29] Religious and Other Processions

Members of a religious body possess the right to conduct a religious procession with its appropriate observances along a highway and a suit will lie against those who prevent the procession with its observance.[198] The worshippers in a mosque or temple which abuts on a high road cannot compel the processionists to intermit their worship while passing the mosque or temple on the ground that there is continuous worship there; but, no one sect can claim the exclusive use of the highway for their worship.[199] The right to take out a procession along a highway is not limited to religious processions but extends to all processions. A suit, therefore for a declaration of a right to take funeral procession through a public street is maintainable.[200]

[s 9.30] Education

A suit can lie to challenge an appointment in a school (orders of education authorities regarding an aided school), provided it can be established that the orders are unsustainable in law.[201] On the question of jurisdiction, one must give regard to the substance and not to the form.[202]

---

195. Kooni Meera v Mahomed, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 15; Ram Rao v Rustumkhan, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 198.
196. Varkey v St. Mary's Catholic Church, AIR 1997 Ker 337.
197. Muriandikone v Shri Ramatha Sethupathi, AIR 1982 Mad 170 (Sethuraman J).
198. Radhamohan v Praharaja, (1959) ILR Cut 437.
199. Chandu Sajan Patel v Nyahal Chand, AIR 1950 Bom 192 : 52 Beng LR 214; Sangabasavaswami v Mahanta Swami, AIR 1946 Bom 353 : (1946) ILR Bom 437 : 48 Beng LR 100; Manzur Hasan v Muhammad Zaman, AIR 1925 PC 36 : (1925) ILR 47 All 151 : 52 IA 61; in app from, AIR 1921 All 146 : (1921) ILR 43 All 692; Sundram v The Queen, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 203 (FB); Parthasaradi v Chinnakrishna, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 304; Sadagopachariar v Rama Rao, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 376; Mohamed Abdul Hafiz v Latif Husein, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 524; Baslingappa v Dharmappa, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 571; Waman v Balu, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 410.
200. Palvannam Pillai v Ganapathi Ayyar, AIR 1954 Mad 179 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 552.
201. Anne Besant National Girls' High School v Deputy Director, Public Instruction, AIR 1983 SC 526, (1983) 1 SCC 200.
202. Bank of Baroda v Moti Bhai, AIR 1985 SC 545 : (1985) 1 SCC 475 : (1985) 2 SCR 784.

Appellant appeared at an examination pursuant to an interim order passed by the court in a civil suit. However, interim orders are always subject to final outcome of the suit. Thus, where the suit itself was discussed, no direction can be given by court to the University to publish the result.[203]

[s 9.31] Arbitration

A suit to challenge the validity of a contract is within the cognizance of a civil court. Not being a suit to challenge the arbitration clause as such, it is not barred by section 32 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (replaced by the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996).[204]

No two parties are bound to provide for arbitration; but, if they choose to provide for the forum of arbitration and, in breach of the arbitration agreement, one party rushes to the court, the court must, if the conditions of sections 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (replaced by the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996), are satisfied, hold the parties to the bargain, unless a clear case is made out to the contrary.[205] Therefore, even a civil suit challenging the correctness of the bills so raised would not be maintainable in a civil court.[206] The civil court has necessarily got the jurisdiction to enforce the right of a subscriber under section 7B of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885. There is no provision in the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885, which ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court. It may be possible to contend that when an award is passed, the award cannot be questioned in a civil court; but, in case the central government fails to appoint the arbitrator under section 7B of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885, the civil court does have the jurisdiction to direct appointment of an arbitrator.[207] An arbitrator has no jurisdiction to arbitrate, if there is no written agreement of arbitration as required by section 2(a), Arbitration Act, 1940 (replaced by the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996). Acquiescence or admission of liability by a party cannot confer jurisdiction on the arbitrator. Hence, where the arbitration is invalid for the above reason, a suit can lie.[208]

Where the property of the judgment-debtor is auctioned by the bank in realisation of the debt and is purchased by a stranger auction-purchaser, the dispute between the judgment-debtor on one hand and the bank and the auction-purchaser on the other hand, will be out of the purview of arbitration proceedings under section 70 of the Uttar Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act, 1966, as no dispute between the society and the stranger is referable, nor can it be decided by the registrar or his nominee as arbitrator. Thus, the suit by the judgment-debtor challenging the validity of the auction would be maintainable in the civil court.[209]

The Arbitration and Conciliation Act (26 of 1996) Act, which is a special Act, does not oust the jurisdiction of the civil court to decide the dispute in a case where parties to the arbitration agreement do not take appropriate steps as contemplated under sub-sections 1 and 2 of section 8; that there is also no provision in the Act that the subject-matter of the suit includes the subject-matter of the arbitration agreement as well as other disputes; that the matter is required to be referred to arbitration and there is also no provision for splitting the causes of action or parties and referring the subject-matter of the suit to the arbitrator and that

---

203. M Mohana v Bharathiyar University, (2000) 3 Mad LJ 536 (Mad).
204. Orient Transport Co v Bharat Credit & Investment, AIR 1987 SC 2289 : (1987) 4 SCC 421 : (1988) 1 SCR 147.
205. Food Corp of India v Yadav Engineer and Contractor, AIR 1982 SC 1302 : (1982) 2 SCC 499.
206. Govindbhai Premji Bhai v Chief General Manager, Gujarat Telecome Circle, Ahemdabad, AIR 1996 Guj 153.
207. UOI v S. Sasi, AIR 1999 Ker 336.
208. Gangaram Ratanlal v Simplex Mills Co Ltd, AIR 1982 Bom 72, p 73, para 4.
209. Sripal v UP Rajya Sahkari Vikas Bank, AIR 1997 All 114.

there is also no provision as to what is required to be done in a case where some parties to the suit are not parties to the arbitration agreement, as it has been ruled by the Supreme Court in its latest decision.[210]

The Gujarat High Court has held that where there is an arbitration clause in the agreement between the plaintiff and defendant, any dispute and claim between the parties is required to be referred to arbitration and then section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 would be applicable. However, merely because there is an arbitration clause and/or the bye-laws provide for referring the dispute and claim to arbitration, the civil court's jurisdiction is not barred but the same is subject to section 8 of the Act of 1996. Thus, the defendant filed an application for dismissing the suit under O VII, rule 11 (d) of the CPC in view of the arbitration clause, it was held that the court below did not act illegally because reference to arbitration is subject to fulfilment of conditions laid down in section 8 of the Act.[211]

[s 9.32] Societies

Disputes touching the business of a society were, by statute, excluded from the civil court's jurisdiction. Co-operative societies for fisheries were engaged in catching and selling fish. A suit was filed by one such society, for restraining another from catching fish from a particular water reservoir. It was held that the dispute was one "touching the business" of a society. The civil court was not competent to entertain the suit. Dispute "touching the business" need not arise out of a transaction between the parties. It can be even regarding their respective civil rights.[212] Disputes based on a contract entered into by the society with contractor in the course of its essential business of dealing in forest produce is a "dispute" which clearly "touches" the business of the society, which is referrable to registrar of society and jurisdiction of civil court is barred.[213]

It cannot be held that the registrar or the arbitrator is not possessed with the expertise of a civil court to determine complicated questions arising out of a civil claim for specific performance of the contract. When a special statute, i.e., West Bengal Co-operative Societies Act (45 of 1983) provides a bar and creates a special forum for settlement of such matters, in such cases it is in its wisdom that the legislature has provided for such bar. Such wisdom cannot be questioned by the courts. Neither the court is concerned to find out the consequences. It has to leave the matter at that. It is not for the court to determine the inability or incapacity of the registrar or the arbitrator and the court is not concerned with the same. The court cannot presume incapacity or inability.[214] In the Hebron Housing Co-op Society's case[215] it was held as under:

In the dispute of alleged sale of plot by a member of a co-operative society to a non-member, it is crystal clear that the dispute raised by the present appellant can be resolved by only the board of nominees which squarely falls under section 96(1)(b) of the Gujarat Co-operative Societies Act (10 of 1962).

---

210. Manoharamma H&I Pvt Ltd v Aruna Hotels Ltd, AIR 2004 Mad 344. See also Sukanya Holdings Pvt Ltd v Jayesh H Pandya, AIR 2003 SC 2252 : (2003) 5 SCC 531.
211. Marwadi Shares & Finance Pvt Ltd Co v Kishor Kumar Nagji bhai Mavani, AIR 2009 Guj 81 : (2009) 1 Guj LH 381; see also Mahesh Kumar v Rajasthan S.R.T.C., AIR 2006 Raj 56 : (2006) 1 Arbi LR 615.
212. Dharoi Jalashya MUS Mandi Ltd v Gujarat KMV Sanstha, AIR 1988 Guj 193.
213. Baldeo Kumar Aggarwal v Managing Director, MP Rajya Laghu Upaj Sahkari Sangh, AIR 1997 MP 147; Kusum Verma v Pritam Singh Gulati, AIR 1998 MP 199.
214. Sisir Kana Guha v Ayakar Grihanirman Samabaya Samity Ltd, AIR 2002 Cal 247.
215. Hebron Co-op Housing Society Ltd v MA Macwan, AIR 2002 Guj 163.

> In the same way, when any dispute is to be decided by the board of nominees, the trial court also has no power to pass any order under application Exh 30 or any application given thereunder. Therefore, I do not find any illegality, perverseness or otherwise in the order passed by the learned trial court judge and both the appeals deserve to be dismissed with cost of Rs. 1,000/- each. Accordingly both the appeals are dismissed. Civil Appeal also stands dismissed. Ad-interim relief granted earlier, if any stands vacated. Cost of Rs 4,000/- to be paid in each of the appeals, making a total amount of Rs. 2,000/-.

By operation of the non obstante clause in section 60 of the Delhi Co-operative Societies Act, 1972, the bar of the suit is attracted only if the dispute falls within the parameters of clauses (a)–(d) thereof and the bar of the jurisdiction of the court under section 93 gets attracted in respect of the specified subject in sub-section (1) of section 93 thereof, therefore, the plea, of the bar of sections 60 and 93 of Delhi Co-operative Societies Act, 1972, is devoid of substance.[216]

In a case under the Punjab and Haryana Co-operative Societies Act, 1961, where an order passed by Recovery Officer under the Act cancelling auction was challenged, it was held that in view of the specific bar contained in section 82(3) of the Act, the mere fact that the Recovery Officer may have committed an error in the exercise of powers, would not confer jurisdiction on the civil court to scrutinise the legality of the order.[217] The observation of the high court in the above case, is as follows:

> A statutory clause that seeks to oust the jurisdiction of a civil court shall be construed strictly but shall not operate where the authority exercising powers appropriates or assumes to itself jurisdiction where there is none or to put it differently, the order impugned discloses an inherent lack of jurisdiction as opposed to a mere erroneous, incorrect or illegal exercise of jurisdiction. An order that discloses an inherent lack of jurisdiction or an illegal assumption thereof would necessarily be void and therefore, subject to challenge before a civil court.[218]

Where, under the Tamil Nadu Societies Registration Act, 1975, the district registrar set aside the election of office bearers of the petitioner association, it was held by the high court that challenging election to the society is not permitted by any specific provision in the Act and as such the impugned order is illegal and without jurisdiction. The remedy is to file civil suit challenging the validity of the said election.[219]

In a suit for declaration, where the plaintiff claimed that he continued to be the secretary of the society and prayed for injunction, it was contended that the suit was barred under section 36 of the Tamil Nadu Societies Registration Act, 1975. It was held by the high court that the presumption is in favour of civil court's jurisdiction unless specifically barred. However, section 36 of the Act is an enabling provision and there is no express or implied bar to civil court's jurisdiction.[220]

In another case under the Societies Registration Act, 1960, where a suit for permanent injunction against a society registered under the Act had been filed, it was held that section 36 of the Act does not bar institution of such suit before civil court.[221]

---

216. See also Supreme Co-op Group Housing Society v HS Nag and Associates Pvt Ltd, AIR 1996 SC 2443 : (1996) 9 SCC 492.
217. Ram Murti v Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Haryana, AIR 2009 P&H 111 : 2009 (1) Rec Civ R 662 : (2009) 3 PLR 775.
218. Ram Murti v Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Haryana, AIR 2009 P&H 111 : 2009 (1) Rec Civ R 662 : (2009) 3 PLR 775.
219. S Thamil Arasan v R Narayanan, (2007) 7 Mad LJ (Supp) 425 (Mad).
220. D Dhanpal v D David Livingstone, (2003) 3 Mad LJ 668 (Mad).
221. Victoria Edwar Hall, through Secretary v M Samraj, (2001) 3 Mad LJ 39 (Mad).

In a case relating to sale of plot by co-operative society, it was held by the Rajasthan High Court that dispute with regard to sale or size of plot amongst members is a dispute which touches the business of a co-operative society and is covered by section 75 of the Rajasthan Co-operative Societies Act, 1965. Such dispute is required to be referred to the Registrar under section 137 of the Act. The Act bars the jurisdiction of civil court to try such disputes.[222]

[s 9.33] Removal of an Executor

A suit will not lie for the removal of an executor. The procedure in such a case is by way of an application to the high court under section 302 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925;[223] but a suit for the administration of the estate of the deceased testator in accordance with the terms of his Will is maintainable as it is of a civil nature and is not barred by any provision of law.[224]

[s 9.34] Election Matters

A person aggrieved in respect of election to the Parliament or to a state legislature can seek remedy provided in the Constitution of India, i.e., before the election tribunal.[225] The same is the position as regards election to local bodies,[226] and gram panchayats.[227]

When a district magistrate, acting ultra vires sets aside a municipal election, it was held that a suit would lie to declare the election valid.[228]

[s 9.35] Suit to Set Aside Election of Directors

Such a suit is of a civil nature and the court is entitled to take cognizance of it. The matters involved in such a suit are not matters of internal management of the company.[229]

[s 9.36] Tax

For challenging the validity of assessment of profession tax on individual partners, special remedy is provided in section 86, Punjab Municipal Act, 1911. Civil suit is barred.[230] A Division Bench of the Delhi High Court in Sobha Singh and Sons Pvt Ltd v New Delhi Municipal Committee,[231] had an occasion to consider the question of maintainability of a civil suit challenging the assessment and levy of property tax by the NDMC. Sections 84 and 86 of the Act came in for consideration. It was held that the provision of appeal contained in section 84(1) of the Act provided a complete remedy to a party aggrieved against the assessment and levy of tax. Section 86 provides that the remedy of appeal is the only remedy to a party to

---

222. Hanuman Meena v Chandra Singh, AIR 2007 Raj 76 (Jaipur Bench).
223. Karam Devi v Radha Kishan, AIR 1935 Lah 406 : (1935) ILR 16 Lah 975.
224. Goswami Rameshpuri v Madhukar, AIR 1953 Nag 276.
225. Ponnusami v Returning Officer, AIR 1952 SC 64 : (1952) SCR 218; Durga Shankar Mehta v Raghuraj Singh, AIR 1954 SC 520 : (1955) 1 SCR 267.
226. Mahedar Rahaman v Kanti Chandra, AIR 1935 Cal 10 : (1934) ILR 61 Cal 980; Ghulam Nazamuddin v Akhtar Hussain, AIR 1933 All 765 : (1933) ILR 55 All 1008; Tarachand v Abdul Kasem, AIR 1938 Cal 359 : (1938) 42 Cal WN 441.
227. Jodhi Singh v Vedabarat Sarma, AIR 1956 Pat 205; Re Industrial Disputes see Premier Automobiles Ltd v Wadke, AIR 1975 SC 2238.
228. Maijuddin v Janakiballao, AIR 1933 Cal 492 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 438.
229. Sarat Chandra v Tarak Chandra, AIR 1924 Cal 982 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 916.
230. Munshi Ram v Municipal Committee, AIR 1979 SC 1250 : (1979) 3 SCR 463 : (1979) 2 SCJ 111.
231. Sobha Singh and Sons Pvt Ltd v New Delhi Municipal Committee, (1988) DLT 91.

challenge assessment for purposes of property tax. No other remedy was available to a party in such circumstances. It follows that the remedy of a civil suit is barred.[232]

In view of the aforesaid position in law, it is clear that the civil suit filed, challenging the assessment and demand of property tax by the appellant is clearly barred and not maintainable.[233]

In determining the question of jurisdiction of the civil court, what has to be seen is the substance of the plaint and the true nature of the object of the suit. The case was concerned with the question of whether the revenue court or the civil court would have jurisdiction to determine a suit for declaration and possession.[234]

When the plaintiff was able to get the release of the seized gold ornaments, allegedly belonging to her mother, under the provisions of the Income Tax Act, 1961, she could not, by filing a partition suit indirectly, get a decree to have a finding that the gold ornaments belong to her mother and that she had a right to claim her share therein. If she succeeded in her claim, this would have the effect of getting the order of the Income Tax officer under section 132(5) of the Act set aside or to modify to that extent, which is impermissible under section 293.[235] The proceeding and the orders as contemplated in section 293 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 (Act 43 of 1961) envisages lawful proceedings and orders within the provisions of the Act itself. If such proceedings or orders without any authority or jurisdiction are taken, then the bar to file suit cannot be applicable and in that case the person aggrieved has a right to approach before the appropriate civil court or before the superior court for judicial review of such action.[236]

The law declared by the Supreme Court in Dhula Bhai's case[237] shows that if the statute gives finality to the orders of a special tribunal, civil court's jurisdiction is excluded except where the provisions of the Act have not been complied with or the statutory tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure. But if there is an express prohibition in a particular Act, a civil suit challenging the correctness of the orders passed by the authorities does not lie. Therefore, the assessment of the annual value of the property for the purpose of levy of house tax under the Adhiniyam cannot be called in question in the civil suit. Since the Jal Sansthan has not made any assessment of its own, which it was empowered to do under section 53(2) of Uttar Pradesh Water Supply and Sewerage Act, 1975, it is entitled to levy water tax and sewerage tax on the basis of the assessment of the annual value made by nagar nigam by virtue of section 53(4) of the Act. Therefore, the levy of water tax and sewerage tax cannot be challenged in the civil suit.[238]

The question of whether a suit to claim interest on the refunds of excess profit-tax is maintainable was considered by the Supreme Court. It was held that generally speaking, the broad guiding considerations are that wherever a right, not pre-existing in common law, is created by a statute and that statute itself provided a machinery for the enforcement of the right, both the right and the remedy having been created uno flatu and a finality is intended to the result of statutory proceedings, then even in the absence of exclusionary provisions, the civil court's jurisdiction is impliedly barred. If, however, a right pre-existing in common law is recognised by the statute and a new statutory remedy for its enforcement is provided without

---

232. NDMC v Satish Chand, AIR 2003 SC 3187 : (2003) 10 SCC 38 : 2003 SCR 645 : 2003 (7) Scale 425.
233. NDMC v Satish Chand, AIR 2003 SC 3187 : (2003) 10 SCC 38 : 2003 SCR 645 : 2003 (7) Scale 425.
234. Gurcharan Singh v Gurdial Kaur, AIR 1982 Raj 91, p 93 (DB).
235. CIT, Bhuvneshwar v Parmeshwari Devi Sultania, (1998) 3 SCC 481.
236. Deepak Prakash v Jayanta Kumar Bose, AIR 2003 Cal 153.
237. Dhula Bhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : (1968) 3 SCR 662.
238. Som Datta Bukders Ltd v Kanpur Jal Sansthan, AIR 2002 All 249.

expressly excluding the civil court jurisdiction, then both the common law and the statutory remedy might become concurrent remedies leaving open an element of election to the persons of inherence.[239]

[s 9.37] Suit for Administration of Estate of a Living Hindu Debtor

Such a suit is not cognizable by a civil court not because it is not a suit of a civil nature, but because a suit for administration does not lie in respect of the estate of a living person.[240]

[s 9.38] Suits Expressly Barred

When a legal right and its infringement are alleged, a suit would lie, and unless there is a bar against entertainment of such a suit, civil courts are bound to take cognizance of it.[241] This, in substance, is the rule laid down in this section. The expression "expressly barred" means barred by any enactment for the time being in force. Thus, section 11 of the CPC bars a court from trying a suit in which the matter in issue is res judicata. Likewise, section 47 bars a decree-holder from filing a suit when he can file execution proceedings.[242] Section 67 of the Income Tax Act, 1922 (replaced by Income Tax Act, 1961), section 293 of the 1961 Act, provides that "no suit shall be brought in any civil court to set aside or modify any assessment made under that Act".[243] A plea that a transaction assessed to tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939, is in contravention of Article 286 of the Constitution of India cannot be the subject matter of a suit.[244] Similarly, section 4 of the Pensions Act, 1871, enacts that except as provided therein, no civil court shall entertain any suit relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former government.[245] The High Court of Madhya Pradesh also has taken the view that claims for pension arising under the Pensions Act, 1871, are not justiciable in civil courts by reason of its section 4.[246] Such a view has also been accepted by the High Court of Allahabad[247] and the High Court of Tamil Nadu.[248] The High Court of Punjab, on the other hand, has ruled that such a claim would no longer be non-justiciable after the commencement of the Constitution of India and rules made under Article 309 thereof, relating to pensions.[249] It is submitted that the Punjab view that pensions are basically statutory and non-gratuitous and form part of the conditions of service, is the better view. The fact that such rules can be unilaterally altered by the government does not make any difference. A suit to set aside an award made under the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act, 1925, is expressly barred by section 57 of that Act;[250] and the validity of an award made under a rule framed under section 43 of the Co-operative

---

239. Raja Ram Kumar Bhargava v UOI, (1988) 1 SCC 681.
240. Gangaram v Nagindas, (1908) ILR 32 Bom 381.
241. State of Bombay v Adamjee Hajee Dawood, AIR 1951 Cal 147; Valli v Corp of Madras, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 41; Gangabai v Vijay Kumar, AIR 1974 SC 1126 : (1974) 2 SCC 393 : (1974) Mah LJ 602; Gurucharan Singh v Kamla Singh, AIR 1977 SC 5 : (1976) 2 SCC 152 : (1976) 1 SCR 739.
242. Sadananda v UOI, AIR 1956 Cal 317.
243. Raleigh Investment v GG in Council, 74 IA 50 : 51 Cal WN 762; Forbes v Secretary of State, (1915) ILR 42 Cal 151; Kamkhya Narain Singh v UOI, AIR 1966 Pat 305, 312.
244. State of Madras v Sri Ramakrishna Mills, AIR 1970 Mad 316.
245. Balkrishna v Dattaraya, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 257.
246. State of Madhya Pradesh v Lalita Shankar, AIR 1966 MP 327.
247. Shaukat Hussain Beg v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1959 All 769.
248. M Sajjanan v State of Madras, AIR 1963 Mad 49.
249. S Gurudip Singh v UOI, AIR 1962 P&H 8.
250. Cooverji v Vasant Theosophical Society, AIR 1935 Bom 91 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 1245.

Societies Act, 1912, cannot also be challenged by a suit.[251] Accordingly, a suit questioning the decision of an arbitrator and the order of the registrar under that Act is barred by rule 134 of the Uttar Pradesh Co-operative Societies Rules, 1936;[252] but the jurisdiction of a civil court is not barred where the appointment of the arbitrator is challenged as illegal or that he had abused his powers.[253] Further, an invalid award does not bar a suit on the original cause of action;[254] but a suit in which the existence or validity of a reference to arbitration and award passed thereon are questioned is barred under section 32 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996).[255] A suit by one member against another member of a co-operative society is not barred by reason only of its subject matter having referred to an arbitrator so long as no award has been made. The remedy against such a suit is a motion to stay under section 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940.[256] An action for damages for tort by a member of a co-operative society is not barred as it is not one "touching the business of the society".[257] Illegal seizure of property by officers of a co-operative society is not an act done under the Madras Co-operative Societies Act, 1932. A suit challenging such seizure is not excluded.[258] However, a suit to set aside an order of contribution made by the liquidator under the Bihar and Orissa Co-operative Societies Act, 1935, on the ground that the amount determined is not due, is barred.[259] So also, a suit challenging sale in execution of an award of an arbitrator under a Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, either on the ground of fraud or irregularity in the conduct of such a sale.[260] A suit by a student of the university calling in question an order of the vice-chancellor rusticating him for delinquency is barred under the East Punjab University Act, 1947.[261] So too, a suit challenging the validity of an order with respect to promotion of a student passed by the college authorities.[262]

Section 4 of the Pensions Act, 1871, bars jurisdiction of civil court to entertain any suit relating to pension. It has been held by the Gauhati High Court that section 12 of the Pensions Act, 1871, makes an agreement with regard to pension null and void. A compromise decree obtained in a suit in violation of section 4 of the Act is null and void.[263]

As held by the Patna High Court, the object of section 12 of the Pensions Act, 1871, is to prevent traffic in pension as it is opposed to public policy and if by a compromise decree a division has been made between the parties with respect to the amount of pension, it would amount to traffic in pension and will come under the mischief of section 23 of the Contract Act, 1872.[264]

Regarding the effect of a decree passed by a civil court in the face of statutory bar, a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

---

251. Bharmakka v Mallappa, AIR 1926 Bom 352; Charan Singh v ICCD Union, AIR 1975 All 111.
252. Basti Sahkari Ganna Samiti Ltd v Suraj N Upadhavay, AIR 1967 All 218.
253. Decca Co-op v Decca Co-op, AIR 1934 Cal 23 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 1207.
254. Chandra Bhaga v Bhika Chand, AIR 1959 Bom 549.
255. Mulchand v Rashid Jamshad, AIR 1946 Mad 346 : (1946) ILR Mad 840; Ratanji v Dhiraj Lal, (1942) ILR Bom 452; but see V Nanhalal v Singh Gulab, (1944) ILR Nag 340.
256. Harnam Singh v Man Singh, AIR 1961 P&H 133.
257. Himangshu Bhusan v Nirmal Kumar, AIR 1962 Cal 488.
258. Kakinda Co-op Urban Bank v Chunnilal, AIR 1966 AP 240.
259. Liquidator of Dauleshwar Co-op Society v Hadibandabehara, AIR 1953 Ori 300.
260. Krishnaswami Gounder v JK Co-op, Society, AIR 1976 Mad 1.
261. EP University v Trolok Nath, AIR 1953 P&H 3.
262. Shanker v Principal, SM College, AIR 1962 All 207.
263. Smt. Chongtuokhawi v UOI, AIR 2008 Gau 6 : 2008 (1) Gau LT 396 (Shillong Bench).
264. Baldeo Jha v Ganga Prasad, AIR 1959 Pat 17.

The main question which arises for our consideration is whether the decree passed by the trial court can be said to be "null" and "void". In our opinion, the law on the point is well settled. The distinction between a decree which is void and a decree which is wrong, incorrect, irregular or not in accordance with law cannot be overlooked or ignored. Where a court lacks inherent jurisdiction in passing a decree or making an order, a decree or order passed by such court would be without jurisdiction, non est and void ab initio. A defect of jurisdiction of the court goes to the root of the matter and strikes at the very authority of the court to pass a decree or make an order. Such defect has always been treated as basic and fundamental and a decree or order passed by a court or an authority having no jurisdiction is a nullity. Validity of such decree or order can be challenged at any stage, even in execution or collateral proceedings.[265]

Under the Administration of Evacuee Property Act, 1950, the custodian has exclusive jurisdiction to decide whether certain property is or is not evacuee property.[266] In view of section 46 of that Act, a civil court has no jurisdiction to decide whether a certain mortgage right is evacuee property;[267] nor can it entertain a suit questioning the validity of an order passed by the custodian.[268] The effect of sections 28, 46 and 7(1) of the Act is that even if the custodian decides wrongly that a property is evacuee property, no suit can lie for a declaration that such a decision is void; but if such a decision is arrived at without the conditions of section 7(1) having been complied with, the decision would be without jurisdiction and can be challenged by means of a suit.[269] In view of section 43(2) of the Act, the custodian's decision can ordinarily be challenged by way of appeal or revision provided by sections 24, 27 and 28.[270] The custodian, however, has no power to decide which of the two sets of heirs is entitled to the property allotted in lieu of property left in West Pakistan, because that is a matter for the civil court to decide.[271]

Section 19 of the Public Debt Act, 1944, bars a suit from questioning the validity of an order passed by the Reserve Bank under section 11(2) of that Act.[272]

Section 26 of the Haryana Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1972, bars jurisdiction of civil court. Therefore, the validity of an order declaring surplus area under the Act could be challenged only before the forum provided under the Act. Thus, a suit for declaration that the plaintiffs are owners and in possession of the suit land and the order declaring it as surplus was ineffective, inoperative and violative of natural justice is not maintainable.[273] Arijit Pasayat J, speaking for the division bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 17. The principles culled out from various decisions of this Court are that even when the statute has given finality to the orders of the special tribunal, the civil court's jurisdiction can be regarded as having been excluded if there is adequate remedy to do what the civil court would normally do in a suit. Section 26(1)(d) on the other hand specifically excludes jurisdiction of the civil court so far as matters which are required to be settled, decided or dealt with by the Financial Commissioner, the Commissioner, Collector or Prescribed

---

265. Balwant N Viswamitra v Yadav Sadashiv, AIR 2004 SC 4377 : (2004) 8 SCC 706 [CK Thakker J speaking for the bench].
266. Ram Gopal Reddy v Addl Custodian, AIR 1966 SC 1438, 1440; Bibi Abeda Khatoon v Assistant Custodian, AIR 1966 Pat 29; Mauji Ram Ram Rikh v UOI, AIR 1969 P&H 365; Abdul Satar v Manilal, AIR 1970 Guj 12, 18; Nasiban v Managing Officer, Evacuee Property, AIR 1972 Pat 248.
267. Custodian General, Delhi v Rakhi Ram, AIR 1960 P&H 163; Zakiuddin v Deputy Asst. Custodian, AIR 1963 Pat 11.
268. Zakhi v State of Bihar, AIR 1953 Pat 112.
269. Bibi Abeda Khatoon v Asst. Custodian, AIR 1966 Pat 29.
270. UOI v Raghav Rao, AIR 1965 AP 337.
271. Faqir Singh v Gurbachan Kaur, AIR 1961 P&H 16.
272. Vasudev v National Savings Bank, AIR 1953 Bom 209.
273. Devinder Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2850 : (2006) 5 SCC 720.

> Authority. The entitlement, choice of land and the allotment are matters which are to be dealt with specifically by the authorities under the Act. Additionally, Section 18 provides a forum to ventilate the grievances under the Act in respect of several matters. This is a case of exclusion of the remedy in certain contingencies. It is not a case where the controversy cannot be resolved by the forum provided under the Act. Further in case of any grievance, the validity of the order could have been questioned before the forum provided.[274]

A suit under section 70 of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948, raising the question of whether a tenant was a protected tenant under the Act is barred.[275] Indeed, section 85A of the Act bars the jurisdiction of civil courts in all matters to be decided by the mamlatdar and other authorities under the Act.[276] Sections 3(4) and 16 of the UP (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, 1947, bar the jurisdiction of the civil courts in matters dealt with under those provisions.[277] A suit for eviction of a tenant is similarly barred by section 242 read with section 180 of the Uttar Pradesh Tenancy Act, 1939.[278] Section 16 of Karnataka Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1974, bars the jurisdiction of civil court to determine whether there are any unauthorised occupants and as such are not liable to be evicted.[279] Disputes as regards recovery of arrears of rents due from a tenant are, likewise, excluded from the jurisdiction of civil courts by sections 9(1) and (2) of the Orissa Tenants Relief Act, 1955.[280] Section 50 of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, expressly provides that no civil court shall entertain any suit in respect of matters which the controller is empowered by or under the Act to decide. Since the controller can decide the dispute in respect of a claim by a sub-tenant to a statutory tenancy, a suit by such a sub-tenant for injunction restraining the landlord or the tenant from taking possession of the premise in his possession, cannot lie in a civil court.[281] Likewise, a tenant's suit for an injunction restraining the landlord from forcibly taking possession of part of the leased premises is in effect a suit for recovery of possession and is barred under section 28 of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947.[282] That section infact bars the civil court's jurisdiction in all cases where the dispute is between a landlord and a tenant.[283] Under the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, a suit for ejectment of a tenant lies before the controller and not before a civil court.[284] Section 16 of the Uttar Pradesh (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, 1947, bars a suit challenging an order passed under it either by the state government or the district magistrate.[285] A suit for arrears of rent or for sums recoverable under section 14 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887, is exclusively triable by revenue courts under its section 77(3).[286]

---

274. Devinder Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2850, para 17, at p 2855 : (2006) 5 SCC 720.
275. Trimbak v Gangaram, AIR 1953 Bom 241.
276. Bhimaji Shankar Kulkarni v Dundappa, AIR 1966 SC 166; AAA Dadabhai v Hiralal, AIR 1965 Guj 131; Uttamchand v Vishwanath, AIR 1974 Bom 28 : 75 Bom LR 512; Noor Mohd. v Fakirappa, AIR 1978 SC 1217 : (1978) 3 SCC 188 : 1978 SCR (3) 789.
277. Ram Swarup v Shikar Chand, AIR 1966 SC 893, 897; Mangal Prasad v Tara Singh, AIR 1971 All 378; Ramji Das v Trilok Chand, (1970) 1 SCC 566.
278. Kedarnath v Jamuna, AIR 1965 All 116, 120.
279. B Sharma Rao H Ganeshmal v Head Quarters Asst., (1998) 9 SCC 577.
280. Gajendra Kumari Devi v Guru Gadaba, AIR 1966 Ori 198.
281. Nand Kishore v Ram Kishan, AIR 1967 SC 1196.
282. Bombay Grain Dealers Assn v Lakhmichand Vassanji & Co, AIR 1969 Bom 342.
283. Mirabelle Hotel Co v Manu Subedar, AIR 1971 Bom 38.
284. Sangat Singh v Perma Nand Bahl, AIR 1970 SC 812 : (1971) 3 SCC 36.
285. Munni Devi v Gokal Chand, AIR 1970 SC 1727 : (1969) 2 SCC 879 : 1970 SCR (2) 363; Asharafi Lal v Mohan Lal, AIR 1970 All 125.
286. Faquir Singh v Gurbachan Singh, AIR 1971 P&H 399.

The position under the Rajasthan Tenancy Act, 1955 is the same.[287] In view of the Goa, Daman and Diu Agricultural Tenancy (Fifth Amendment) Act, 1976, the civil court's jurisdiction would stand ousted by virtue of section 58(2) and its decree is liable to be set aside.[288] The plaintiff cannot, by drawing their plaint cleverly, by not claiming a declaration that the land in question was not shamlat deh, confer jurisdiction on the civil court when by virtue of section 13 of Punjab Village Common Lands (Regulations) Act, 1961, the jurisdiction of the civil court to try such suits had been taken away.[289]

Section 189 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, bars the civil court's jurisdiction in respect of proceedings of the nature specified in Parts A and B of the Schedule to the Act.[290] Similarly, sections 209 and 311 of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, expressly exclude the civil court's jurisdiction in proceedings for possession of land.[291] Section 331 of the Act also bars the civil courts from taking cognizance of proceedings relating to matters set out therein.[292] Under the Orissa Estates Abolition Act, 1952, the collector's finding that an intermediary was in possession at the relevant date, cannot be questioned in a civil court.[293] Section 4(d) of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950, excludes the civil court's jurisdiction in matters relating to properties vested in government under that Act.[294] A suit involving the question as to title to a grove land would not lie since such a suit is barred by section 49 of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1954.[295] Similarly, section 3A(4)(b) of the Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Act, 1947, bars the jurisdiction of the civil courts to decide the question of whether a particular land is private or ryoti land and vests exclusive jurisdiction on that question, is a special tribunal.[296] Section 49 of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1954, bars the jurisdiction of civil courts to entertain suits in matters in respect of which proceedings can and ought to be taken under the Act.[297] Also, by virtue of section 257 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959, a suit is not maintainable in respect of matters covered by its section 131(1).[298] Section 36A of Bombay Prevention of Fragmentation and Consolidation of Holding Act, 1947, clearly bars jurisdiction of the civil court to settle, decide or deal with any question which is by or under the Act required to be settled, decided or dealt with by the state government or any officer or authority.[299] Section 46 of Madhya Pradesh Ceiling on Agricultural Holdings Act, 1960, creates a bar to any civil suit. The legislative intention is that the proceedings initiated under the provision of the Madhya Pradesh Act shall be pursued only in the manner provided thereunder, namely, right of appeal and right of revision, and the jurisdiction of the civil court has been barred to impugn any question settled or decision made or matter dealt with by the competent authority under the Act.[300] Section 6C of Madhya Pradesh Ceiling on Agricultural Holdings Act, 1960, as amended by the Second Amendment Act of 1972, bars jurisdiction of civil court, where section 6B of the Act applies and mandates that civil court's 287. Mohanlal v Ratna, AIR 1971 Raj 164.

288. Judith Fernandes v Conceicao Antonio Fernandes, AIR 1996 SC 2821 : (1996) 10 SCC 401.
289. Ram Singh v Gram Panchayat Mehal Kalan, (1986) 4 Supp SCC 364.
290. CV Subbayya v P Anjayya, AIR 1972 SC 1421, 1427 : (1972) 1 SCC 521 : (1972) 3 SCR 172.
291. Bankey Singh v Ram Sabad, AIR 1966 All 367.
292. Ram Awalamb v Jata Shankar, AIR 1969 All 526 (FB) : (1968) All LJ 1108.
293. Krishna Chandra v Hemamani, AIR 1971 Ori 140.
294. Raj Kishore Prasad v Ram Pratap Pandey, AIR 1967 SC 801.
295. Dalel v Baroo, AIR 1967 All 59, 61 (FB).
296. Govindasami Pillai v TM Srinivasa Chettiar, AIR 1969 Mad 172.
297. Bikrama Singh v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1970 All 344 (FB) : (1969) All LJ 748.
298. Nathuram Arjun v Siyasharan Harprasad, AIR 1970 MP 79, 81.
299. Shevantabai Maruti Kalhatkar v Ramu Rakhamaji Kalhatkar, (1998) 8 SCC 76.
300. Sooraj v SDO Delhi, (1995) 2 SCC 45.

jurisdiction could be taken away in respect of title of suit to which section 6B applies. Thus, the jurisdiction of civil court is barred only in respect of those cases where section 6B of the Act applies.[301] Since there is a special procedure provided in the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, by necessary implication, the civil court under section 9 of the CPC has been prohibited to take cognizance of the objections arising under the Act for determination of the compensation for the land acquired under the Act.[302]

Where the plaintiff filed a suit for declaration of his right title over the suit land, recovery of possession after evicting the defendants therefrom and for a declaration that the orders passed by the Tehsildar are illegal and not binding on the plaintiff, a question arose whether the suit is barred in view of section 67 of the Orissa Land Reforms Act, 1960. The Orissa High Court observed in the case as follows:

> 8. The normal rule of law is that the civil courts have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature except those of which cognizance by them is either expressly or impliedly excluded. Such exclusion is not to be readily inferred, the rule of construction being that every presumption should be made in favour of the existence rather than the exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil courts. Under that principle the burden to prove exclusion of jurisdiction is on the party who so contends. In the present case, the appellants pleaded that the suit was not maintainable in view of the bar provided under Section 67 of the OLR Act. Orissa Land Reforms Act is a Special Revenue Act where authorities have been contemplated to decide matters relating to the said Act and, therefore, a provision in Section 67 of the OLR Act has been created putting a bar on the jurisdiction of the civil court to try and decide matters, which are within the competency of the OLR courts. However, it has been settled through judicial pronouncements that where only a part of the relief claimed can be granted by the tribunal situated under the Special Act, the civil court would have jurisdiction to entertain the suit for the rest of the reliefs. It has also been settled that even if jurisdiction is excluded, the civil courts have jurisdiction to examine into cases where the provisions of the Act have not been complied with, or the statutory tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure.[303]

A civil court cannot entertain a suit whereby a person alleging to be the proprietor of land claims bhumidari rights therein in view of section 185(1) of the Delhi Land Reforms Act, 1954.[304] Section 21 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1956, bars the civil court from entertaining suits relating to matters mentioned in sections 17 and 18 of the Act.[305] Suits relating to the administration or management of a religious and charitable trust are barred by sections 93 and 57 of the Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1951;[306] but a suit by the trustees against a stranger to the trust is not.[307] A suit by a trustee against another trustee who has been removed from trusteeship for possession of trust property is not barred under section 93 of the Madras Act.[308] A civil court has no jurisdiction to determine under the Madras Town Planning Act, 1920, the liability of properties to betterment charges.[309] A civil court cannot entertain a suit for setting aside or modifying assessment under the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939.[310] A civil court has no jurisdiction to decide under which item

---

301. Kashiram v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1996 MP 247.
302. State of Mizoram v Biakchhawna, (1995) 1 SCC 156.
303. Raghunath Jena v Adkikanda Panda, 2008 (4) Civil Court Cases 126 (Orissa).
304. Hatti v Sunder Singh, AIR 1971 SC 2320 : (1971) 2 SCC 841.
305. Laxmi Devi v Akul Mahato, AIR 1972 Cal 104.
306. State of Madras v K Melamatam, AIR 1965 SC 1570.
307. SNP Nadar v Pillai Yadi Pillavar Temple Charity, AIR 1971 Mad 253, at p 257; Gadadhar v Purna Bewa, AIR 1971 Ori 155.
308. M Venkata Ramana v Sri Rama Mandiram, AIR 1966 AP 197.
309. Bala Krishna Mehta v Corp of Madras, AIR 1962 Mad 7.
310. Palanisami v State of Madras, AIR 1960 Mad 8; see also section 20, Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946; Kamala Mills v State of Bombay, AIR 1965 SC 1942.

in the schedule to the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, octroi duty is leviable, that power being with the authorities constituted under the Act.[311] A suit for injunction against the municipality praying for restraint from recovering taxes is not maintainable before the civil court, since the special remedy is provided under the Maharashtra Municipalities Act, 1965. The very object of the special machinery or forum in a taxing statute is to have summary and quick disposal of the matters so that the government or local body can collect taxes according to law without being forced to file a suit against the tax-payer.[312] The jurisdiction of civil courts to try matters for which provision is made under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, is taken away by sections 4 and 9 of the Act.[313] A civil court also cannot entertain a suit challenging the correctness of the decision of the authority constituted under section 20 of the Minimum Wages Act, 1948.[314] Having regard to sections 22(d) and 15(2) of the Payment of Wages Act, 1936, a civil court cannot entertain a suit by an employee for his wages after expiry of the period of limitation prescribed by section 15(2) or after the authority has declined to condone the delay.[315] Section 110F of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, ousts the jurisdiction of civil courts to entertain claims of compensation triable by the tribunals appointed thereunder.[316] Section 19 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, bars a suit in respect of matters to be dealt with thereunder by the commissioner appointed under the Act.[317]

Under some enactments, the bar imposed on the jurisdiction of civil court is not total but partial. Sub-section (4) of section 3 of the Gujarat Public Moneys (Recovery of Dues) Act, 1979, imposes a bar on civil suits but only to the extent of any dues under the Act. In effect it is an embarge against the creditor rather than the debtor. However, the second part of the above noted sub-section provides that no injunction shall be granted by the civil court to restrain the action taken or intended to be taken under the Act.[318] Explaining the point, RS Garg J observed as follows:

> 8. The intention of the legislature was not to put an absolute ban on the rights of a debtor to approach to the civil court. This intention of the legislature, from the language employed in the later part of sub-section (4) simply says that a civil court, even if it assumes jurisdiction and the suit is held to be maintainable, then too, such civil court would not be entitled to grant an injunction in favour of such plaintiff. The intention of the legislature behind using such language was that let debtor go to the civil court, have his litigation, enjoy luxury of the litigation, but he shall not be entitled to an injunction. Because of the non-grant of the injunction, the Collector, on the other hand, shall be entitled to proceed with the recovery which is the main object of the Act.[319]

The cognizance of a suit by a civil court may also be impliedly barred. Thus, a suit by a "proclaimed" person, whose property has been attached and sold under sections 87 and 88 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (replaced with Civil Procedure Code, 1908), against the auction purchaser for its restoration is impliedly barred by the provisions of that Code, the remedies of such a "proclaimed" person being limited to those provided for in the

---

311. Kalash Nath v Batala Municipality, AIR 1962 P&H 389 (FB).
312. Gandhi Agencies v Municipal Council, Barshi, AIR 1995 Bom 169.
313. Bootan Bai v Durga Prasad, AIR 1959 MP 410; Bharawan Bai v Lila Ram, AIR 1963 P&H 118; DCG Mills Co. v Kota Municipality, AIR 1978 Raj 177.
314. Pabhajan Tea Co v Dy. Commr, AIR 1963 Assam 62 (FB).
315. Kewalram v R Manohardas, AIR 1965 Bom 185.
316. Thomas v Hotz Hotels Ltd, AIR 1969 Del 3.
317. Trustees of Port of Madras v Bombay Co, AIR 1967 Mad 318, 325.
318. Azad Ice Factory v Gujarat Industrial Investment Corp, AIR 2007 Guj 29 : 2007 (2) Guj LH 243.
319. Azad Ice Factory v Gujarat Industrial Investment Corp, AIR 2007 Guj 29, para 8 at pp 31–32 : 2007 (2) Guj LH 243.

Code.[320] The mere fact, however, that an enactment provides a summary remedy in certain cases does not constitute a bar to a regular suit. Thus, the provisions of Act 1 of 1871, do not bar a suit for compensation for wrongful seizure of cattle.[321] Again, a guardian may apply to the court for possession of his ward under section 25 of the Act, but this does not exclude a suit for that purpose.[322] Another instance is O XXI, rule 95 (Code of 1882, section 318). That rule provides a summary remedy to which a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree may resort to recover possession from a judgment-debtor; but, it does not say that no suit shall lie to recover possession. The purchaser, therefore, may resort to the remedy provided by that section or he may at his option bring a regular suit.[323] Section 92 of the CPC does not bar a suit for a claim for administration of private trusts[324] and the court can interfere in such cases and see that no breaches of trust are committed.[325] A person who claims to be the transferee of a share in a company registered under the Companies Act, 1956 is entitled to file a suit to establish his rights. His remedy is not limited to proceedings under section 38 of the Companies Act, 1913 (replaced with the Companies Act, 1956).[326]

The jurisdiction of the civil court in the matter of cancellation of registration has been impliedly taken away under sections 46 and 47 of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958. The forum for relief is the high court or the registrar.[327]

A full bench of the Delhi High Court[328] has held that unlike the pre-existing law, where the high court had the exclusive jurisdiction to pronounce upon issues of trademark validity (by virtue of section 111 of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958), that jurisdiction is exclusively confined on another forum, i.e., Intellectual Property Appellate Board (IPAB). It was held that the jurisdiction of the civil court under section 124(1)(ii) of the Trade Marks Act, 1999, extended only to examine the prima facie tenability of the invalidity plea for the limited purpose of examining whether to adjourn the suit, or not, for a period of three months to enable the party setting up the plea of invalidity to prefer rectification proceedings before the IPAB under section 47/57 of the 1958 Act, or while dealing with the aspect of making any interlocutory order in the suit, including on the aspect of injunction, appointment of receiver, or the like. It was further observed that IPAB is not so constrained; rather, it has the duty and the jurisdiction to examine and deal with the merits of the plea of invalidity of the registration (of a trademark) based on all the materials placed before it. The IPAB is a judicial tribunal, which is unconstrained by the provisions of the CPC, and guided by principles of natural justice, but subject to the provisions of the Act and the rules made thereunder, empowered to regulate its own procedure.

It was further held[329] that where special rights are created by a statute, which provides a mechanism for the enforcement of such statutory rights, then, even in the absence of an

---

320. Dewa Singh v Fazal Dad, AIR 1928 Lah 562 : (1929) 10 Lah 338.
321. Shuttrughon v Hokna, (1890) ILR 16 Cal 159.
322. Sharifa v Munekhan, (1901) ILR 6 Bom 574.
323. Kishori v Chunder Nath, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 644; Naginlal v Official Assignee, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 473; Duni Chand v Muhammad, (1917) PR No 22 p 83 : 40 IC 220 (suits against official assignee); Parsha v Lagmya, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 83; Bhiva v Vithya, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 186; Mahadu v Krishna, AIR 1922 Bom 410 : (1927) ILR 47 Bom 95.
324. Sri Mahadev Jew v Balkrishna, AIR 1952 Cal 763.
325. Narayyanáswami v Balasundaram, AIR 1953 Mad 750.
326. Mahadeolal v New Darjeeling Union Tea Co, AIR 1952 Cal 58; Ramachandra v Joshi Mohan, AIR 1920 Cal 789 : (1920) ILR 47 Cal 901; Mohinuddin v Tinnevelly Mills Ltd, AIR 1928 Mad 571.
327. ITC Ltd v Rakesh Behari Srivastava, AIR 1997 All 323.
328. Data Infosys Ltd v Infosys Technologies Ltd, 2016 (65) PTC 209 (Delhi) (FB).
329. Data Infosys Ltd v Infosys Technologies Ltd, 2016 (65) PTC 209 (Delhi) (FB).

express exclusion, the civil court's jurisdiction over those matters is barred. In respect of matters relating to invalidity of registration of a trademark, the jurisdiction to decide the merits of the dispute is exclusively that of the statutory authorities, i.e., the Registrar or the IPAB. The civil court's jurisdiction to go into the merits of the plea of invalidity is therefore barred.

Section 58 of the Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974, does not bar the jurisdiction of civil courts to entertain a suit for permanent injunction to restrain the defendant from letting noxious fluids into a river. The section reads as under:

> 58. Bar of jurisdiction. No civil court shall have jurisdiction to entertain any suit or proceeding in respect of any matter which an appellate authority constituted under this Act is empowered by or under this Act to determine and no injunction shall be granted by any court or other authority in respect of any action taken or to be taken in pursuance of any power conferred by or under this Act.

The defendant in the instant case did not seek to annul any orders passed by any authority constituted under the Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974.[330]

The plaintiff purchased some materials from a foreign company situated in West Germany. Consignment was shipped from Germany under a marine insurance policy. The bill of lading was executed in Germany. The insurance company was also situated in Germany. The contract of insurance covered the risk of transit upto place S, where the plaintiff resided. The consignment was short of 779 kg. The plaintiff filed suit in the court at K, having jurisdiction over the place S. It was contended that as per Article 12 of the insurance conditions read with Article 48 of VVC (stated to be law relating to insurance matters), the suit could be filed only in Germany. Shortage in goods was noticed only at the time of delivery. It was held that the court at the place of delivery had jurisdiction in the matter.[331]

A full bench of the Delhi High Court[332] has held that the power to entertain cancellation proceedings exclusively vests with the Controller of Designs which is a specialised tribunal as per section 19 of the Designs Act, 2000, except to the extent it is permissible for the civil court to entertain invalidity under the provision of section 22(3) in an infringement proceedings. Therefore, action against a registered proprietor who did not fit within the ambit of sections 22(1) and 22(2) is implicitly barred as the same is a power vested in the specialised tribunal which is the design office or the controller of design even if tested on the touchstone of the principles of section 9 of the CPC.

In a Gujarat case, plaintiff's case was that government, having acquired land A, was (from that land) encroaching upon land B, which the plaintiff claimed as his own. The suit was to prevent encroachment upon land B, regarding which the plaintiff claimed title. It was objected by the defendant that the civil court cannot entertain a suit regarding acquisition. It was held that the suit was maintainable. Plaintiff was not suing regarding the acquired land, but regarding the adjoining land.[333]

The Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, not only confers on a worker the right to re-instatement and back wages if the order to termination or dismissal is not in accordance with the standing orders, but also provides detailed procedure and machinery for obtaining this relief. Under these circumstances, there is an apparent implied exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil court to grant such relief. The remedy under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, cannot be said to

---

330. Sreenivasa Distilleries v SR Thyagarajan, AIR 1986 AP 328, at p 329.
331. Wuwttem Bergische Und Badshee Vereinighe Verisicherung Sgesell Schaften Aktiengeselischaft v Coromandel Crucibles Industry, Samalkota, AIR 1990 AP 97 (DB).
332. Micolube India Limited v Rakesh Kumar, 199 (2013) DLT 740 : 2013 (55) PTC 1 (Del) (FB).
333. Hiraben v State of Gujarat, AIR 1987 Guj 225 (DB).

be discretionary. The suit for: (i) a declaration that dismissal of the plaintiff from service was bad and void; (ii) for back wages; and (iii) for injunction preventing the employer from giving effect to the order of dismissal is, in substance, a suit for the relief of re-instatement and back wages and is, therefore, not maintainable before a civil court.[334]

Decree declared that a particular date was the correct date of birth of the plaintiff employee, defendant-employer (public authority), cannot ignore the decree on the ground of absence of direction for rectification of service record. The suit was instituted against the director of Post-Graduate Centre, Anantapur, who was the plaintiff petitioner's employer, for correcting the date of birth of the petitioner. It was held that reasonably and realistically speaking, there could have been no purpose behind the suit, except to bind the respondent with the declaration, and thereby obtain the benefit of extended service. The plaint allegations made the objective clear. So long as the decree stood, the respondent could not say that the petitioner's date of birth was not 29 December 1921, but 1 June 1919. The stand taken by the director, that as there was no further direction to him to correct the service record, therefore he would still act upon the entries in the service record as they stood, and retire the petitioner, was an unjustifiable one, which a public authority could not be permitted to take.[335] The scheme of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, clearly excludes the jurisdiction of the civil court by implication in respect of the remedies which are available under this Act and for which a complete procedure and machinery has been provided in the Act.[336]

Difference lies in the nature of jurisdiction, one conferred by section 9 of the CPC and the other by Article 226 of the Constitution of India. Both the jurisdictions are different and are governed by different principles. Article 226 provides a constitutional remedy. It confers the power of judicial review of high courts. The finality clause in a statute is not a bar to the exercise of this constitutional power. Whereas the jurisdiction of civil court arises from section 9 of the CPC. In such a case, the bar arising from an express provision or arising by necessary intendment can be overridden only in cases and situations pointed out in Dhula Bhai v State of Madhya Pradesh.[337] It is not correct to say that whatever is good for Article 226 is good for suit as well.[338]

[s 9.39] Exclusion of Jurisdiction of Civil Courts

Under section 9 of the CPC, the court shall subject to provisions contained therein, have jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature excepting suits, cognizance of which is either expressly or impliedly barred. When a legal right is infringed, a suit would lie, unless there is a bar against entertainment of such civil suit and the civil courts have jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature except those of which cognizance is either expressly or by necessary implication excluded. The rule of construction being that every presumption would be made in favour of the existence of a right and remedy in a democratic set-up governed by rule of law and jurisdiction of the civil courts is assumed. The exclusion would, therefore, normally be an exception. Courts generally construe the provisions strictly when jurisdiction of the civil courts is claimed to be excluded. Where there is no express exclusion, the examination of the remedies and the scheme of the particular Act to find out the intendment becomes necessary and the result of the inquiry may be decisive. In the latter case, it is necessary that the statute creates a

---

334. Jitendra Nath Biswas v Empire of India and Ceylon Tea Co, AIR 1990 SC 225 : 1989 SCR (3) 640.
335. K Mahadeva Sastri v Director, Post-Graduate Centre, Anantapur, AIR 1982 AP 176 (DB).
336. Jitendra Nath Biswas v Empire of India and Ceylone Tea Co, (1984) 3 SCC 582.
337. Dhula Bhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78.
338. Srikant Kashinath Jituri v Municipal Corp Belgaum, (1994) 6 SCC 572.

special right or liability and provides procedure for the determination of the right or liability and further lays down that all question about the said right or liability shall be determined by the tribunal so constituted and whether remedies are normally associated with the action in civil courts or prescribed by the statutes or not. Therefore, each case requires examination whether the statute provides right and remedies and whether the scheme of the Act is that the procedure provided will be conclusive and thereby excludes the jurisdiction of the civil court in respect thereof.[339]

The normal rule of law is that civil courts have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature except those of which cognizance by them is either expressly or impliedly excluded.[340] Such exclusion is not to be readily inferred, the rule of construction being that every presumption should be made in favour of the existence rather than the exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil courts.[341] Consequently, statutes, ousting the jurisdiction of civil courts must be strictly constructed.[342] The burden to prove the exclusion is on the party who so contends.[343] Where such a contention is raised, it has to be determined in the light of the words used in the statute, the scheme of its relevant provisions, their object and purpose.[344] Further, the jurisdiction of the civil court is not excluded unless the cognizance of the entire suit as brought is barred.[345] Where the statute itself does not bar the jurisdiction of civil courts but the rules made thereunder do, the rules are ultra vires the statute and cannot by themselves bar the civil court's jurisdiction.[346] In any case, it is the civil court which has the power to decide its jurisdiction to try a suit or a proceeding pending before it is barred or not, although it may turn out on investigation that it has no jurisdiction.[347]

In a suit it was urged before the Bombay High Court that the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906, gives powers to Mamlatdars' Court to adjudicate all disputes as specified thereunder. It was urged the law being a special enactment, the right to adjudicate dispute under common law is barred. Repelling the contention, the High Court observed as follows:

> 11. Court has perused entire Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906. It is seen that Mamlatdars' Courts Act presupposes and recognizes the existence and continuation of powers and jurisdiction of civil court. The scheme provides for a summary jurisdiction and powers and a bar of suits to make orders of Mamlatdar or Collector etc., to be immune from scrutiny in a civil suit.

---

339. Vankamamidi Venkata Subbarao v Chatlapalli Seetharamaratna, (1997) 5 SCC 460; S Vanathan Muthuraja v Ramalingam, (1997) 6 SCC 143.
340. Kamala Mills Ltd v State of Bombay, AIR 1965 SC 1942 : (1966) 1 SCR 64; State v Manish Maity, AIR 1971 Cal 281, 283.
341. Bharat Kala Bhandar v Muni Committee, Dhamangaon, AIR 1966 SC 249 : (1965) 3 SCR 199; Secy of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105 : 67 IA 222; Umesh Jha v State, AIR 1956 Pat 425; Magiti Sasmal v Pandab Bissori, AIR 1962 SC 547; Sudhan Chandra v Kshetra Mohan, AIR 1958 Cal 65; Kundan v Sardar Ramji Lal, AIR 1959 P&H 206; Lalithamma v Kannan, AIR 1966 Mys 178; Tirumalaisami v Villagers of Kadambur, AIR 1969 Mad 108; Kul Bhushan v Faquira, AIR 1976 P&H 341; CN Co-op HB Society v Ashok, AIR 1976 Del 299; MP Electricity Board, Jabalpur v Vijaya Timber Co, (1997) 1 SCC 68.
342. Luthra Union v Samua Uraon, AIR 1948 Pat 49 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 377; Manager, Court of Wards v Moolchand, AIR 1949 Nag 226 : (1941) ILR Nag 279; Ramkaran v Surajmal, AIR 1938 Nag 80 : (1938) ILR Nag 268.
343. Abdul Waheed Khan v Bhawani, AIR 1966 SC 1718 : (1966) 3 SCR 617.
344. Kamala Mills Ltd v State of Bombay, AIR 1965 SC 1942.
345. Maya Devi v Inder Narain, AIR 1947 All 118, 120; Mewa v Baldeo, AIR 1967 All 358; Shanti Swarup v Ashrafe, AIR 1941 All 61 : (1941) ILR All 250; Parameshari v Krishna Kumar, AIR 1944 All 1947 : (1944) ILR All 330; Antu v Ghulam, (1884) ILR 6 All 110.
346. Satyanarayana v Narayan, AIR 1952 Mad 106.
347. Bhattiya Co Hsg Society v Patel, AIR 1953 SC 16 : (1953) SCR 185 : (1953) SCJ 642.

> 12. It is seen that there is no express bar of suit. According to Mr. Bhattad, bar is implied. There is no room left by virtue of totality of provisions and scheme as to how implied bar should be inferred. Argument of learned Advocate Mr. Bhattad that implied bar can be read from the provision to clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 5 amounts to reading in a provision of legislation, such words and such scheme which is totally non-existent.
>
> 13. The court cannot forget the wide compass of Section 9 of Civil Procedure Code. Exclusion and bar of jurisdiction cannot be read or inferred just for the sake of asking in the manner in which present petitioner wants. Existence of jurisdiction has to be presumed and not the bar.[348]

In matter of enforcement of security interest under the Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002 (SARFAESI Act, 2002), the jurisdiction of civil court is barred when action under the Act was taken or could be taken in future if notice under section 13(2) and 13(3) of the Act is issued.[349]

In another case relating to the SARFAESI Act, 2002 where the property had been mortgaged in favour of the bank and a suit for partition had been filed in respect of the said property, it was held by the Karnataka High Court that the bank had already taken proceedings in respect of the property under the SARFAESI Act, 2002, and had taken possession of the very property and as such section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002, would not be attracted to oust the jurisdiction of civil court. It was observed that the property remains mortgaged with the bank but the title resides in the plaintiff and even if the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, his share would still be subject to the mortgage in favour of the bank.[350]

Section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002, ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court. Thus, where enforcement proceedings are initiated by bank under section 13 of the Act, no relief of injunction can be granted by civil court. Section 17 of the Act provides that any person (including borrower), aggrieved by any of the measures referred to in section 13(4) by the secured creditor may make an application to the Debt Recovery Tribunal (DRT) having jurisdiction. Section 18 of the Act prescribes right of appeal to the Appellate Tribunal by any person aggrieved by the order of the DRT. It was held by a Division Bench of the Kerala High Court that alternative and efficacious remedy is provided under the Act of 2002.[351]

In SBI v Allwyn Alloys (Pvt) Ltd,[352] a decision of the Debt Recovery Appellate Tribunal (DRAT) was challenged before the high court in a writ petition. The high court, without examining the concurrent findings of the DRT and the DRAT, disposed of the writ petition stating that the case involves disputed facts and, thus, it would require production of evidence and full-fledged trial. It gave liberty to the writ petitioners to "approach proper forum" for adjudication of the disputes. The apex court, while setting aside the order of the high court, termed the approach adopted by the high court as "completely fallacious and untenable in law." It held that the mandate of section 13 and, in particular, section 34 of the Securitization and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002, clearly barred filing of a civil suit as no civil court can exercise jurisdiction to entertain any suit or proceeding in respect of any matter which a DRT or DRAT is empowered by or under this Act to determine and no injunction can be granted by any court or authority in respect of any action taken or to be taken in pursuance of any power conferred by or under the Act.

---

348. Rajendra Sheshrao Shengde v Shobhatai S Ravate, AIR 2007 Bom 90 : 2007 (3) Mah LJ 431 (Nagpur Bench).
349. Yuth Development Co-op Bank Ltd, Kolhapur v Balasaheb Dinkarrao Salokhe, AIR 2008 Bom 167 : 2008 (5) Mah LJ 326.
350. Vysya Co-op Bank Ltd v G Keerthana, AIR 2008 Kant 25 : 2008 (2) Kant LJ 380.
351. VP Fakrudheen Haji v State Bank of India, AIR 2009 Ker 78 : 2009 (1) Ker LT 227 (DB).
352. SBI v Allwyn Alloys (Pvt) Ltd, AIR 2018 SC 2721 : (2018) 8 SCC 120 : 2018 (7) Scale 512.

However, the Madras High Court has held that though section 34 of the Securitisation Act, 2002 debars the civil court from entertaining any suit in respect of matters which fall within the jurisdiction of the DRT or the Appellate Tribunal, but as regards the allegation of fraud in obtaining certain orders depriving the valuable right of a third party, it is only the civil court which has jurisdiction to deal with it.[353]

The Rajasthan High Court has held that the bar to the jurisdiction of civil courts contained in section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002, is not absolute. The SARFAESI Act, 2002, does not bar the jurisdiction of civil courts to decide inter se rights between third parties, including the borrowers in the cases of partition, cancellation of gift deed and sale deed, right of pre-emption, redemption of mortgage, etc. But no suit or injunction in any civil court can be allowed to prohibit and debar the measures taken by banks and financial institutions under the SARFAESI Act, 2002, or the Recovery of Debts due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993. However, in cases of partition of joint Hindu family property, coparceners can claim injunction against banks or financial institutions insofar as their share in the property is concerned.[354]

It has been observed in the above case as follows:

> In cases of partition suits of ancestral property owned by a Hindu Undivided Family which has been mortgaged by one or more of the coparceners, without other coparceners being guarantors or borrowers of the bank or financial institution, the Bank, financial institution or Debt Recovery Tribunal cannot proceed to take over and sell, transfer or otherwise alienate the said ancestral undivided property unless and until the share of the particular borrower-coparcener is determined at the instance of such borrower-coparcener or the bank itself.[355]

It has been held by the Orissa High Court that after the formation of the DRT when suits relating to bank dues stand transferred to the tribunals, such tribunals also have jurisdiction to hear and decide petitions for setting aside ex parte decree passed by the civil court earlier to the transfer of the suits to tribunals.[356] Explaining the provisions of sections 19, 31 and 22(2)(g) of the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, and the scheme of the enactment, AK Ganguly J (as he then was), observed as follows:

> 24. This difference in phraseology is of considerable importance. This difference means that after the appointed day and after the establishment of the Tribunal, proceeding by banks/financial institutions for recovery of their debts cannot be termed, as suits, but it will be called an application, which has been defined under Section 2(b) of RDB Act as "an application made to a Tribunal under Section 19". Thus, Section 22 of the RDB Act only refers to those applications under Section 2(b) of RDB Act and it does not refer to any pending case. The entire gamut of procedure referred to Section 22 would therefore apply to the applications, which were filed before the Tribunal after the appointed day and after it was set up. So far as the jurisdiction of the Tribunal over pending cases by transfer is concerned, the Tribunal may, on receipt of such records, proceed to deal with such suit or other proceeding, so far as may be, in the same manner as in the case of an application under Section 19 from the stage which was reached before such transfer or from an earlier stage as the Tribunal may deem fit. This has been made clear in Section 31(2)(b) of the RDB Act. The exercise of jurisdiction by the DRT in pending cases and which have come to it on transfer is not controlled by Section 22 but by Section 19. That is why under Section 19, the Tribunal has been conferred with the authority to "make such orders and give such directions as may be necessary or expedient to give effect to its order or to prevent abuse of its process or to secure the ends of justice". Thus a very wide jurisdiction has been given to

353. Cambridge Solutions Ltd, Bangalore, v Global Software Ltd, AIR 2009 Mad 74.
354. Mohan Lal v Dwarka Prasad, AIR 2007 Raj 129 : 2007 (3) Raj LW 2656 (Jaipur Bench).
355. Mohan Lal v Dwarka Prasad, AIR 2007 Raj 129 : 2007 (3) Raj LW 2656 (per Dr. V Kothari J).
356. Ch Ranganath Raju v Bank of India, AIR 2007 Ori 43 (DB).

> the DRT to deal with pending cases which have come to it on transfer. There are very good reasons for conferring such wide powers on the DRT which has to deal with pending cases on transfer. A case which was filed and pending before the civil court may, over the years, have developed unforeseen facets and may be covered with a thicket of controversy which is unknown to the structure of an application filed before the DRT after its establishment. To deal with such contingency, the DRT has been designedly empowered with such broad jurisdiction as has been mandated under Section 19(25) and Section 31(2)(b) of the RDB Act.[357]

The language of section 56 of Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, more specially the provisions in sub-section (1) which makes the order of settlement officer final and which cannot be questioned in any court leaves no room for doubt that the issues set out in sub-section (1) of section 56 could be decided by settlement officer only and in respect of them the jurisdiction of the civil court is ousted.[358] Section 13 of Punjab Village Common Lands (Regulation) Act, 1961, takes away the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain or adjudicate upon any question of whether any land or removable property is or is not Shamilat deh.[359] Once the order under the Orissa Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1972, attains finality, section 14 of the said Act ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain the disputes which can be decided by the estate officer.[360] Section 65 of Tamil Nadu Slum Areas (Improvement and Clearance) Act, 1971, bars the jurisdiction of the civil court.[361] The scheme of Maharashtra (Municipal Councils), Nagar Panchayats and Industrial Townships) Act, 1965, provides a complete procedure right from the stage and taking into consideration the basis for the assessment to the stage of appeal and revision. In such circumstances, the jurisdiction of the civil court is barred.[362] A bare reading of section 46 of Madhya Pradesh Ceiling on Agricultural Holdings Act, 1960, indicates that the jurisdiction of the civil court has been expressly barred except with regard to two cases regarding which exception have been carved out.[363] Because of the non obstante clause contained in section 19 of Presidency Small Causes Courts Act, 1882, even if a suit may otherwise lie before any other court, if such suits falls within the sweep of section 41(1) it can be entertained only by the court of small causes. For applicability of section 41(1), the following conditions must be satisfied before taking the view that jurisdiction of regular competent civil court like city civil court is ousted:

(i) it must be a suit or proceedings between the licensee and licensor; or

(ii) between a landlord and a tenant;

(iii) such suit or proceedings must relate to the recovery of possession of any property situated in greater Bombay; or

(iv) relating to recovery of the licensee fee or charge or rent thereof.[364]

[s 9.40] Tribunals and Jurisdiction of Civil Courts

Section 9 of the CPC confers jurisdiction upon the civil courts to determine all disputes of a civil nature unless the same is barred under a statute either expressly or by necessary

---

357. Ch Ranganath Raju v Bank of India, AIR 2007 Ori 43, para 24, at pp 47–48 (DB).
358. Annamreddi Bodayyar v Lokanarapu Ramaswamy, (deceased), (1984) (Supp) SCC 391.
359. Babu Ram v Gram Sabha Buhavi, (1988) Supp SCC 485.
360. Bidyadhar Roul v State, AIR 1994 Ori 156.
361. Ponnurangam v Chairman, Slum Clearance Board of Tamil Nadu, Madras, AIR 1996 Mad 274.
362. Dr. Devi Dass v Pachora Municipal Council, AIR 1998 Bom 363 (DB).
363. Bhaiyalal v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1998 MP 234.
364. Mansukh Lal Dhanraj Jain v Eknath Vitthal Ogale, (1995) 2 SCC 665.

implication. Bar of jurisdiction of a civil court is not to be readily inferred. A provision seeking to bar jurisdiction of civil court requires strict interpretation. The court, it is well-settled, would normally lean in favour of construction, which would uphold retention of jurisdiction of the civil court. The burden of proof in this behalf shall be on the party who asserts that the civil court's jurisdiction is ousted. Even otherwise, the civil court's jurisdiction is not completely ousted under the Companies Act, 1956.[365]

In the Premier Automobiles case,[366] NL Untwalia J, speaking for a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court, observed as follows:

> 23. The principles applicable to the jurisdiction of the civil court in relation to an industrial dispute may be stated thus:
>
> (1) If the dispute is not an industrial dispute, nor does it relate to enforcement of any other right under the Act the remedy lies only in the civil court.
>
> (2) If the dispute is an industrial dispute arising out of a right or liability under the general or common law and not under the Act, the jurisdiction of the civil court is alternative, leaving it to the election of the suitor concerned to choose his remedy for the relief which is competent to be granted in a particular remedy.
>
> (3) If the industrial dispute relates to the enforcement of a right or an obligation created under the Act, then the only remedy available to the suitor is to get an adjudication under the Act.
>
> (4) If the right which is sought to be enforced is a right created under the Act such as Chapter VA then the remedy for its enforcement is either Section 33C or the raising of an industrial dispute, as the case may be.

In Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation v Krishna Kant,[367] Jeevan Reddy J, speaking for a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court, summarised the principles as follows:

> (1) Where the dispute arises from the general law of contract, i.e., where reliefs are claimed on the basis of the general law of contract, a suit filed in civil court cannot be said to be not maintainable, even though such a dispute may also constitute an "industrial dispute" within the meaning of Section 2(k) or Section 2-A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.
>
> (2) Where, however, the dispute involves recognition, observance or enforcement of any of the rights or obligations created by the Industrial Disputes Act, the only remedy is to approach the forums created by the said Act.
>
> (3) Similarly, where the dispute involves the recognition, observance or enforcement of rights and obligations created by enactments like Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946—which can be called "sister enactments" to Industrial Disputes Act—and which do not provide a forum for resolution of such disputes, the only remedy shall be to approach the forums created by the Industrial Disputes Act provided they constitute industrial disputes within the meaning of Section 2(k) and Section 2-A of Industrial Disputes Act or where such enactment says that such dispute shall be either treated as an industrial dispute or says that it shall be adjudicated by any of the forums created by the Industrial Disputes Act. Otherwise, recourse to civil court is open.
>
> (4) It is not correct to say that the remedies provided by the Industrial Disputes Act are not equally effective for the reason that access to the forum depends upon a reference being made by the appropriate Government. The power to make a reference conferred upon the Government is to be exercised to effectuate the object of the enactment and hence not unguided. The rule is to make a reference unless, of course, the dispute raised is a totally frivolous one Ex facie. The power conferred is the power to refer and not the power to

---

365. Dwarka Prasad Agarwal v Ramesh Chandra Agarwala, AIR 2003 SC 2696 : (2003) 6 SCC 220; see also Sahebgonda v Ogeppa, AIR 2003 SCW 3088.
366. Premier Automobiles Ltd. v Kamlekar Shantaram Wadke, AIR 1975 SC 2238 : (1976) 1 SCC 496.
367. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Krishna Kant, AIR 1995 SC 1715 : (1995) 5 SCC 75.

decide, though it may be that the Government is entitled to examine whether the dispute is Ex facie frivolous, not meriting an adjudication.

(5) Consistent with the policy of law aforesaid, we commend to Parliament and the State Legislatures to make a provision enabling a workman to approach the Labour Court/Industrial Tribunal directly—i.e., without the requirement of a reference by the Government—in case of industrial disputes covered by Section 2-A of the Industrial Disputes Act. This would go a long way in removing the misgivings with respect to the effectiveness of the remedies provided by the Industrial Disputes Act.

(6) The certified Standing Orders framed under and in accordance with the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 are statutorily imposed conditions of service and are binding both upon the employers and employees, though they do not amount to "statutory provisions". Any violation of these Standing Orders entitles an employee to appropriate relief either before the forums created by the Industrial Disputes Act or the civil court where recourse to civil court is open according to the principles indicated herein.

(7) The policy of law emerging from Industrial Disputes Act and its sister enactments is to provide an alternative dispute resolution mechanism to the workmen, a mechanism which is speedy, inexpensive, informal and un-encumbered by the plethora of procedural laws and appeals upon appeals and revisions applicable to civil courts. Indeed, the powers of the courts and tribunals under the Industrial Disputes Act are far more extensive in the sense that they can grant such relief as they think appropriate in the circumstances for putting an end to an industrial dispute.

Reiterating the law laid down in Krishna Kant's case (supra), another three-judge bench of the Supreme Court held the jurisdiction of the civil court to be impliedly barred where a workman had challenged the order of dismissal passed by the municipal corporation. It was also held that the appropriate forum for resolution of such disputes is the forum constituted under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.[368] Speaking for the bench, Pattanaik J (as he then was) observed as follows:

> It may be borne in mind that the Industrial Disputes Act was enacted by the Parliament to provide speedy, inexpensive and effective forum for resolution of disputes arising between workmen and the employers, the underlying idea being to ensure that the workmen does not get caught in the labyrinth of civil courts which the workmen could ill-afford, as has been stated by this court in Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp case (supra). It cannot be disputed that the procedure followed by civil courts are too lengthy and consequently, is not an efficacious forum for resolving Industrial Disputes speedily. The power of Industrial Courts also is wide and such forums are empowered to grant adequate relief as they think just and appropriate. It is in the interest of the workmen that their disputes, including the dispute of illegal termination are adjudicated upon by an industrial forum.[369]

Views expressed by Willes J in Wolverhampton case,[370] how section 9 of the Code operates is illustrated by referring to the category of cases—

> One is where there was a liability existing at common law, and that liability is affirmed by a statute which gives a special and peculiar form of remedy different from the remedy which existed at common law: there, unless the statute contains words which expressly or by necessary implication exclude the common law remedy the party suing has his election to pursue either that or the statutory remedy. The second class of cases is, where the statute gives the right to sue merely, but provides no particular form of remedy: there, the party can only proceed by action at common law. But there is a third class, viz., where a liability not existing at common law is created by a statute which at the same time gives a special and particular remedy for enforcing it … The remedy … provided by the statute

---

368. Chandrakant Tukaram Nikam v Municipal Corporation of Ahmadabad, AIR 2002 SC 997 : (2002) 2 SCC 542 : 2002 (2) Mah LR 823.
369. Chandrakant Tukaram Nikam v Municipal Corporation of Ahmadabad, AIR 2002 SC 997, at p 1003 : (2002) 2 SCC 542 : 2002 (2) Mah LR 823.
370. Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co v Hawkesford, [1859] 6 CBNS 336 : (1859) 141 ER 486.

> must be followed and it is not competent to the party to pursue the course applicable to cases of the second class.

Another three-judge bench of Supreme Court, in the case of Balmukund Bairwa,[371] held that where civil courts' jurisdiction is barred by statute, even then the civil court has jurisdiction when the statutory authority or tribunal acts without jurisdiction. SB Sinha J, speaking for the bench, observed as follows:

> The civil court, furthermore, being a court of plenary jurisdiction has the jurisdiction to determine its jurisdiction upon considering the averments made in the plaint but that would not mean that the plaintiff can circumvent the provisions of law in order to invest jurisdiction on the civil court although it otherwise may not possess. For the said purpose, the court in given cases would be entitled to decide the question of its own jurisdiction upon arriving at a finding in regard to the existence of the jurisdictional fact. It is also well settled that there is a presumption that a civil court will have jurisdiction and the ouster of civil court's jurisdiction is not to be readily inferred. A person taking the plea contra must establish the same.[372]

The question as to what extent the jurisdiction of the civil court is taken away with respect of matters entrusted to tribunals constituted by the legislature has been the subject matter of a number of decisions.[373] Whether a suit is or is not cognizable by a civil court depends on the cause of action pleaded and not on the form in which the relief is prayed for.[374]

A full bench of the Orissa High Court[375] was seized of a question that whether the Central Administrative Tribunal (CAT) constituted under the Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985 has jurisdiction to condone the delay where an application for review is filed beyond the prescribed period of limitation? The court recorded that section 19 of the Act postulates that subject to the other provisions of the Act, a person aggrieved by any order pertaining to any matter within the jurisdiction of CAT may make an application to it for the redressal of his grievance. Section 21 of the Act deals with limitation in filing the original application. Sub-section (3) of section 21 confers power on the CAT to condone the delay in filing the original application, if the applicant satisfies it that he was prevented by sufficient cause in not filing the application within the period of limitation prescribed in the Act. Section 22(3) provides that CAT shall have, for the purposes of discharging its functions under the Act, the same powers as are vested in a civil court under the CPC while trying a suit, in respect of certain matters. It further

---

371. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Bal Mukund Bairwa, (2010) 4 SCC 299 : 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 545 (SC).
372. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation v Bal Mukund Bairwa, (2010) 4 SCC 299 : 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 545 (SC).
373. Secretary of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105 : 67 IA 222; Brij Raj Krishna v SK Shaw, AIR 1951 SC 115 : (1951) SCR 145 : 1951 SCJ 238; Magiti Sasmal v Pandab Bissoi, AIR 1962 SC 547; Jagadish v Ganga Prasad, AIR 1959 SC 492 : (1959) SCJ 495; Ujjambhai v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1962 SC 1621; Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co v Hawkesford, (1859) 6 CBNS 336 : (1859) 141 ER 486; Neville v London Express Newspaper Ltd, AIR 1919 Cal 368; Liquidator, Janda Rubber Works v Collector of Bombay, AIR 1950 EP 204; Municipal Board, Bareilly v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1934 All 795 : (1934) All LJ 739; Manager, Court of Wards v Moolchand, AIR 1949 Nag 226; State of Bombay v Maharashtra Sugar Mills Ltd, AIR 1951 Bom 68; Bhaishankar v Municipal Corp of Bombay, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 604; Jyoti Prasad v Amba Prasad, AIR 1933 All 358 : (1933) 55 All 406; Mawal Kishore v Municipal Board, AIR 1937 All 365 : (1937) All LJ 336; Hamid Baig v Aresh Balda, AIR 1956 Hyd 10 : (1955) ILR Hyd 737 (FB); State Medical Faculty v Kshetra Bhusan, AIR 1961 Cal 31 : (1960) 64 Cal WN 842; Ranga Singh v Gurban Singh, AIR 1961 P&H 166 : (1960) ILR 1 Punj 126; Balakrishna Mehta v Corp of Madras, AIR 1962 Mad 7 : (1962) ILR Mad 137 : (1962) 1 Mad LJ 92, (FB); Patna Municipality v Ram Bachan, AIR 1961 Pat 142 : (1961) ILR 40 Patna 121 : (1960) Pat LR 269 (FB); Kishun Sah v Harinandan Prasad Sah, AIR 1963 Pat 79 (FB).
374. Chhedi v Smt. Indrapati, AIR 1972 All 446.
375. Akshaya Kumar Parida v UOI, AIR 2015 Ori 49 : 2015 (I) Ori LR 544.

recorded that the CAT while entertaining an application for review, is conferred with the same power as are vested in a civil court under the CPC, i.e., for the purpose of entertaining an application for review, CAT acts as a civil court and is conferred to exercise all powers as are vested in a civil court. It was held that neither section 22 of the Act nor rule 17 of the Rules expressly excluded the applicability of section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963. In the event an application for review is filed beyond the period of limitation along with an application for condonation of delay and the applicant satisfies CAT that he had sufficient cause for not preferring an application within the time, it can condone the delay.

The motor accidents claims tribunal, constituted under the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, is a "Court" for all intents and purposes, including the enforcement of its award, and therefore, it can exercise powers under sections 9, 47 and O XXI, CPC. It cannot be said that since the jurisdiction of civil court is barred by section 75 of the Act, the tribunal would not be justified in assuming and exercising the powers of the civil court by resorting, and applying, the CPC. The Motor Accident Claims Tribunal is vested with jurisdiction over cases of motor accident claims arising out of vehicular accidents. Obviously, no such claim proceedings for which the special motor accident claims tribunals are constituted, can lie before the civil court.[376]

Two tests are applied for the purpose of determining the exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil court:

(i) whether the legislative intent to exclude is expressed explicitly or by necessary implication;[377] and

(ii) whether the statute in question provides for an adequate and satisfactory alternative remedy to a party aggrieved by an order made under it.[378]

Even where these tests are satisfied, a civil court would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit where the statutory provision under which the tribunal acts is challenged as being ultra vires the Constitution.[379] The bar created by the statutory provision excluding the civil court's jurisdiction cannot also operate where the plea raised goes to the root of the matter, and if upheld, would render the impugned order a nullity.[380] Where the special tribunal or authority acts ultra vires or illegally, the civil court has by virtue of section 9 of the Code, power to infer and set matters right. If the provisions of the statute have not been complied with or the statutory tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure, the civil court has jurisdiction to examine the case.[381] Likewise, non-compliance by such a tribunal of the provisions of the statute conferring jurisdiction on it would vitiate the entire proceedings as being without jurisdiction;[382] but so long as such a tribunal acts within

---

376. Hirabhai Nanubhai Desai v State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 Guj 1 (DB).
377. Dewaji v Ganpatlal, AIR 1969 SC 560 : (1969) 1 SCR 573.
378. Ram Swarup v Shikarchand, AIR 1966 SC 893 : (1966) 2 SCR 553; State of West Bengal v Indian Iron and Steel Co Ltd, AIR 1970 SC 1298 : (1970) 2 SCC 39.
379. Bharat Kala Bhandar v Municipal Committee, Dhamangaon, AIR 1966 SC 249; State of Madhya Pradesh v Khoda Bai Patel, AIR 1971 MP 254.
380. Ram Swarup v Shikar Chand, AIR 1966 SC 893; Kalachand v D Chakraborty, AIR 1967 Cal 172; Sahakari Ganna Samiti v Mahendra, AIR 1967 All 134.
381. Gurbax Singh Chanda Singh v Financial Commr, (1991) Supp 1 SCC 167; Sardara Singh v Sardara Singh, (1990) 4 SCC 90.
382. Srinivasa Panthulu v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1971 SC 71 : (1969) 3 SCC 71 : (1970) SCR 714; UOI v Tarachand Gupta & Bros., AIR 1971 SC 1558 : (1971) 1 SCC 486; Desika Charryulu v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 807; Nityanand v Basudeb, AIR 1971 Ori 80; Jai Singh v Gram Panchayat, AIR 1961 P&H 232; Nani Gopal v State, AIR 1966 Cal 42; Vizianagaram Municipality v Bhaskara Rao, AIR 1965 AP 326; State of Kerala v Ramaswami Iyer, AIR 1966 SC 1738; M Jal v Bhai, AIR 1975 Ori 219 : (1975) ILR Cut 798; Hrishikesh v State, AIR 1978 Cal 556.

and in exercise of jurisdiction conferred on it, its decision, however erroneous, is not a nullity and does not give jurisdiction to a civil court to entertain a suit challenging it. The principle is that whether such a decision is correct or not, it is one arrived at in exercise of the exclusive jurisdiction conferred upon it by the statute which sets it up.[383] Even a writ of certiorari would not issue except on the grounds that the impugned order was made without or in excess of jurisdiction or in violation of the principles of natural justice,[384] or that there was an error apparent on the fact of the record.[385]

In Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh,[386] the Supreme Court considered its earlier decisions on that aspect and laid down the following propositions:

(i) Where the statute gives finality to the orders of the special tribunals, the civil court's jurisdiction must be held to be excluded if there is adequate remedy to do what the civil courts would normally do in a suit. Such a provision, however, does not exclude those cases where the provisions of the particular Act have not been complied with or the statutory tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure.

(ii) Where there is an express bar of jurisdiction of the court, an examination of the scheme of the particular Act to find the adequacy or the sufficiency of the remedies provided may be relevant but is not decisive to sustain the jurisdiction of the civil court. Where there is no express exclusion, the examination of the remedies and the scheme of the particular Act to find out the intendment becomes necessary and the result of the inquiry may be decisive. In the latter case, it is necessary if the statute creates a special right or liability and provides for the determination of the right or liability and further lays down that all questions about the said right or liability shall be determined by the tribunals so constituted, and whether remedies normally associated with action in civil courts are prescribed by the said statute or not.

(iii) Challenge to the provisions of the particular Act as ultra vires cannot be brought before tribunals constituted under the Act. Even the high court cannot go into that question on a revision or reference from the decision of the tribunals.

(iv) When a provision is already declared unconstitutional or constitutionality of any provision is to be challenged, a suit is open. A writ of certiorari may include a direction for refund if the claim is within the time prescribed by the Limitation Act, 1963, but it is not a compulsory remedy to replace a suit.

(v) Where the particular Act contains no machinery for refund of tax collected in excess of constitutional limits or illegally collected, a suit lies.

(vi) Questions of the correctness of the assessment apart from its constitutionality are for the decision of the authorities and a civil suit does not lie if the orders of the authorities are declared to be final or there is an express prohibition in the particular

---

383. Firm Illuri Subbayya Chetty & Sons v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 322 : (1964) 1 SCR 752; Ujjam Bai v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1962 SC 1621; Kunheema Umma v Balkrishnan, AIR 1967 Ker 97.
384. Ebrahim Aboobakar v Custodian General, AIR 1952 SC 319.
385. Ujjam Bai v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1962 SC 1621; Thangamani v Govt of Madras, AIR 1965 Mad 225, 232.
386. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : (1968) 3 SCR 662; S Venkatramaiah v K Venkataswamy, AIR 1976 AP 402.

Act. In either case, the scheme of the particular Act must be examined because it is a relevant inquiry.

(vii) An exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil court is not readily to be inferred unless the conditions above set out apply.

Though the rule generally expressed is that it is only where a tribunal acts without or in excess of its jurisdiction that its decision becomes a nullity, it has to be noted that the word "jurisdiction" has both a wide and a narrow meaning. There would be many cases where although the tribunal had jurisdiction to enter upon an inquiry, it has done or failed to do something in the course of such inquiry which is of such a nature that its decision is a nullity, eg, giving its decision in bad faith, or a decision which it had no power to make, or failing to comply with the principles of natural justice, or failing to decide the question entrusted to it and deciding some other question or refusing to take into account or basing its decision on something it could not take into account, etc. The word "jurisdiction" thus, has to be taken in its narrow and not wide meaning.[387] Determination of a question other than the one which the statute directs the tribunal to decide would be one in excess of or without jurisdiction.[388]

The allegation was that certain action of the electricity board and its officers was mala fide and without authority. Suit was for mandatory injunction against it. It was held that such a suit cannot be dismissed at the threshold without considering the merits. A statute can make provision, expressly, or by necessary implication, for barring the jurisdiction of the civil courts in respect of a particular matter. But the mere conferment of special jurisdiction on a tribunal in regard to certain specified matters does not, in itself, exclude the jurisdiction of the civil courts. Thus, when it is alleged that certain action taken by the electricity board and its officers is mala fide and without proper authority, a suit for mandatory and prohibitory injunction would be maintainable against the electricity board, in order to restrain it from drawing up an electric line through the plaintiff's property and for removing the pole already fixed.[389] Where the claim of a person to compensation for land acquisition is not adjudicated upon in the land acquisition proceedings, he can sue separately the person who had actually received the compensation to recover his share.[390]

Under section 443 of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation Act, 1951, the corporation is entitled to issue licences against the payment of fees to theatres, circuses, cinema houses, dancing halls and other similar places of public resort, recreation or amusement, but not to other establishments. A restaurant which provides items of amusement occasionally or incidentally in its main business to its customers, is not a "place of public resort, recreation or amusement" similar to a theatre, etc, which form a class by themselves and it does not fall within the mischief of section 443. The mere fact that a person had applied and obtained a licence earlier, will not confer jurisdiction on the authority concerned to require a licence.[391]

R, who had virtually settled in Trivandrum, for over a long time, had a wife (the plaintiff), for whom he had much attachment. He had a friend (defendant) with whom he had extraordinary intimacy. R used to make available to the defendant (friend of R) substantial amounts from time to time. Under the operative provisions of his will, R bequeathed his entire assets in favour of the two, with equal rights of ownership and enforcement. The defendant started harassing

---

387. Anisminic Ltd. v Foreign Compensation Commission, (1969) 1 All ER 208, 213; R v Fulham, Hammersmith and Kensington Rent Tribunal, (1953) 2 All ER 4.
388. UOI v Tarachand Gupta & Bros., AIR 1971 SC 1558 : (1971) 1 SCC 486.
389. Secretary, K.S.E.B. Trivandrum v M Sainaba, AIR 1990 Ker 50 (Varghese Kallinath J).
390. Hira Singh v Saini, AIR 1987 Del 168.
391. East India Hotels Ltd v Corp of Calcutta, AIR 1988 Cal 105.

the plaintiff after R's death. Hence, she filed a suit for accounts. It was held that the background of antecedents conducted between the parties and the intimate relationship between them even during R's lifetime, the position of confidence and trust which the defendant had occupied vis-à-vis R and the arrangement which R made for the right to, and enjoyment of, his assets, showed a clear case of strong fiduciary relationship. In such fiduciary relationship, a right of accounting would certainly arise, as between the defendant and the widow of R.[392]

A person aggrieved in respect of election to Parliament or to a state legislature can seek remedy provided in the Constitution, that is before the election tribunal.[393] The same is the position as regards election to local bodies,[394] and gram panchayats.[395] The principles above cited are also applicable when jurisdiction of civil courts is invoked against decision of domestic tribunals.[396]

In the Mask & Co's case,[397] the sole question before the Privy Council was the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain a suit to recover an excess amount of customs duty from the company, and it was dealing with the effect of Sea Customs Act, 1878, section 188. It was held by the Privy Council that it is well-settled law that the exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil court is not to be readily inferred, but that such exclusion must either be explicitly expressed or clearly implied.[398] Lord THANKERTON, who delivered the opinion of the board, however, proceeded to add that "it is also well settled that even if jurisdiction is so excluded, the civil courts have jurisdiction to examine into cases where the provisions of the Act have not been complied with, or the statutory tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure".[399]

In Illury Subbayya Chetty's case,[400] the Supreme Court accepted the observations made by the Judicial Committee in Mask's case (supra). In that case, a matter relating to section 18A of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939, was under consideration which provided a bar to civil suits. It was held that the bar to jurisdiction of civil courts under section 18A would apply as an alternative remedy is provided under the Act.[401] However, referring to the observations of the Privy Council in Mask's case (supra), Gajendragadkar J (as he then was), speaking for the five-judge bench in the above case stated that the own-compliance with the provisions of the statute to which reference was made by the Privy Council, must be meant to be non-compliance with such fundamental provisions of the statute as would make the entire proceedings before the appropriate authority illegal and without jurisdiction.[402]

In another case, Raleigh Investment Co,[403] the Privy Council considered the effect of section 67A of the Income Tax Act, 1961, where the words used were exactly similar to the

---

392. A Vasudevan Pillai v K Malathy Amma, AIR 1988 Ker 300.
393. Ponnusami v Returning Officer, AIR 1952 SC 64 : 1952 SCR 218; Durga Shankar Mehta v Raghuraj Singh, AIR 1954 SC 520 : (1955) 1 SCR 267.
394. Mahedar Rahaman v Kanti Chandra, (1934) 61 Cal 980 : 1935 AC 10; Ghulam Nazamuddin v Aktar Hussain, (1933) 55 All 1008 : 1933 AA 765; Tarachand v Abdul Kasem, (1938) 42 CWN 441 : 1938 AC 359.
395. Jodhi Singh v Vedabarat Sarma, 1956 AP 205, Re industrial disputes see Premier Automobiles Ltd. v Wadke, AIR 1975 SC 2238.
396. State Medical Facility v Kshite Bhusan, 1961 AC 31.
397. Secretary of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105 : (1940) 67 IA 222.
398. Secretary of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105 : (1940) 67 IA 222, at p 236.
399. Secretary of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105 : (1940) 67 IA 222.
400. Firm of Illuri Subbayya Chetty & Sons v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 322 : (1964) 1 SCR 752.
401. Firm of Illuri Subbayya Chetty & Sons v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 322 : (1964) 1 SCR 752.
402. Firm of Illuri Subbayya Chetty & Sons v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 322 : (1964) 1 SCR 752, at p 763.
403. Raleigh Investment Co Ltd v Governor-General in Council, (1947) 74 IA 50.

words used in the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939. It was observed that "the phrase 'made under this Act' describes the provenance of the assessment: it does not relate to its accuracy in point of law. The use of the machinery provided by the Act, not the result of that use is the test".

Under the Madhya Bharat Sales Tax Act, 1950, the State Government issued a notification imposing sales-tax and collected it. The assessees filed suits for refund on the ground that the tax was illegal. In the meantime, the notification was declared constitutional. It was held by the Supreme Court in Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh,[404] that when the notifications were declared void, the remedy by way of civil suit was open.

The civil court does not suffer from any inherent lack of jurisdiction. Where there is a special tribunal conferred with jurisdiction or exclusive jurisdiction to try particular class of cases even then the civil court can entertain a civil suit of that class on availability of a few grounds. An exclusion of jurisdiction of civil court is not to be readily inferred. See Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh.[405] An objection as to the exclusion of civil court's jurisdiction for availability of alternative forum should be taken before the trial court and at the earliest failing which the higher court may refuse to entertain the plea in the absence of proof of prejudice.[406]

A Division Bench of the Karnataka High Court has held that Karnataka Public Moneys (Recovery of Dues) Act, 1980, does not oust the jurisdiction of the civil court. The bar created by section 3(5) of the Act is of a very limited nature. The above provision bars suits in civil court for recovery of debt; therefore, the bar is against the creditor and not the borrower. Thus, where a guarantor claimed the declaratory relief and injunction that his guarantee stands extinguished, the jurisdiction of civil court cannot be barred as that question cannot be decided before the special tribunal provided under the Karnataka Public Moneys (Recovery of Dues) Act, 1979.[407]

In a case under the SARFAESI Act, 2002, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the ouster of the civil court's jurisdiction applies only to matters which either of the tribunals referred to in section 34 of the Act is authorised to entertain and determine. If it is the petitioner's case that in view of the scope of the tribunal's authority under section 17(3) of the Act, the grievance that has been brought here cannot be determined by the tribunal, then section 34 would not come into play and there is nothing to bar the jurisdiction of civil court.[408]

[s 9.41] Tribunals of Limited and Specified Jurisdiction — Jurisdiction of Civil Court Barred

In the following cases, the jurisdiction of civil court was found barred as the subject matter of the dispute was found within the limited jurisdiction of the tribunal concerned:

(a) The motor accidents claims tribunal, constituted under the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, is a "court" for all intents and purposes, including the enforcement of its award, and therefore, it can exercise powers under sections 9, 47 and O XXI of the CPC. It cannot be said that since the jurisdiction of civil court is barred by section 75 of the Act, the tribunal would not be justified in

---

404. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : (1968) 3 SCR 662 (five-judge bench).
405. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : (1968) 3 SCR 662.
406. Ramesh Chand Ardanatiya v Anil Panjwani, AIR 2003 SC 2508 : (2003) 7 SCC 350.
407. R Gopalakrishna v Karnataka State Financial Corp, Bangalore, AIR 2008 Kant 77 : ILR 2008 Kant 2084 (DB).
408. Smt. Annapurna v State of West Bengal, AIR 2009 Cal 236.

assuming and exercising the powers of the civil court by resorting, and applying, the CPC. The motor accident claims tribunal is vested with jurisdiction over cases of motor accident claims arising out of vehicular accidents. Obviously, no such claim proceedings for which the special motor accident claims tribunals are constituted, can lie before the civil court.[409]

(b) The "damage to any property of a third party" as contemplated under section 165 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 would mean the direct damage caused to the property of the third party. Where the injury claimed is that sickness has been caused on account of pollution being caused in the water drain, consequent to capsizing of phenol carrying tanker, the injury claimed has no direct or proximate connection with the vehicle involved in the accident, consequently the civil court alone would have jurisdiction to entertain in such case to determine the damages.[410] The claims tribunal under the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987, is a tribunal of limited and specified jurisdiction. It can exercise jurisdiction and power as conferred upon it under the said Act only. Section 13(1) of the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987, provides by jurisdiction, power and authority to the claims tribunal and by virtue of the express provisions contained in section 15 thereof, the jurisdiction of the civil court or any other authority is barred only in regards to the matters specified in section 13(1). Therefore, in regard to matters other than the matters covered under section 13(1) of the said Act, the civil court will have jurisdiction to entertain a civil suit.[411] Where a suit filed by a company to which siding facility was given by railways, on ground that railways were demanding excess transportation charges from the company, for loading wagons and additional charges for empty wagons which was not envisaged by the agreement between the parties and claim also was made for refund for excess charge already made, it was held that it was a subject matter which fell within the exclusive jurisdiction of the tribunal. It could not be held that the suit was founded purely on contract and required to be filed in the civil court to interpret its terms and conditions.[412] Cases claiming compensation on account of non-delivery by the railways will be entertained by the claims tribunal established in view of the provision of Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987, and not the civil court.[413]

(c) Section 15 of Haryana Public Premises and Land (Eviction and Rent Recovery) Act, 1972, bars the jurisdiction of the civil court in relation to the proceedings taken under the 1972 Act for eviction of a person in unauthorised occupation of public premises. Whether the premises in question is a public premise or not, is a matter which is required to be determined by the collector while exercising the power conferred on him under section 25 of the Act, the jurisdiction of the civil court in this respect is barred.[414]

(d) The land and acquisition court is a specially constituted court, and if there is any mis-description either in the identity in the property or in its measurement, the

---

409. Hirabhai Nanubhai Desai v State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 Guj 1 (DB); Anwar v First Addl District Judge, (1986) 4 SCC 21.
410. United India Insurance Co Ltd v PN Thomas, AIR 1999 Ker 174 (DB).
411. Ratnakar Tanbaji Itankar v UOI, AIR 1994 Bom 132.
412. Gwalior Sugar Co Ltd v UOI, AIR 1996 MP 219 (DB).
413. Madhya Pradesh State Co-op Mktg. Federation Ltd v UOI, AIR 1998 MP 143.
414. State of Haryana v Khalsa Motors Ltd, (1990) 4 SCC 659.

plaintiff can get them rectified by approaching that court, which has a special machinery for that purpose.[415]

(e) In cases where the liability of the erstwhile Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Limited is alleged, their liability became the liabilities of Central Government and later on of Life Insurance Corporation of India. It being so, only the tribunal created under the Act and not any civil court including the high court, shall have the power to entertain and adjudicate upon the dispute raised by the plaintiff. [416]

(f) In case of eviction of occupants from public premises, the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971, provides the mode and forum. The estate officer appointed under the Act, though an executive officer, is required to decide the matter judiciously by reasoned order after giving the person affected reasonable opportunity of presenting his case and an appeal against his order is provided before the district judge. Thus, section 15 of the Act has taken away the complete jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain suit for eviction of any person who is in unauthorised possession of public premises.[417]

(g) The Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 (5 of 1920) provides for administration of property of the debtor. The court may appoint an interim receiver and/or a receiver. The Insolvency Act also provides for distribution of property of the insolvent. The scheme of the Act shows that it is a complete Code in itself. A complete and effective remedy is provided under the Act. Therefore, the creditor is not entitled to file an administration suit before the civil court.[418]

The question as to whether the Limitation Act, 1963, applies only to courts and not to tribunals arose for consideration before the Supreme Court in Madhya Pradesh Steel Corp v CCE.[419] While examining the question, the court observed that a number of precedents have established that the Limitation Act, 1963, applies only to courts and not to tribunals or other quasi-judicial bodies. The court held that the expression "courts" referred to in various provisions of the Limitation Act, 1963, refers only to those courts, which are part of the judicial branch of the state. In the instant case, section 14 of the Limitation Act, 1963, was in question as against appeals under section 128 of the Customs Act, 1962. After holding that section 14 did not apply to tribunals and other quasi-judicial bodies, the Supreme Court further held that nevertheless the general principle underlying section 14 would certainly apply to tribunals and quasi-judicial bodies as well. Conclusively, the Supreme Court ordered that the law, i.e., section 14 as such, does not apply but the underlying principle does. Therefore, an argument that the Limitation Act, 1963, does not apply to tribunals and quasi-judicial bodies can be raised in appropriate cases.

The situation as can be understood is that the applicability of the Limitation Act, 1963, pertaining to tribunals and quasi-judicial bodies is therefore technically inapplicable but virtually applicable. In Fatehji & Co v LM Nagpal,[420] the Supreme Court was seized of a question as to the applicability of limitation period prescribed under Article 54 to a suit for specific performance of the agreement to sell immovable property, where the property had

---

415. UOI v Krishnaswamy, AIR 1996 Mad 238.
416. Nirupama Sarkar v Life Insurance Corporation of India, AIR 1996 Cal 417.
417. Kaikhosrou (Chick) Kavasji Framji of Indian Inhabitant v UOI, AIR 2009 (NOC) 2981 (Bom) : 2009 (4) AIR Bom R 808 (DB).
418. K Vijayarajan v DK Kalavathy, AIR 2007 Ker 25 : 2006 (2) Ker LJ 670 (DB).
419. Madhya Pradesh Steel Corp v CCE, (2015) 7 SCC 58.
420. Fatehji & Co v LM Nagpal, AIR 2015 SC 2301 : (2015) 8 SCC 390.

been delivered in part-performance of the agreement. The Supreme Court, while holding that Article 54 does not make any difference between a case where possession of the property has been delivered in part-performance of the agreement and a case where it is not, held that "[T]he fact that the plaintiffs were put in possession of the property agreed to be sold on the date of agreement itself would not make any difference with regard to the limitation of filing the suit for specific performance."

[s 9.42] Civil Courts Jurisdiction Not Found Barred — Instances

In the following cases, the jurisdiction of civil court was not found barred despite jurisdiction of special tribunal, empowered to deal with the subject matter of the dispute:—

(a) Appellant insured a consignment of gold with the respondent-insurance company. The delivery of the gold was to be made to a consignee in Kuwait. Due to the invasion of Kuwait by the Iraqi forces, the consignment was lost from the strong room at the Kuwait Airport. The appellant's claim before the National Commission was dismissed as no deficiency in service was found; however, the right of the appellant to approach the civil court remained alive.[421]

(b) Even where finality is accorded to the orders passed by the special tribunal, one will have to see whether such special tribunal has power to grant relief which civil court would normally grant in a suit and if the answer is in negative, it would be difficult to imply or infer the exclusion of civil court's jurisdiction.[422]

(c) The allegation was that certain action of the electricity board and its officers was mala fide and without authority. Suit was for mandatory injunction against it. It was held that such a suit cannot be dismissed at the threshold without considering the merits. A statute can make provision, expressly, or by necessary implication, for barring the jurisdiction of the civil courts in respect of a particular matter; but the mere conferment of special jurisdiction on a tribunal in regard to certain specified matters does not, in itself, exclude the jurisdiction of the civil courts. Thus, when it is alleged that certain action taken by the electricity board and its officers is mala fide and without proper authority, a suit for mandatory and prohibitory injunction would be maintainable against the electricity board in order to restrain it from drawing up an electric line through the plaintiff's property and for removing the pole already fixed.[423]

(d) Where the claim of a person to compensation for land acquisition is not adjudicated upon in the land acquisition proceedings, he can sue separately the person who had actually received the compensation, to recover his share.[424]

(e) In the absence of assessment, no appeal is provided under section 139 of Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 1959, as there was nothing on record to show that there was an assessment of tax against the company or that there was a notice of demand made under section 149 for payment of octroi duty, remedy is not provided under section 149 of the said Act to oust the jurisdiction of the civil court as barred by necessary implication.[425]

---

421. Jewellers Narandas & Sons v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, (1995) Supp 3 SCC 406.
422. State of Tamil Nadu v Ramalinga Samigal Madam, (1985) 4 SCC 10.
423. Secretary, KSEB, Trivandrum v M Sainaba, AIR 1990 Ker 50.
424. Hira Singh v Saini, AIR 1987 Del 168.
425. JK Industries Ltd, Kankroli v Municipal Board, Rajasthan, AIR 1997 Raj 42.

(f) Under section 443 of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation Act, 1951, the corporation is entitled to issue licences against the payment of fees to theatres, circuses, cinema houses, dancing halls and other similar places of public resort, recreation or amusement, but not to other establishments. A restaurant which provides items of amusement occasionally or incidentally in its main business to its customers, is not a "place of public resort, recreation or amusement" similar to a theatre, etc, which form a class by themselves and it does not fall within the mischief of section 443. The mere fact that a person had applied and obtained a licence earlier, will not confer jurisdiction on the authority concerned, to require a licence.[426]

(g) Where there was a dispute as to nature of land and board of revenue held it to be grove in appeal, the possession of the land was given to the claimant which affected rights of the village people; subsequent suit for declaration of title, permanent injunction and possession by villagers in representative capacity, by alleging that the land was grazing land and not grove, was found maintainable, since it was the only remedy available to the villagers and not barred by section 257 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959 (20 of 1959).[427]

(h) Right to pre-emption under section 22(2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, can be enforced by filing an application and not by a regular suit. The court before whom the application lies is the one within whose territorial limits the immovable property is situated or business is carried on. However, if the transfer has already taken place, the purchaser acquires joint right in the property subject to the right of pre-emption of other Class-I heirs. Thus, the procedure prescribed in section 22(2) of the Act which is meant for proposed or "intended transfer" would not be applicable and the pre-emptor can enforce the right by filing a suit under section 9 of the Code.[428]

(i) Where under Mysore Religious and Charitable Institutions Act, 1927, suit alleging mismanagement of trust property is filed, the bar to jurisdiction of civil court would not apply in view of serious allegations of fraud/forgery. Such serious allegations can never be inquired into in a summary manner by a Muzrai Officer in the type of enquiry contemplated under section 17 of the Act. Therefore, provisions of section 18 are not meant to be a substitute for judicial proceedings.[429]

(j) When there is a dispute between parties regarding establishment of title over the suit property on the basis of decree of pre-emption, it cannot be said that there was any challenge to the land acquisition proceedings or to the amount of compensation determined under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. If the plaintiffs succeed in the suit in proving their title over the suit property, they would be entitled to the declaration sought for. The civil court would have jurisdiction to try and entertain suit. The award announced by the collector in respect of acquisition of land is conclusive as between the persons interested and the collector in respect of the amount of compensation. But the jurisdiction of civil court to entertain dispute regarding the entitlement of the said compensation is not barred.[430]

---

426. East India Hotels Ltd v Corp of Calcutta, AIR 1988 Cal 105.
427. Madho Singh v Moin Singh, AIR 2004 SC 4316 : (2004) 12 SCC 214.
428. Arati Das v Bharati Sarkar, AIR 2009 Cal 8 : 2008 (3) Cal LT 470 (DB).
429. Sudhir G Angur v M Sanjeev, AIR 2006 SC 351 : (2006) 1 SCC 141.
430. Shyam Lal v Sham Lal, AIR 2007 P&H 89 : 2007 (2) Rec Civ R 484.

(k) Where a suit is filed against bank for recovery of amount towards damages based on unauthorised deduction of certain amount by bank from the account of the plaintiff, it was held by the Madras High Court that the suit is not barred by the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993. In the instant case, the suit was not only against bank but also against third party on whose complaint the deduction was made by the bank. Moreover, the claim in the suit was not a counter-claim against the bank and the cause of action alleged against the third party could not be decided by the DRT.[431]

[s 9.43] Decision of Tribunals on Question of Jurisdiction

When a tribunal has jurisdiction, under a statute, to decide a dispute, if and when certain facts exist, its decision can be attacked in civil courts on the ground that those facts do not exist, the fact that the tribunal has held that they exist would not alter the position, because no tribunal with limited authority can, by its erroneous decision, usurp jurisdiction which it does not possess;[432] but, when the statute has, in addition, conferred on the tribunal authority to decide whether those jurisdictional facts exist, then its decision on that question is final and not open to review by civil courts.[433]

[s 9.44] Bar with Respect to Revenue Matters

There is in general a bar to civil courts dealing with matters affecting government revenue. It is well recognised that where a revenue statute provides for a person aggrieved by an assessment thereunder, a particular remedy to be sought in a particular forum, in a particular way, it must be sought in that forum and in that manner, and all other forums and modes of seeking it are excluded. Construed in the light of this principle, it is clear that sections 84 and 86 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, bar, by inevitable implication, the jurisdiction of the civil court where the grievance of the party relates to an assessment or the principle of assessment under this Act;[434] but the jurisdiction of civil courts to try suits brought by superior holders to recover their dues from inferior holders is not barred by section 85 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879.[435] Section 4(c) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, likewise is not a bar to a suit in which there is a claim arising out of the alleged illegality of proceedings taken for the realisation of land revenue.[436] Language of section 56 of Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, more specially the provisions of sub-section (1) makes the order of settlement officer final and which cannot be questioned in any court. The jurisdiction of the civil court in this respect is ousted.[437]

The suit of the plaintiffs is not for the partition of the agricultural holding, but the plaintiffs, after getting order of partition from the revenue court under section 178 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959 and also symbolic possession of allotment of

---

431. Bank of Baroda v Mars Overseas Textiles, (2007) 1 CTC 683 (Madurai Bench).
432. State of Madhya Pradesh v Shiv Kunwarbai, AIR 1971 SC 1477 : (1971) 2 SCC 152; Munni Devi v Gokalchand, AIR 1970 SC 1727 : (1969) 2 SCC 879; Srinivasa v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1971 SC 71 : (1969) 3 SCC 71; D. Venkata Reddy v B Bushi Reddy, AIR 1971 AP 87.
433. Brij Raj Krishna v SK Shaw, AIR 1951 SC 115; Chambe Jagadish Prasad v Ganga Prasad, AIR 1959 SC 492 : (1959) Supp 1 SCR 733; Zaki v State of Bihar, AIR 1953 Pat 112; Babu Rao v Dalsukh, AIR 1955 Bom 89; Prakash Textile Mills Ltd v Manilal, AIR 1955 P&H 197 : (1955) ILR Punj 988.
434. Munshi Ram v Municipal Committee, Chheharta, (1980) Supp SCC 781.
435. Vishwanath v Kondaji, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 49 : 43 IC 995.
436. Gangaram v Dinkar, (1913) ILR 37 Bom 542.
437. Annamreddi Bodayya v Lokanarapu Ramaswamy, (deceased), (1984) Supp SCC 391.

specific area and the defendant in spite of dismissal of his suit, has not handed over the possession and is occupying the field wrongfully and illegally without any interest; therefore, such a suit for possession and mesne profits, based on title is under sections 250 and 257 of the CPC. That is the settled view.[438] Where there was a dispute as to nature of land and board of revenue held it to be grove, in appeal, the possession of the land was given to the claimant which affected rights of the village people; subsequent suit for declaration of title, permanent injunction and possession by villagers in representative capacity, by alleging that the land was grazing land and not grove, was found maintainable since it was the only remedy available to the villagers and not barred by section 257 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959 (20 of 1959).[439] The determination of question of bhumi-swami rights lies within the province of the civil court except the cases falling within the ambit of those specified under section 257 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959 (20 of 1959). For determination of any dispute in respect of cultivatory right or any other right in respect of the land which stand excluded from the preview of section 57(1) of the CPC, the jurisdiction of the civil court to adjudicate upon the dispute is expressly protected under section 111 of the CPC, subject to the exceptions carved out in section 257 of the CPC. Moreover, although in section 111 of the CPC, it is provided that the civil courts shall have jurisdiction to decide any dispute to which state government is not a party relating to any right which is recorded in the record of rights set by virtue of the provisions contained in O I, rule 3B of the CPC as applicable for the State of Madhya Pradesh (vide Madhya Pradesh Act No 15 of 1984), the implement of the same in any proceedings effecting the interest of the state in any manner has been made mandatory.[440] The civil court had jurisdiction to try the suit for injunction when the title arose only incidentally. The objection to the jurisdiction of the civil court to try the suit on the ground that revenue court had exclusive jurisdiction is not sustainable, the suit being one for permanent injunction and the question of title arising only incidentally.[441] Some municipal Acts expressly bar suits relating to the assessment and levy of municipal rates and taxes, but the civil courts have, nevertheless, jurisdiction to entertain such suits if it is shown that the assessment is mala fide or perverse[442] or made on a wrong basis and ultra vires[443] or that the procedure enjoined by the Act has not been followed.[444] The Privy Council has observed that on principle it is for the civil court to determine in the last resort the limits of the powers of a court of special jurisdiction.[445] In a suit to restrain the municipal authority from recovering the assessed sum on the ground that the assessment was illegal and ultra vires, the Lahore High Court held that the suit was not cognizable by the civil courts.[446] This decision, it is submitted, is contrary to the observations of the Privy Council in the case mentioned below.[447]

---

438. Bhagwati Prasad v UOI, AIR 1995 MP 205.
439. Madho Singh v Moin Singh, AIR 2004 SC 4316 : (2004) 12 SCC 214.
440. State of Madhya Pradesh v Balveer Singh, AIR 2001 MP 268 (FB). See also Ram Dayal v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 MP 172.
441. Hira Lal v Gajjan, (1990) 3 SCC 285.
442. Kasandas v Ankleshwar, (1902) 26 ILR Bom 294.
443. Manager Court of Wards v Moolchand, AIR 1949 Nag 226; Dhuplal v Ramdhani, AIR 1943 Pat 353; Chairman, Giridit Municipality v Srish Chandra, (1910) ILR 35 Cal 859; Deb Narain v Chairman Banipur, (1914) ILR 41 Cal 168; Chairman Municipality, Chapra v Basdeo, (1912) ILR 37 Cal 374; Secretary of State v Hughes, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 293.
444. Municipal Council of Tanjore v Umanala, (1900) ILR 23 Mad 523; Joshi v Dabor, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 399.
445. Mohammad Nawaz v Bhagata Nand, AIR 1938 PC 219 : 65 IA 301.
446. Nanbahar Hussain v Municipal Committee, AIR 1935 Lah 970 : (1935) 16 Lah 529.
447. Mohammad Nawaz v Bhagata Nand, AIR 1938 PC 219 : (1938) Lah 65 IA 301.

It is settled law that the exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil court is not to be readily inferred, but such exclusion must either be explicitly expressed or clearly implied. The provisions of law which seek to oust the jurisdiction of civil court need to be strictly construed. It is true that the question of jurisdiction depends upon the allegations in the plaint and not the merits or the result of the suit. However, in order to determine the precise nature of action, the pleadings should be taken as a whole. The real point is not the stray or loose expression which abounds inartistically drafted plaints, but the real substance of the case gathered by confusing pleadings as a whole.[448]

Under the Himachal Pradesh Holdings (Consolidation and Prevention of Fragmentation) Holdings Act (10 of 1954), consolidation proceedings remain in operation till the parties are put in possession of the lands which have fallen to their shares under the consolidation scheme. It is the duty of the authorities under the Act to put the parties in the physical possession of the lands in accordance with the Act and Rules. No symbolic possession has been envisaged, nor can the same be inferred, being totally foreign to the object and implementation of the scheme for consolidation of holdings. Therefore, the assertion of the plaintiffs that they were put in possession of the property and immediately dispossessed by the defendants, cannot be considered to be without any substance.[449] In a matter falling within the scope of adjudicatory function assigned to the consolidation authorities under the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953, the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain the suit in respect of said matters was expressly barred by section 49 of the Act.[450] When the appellant and respondent both were allottees under the consolidation scheme, the question as to who should be in possession of any portion of land which is covered by the consolidation scheme is a question which can be only decided by consolidation officer under section 21(3) of Bombay Prevention of Fragmentation and Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1947 (62 of 1947). The jurisdiction of civil courts is barred by section 36A of the said Act.[451] The bar to the jurisdiction of the civil court is not applicable to a suit between two contenders to the title of the land, not in any way affecting the scheme of consolidation under the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959.[452] Section 242 of the Uttar Pradesh Tenancy Act, 1939, prohibits the jurisdiction of civil courts only in respect of the rights given and claims arising under the Tenancy Act. The relief for declaration and the decree granted under section 59 of the Act was vitiated by fraud and collusion. Such a relief cannot be given by a revenue court; hence, the suit became maintainable under section 9 of CPC.[453]

In view of the express bar under section 106 of the Maharashtra Land Revenue Code, 1966, no directions can be given to a collector in a decree to amend the survey records.[454] The civil court has no jurisdiction to go into the question of conferment of proprietary rights under tenancy law. Thus, the question of whether the possession of land by a tenant as tenant at will on payment of rent had been converted into full ownership cannot be decided by civil court because of the ouster of civil court's jurisdiction under section 101 of the Himachal Pradesh Tenancy and Land Reforms Act, 1974.[455]

---

448. Bismillah v Janeshwar Prasad, (1990) 1 SCC 207.
449. Bhup Singh v Tulsi Ram, AIR 1991 HP 29.
450. Sita Ram v Chhota Bhondey, (1991) Supp 1 SCC 556.
451. Yashwant Ramachandra Dhumal v Shri Shanker Maruti Dhumal, AIR 2001 Bom 384.
452. Beni Madhav Singh v Ram Naresh, (1998) 8 SCC 751.
453. Ram Prasad (deceased) v Assistant Director of Consolidation, (1994) Supp 2 SCC 228.
454. Narendra Vaikunt Raikar v Amaral Pareira, 2007 (2) AIR Bom R 503 (Goa Bench).
455. Bishan Singh v Smt. Swantantar Devi, AIR 2007 HP 50 : 2007 (1) Shim LC 404.

The Karnataka High Court has held that the jurisdiction of civil court is not excluded either expressly or impliedly by the provisions of the Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964, or by the State Financial Corporations Act, 1951.[456]

In a case under the Mines and Minerals (Development and Regulation) Act, 1967 and Uttar Pradesh Minor Minerals (Concession) Rules, 1963, there was a demand for payment of royalty. The order of demand was not challenged and became final. Under notification issued by the State Government, arrears of are liable to be recovered as arrears of land revenue. Under the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, section 330(c) civil suits in respect of land revenue are barred. Thus, the consequential recovery of the amount of royalty so demanded become recoverable as arrears of land revenue and civil suit in respect of it would be barred.[457]

On the question of whether persons who succeeded the recorded tenants were rightly recorded as tenants or not, the Supreme Court has held that this is a question which is determinable by revenue authority and civil court has no jurisdiction.[458]

In cases where section 331A of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, are applicable, the matter has to be decided by the assistant collector and not the civil court.[459]

Where the tenure holder in possession of land has filed suit for cancellation of the sale deed simpliciter, with no other relief, the civil court's jurisdiction would not be barred by invoking section 331 of Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951 (1 of 1951). Suit for cancellation of a void document will generally lie in the civil court and party cannot be deprived of his right for getting this relief under the law except when a declaration of title or status of a tenure holder is necessarily involved, where relief of cancellation of sale deed is surplus. Thus, so far as suit for cancellation of void sale deed is concerned, the suit filed before the civil court is legally maintainable specifically in view of section 31 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, which declares that relief for cancellation of the sale deed can be granted by the civil court only.[460]

A recorded tenure holder can institute suit for cancellation of sale deed, if alleged to be void in view of plaint allegations, in a civil court. An executant of deed or his successor could file suit in civil court for cancellation of void document/instrument. But a third person who is not recorded tenure holder or executant of the sale deed or his predecessor/successor is not competent to institute suit in a civil court in view of the fact that his claim necessarily involves declaration of his right, and the remedy lies in revenue courts only. It is left open to the plaintiff to choose whether his rights would be insulated by seeking cancellation of sale deed in civil court or by filing a suit for declaration of his rights as tenure holders. In case he chooses that due to existence of a registered sale deed which according to the plaint allegations is valid, the hurdles come into play and rights are impugned upon though the document is void, he is fully competent and has every justification to institute a civil suit in a civil court seeking cancellation of document for the relief of adjudging and declaring the document as void. It is consequent upon declaration/cancellation of the document that the correction in the revenue records would be effected accordingly and he would not be subjected to seeking fresh

---

456. R Gopalakrishna v Karnataka State Financial Corp, Bangalore, AIR 2008 Kant 77 : ILR 2008 Kant 2034 (DB).
457. Hindalco Industries Ltd v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2010 All 94 : 2010 (2) All LJ 545.
458. Azhar Hassan v District Judge, Saharanpur, AIR 1998 SC 2960 : (1998) 3 SCC 246 : (1998) 2 Mad LJ 126 (SC).
459. Chandrika Singh v Raja Vishwanath Pratap Singh, (1992) 3 SCC 90.
460. Barkhu v Fifth Addl Distt Judge, Basti, AIR 2004 All 418.

declaration of his rights as bhumidhar in any suit under section 229B/209 of Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951 and it is the civil court which would be vested with the jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Where the plaintiff is neither executant of the instrument nor successor and happens to be a third party, notwithstanding the fact that a deed is cancelled on the basis of a civil court, the name of the plaintiff cannot be entered in the revenue record unless the plaintiff files a suit for declaration of his bhumidhari rights on the basis of so-called sale deed executed by the bhumidhar and this necessarily entails declaration of rights by the revenue court and plaintiff cannot claim any relief unless declaration is made in his favour, of his right as bhumidhar. Before entering into the question of cancellation of the void document, the civil court has to adjudicate upon and make declaration whether the sale deed in favour of the plaintiff is a valid one and this necessarily entails declaration of the title of the plaintiff as bhumidhar. It is not simply a denial of the title of the defendant itself on the basis of the deed but it is a declaration of title in favour of the plaintiff. Therefore, in such a case, it is only the revenue court which has jurisdiction to entertain the suit and the civil court has no jurisdiction.[461]

Declaration and adjudication of rights of tenure holders in respect of land lying in an area for which a notification has been issued under section 4(2) of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953, and adjudication of any other right arising out of consolidation proceedings and in regard to which a proceeding could or ought to have been taken under the Act, must be done in accordance with the provision of the Act only. In the instant case, the son was claiming an interest in the land lying in the area covered by a notification issued under section 4(2). The claim was made on the basis that he was the son of C, brother of N, and the lands were recorded in the name of N in a representative capacity on behalf of himself and his other brother. The claim was disputed by the appellants and other members of the family. This claim had to be adjudicated by the authorities constituted under the Act, since it was a matter falling within the scope of the adjudicatory functions assigned to the consolidation authorities under the Act. Jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain the suit was barred.[462] When the panchayat does not dispute the title, it will not be open for the respondent to say that the jurisdiction of the civil court is barred in view of section 13 of Punjab Village Common Lands (Regulation) Act, 1961.[463]

Civil court's jurisdiction would not be barred in the following cases:

(i) where the order under rule 18 of the settlement rules is patently illegal or without jurisdiction;

(ii) where the remedy provided by the regulation to adjudge the objection raised is not sufficient;

(iii) where complicated questions relating to title are involved; or

(iv) where the plaintiff seeks declaration of his title over the land from which he is sought to be evicted.

As to points (iii) and (iv) above, the assertion of title must be genuine and must not be a mere pretext. A bona fide claim of having title and not having only a husk of title should be made.[464] Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1963 (No 1 of 1964), sections 31 and 32 bar the

---

461. Kishori Prasad v Third Addl. District Judge, Varanasi, AIR 2003 All 58.
462. Sita Ram v Chota Bhoudey, AIR 1991 SC 249 : (1991) 1 Supp SCC 556.
463. Mohinder Singh v Pirthipal Singh, AIR 1997 P&H 13.
464. Daulatram Lakhani v State of Assam, AIR 1990 Gau 17 (FB).

jurisdiction of the civil court. Application was filed by the tenant under section 31 of the Act before the tribunal, for fixation of fair rent. Suit for his eviction from disputed holding is barred by section 32, during the pendency of the application. When such an application is pending, suit by the landlord for his eviction is not maintainable.[465]

It can be safely said that the legal position is well settled that civil court has the jurisdiction to agitate upon the matter relating to title over the property. It is correct that if any claim is made as regards perfect partition, no civil court shall exercise its jurisdiction as envisaged under section 154(1)(d) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulations Act, 1886 (1 of 1886). Section 154 of the Regulation provides that except where otherwise expressly provided in this Regulation or in Rule framed thereunder, no civil court shall exercise the jurisdiction in any matter mentioned in the various clauses under the section including clause (d) which relates to claim of person to perfect partition. Revenue court has been vested with the power to effect the partition whether perfect or imperfect, of the revenue paying properties. But at the same time, jurisdiction of the civil court to determine the right of the parties to the properties in dispute as well as the shares of which they are entitled to has not been taken away by the Regulation. In the instant case, though the matter was earlier agitated before the revenue court for effecting perfect partition, the petitioners, having failed to get adequate relief, approached the civil court by filing suit in question for declaration of right, title and interest over the suit land. In such premises, the court did not find any reason how this section 154 could debar the petitioners claiming to the title of the land in question from approaching the civil court. Section 62 also clearly vests a right upon the person to prefer a suit to the civil court for declaration of his right to any property. Therefore, the civil court is the absolute authority to adjudicate a dispute relating to the title and interest over the immovable property.[466]

Under Orissa Land Reforms Act, 1960 (16 of 1960), sections 15 and 67, suit for declaration of Sikmi tenancy falls within jurisdiction of revenue court. Jurisdiction of the civil court to decide the dispute is barred under section 67. Where one party to the dispute claims to be a tenant under the other party and there is a dispute of such relationship, either on account of factual position or on account of legal position, such dispute is to be decided by the revenue officer having exclusive jurisdiction. Jurisdiction of the civil court to try and decide such a matter is barred.[467] A suit for declaration of the title by the land owner, in case where the name of the land owner was deleted and the state had incorporated his own name in the rent abatement proceedings, the civil court shall have the jurisdiction to decide such questions.[468]

When only a part of the relief claimed can be granted by a tenancy court, the civil court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit for the rest of the relief. Hence, where the tenancy court cannot grant relief for damages and can grant only a relief of eviction, the civil court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit for damages.[469] The order passed by the authority under Himachal Pradesh Land Revenue Act, 1954 (6 of 1954) can be challenged before the civil court.[470]

In the light of section 63 of the Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964 (12 of 1964) and section 9 of the CPC, the civil court's jurisdiction under section 63 of the Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964, is expressly barred in respect of the proceedings against the state government

---

465. Nanu Vasudevan v Kalikarthiayaniamma, AIR 1991 Ker 253 (DB).
466. Thanda Bala Choudhury v Birendra Kumar Choudhury, AIR 2003 Gau 32.
467. Bhikari Nayak v Brajabandhu Nayak, AIR 1991 Ori 191 (DB). See also Champabati Devi v Durgadhar Swain, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1337 (Ori).
468. State of Orissa v Bhanu Mali, AIR 1996 Ori 199.
469. Satya Pramoda Thirthaswawama Pavaru v Mula Gunnaya, AIR 1982 AP 24 (DB).
470. Kashi Ram v Harbhajan Singh Bhajji, AIR 2002 HP 154.

on account of any act or omission of the state government or any revenue officer. Unless the plaintiff first proves that prior to the institution of the suit he exhausted the remedy of appeal as provided in law for the time being in force, within the period of limitation prescribed in the statute, it is not possible in law for the plaintiff to institute the original suit challenging the orders referred to above passed by the second defendant. Against the orders dated 10 February 1993 and 16 May 1995 of the second defendant, the plaintiff had a right of statutory appeal to the Karnataka Appellate Tribunal under section 49(c) of the Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964. Undisputedly, the statutory appeal was not presented by the plaintiff before the Karnataka Appellate Tribunal within the period prescribed under the provisions of section 51 of the Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964 against those orders. The plaintiff had the right to urge all the grounds in the appeal, including the ground that the second defendant passed by the orders dated 10 February 1993 and 16 May 1995 against the plaintiff without complying with the mandatory provisions of the Act or rules and in compliance with the principles of natural justice in respect of the land in question. In view of the clear bar under section 63 of Karnataka Land Revenue Act, 1964, suit filed by the plaintiff was not maintainable. It follows that section 9, of the CPC will not come to the rescue of the plaintiff.[471]

In a Gujarat case, a government servant filed a suit challenging his dismissal from service on the plea that finding of the disciplinary authority was based on no evidence. It was held that civil court had jurisdiction to go into the evidence and ascertain whether the decision of disciplinary authority was based on no evidence and if so, to quash order of dismissal.[472]

The Telegraph Act, 1885 (13 of 1885), section 7B, creates a bar regarding civil court's jurisdiction to modify, remit and set aside an award or make it a rule of court. Civil court still has jurisdiction to refer the dispute between the parties to the Central Government for the appointment of an arbitrator. Section 7B does not, in any manner, oust that jurisdiction of the civil court.[473]

Where plaintiff sues on the basis of trespass, civil courts have jurisdiction and revenue courts do not have jurisdiction.[474] The scheme of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is complete in itself and thereby the jurisdiction of the civil court to take cognizance of the cases arising under the Land Acquisition Act, by necessary implication stood barred. The civil court thereby is devoid of jurisdiction to give declarations on the invalidity of the procedure contemplated under the Land Acquisition Act.[475] Under the Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1956, after the Act has come into the force, the jurisdiction of civil court to declare title to the Inam land, by necessary implication stood excluded.[476]

[s 9.45] Title Watan Land

When the matter pertaining to title to watan lands was pending before competent authority under Bombay Paragana and Kulkarni Watans Abolition Act, 1950 (50 of 1950) which has exclusive jurisdiction to deal with the matter, the civil court has no jurisdiction to decide title to such land.[477]

---

471. State of Karnataka v M Muniraju, AIR 2002 Kant 287.
472. Badridan Bheravandan Gadhavi v State of Gujarat, AIR 1985 NOC 185 (Guj).
473. Prithvi Raj Kohli v UOI, AIR 1988 J&K 17.
474. Abdulla Bin Ali v Galappa, AIR 1985 SC 571 : (1985) 2 SCC 54.
475. Laxmichand v Gram Panchayat, Kararia, AIR 1996 SC 523 : (1996) 7 SCC 218.
476. Pushpagiri Math v Kopparaju Veerabhadra Rao, AIR 1996 SC 2225 : (1996) 9 SCC 202.
477. Subhan Rao v Parvathi Bai, AIR 2002 Kant 134.

However, in a case relating to the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, 1874 and Bombay Inferior Village Watan Abolition Act, 1959, the Supreme Court held that claim for hereditary interest or rights in respect of watan property based on adoption cannot be decided by collector and the jurisdiction of civil court is not excluded. Therefore, a suit for declaration before civil court is maintainable, as the question of adoption involves issues regarding the legal status and character of a person which can be decided only by civil court.[478] HL Duttu J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> As regards whether there is valid adoption or not, that question pertains to the status and legal character of an individual, which falls within the purview of Section 34 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, and a suit for declaration before a civil court is maintainable. Therefore, the question whether a particular person has been given in adoption or not is different from whether a person has hereditary interest or rights in respect of a Watan property. If this distinction is drawn, there is no exclusion of civil courts jurisdiction under the Act. When a person claims on the basis of adoption, such an adoption cannot be decided by the Collector as the same involves legal status/character of a person which can only be decided by the civil court.[479]

[s 9.46] Trust Matters

The question of whether the suit filed by the appellants is barred by the provisions of section 80 of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950 (29 of 1950) has to be examined in the light of the relevant provisions. Section 9 of CPC clearly lays down that the civil court shall have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature except suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred. It is well settled that the civil court has jurisdiction to try all suits of civil nature and the exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil court is not to be rightly inferred. Such exclusion must be either explicitly expressed or clearly implied. In Musamia Imam Haider Bax Razvi v Rabri Govindbhai Ratrabhai,[480] the Supreme Court observed that it is necessary to bear in mind the important principle of construction which is that if a statute purports to exclude the ordinary jurisdiction of a civil court, it must do so either by express terms or by the use of such terms as would necessarily lead to the inference of such exclusion. This principle was reiterated in Dewaji v Ganpatlal.[481]

While dealing with a case relating to the bar to the maintainability of suits by section 93 of the Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1951, the Supreme Court held that section 93 is not a bar to the maintainability of civil suit. The section only imposes a restriction on suits, or other legal proceedings in respect of matters for which a provision has been made in the Act.[482] SUBBA RAO, CJ, speaking for the division bench observed as follows:

> Under section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the courts shall have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature excepting suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred. It is a well settled principle that a party seeking to oust the jurisdiction of an ordinary civil court shall establish the right to do so. Section 93 of the Act does not impose a total bar on the maintainability of a suit in a civil court. It states that a suit of the nature mentioned therein can be instituted only in conformity with the provisions of the Act; that is to say, a suit or other legal proceeding in respect of matters not covered by the section can be instituted in the ordinary way. It therefore imposes certain statutory

---

478. Ramchandra Dagdu Sonavane v Vithu Hira Mahar, AIR 2010 SC 818 : (2009) 10 SCC 273.
479. Ramchandra Dagdu Sonavane v Vithu Hira Mahar, AIR 2010 SC 818, para 30, at pp 827–828 : (2009) 10 SCC 273.
480. Musamia Imam Haider Bax Razvi v Rabri Govindbhai Ratrabhai, AIR 1969 SC 439 : (1969) 1 SCR 785.
481. Dewaji v Ganpatlal, AIR 1969 SC 560 : (1969) 1 SCR 573.
482. Sri Vedagiri Lakshmi Narasimha Swami Temple v Induru Pattabhirami Reddy, AIR 1967 SC 781 : (1967) 1 SCR 280.

> restrictions on suits or other legal proceedings relating to matters mentioned therein. Now, what are those matters? They are: (1) administration or management of religious institutions; and (2) any other matter or dispute for determining or deciding which provision, is made in the Act. The clause "determining or deciding which provision is made in this Act", on a reasonable construction, cannot be made to qualify "the administration or management" but must be confined only to any other matter or dispute. Even so, the expression "administration or management" cannot be construed widely so as to take in any matter however remotely connected with the administration or management. The limitation on the said words is found in the phrase "except under and in conformity with the provisions of this Act". To state it differently, the said phrase does not impose a total bar on a suit in a civil court but only imposes a restriction on suits or other legal proceedings in respect of matters for which a provision is made in the Act. Any other construction would lead to an incongruity, namely, there will be a vacuum in many areas not covered by the Act and the general remedies would be displaced without replacing them by new remedies.[483]

A three-judge bench of the Supreme Court while considering section 40 of the Mysore Religious and Charitable Institutions Act, 1927 which barred institution of civil suits in matters relating to religious trusts, held that bar to jurisdiction of civil court does not apply where serious allegations of fraud/forgery are made in the management of the trust.[484] SN Variava J, speaking for the Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> An enquiry contemplated under Section 17 is a summary enquiry of the type held under the various Land Revenue Codes. That it would be a summary enquiry is clear from section 37 of the Mysore Act. Such summary enquiries do not bar jurisdictions of civil courts. Even otherwise, we are unable to accept the submission that section 18(5) allows the Muzrai Officer to deal with cases where serious allegations of fraud and/or forgery are made. Section 18(5) merely enables the Muzrai Officer to pass ancillary or necessary orders in respect of matters covered by sub-sections (1) to (4) of the Section. The enquiry has to be in respect of matters laid down in sub-sections (1) to (4) of section 18. Further an order under section 18 can only be passed by the Muzrai Officer with previous sanction of the Government. This also shows that these provisions are not meant to be a substitute for judicial proceedings.[485]

In a case relating to the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1959, where the worshippers filed a suit in representative capacity claiming that suit property belonged to temple and sought permanent injunction, the Madras High Court held that sale in favour of the defendant without the permission of the Commissioner was sham and nominal and the suit filed by worshippers was maintainable.[486]

The Supreme Court noted that under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, the legislature intended to confer jurisdiction only on civil court for deciding a dispute. It further noted that in Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh,[487] Justice Hidayatullah had examined the question as to how exclusion of jurisdiction of the civil court in context of express or implied bar created in any special law should be decided and laid down seven conditions for determining the question of bar for prosecuting the remedies in the civil court or tribunals constituted under any special law. The bench speaking through Justice Chelameshwar held that although the issue examined by Justice Hidayatullah pertained to bar created in special law vis-à-vis filing of the civil suit by an aggrieved party, yet the decision laid down the general principle as to how the courts should

---

483. Sri Vedagiri Lakshmi Narasimha Swami Temple v Induru Pattabhirami Reddy, AIR 1967 SC 781 : (1967) 1 SCR 280, at p 287.
484. Sudhir G Angur v M Sanjeev, AIR 2006 SC 351 : (2006) 1 SCC 141.
485. Sudhir G Angur v M Sanjeev, AIR 2006 SC 351, at p 354 : (2006) 1 SCC 141.
486. Basha Sahib v Valikandapuram Village Kasi Viswanathasamy Koil, (2003) 1 Mad LJ 563 (Mad) : (2003) 1 CTC 519.
487. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : 1968 SCR (3) 662.

decide the issue of express or/and implied bar in the context of the remedies available in law. It was held conclusively that though the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, does not provide any express bar in relation to the applicability of other Acts for determining disputes arising under it, yet there is an implied bar of exclusion of applicability of the Arbitration Act, 1940, for deciding the disputes relating to trust, trustees and beneficiaries through private arbitration. Therefore, disputes arising under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, can only be adjudicated upon by the principal civil court of ordinary jurisdiction and not by an arbitrator despite the existence of the arbitration agreement to that effect.[488]

Section 73 of the Rajasthan Public Trusts Act, 1959 bars jurisdiction of civil court. But where in a litigation the question was whether it was public trust or private trust and it was held to be a private trust and the decision became final, there was no question of applying the Rajasthan Public Trusts Act, 1959. It was held that inter se disputes could only be decided by civil suits filed under section 9 of the Code.[489]

The allegations made in the plaint show that the only right claimed by the appellants is that of being ancestral pujaris of the temple. The appellants do not claim themselves to be the trustees of any trust as defined under section 2(18) of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950. No declaration regarding the existence or otherwise of a trust or that any particular property is the property of such trust which comes within the purview of the deputy or assistant charity commissioner under section 79 of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950, has been claimed. The only relief claimed is a declaration regarding the right of the appellants to function as hereditary pujaris or their pujariki rights of performing puja in the temple and a consequential decree for injunction for restraining the respondents from interfering with the aforesaid rights of the appellants. The reliefs so claimed do not at all come within the ambit of section 19 or section 79 of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950, on which the deputy or assistant charity commissioner has the jurisdiction to hold an inquiry and give a decision. Therefore, the bar of section 80 of the Act which by the express language used is confined to "any question which is by or under this Act to be decided or dealt with by any officer or authority under this Act, and in respect of which the decision or order of such officer or authority has been made final and conclusive" would not apply.[490]

[s 9.47] Suits Between Landlords and Tenants

A suit for eviction or possession under the general law can be filed only in a civil court. If such suit is in respect of open land, the suit for possession will always lie in the civil court. If the suit is in respect of accommodation, viz, building where no relationship of landlord and tenant is alleged, the suit will lie in the civil court. If some unauthorised person committed trespass in the building owned by the plaintiff, he can file suit for possession against such trespassers in the civil court. If, however, relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties is admitted and the disputed property is building and the relief sought is possession by eviction of the tenant and for recovery of rent such suit will be triable by the rent court.[491]

In relation to a case under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1997, it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that an application for repair of suit premises would not come under the bar imposed by section 44 of the Act. Such an application, being in the nature of 488. Vimal Kishore Shah v Jayesh Dinesh Shah, (2016) 8 SCC 788.

---

489. Dinesh Chandra Swami v Manesh Chandra Swami, 2007 (1) Raj LR 654 (Jaipur Bench).
490. Sahebgouda v Ogeppa, AIR 2003 SC 2743 : AIR 2003 SCW 3088 : (2003) 6 SCC 151.
491. Bharvad Chhota Bhaga v Bharvad Jaga Dahya, AIR 1999 Guj 17.

an interlocutory proceeding, would not come within the ambit of "proceedings" as defined in section 44. As such, civil court is competent to decide the application in accordance with law.[492]

The question has often come up before the courts as to ouster of their jurisdiction in disputes between landlords and tenants when special courts are constituted for settling them. It has been held in accordance with the principles stated above that courts would have jurisdiction to interfere with the decisions of the tribunals only if they had acted in excess of the jurisdiction conferred by the statute or in contravention of the rules of natural justice. Thus, where a decision of the tribunal under the Orissa Tenants Protection Act, 1948, was assailed on the ground that the parties did not stand in the relationship of landlord and tenant, it was held that as the Act postulated such a relationship as the foundation for the exclusive jurisdiction of the tribunal, its decision was open to review by the civil court;[493] but when the legislature made the decision of the tribunal on that question final, the correctness of that decision could not be questioned in the civil courts.[494] Though it is true that serious question of title cannot be decided by the revenue court and where basic relationships of landlord and tenant has been challenged, the same ought to be decided by the civil court, where a person has accepted the other parties as landlord by attornment and does not claim title and in himself, such question may be decided by the authority as they do not involve serious question of title.[495] Since no jural relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the respondent and the appellant, mamlatdar was not competent to decide the dispute and civil court alone had jurisdiction to decide the matter.[496] When concurrent findings by the courts of fact were that the respondent was the owner of the premises and the appellants were in unauthorised occupants thereof, in such circumstances, only civil court and no other court will have the jurisdiction to order eviction.[497]

The tenancy of a shop presupposes a property in existence and there cannot be subsisting tenancy where the property is not in existence. When the tenanted shop has been completely destroyed by fire, the tenancy right stands extinguished as the demise must have a subject matter and if the same is no longer in existence, there is an end of the tenancy. Section 108(B)(e) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has no application in case of premises governed by the State Rent Act. Therefore, when the tenanted premises is completely destroyed by natural calamities, tenant cannot resist dispossession on strength of section 108(B)(e) of Transfer of Property Act, 1882.[498]

Since the words "parts of building" used in definition of word "building" under State Rent Act do not refer to land on which building is constructed but refer to any other super structure which is part of that main building and as the tenancy of the shop which was let out was a superstructure thus what is protected by the Act is the occupation of tenant in the super structure, so the tenancy no longer continues under State Rent Act. The subject matter of tenancy having been completely destroyed, the tenant can no longer use the said shop and in fact he has ceased to occupy the said shop. Section 11 of the State Rent Act does not provide for eviction of the tenant on the ground of destruction of the building or the super structure. Thus, when there is no super structure in existence, the landlord cannot claim recovery of 492. Kartick Chandra Bhandari v Ashim Kumar Samanta, AIR 2008 Cal 279 : 2008 (2) Cal LJ 20.

---

493. Magiti Sasmal v Pandab Bissoi, AIR 1962 SC 547.
494. Brij Raj Krishna v SK Shaw, AIR 1951 SC 115.
495. Pyarelal Sakseria v Devishankar Parashar, AIR 1994 MP 115.
496. Somabhai Kanjibhai Baria v Patel Parshottam Das Jamna Das, (1995) 3 SCC 282.
497. Ram Singh v Ajay Chawala, (1988) 1 SCC 364.
498. Vannattankandy Ibrayi v Kunhabdulla Hajee, AIR 2003 SC 4453 : (2001) 1 SCC 564.

possession of vacant site under the State Rent Act. The Act is not intended to govern vacant land. The only remedy available to him is to file a suit in a civil court for recovery of possession of land. In view of the matter, the civil court was competent to entertain and try the suit filed by the respondent landlord.[499]

A land lady filed a suit for eviction on different grounds including bona fide requirement for personal use. The averments in the plaint did not show that the suit was filed in the capacity of "specified landlord" under the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961. It was held by the Supreme Court that the jurisdiction of civil court does not stand excluded, more so when the title of the land lady was disputed.[500] Explaining the definition of "specified landlord" as contained in section 23J of the Act, SB Sinha J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 16. Chapter III-A provides for special provisions. It is confined to eviction of tenants on grounds of bona fide requirement of different classes of landlord specified therein. A summary procedure is provided for. Recourse thereto can be taken only by the specified landlord within the meaning of the provision of Section 23-J of the Act which means a "landlord who is a widow or divorced wife" amongst others. Amongst others a servant of any Government including a member of defence services, would also fall within the purviews of the said definition. Only a landlord who comes within the purview of the said definition is entitled to file suit on the ground of his or her bona fide requirement.[501]

On the question of jurisdiction of civil court, the judgment went on to state as follows:

> 36. The definition of "specified landlord" as contained in section 23-J of the Act is not as broad as the definition of the same term as contained in Section 2(b) thereof. A statute must be read, keeping in view the constitutional scheme of equality as adumbrated in Article 14 of the Constitution of India. Once a special benefit has been conferred on a special category of landlord, the same must receive strict construction. Even otherwise, it is well settled, that an exclusion provision must be construed strictly. A statute ousting the jurisdiction of civil court should also be strictly construed.[502]

A perusal of section 108(B)(e) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, shows that where a premise has fallen down under the circumstances mentioned therein, the destruction of the shop itself does not amount to determination of tenancy under section 111 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. In other words, there is no automatic determination of tenancy and it continues to exist. If the tenancy continues, the tenant can only squat on the vacant land but cannot use the shop for carrying on business as it is destroyed and further he cannot construct any shop on the vacant land. Under such circumstances, it is the tenant who is to suffer as he is unable to enjoy the fruits of the tenancy but he is saddled with the liability to pay monthly rent to the landlord. It is for such a situation that the tenant has been given an option under section 108(B)(e) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, to render the lease of the premises as void and avoid the liability to pay monthly rent to the landlord. Section 108(B)(e) cannot be interpreted to mean that the tenant is entitled to squat on the open land in the hope that in future if any shop is constructed on the site, where the old shop existed he would have right to occupy the newly constructed premises on the strength of original contract of tenancy.[503]

One co-owner inducted a tenant without the consent of other co-owners. The tenant ran a workshop without licence from the municipal corporation (as was then required under the law). It was held that a co-owner can sue for a declaration that the tenant had no right to

---

499. Vannattankandy Ibrayi v Kunhabdulla Hajee, AIR 2003 SC 4453: (2001) 1 SCC 564.
500. Sulochana v Rajindra Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2611 : (2008) 15 SCC 538.
501. Sulochana v Rajindra Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2611, para 16, at p 2614 : (2008) 15 SCC 538.
502. Sulochana v Rajindra Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2611, para 36, at p 2617 : (2008) 15 SCC 538.
503. Sulochana v Rajindra Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2611, para 36, at p 2617 : (2008) 15 SCC 538.

run the workshop and for permanent injunction.[504] The suit for ejectment and recovery of possession from legal heirs of deceased statutory tenant who continued to be in possession of premises beyond the period of one year from the date of death of the deceased tenant and thereby lost protection available to them in Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958 (59 of 1958) and became unauthorised occupants, is maintainable before the civil court and not barred under section 111 of Transfer of Property Act, 1882 (4 of 1882).[505]

A dispute regarding identification of boundaries between two adjacent land owners is a dispute of a civil nature, which can be entertained by a civil court.[506] Where an occupancy tenant has challenged the validity of the sale deed by way of which the land occupied by him was sold by a third person and the sale deed clearly showed that it was a small piece of land surrounded by the houses of different people and has been sold for construction of a house and the land in question was not established as an agrarian land, the jurisdiction of the civil court would not be barred.[507] On a proper construction of Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960, the question on which the jurisdiction of civil court is excluded is only the determination as to the fair rent of the premises. It will not be open to the civil court to re-determine the rent payable by the tenant to the landlord because that is a matter squarely and exclusively within the jurisdiction of the rent controller and, therefore, impliedly excluded from the purview of the civil court; but, his decision is not final on the issue that opens up his jurisdiction and cannot preclude an owner from contending in a civil court, that he should not be asked to pay rent for his own property to someone else.[508]

An analysis of section 91 read with section 93 Madhya Bharat Land Revenue and Tenancy Act (66 of 1950) shows that the recourse to a civil court is not available to a pakka tenant who has been dispossessed unless he exhausts the remedy under section 91 of the Act. In this connection, the use of the expression in section 93 of the Act that no order passed under sections 91 and 92 shall preclude any person from establishing such rights shows that a pakka tenant who has been dispossessed and claims recovery of possession is first required to take recourse to the remedy available under section 91 of the Act.[509]

The civil court cannot pass a decree for possession against a tenant from the premises to which provisions of the Rent Control Act apply. Mere disclaimer of owner's title does not result in automatic termination of tenancy and hence decree cannot be passed against such a tenant also.[510] Section 13 of Haryana Urban (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act 1973, which gives the rights to the landlord to seek eviction of the tenant for default in the payment of rent, provides that the remedy and the forum and the decree of ejectment passed by the controller or the appellant authority or the revisional authority or conformation either in appeal or revision is final under the Act. Thereby, by necessary implication the jurisdiction of the civil court under section 9 is excluded.[511]

In a Madras case, the defendants agreed to pay a monthly rent of Rs 50. The plaintiff issued one month's notice, terminating the tenancy which was from month to month with reference to the Tamil month. The original lease of the entire property could not be sustained, by reason

---

504. Jadunath v Mritunjoy, AIR 1986 Cal 416.
505. Krishna Prakash v Dilip Harel Mitra Chenoy, AIR 2002 Del 81 (DB).
506. Achyutan Nair v P Narayan Nair, (1987) 4 SCC 71.
507. Sheel Kumar v Prem Singh, AIR 1997 J&K 37.
508. Life Insurance Corp of India v India Automobiles, (1990) 4 SCC 286.
509. Babu Khan v Nazim Khan, AIR 2001 SC 1740 : (2001) 5 SCC 375.
510. Govindamma v Murugesh Mudaliar, AIR 1991 Kant 290.
511. Sushil Kumar Mehta v Gobind Ram Bohra (deceased), (1990) 1 SCC 193.

of the purchase by the defendants of the three-fourth share belonging to the three brothers of the plaintiff. Therefore, the plaintiff filed a suit praying for a decree: (i) for partition and separate possession of one-fourth of the share of the property after removing the superstructure and machinery; and (ii) for passing a decree for eviction of the defendants from plaintiff's one-fourth share of the property and for costs. It was held that the suit as framed was maintainable and both the reliefs, namely, partition and separate possession and eviction, could be prayed for in the same suit. The plaintiff could not file a suit for eviction of the defendants from the entirety of the property, as the plaintiff was entitled to one-fourth share only. The only way the plaintiff could get possession of his one-fourth share in the property was to file a suit and combine, in one suit, the prayers relating to eviction as also for partition and separate possession. That was what he had done in this case and he was entitled to the reliefs prayed for.[512]

An amendment to the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948, became applicable to the suit and the defendant's status as a protected tenant got revived by the time civil court was seized of the matter. Consequently, the civil court ceased to have the jurisdiction over the matter.[513] The civil court has no jurisdiction to determine whether the person who succeeded the recorded tenant rightly is recorded as tenants. This determination can only be made by the revenue authorities.[514] A relief for actual possession under the Bombay Tenancy Act, 1939, from the defendants who claimed to be the protected tenants could be granted only by the revenue court and not by the civil court.[515] It was after amendment to the Goa, Daman and Diu Agricultural Tenancy Act, 1964, in 1975, that the civil court lost jurisdiction to try the issue of tenancy relating to suit plots which are bagayat (garden) lands, as well as the question of nature of land. Therefore, civil court is precluded from deciding even incidentally, questions falling within the ambit of section 7 of the said Act, and, as such, it is necessary that the issue of tenancy raised by the respondent be referred to the mamlatdar for decision.[516]

The sole question that possessed itself for consideration before the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Parvati v Fatehsinhrao Pratapsinhrao Gaekwad[517] was whether the issuance of notification under sub-section (1)(b) of section 88 of Act 30 of 1956, on 21 May 1958, making the provisions of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Land Act, 1948, inapplicable to the lands reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development of the municipal limit of the city of Baroda, retrospectively. It was held that if the Act does not at all apply then the determination of the rent of the suit land was made by the mamlatdar under the provisions of sections 8 and 9 of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Land Act, will be of no avail and the civil court will be competent to determine the rent payable by the tenant in respect of this land.[518] The mamlatdar is a tribunal of limited jurisdiction and the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Land Act itself contemplates that a negative declaration can be given by the mamlatdar in an application under section 4. This would contemplate that the legislature expressly conferred power on the mamlatdar to grant a negative declaration in limited cases. If section 7 of the Goa, Daman and Diu Agricultural Tenancy Act (7 of 1964) was all embracing and the mamlatdar could decide the issue of both positive and negative declarations, there would be no need to provide for negative declaration under section 4. No part of the Act or, for that matter

---

512. KMSK Rabindranath v S Bakyam Pillai, AIR 1988 Mad 358.
513. Dahiben (Widow of Ranchhodji Jivanji) v Vasanji Kevalbhai (deceased), (1995) Supp 2 SCC 295.
514. Azhar Hasan v Dist. Judge, Saharanpur, (1998) 3 SCC 246.
515. AA Shirdone v Saheb H Tajbhokhari, (1985) 2 SCC 477.
516. Bhaskar Pandurang Prabhu Dessai v Gajanan Arjun Salgaonkar, AIR 1997 Bom 177.
517. Parvati v Fatehsinhrao Pratapsinhrao Gaekwad, (1986) 4 SCC 319.
518. Parvati v Fatehsinhrao Pratapsinhrao Gaekwad, (1986) 4 SCC 319.

language of a statute, can be said to be otiose. That is a cardinal principle of interpretation. It is the duty of the court to give effect to the intent of the legislature. Once the legislature has expressly provided for grant of negative declaration in limited cases, it would contemplate ouster of jurisdiction in matter other than section 4. This would also be a harmonious construction as the jurisdiction of the civil court would not be ousted and there would be no conflicting judgments. The language of the Tenancy Act, therefore, contemplates that no negative declaration can be granted by the mamlatdar. Of course, when the issue arises before the mamlatdar, he can always decide whether the person who claims the right has so proved or not. This is the jurisdiction inherent in deciding an issue. That does not mean that because the mamlatdar could decide the issue either on a reference by a civil court or on application before him, he can assume jurisdiction not vested in him.[519]

[s 9.48] Civil Court's Jurisdiction Barred by Rent Act — Counter Claim If Maintainable

It is now well-settled that a decree passed by a court having no jurisdiction is a nullity. The civil court had no jurisdiction to pass a decree for eviction only on the basis that the tenant has denied their title. The matter might have been different if the civil court has otherwise jurisdiction to entertain a suit. The legislature has created new rights and liabilities for both the landlord and tenant in terms of the provisions of the said Act and provided a forum therefor. The jurisdiction of the civil court having been barred except in a situation where the proviso appended to sub-section (1) of section 10 would be attracted, the civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for eviction on a ground envisaged under section 10(2)(vi) of the Andhra Pradesh Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act, 1960. The civil court, thus, had no jurisdiction to entertain the counter-claim.[520]

In suit for injunction filed by the appellant tenant against landlord, the landlord filed a counter-claim under O VII, rule 6 of the CPC claiming eviction of appellants, inter alia, under clause (e) of section 12(1) of the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961 (41 of 1961). In view of Ch III-A and section 23A, which were inserted in the Act in 1983, was later amended and confined to specified landlord defined in section 23J thereunder, the civil court has jurisdiction to entertain counter claim with regard to eviction of tenant on ground of bona fide need for occupation as residence and decree for eviction passed by civil court is not vitiated for want of jurisdiction.[521]

[s 9.49] Ownership Certificate Issued by Rent Tribunal — Civil Court's Decree Not Executable

A civil court does not have jurisdiction to decide matters which are required to be dealt with by the tribunal under the said Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948 (67 of 1948). Thus, it is only the tribunal which can decide whether a person is deemed to be a tenant and whether he is entitled to purchase the land held by him. The civil court has no jurisdiction to decide such a question. Even if such a question was to be raised in a proceeding before it, the civil court would have to refer the issue to the authority under the said Act. The suit would then have to be disposed of in accordance with the decision of the authority. Thus, if the tribunal fixes a purchase price, and issues a certificate, then that certificate would be conclusive

---

519. Dattaram A Arolkar v Mamlatdar of Mormugao, Vasco da Gama, Goa, AIR 2001 Bom 74.
520. Deva Sahayam v P Savithramma, AIR 2006 SC 779 : (2005) 7 SCC 653.
521. Ashok Kumar Gupta v Vijay Kumar Agrawal, AIR 2002 SC 1310 : AIR 2002 SCW 1124.

proof of purchase. The civil court would then be bound to give effect to the certificate and cannot ignore it. In passing the decree and holding the appellant to be trespasser, the civil court has not considered the provisions of the said Act. The conclusion that the appellant is a trespasser is de hors rights of the appellant under the said Act. The appellant had already made an application under section 32O before the suit was filed by the respondents. Respondents were aware that the appellant had made such an application. The appellant was pursuing her remedy under the said Act before the appropriate authority. Respondents were also parties to those proceedings and were contesting those proceedings. These are not questions which could be raised before a civil court. Therefore, rightly neither respondents nor the appellant took up this question before the civil court. Even if the question had been raised, the civil court could not have decided it. The civil court would have had to refer the issues to the appropriate authority and then abide by its decision. A decree passed without the consideration of the provisions of the said Act must be subject to orders of the appropriate authority in proceedings under the said Act.[522]

Thus, so long as the certificate stands, the decree cannot be executed against the appellant. It is only if respondents succeed in getting the certificate set aside, in their pending revision, that they can execute the decree.[523]

[s 9.50] Suits Impliedly Barred

Besides suits of which the cognizance is expressly barred, there are suits which are barred by general principles of law such as suits relating to acts of state and public policy (vide notes below.) No suit will lie to recover costs incurred in a criminal court.[524] Again, a suit will not lie for damages for defamatory statements made in the course of a judicial proceeding by a party or by a witness. The ground of this principle is "that it concerns the public and the administration of justice that witnesses giving their evidence on oath in a court of justice should not have before their eyes the fear of being harassed by suits for damages but that the only penalty which they should incur if they give evidence falsely should be an indictment for perjury".[525] A suit by a military servant alleging that his discharge from service was illegal is barred by implication.[526] Suit by a legatee claiming allotment of property during pendency of administration of estate suit as per probate will is impliedly barred and the plaint is liable to be rejected.[527]

The Orissa Development Authorities Act, 1982, has provided for adequate efficacious remedy for redressal of the grievance of a citizen who undertakes development/construction over his land in the shape of appeal to the state government or to the official designated by the state government and thereafter he can approach the high court invoking its certiorari jurisdiction. Similarly, the person aggrieved by an order of demolition passed under section 91 of the Orissa Development Authorities Act, 1982, has adequate and efficacious remedy in the shape of appeal before the state government. The legislature in its wisdom has made the

---

522. Saraswatibai Trimbale Gaikwad v Damodar D Motinale, AIR 2002 SC 1568 : (2002) 4 SCC 481.
523. Saraswatibai Trimbale Gaikwad v Damodar D Motinale, AIR 2002 SC 1568 : (2002) 4 SCC 481.
524. Fazal Imam v Rasul, (1899) ILR 12 All 166; Mahomedali v Bayamma, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 100; Churamoni v Baidya Nath, (1907) 32 Cal 429.
525. Baboo Ganesh Dutt v Mungueeram, (1873) 41 Beng LR 321, 328; Mugnee Ram v Ganesh, (1865) 5 WR 134; Chidambara v Thirumani, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 87; Nathuji Lalbhai, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 97; Templeton v Laurie, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 230; Dawan Singh v Mahip Singh, (1888) ILR 10 All 425; Bikumbar v Becharam, (1888) 15 Cal 264.
526. UOI v Ramchand, AIR 1955 P&H 166.
527. Himangshu Kumar Basu v Sudhangshu Kumar Basu, AIR 2004 Cal 217.

decisions under the Act conclusive and final with a further stipulation that same shall not be questioned in any court of law and it is not for the high court to question that wisdom. Thus, the conclusion is irresistible that without exhausting the remedies stipulated under the special statute, i.e., Orissa Development Authorities Act, 1982, a person cannot knock at the doors of a civil court and that the civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. Therefore, the jurisdiction of the civil courts is impliedly barred, so far as the redressal of the grievance for which adequate provisions have been enacted under the Orissa Development Authorities Act, 1982. The civil court has also no jurisdiction to grant interim injunctions restraining the statutory authorities from exercising the statutory powers conferred upon them. But then the civil courts shall have jurisdiction to examine cases where there are allegations that the provisions of the Act have not been complied with or the statutory authorities have not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure.[528]

Where the agreement and the rules framed under the Electricity Act, 1910, provide complete remedy, no suit is maintainable under section 9 of the CPC being impliedly barred. It is true that ordinarily, the civil court has jurisdiction to go into and try the disputed questions of civil nature, where the fundamental fairness of the procedure has been violated. A suit seeking injunction restraining the board from proceedings in accordance with law cannot be maintained. Such suit is not maintainable because of its being impliedly barred under section 9.[529] The mortgage being outside the scope of the Rajasthan Tenancy Act, 1955, the view that the mortgage was excluded in pursuance to section 43 of the Act and therefore, the residuary Entry 35 of Sch III was attracted, is untenable. Thus, sections 207 and 256 of the Rajasthan Tenancy Act, 1955, conferring exclusive jurisdiction on the revenue court is also inapplicable. The civil court has, therefore, jurisdiction to entertain the suit filed by the bank. On the question of jurisdiction, one must always have regard to the substance of the matter and not to the form of the suit.[530] Where a statute gives a finality to the orders of the special tribunal, the civil court's jurisdiction must be held to be excluded if there is adequate remedy to do what the civil courts would normally do in a suit. Where, however, there is an express bar of the jurisdiction of the court, an examination of the scheme of the particular act to find out the adequacy or the sufficiency of the remedies provided may be relevant.[531]

[s 9.51] Family Courts

If the main dispute is between the parties to the marriage, then in view of section 8 of the Family Courts Act, 1984 (66 of 1984), the jurisdiction of civil court is barred and the family court has to try the suit.[532]

The Supreme Court has held that the words "suit or proceeding between the parties to a marriage" contained in Explanation (c) to Section 7(1) of the Family Courts Act, 1984 cannot be read as "parties to subsisting marriage", because divorce does not take it beyond the jurisdiction of family court.[533] Sinha J, speaking for the three-judge bench of the Supreme Court in the above case, observed as follows:

---

528. Puri Konark Development Authority v Ratna Bhadra, AIR 2002 Ori 207.
529. Geeta Pump Pvt Ltd v District Judge, Saharanpur, AIR 2000 All 58; PSEB v Ashwani Kumar, (1997) 5 SCC 120; SP Subramanya Shetty v KSRTC, AIR 1997 SC 2076 : (1997) 11 SCC 250 : JT 1997 (4) SC 594; Hyderabad Vanaspati Ltd v APSEB, (1998) 4 SCC 470.
530. Bank of Baroda v Moti Bhai, (1985) 1 SCC 475.
531. Syyad Mohd Vaquir El-Edroos v State of Gujarat, (1981) 4 SCC 383.
532. HP Lakshmid Evaraje v GP Asharani, AIR 2002 Kant 399.
533. KA Abdul Jaleel v TA Shahida, AIR 2003 SC 2525 : (2003) 4 SCC 166 : 2003 (2) Ker LT 403.

> The statement of Objects and Reasons, as referred to hereinbefore, would clearly go to show that the jurisdiction of the Family Court extends, inter alia, in relation to properties of spouses or either of them which would clearly mean that the properties claimed by the parties thereto as a spouse of other; irrespective of the claim whether property is claimed during the subsistence of a marriage or otherwise.[534]

The Kerala High Court has held that the expression "with respect to the property of the parties" contained in Explanation (c) to Section 7(1) of the Family Court Act, 1984, means property of either the husband or the wife or both, but it excludes any other person who has independent rights in the property. Thus, a suit for partition between husband and wife where son is a party is maintainable before civil court. It was observed that the words "or of either of them" following the expression "with respect to the property of the parties" in Explanation (c) to Section 7(1) of the Act would unmistakably lead to the conclusion that the expression refers to parties to a marriage and not parties to the proceedings.[535]

The Andhra Pradesh High Court[536] has held that an argument that family court partakes all the characters of a civil court is undoubtable by virtue of section 10[537] of the Act itself. It held that the distinguishing feature between a civil court and a family court at the maximum is that in addition to holding the powers of a civil court, the family court possesses the powers of criminal courts also in certain matters. The Family Courts Act, 1984, therefore can be said to be a further improvement or reproduction of the existing enactments dealing with the family matters, but not a complete substitution for the substantive and procedural laws that were holding the field earlier to its enactment. Conclusively, it was observed that irrespective of the provision, under which a proceeding is instituted before a civil court and landing in that forum, it continues to be governed by the provisions of the CPC.

Where in a suit for partition an application under section 19 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, it was held by the Gauhati High Court that family court has exclusive jurisdiction to deal with suits or proceedings referred to in section 7(1) of the Family Courts Act, 1984.[538]

In R Kasthuri v M Kasthuri,[539] a suit was filed by plaintiffs seeking declaration of the first plaintiff as wife, second and third plaintiffs as children and the third defendant as mother, thus as the legal heirs of the deceased. The same was opposed by the defendants one and two, who also claimed to be the wife and son of the deceased. The suit was decreed by the trial court and affirmed by the first appellate court. The high court, in the second appeal, reversed the decision holding that, "having regard to the nature of the suit and the reliefs claimed

---

534. KA Abdul Jaleel v TA Shahida, AIR 2003 SC 2525, at p 2527 : (2003) 4 SCC 166 : 2003 (2) Ker LT 403.
535. Devaki Antharjanam v Narayan Namboodiri, AIR 2007 Ker 38 : 2006 (44) All Ind Cas 637.
536. Anjana Taggarse Motupalli v Sreenivas Motupalli, 2014 (2) All LT 422 : 2014 (2) Andh LD 334.
537. Section 10 of the Family Courts Act, 1984, provides:
"Procedure generally:-(1) Subject to the other provisions of this Act and the rules, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) and of any other law for the time being in force shall apply to the suits and proceedings [other than the proceedings under Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974)], before a Family Court and for the purposes of the said provisions of the Code, Family Court shall be deemed to be a Civil Court and shall have the powers of such Court.
(2) Subject to the other provisions of this Act and the rules, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) or the rules made thereunder, shall apply to the proceedings under Chapter IX of that Code before a Family Court.
(3) Nothing in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall prevent a Family Court from laying down its own procedure with a view to arrive at a settlement in respect of the subject-matter of the suit or proceedings or at the truth of the facts alleged by the one party and denied by the other."
538. Nishamoni Kalita v Sarda Kalita, AIR 2009 Gau 62 : 2009 (2) CCC 176.
539. R Kasthuri v M Kasthuri, (2018) 2 SCC 729.

the civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit which lay within the domain of the Family Court constituted under the Family Courts Act, 1984." The Supreme Court found the decision of the high court untenable. Looking into the "statement of objects and reasons" and the scheme of the Family Courts Act, 1984, it held that "there is no family dispute between the plaintiffs and the defendants". In its opinion, the dispute between the parties is purely a civil dispute and has no bearing on any dispute within a family which needed to be resolved by a special procedure as provided under the Act. No issue with regard to the institution of marriage and the need to preserve the same also arises in the present case. That apart, it found that the dispute between the parties can only be resolved on the basis of evidence to be tendered by the parties, admissibility of which has to be adjudged within the four corners of the provisions of the Evidence Act, 1872. It thus, set aside the order of the high court and remitted the case back to the high court for deciding it on merits.

[s 9.52] Chit Fund

The Chit Funds Act, 1982 (40 of 1982) came into force in the State of Karnataka with effect from 2 January 1984. If that is so, the suit filed on the basis of the chit which commenced in the year 1982 is not barred and is maintainable before civil court.[540]

[s 9.53] Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898

An order made by a magistrate under section 137 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, cannot be called into question in a civil court, but a suit will lie for a declaration of exclusive ownership of land which a magistrate has declared to be a public highway;[541] but not a suit to close the road.[542] No suit lies by a "proclaimed" person against an auction-purchaser to recover from him property sold under sections 87 and 88 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898;[543] but, a suit will lie to set aside an irregular sale under section 88,[544] and a civil court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the recovery from the government of the proceeds of the sale of property attached and sold under sections 523 and 524 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.[545]

Where the same issues arise for decision in the civil suit and in the criminal proceedings between the same parties, and involve complicated questions of fact and mixed questions of fact and law, proper forum will be the civil court. The civil suit was for the recovery of balance sale price and the criminal proceeding related to alleged cheating. The defence of the purchaser was that the goods supplied were sub-standard, entitling him to a claim for damages. Except for a blank statement that the defendant had cheated the complainant, the complaint did not disclose the ingredients of the offence. The criminal proceeding was quashed.[546] The same set of events may give rise at times to civil rights as well as to a criminal offence and merely because provisions are specifically included in the Act dealing with criminal liability, the civil liability does not disappear.[547]

---

540. Visalam Chit Funds Ltd v S Sugune, AIR 2001 Kant 251.
541. Chuni Lal v Ram Kishen, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 60.
542. Roope v Pyaree Lal, (1869) 16 WR 434.
543. Dewa Singh v Fazal Dad, AIR 1928 Lah 562 : (1929) 10 Lah 338.
544. Mian Jan v Abdul, (1905) ILR 27 All 572.
545. Queen-Empress v Tribhovan, (1885) ILR 9 Bom 131; Wasappa v Secretary of State, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 200; Dayanand v State, AIR 1976 P&H 190.
546. Aldo Vogel v Jimmy D Nanavatty, AIR 1989 Bom 108.
547. Jiyajeerao Cotton Mills Ltd v MPEB, (1989) Supp 2 SCC 52.

Under the Jammu and Kashmir Government Servants' Prevention of Corruption (Commission) Act, 1962, supply of copy of enquiry proceedings to the public servant is mandatory. Thus, where the enquiry was held without complying with the mandatory provisions of the Act, it was held by the Supreme Court that the order in such enquiry was without jurisdiction and the jurisdiction of civil court in such matters is not barred.[548]

[s 9.54] Electricity Cases

Where the agreement and the rules framed under the Electricity Act, 1910, provides complete remedy, no suit is maintainable under section 9 of the CPC being impliedly barred. It is true that ordinarily, the civil court has jurisdiction to go into and try the disputed questions of civil nature, where the fundamental fairness of the procedure has been violated. A suit seeking injunction restraining the board from proceedings in accordance with law cannot be maintained. Such suit is not maintainable because of its being impliedly barred under section 9.[549]

Where a workman employed in the electricity board, Tamil Nadu filed a suit for declaration that the show cause notice issued to him was violative of the principles of natural justice, it was held by the Madras High Court that the civil court's jurisdiction was not barred.[550]

However, the matter is quite different where there is question of theft of electrical energy and excess billing. Where the electricity board authorities issued notice to the consumer to disconnect service connection for alleged theft of power, the suit for injunction filed by the consumer without availing of the remedy provided in terms and conditions of agreement, was held to be not maintainable.[551] In another case, where the electricity board had levied extra charges for alleged theft of electrical energy, it was held that although there was no express bar for filing suit in such matters, civil court's jurisdiction would be impliedly barred since effective remedy of appeal is provided in the Indian Electricity Act, 1910.[552]

In the undernoted cases,[553] it has been held that civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain suits challenging electricity theft bills where the plaintiff has not availed of the remedy contemplated under the Electricity Act, 1910. In Punjab State Electricity Board v Ashwani Kumar,[554] the Supreme Court has observed as follows:

> Section 9 of the CPC provides that the civil court shall try all suits of civil nature, subject to pecuniary jurisdiction, unless their cognizance is expressly or by necessary implication barred. Such suit would not be maintainable. It is true that ordinarily, the civil court has jurisdiction to go into and try the disputed questions of civil nature, where the fundamental fairness of procedure has been violated. The statutory circulars adumbrated above do indicate that a fundamental fairness of the procedure has been prescribed in the rules and is being followed. By necessary implication, the cognizance of the civil cause has been excluded. As a consequence, the civil court shall not be justified in entertaining

---

548. Krishnan Lal v State of J&K, (1994) 4 SCC 422 : (1994) 2 Mad LJ 117 (SC).
549. Geeta Pump Pvt Ltd v District Judge, Saharanpur, AIR 2000 All 58; PSEB v Ashwani Kumar, (1997) 5 SCC 120; SP Subramanya Shetty v KSRTC, AIR 1997 SC 2076; Hyderabad Vanaspati Ltd v APSEB, (1998) 4 SCC 470.
550. Tamil Nadu Electricity Board v D Vasantha, (1998) Mad LJ (Supp) 33 (Mad).
551. Superintending Engineer, Periyar Electricity Distribution Circle v Pavathal, (2002) 1 Mad LJ 515 (Mad).
552. Nahar Enterprises v Chairman, T.N.E.B., (2007) 5 Mad LJ 58 (Mad).
553. Tamil Nadu Electricity Board v Chakkravarthy, (2005) 2 Mad LJ 426 (Mad); V Kaliamoorthy v Asst Divisional Engineer, T.N.E.B., (2000) 1 Mad LJ 174 (Mad); Superintending Engineer, Virudhunagar Electricity Distribution Circle v Marali Raj, 2008 (4) Civil Court Cases 172 (Mad).
554. Punjab State Electricity Board v Ashwani Kumar, (1997) 5 SCC 120 : 1997 (Supp) CCC 1 (SC).

this suit and giving the declaration without directing the party to avail of the remedy provided under the Indian Electricity Act and the Indian Electricity (Supply) Act and the Instructions issued by the Board in that behalf from time to time as stated above.

Where a demand notice is issued for recovery of electricity dues and the consumer questions the correctness of the demand, it was held that an alternative remedy is provided in section 3(2)(a) of the Tamil Nadu Electricity Board (Recovery of Dues) Act, 1978, and as such civil suit is not maintainable.[555] Where the plaintiff was issued a show cause notice to pay a sum of Rs 6,255/- by the electricity board, Tamil Nadu, it was held that the suit for declaration and permanent injunction filed by him was premature and not maintainable because he neither filed appeal provided by the Rules nor gave any valid reason for not doing so.[556]

However, in a case relating to damages caused due to works undertaken under section 67 of the Electricity Act, 2003, the Himachal Pradesh High Court held that though the Act speaks about the powers of the Regulatory Commission to determine payment of compensation, there is no provision in the Act where there is a stipulation about the manner or the method of enforcement of the Commission's order. No provision lays down that the order of the Commission has the force of law or the force of decree of a civil court and therefore the absence of enforceability creates a void. Hence, civil court's jurisdiction is not barred.[557]

Suit for mandatory injunction directing power corporation uninterrupted supply of energy to plaintiff consumer, through poles erected against roadside, instead of poles passing through forest, is maintainable before civil court.[558] Where, by notification issued by Secretary, Bihar State Electricity Board, the demand charges and guaranteed energy charges are levied, the claim for remission of the amount on account of interrupted supply of electricity being not a proceeding before court, the limitation period of three years under Article 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963, would not apply. The limitation fixed by the notification issued by the board was found justified and limitation period fixed was found not arbitrary.[559] Under Regulation 46 of the Karnataka Electricity Board Electricity Supply Regulations (1988), the suit by the consumer challenging such claims before civil court was not barred, more so, when section 5 of Karnataka Electricity Board (Recovery of Dues) Act (51 of 1976) does not bar suit against the Board by consumer.[560] Where, in the case of sanction for high cost electrical energy, the demand was made by the electricity board from consumer, for quota allotted for whole month, though he did not consume the same, on the ground that he did not surrender sanction, further claim for utilisation of temporary power by the consumer was made without there being written agreement and without depositing advanced consumption charges. On these facts it was held that such claims did not constitute supplemental claims and the appeal against claims was not maintainable.

[s 9.55] Acts of State

An act of the executive as a matter of policy performed in the course of its relations with another state including its relation with the subjects of that state is an act of state. Typical acts of state are making and performing of treaties, the seizure or annexation of land or goods in

---

555. Ponni Gounder v Superintending Engineer, T.N.E.B., (2008) 1 Mad LJ 108 (Mad).
556. Tamil Nadu Electricity Board v K Kamarudeen, (2001) Mad LJ (Supp) 602 (Mad).
557. Jai Prakash Hydro Power Ltd v Occhu Ram, AIR 2007 HP 29 : 2006 (3) Shim LC 31.
558. Executive Engineer KPTCL & v CB Appachu, AIR 2003 Kant 61.
559. Rishi Cement Co Ltd v BSE Board, AIR 2002 Jhar 1.
560. Mangalore Chemicals & Fertilizers Ltd v KEB Bangalore, AIR 2001 Kant 30.

right of conquest or the declaration of war or of blockade.[561] The expression "act of state", however, has been used in different senses and its meaning has varied from time to time. At one time, the expression meant primarily acts done by governmental authorities in exercise of sovereign authority as contrasted with other kinds of acts done in the course of activities not pertaining to sovereign functions, such as trading.[562] In the 21st century, the expression has been defined to mean an act done by the sovereign of one state in relation to the sovereign or subjects of another state. It is a sovereign act which is neither grounded in law nor does it pretend to be so. Stated in different words, it is a "catastrophic" change constituting a new departure.[563] The precise import of the expression "act of state" has been considered by the Supreme Court in a number of decisions.[564] The result of those may thus, be summed up:

(i) An "act of state" is the taking over of sovereign powers by a state over a territory which did not previously form part of it;

(ii) such taking-over may be by conquest, treaty, cession or otherwise;

(iii) acquisition of a right to administer territories belonging to another state and to enact legislation therefore, is also an act of state, even though those territories do not merge in the acquiring state;

(iv) the acquisition may be by a single act or it may be a gradual process spread over a number of years;

(v) it is not within the competence of municipal courts to go into the question of the validity of an act of state;

(vi) no right possessed by the citizen within the acquired territory prior to its being taken over could be enforced in the courts and it makes no difference that the treaty between the high contracting parties under which the territory is taken over, provides for the recognition of those rights;

(vii) where, however, those rights have been recognised by the new state after it assumes sovereignty, they are capable of enforcement in the municipal courts, because there is no such thing as an act of state between a sovereign and its subjects.[565]

---

561. Lord Hailsham of St. Marylebone (ed), Halsbury's Laws of England, Butterworths, 3rd Edn, Vol 7, pp 279, 281, paras 593, 597.
562. P&OSN Co v Secy of State, (1861) ILR 5 Bom HC App 1; approved in Secy of State v Moment, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 391 : 40 IA 48; Jehangir v Secy of State, (1903) ILR 27 Bom 189; Shivabhajan v Secy. of State, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 314; Rose v Secy. of State, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 781; McInerny v Secy. of State, (1911) ILR 38 Cal 797; Secy. of State v Cockcraft, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 351; Om Prakash v United Province, AIR 1951 All 205; but see Bhagat Transport Service v State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1951 HP 36.
563. LJ Salaman v Secy. of State for India, (1906) 1 KB 613.
564. Thakur Amar Singhji v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1955 SC 504 : (1955) 2 SCR 303 : (1955) SCJ 523 : 1955 SCA 766; Rajendra Chand v Mst Sukhi, AIR 1957 SC 286 : (1956) SCR 889 : (1957) SCJ 119; Dalmia Dadri Cement Co v CIT, AIR 1958 SC 816 : (1959) SCR 729 : (1958) SCJ 1041; State of Saurashtra v Memon Haji, AIR 1959 SC 1383 : (1960) 1 SCR 537 : (1960) SCJ 394; Jagannath v State of Orissa, AIR 1961 SC 1361 : (1962) 1 SCJ 179; State of Saurashtra v Muhammed Abdulla, AIR 1962 SC 445 : (1962) 3 SCR 970 : (1962) 2 SCJ 70 : (1962) 2 SCA 605; Pramod Chandra v State of Orissa, AIR 1962 SC 1288; Amar Sarjit Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 1305; Juwan Nath Zutshi v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1971 SC 744 : (1972) 4 SCC 75; State of Gujarat v Vora Fiddali, AIR 1964 SC 1043 : (1964) 6 SCR 461.
565. Madhav Rao Scindia v UOI, AIR 1971 SC 530 : (1971) 1 SCC 85 : 1971 SCR (3) 9; see also Secy. of State v Bai Rajbai, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 65 : 42 IA 229; Vajid Singh v Secy of State, (1921) ILR 48 Bom 613 : 51 IA 357; Secy of State v Rustom Khan 68 IA 109; Arya Prathimidhi v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1958 MP 97 : (1957) Lab LJ 909; Thailendran v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1959 MP 27 : (1958) Lab LJ 859; Jagannath v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1959 MP 136 : (1959) Lab LJ 1; Subaya v Bhopal Dasaraih, AIR 1959 Mys 129; State of Rajasthan v Madan Swarup, AIR 1960 Raj 138 : (1959) ILR Raj 1217.

When an "act of state" is pleaded, the question which would arise is — "Did the State or its agents purport to act catastrophically or subject to the ordinary course of law"?[566] If the act is of the latter kind, it is not an "act of state".[567] The closure of the Air Transport Service of Portuguese India run by the former Portuguese Administration by the military governor of Goa after its acquisition by India through conquest was an "act of state". So too, the termination of service by him of the employees, till then engaged by it. A municipal court has no jurisdiction to examine the propriety or the legality of such termination of service or the closure of the concern.[568]

[s 9.56] Political Questions

Besides cases comprised in the expression "act of state", there is another class of cases termed "facts of state". It consists of matters and questions, the determination of which is solely in the hands of government. Illustrative of these are such acts as a declaration by government as to whether a state of war exists or whether a particular territory is hostile or whether a particular government is to be recognised as an independent state and the like.[569] These are declarations or decisions of the government on questions having a bearing on its relations with other governments and are properly characterised as political questions. A civil court has no jurisdiction to go into them. Accordingly, disputes as to boundaries between two independent states cannot be the subject of examination by the municipal courts exercising jurisdiction in either state.[570] Thus, where the real object of a suit is to settle the right of succession to a throne and the property right involved is only contingent, the court should decline jurisdiction.[571]

The power of a Raj Pramukh to recognise as heir a claimant to the gaddi of a deceased jagirdar is an incident of sovereignty and is political in character and cannot form the subject of adjudication in court.[572] The Supreme Court, however, has held that recognising or de-recognising a person as a "Ruler" as defined in Article 366(22) of the Constitution is not an exercise of "political power which is a sovereign power". Such a power can be exercised for an adequate reason and its exercise is amenable to scrutiny by the court.[573] It has also been held that courts in British India were entitled to determine the title to property situated within their jurisdiction belonging to an Indian Prince though a political question was involved in such determination.[574]

[s 9.57] Encroachment on Statutory Right

Under the Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Act, 1964, licence is required for working as commission agent within the "market area" defined in the Act and Rules thereunder. Therefore, if a person establishes an office as a commission agent within the market area, then the committee constituted under the above-mentioned Act has the right

---

566. Secy. of State v Kamachee Boyce Saheba, (1959) 13 Moo PC 22.
567. Prasanna v Sri Jagannath, AIR 1971 Ori 246, 253.
568. Cipriano Negredo v UOI, AIR 1969 Goa 76.
569. Lord Hailsham of St. Marylebone (ed), Halsbury's Laws of England, Butterworths, 3rd Edn, Vol 7, para 603, p 285.
570. Maganbhai v UOI, AIR 1969 SC 783, 795; Midnapore Zamindary Co Ltd v Province of Bengal, AIR 1949 FC 143; Foster v Globe Venture Syndicate Ltd, [1900] 1 Ch 811; Duff Development Co v Kilantan Government, AIR 1924 Cal 797.
571. Samarendra v Birendra, (1908) 12 Cal WN 777.
572. Umrao Singh v Bhagavathi Singh, AIR 1956 SC 15.
573. Madhav Rao Scindia v UOI, AIR 1971 SC 530 at 564 : (1971) 1 SCC 85 : 1971 SCR (3) 9.
574. Neel Kristo Dev v Beer Chandra, (1869) 12 Moo Ind App 523.

to file a suit to restrain such persons from recovering, from the cultivators, commission in excess of the rate prescribed under the licence. Such persons are regarded as encroaching upon the statutory right of the committee to regulate the marketing of agricultural produce in the area. The fact that a criminal prosecution can be instituted under such Act does not bar the jurisdiction of the civil courts.[575] Amongst the decisions relied upon for this conclusion, were those mentioned below:

(i) Firm Kishore Chand v Budaun Electric Supply Co.[576]

(ii) Bhudeb Mookerjee v Kalachand Mallik.[577]

(iii) Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh.[578]

The well-known judgment of Willes J, in Wolverhampton New Water Works Co v Hawkesford,[579] was also considered.

[s 9.58] Debt Relief

The civil court cannot decide a question arising under the Maharashtra Debt Relief Act, 1975 (Act No 3 of 1976), because the jurisdiction of the civil court is barred by section 7(1) and section 7(6) of the Act. Under these provisions, if a creditor raises a question that a person who claims to be his debtor is not a "marginal farmer, rural artisan, rural labourer or worker", etc, the matter has to be decided by the revenue officer appointed by the district magistrate, called the "authorised officer".[580]

In Jagdish,[581] the Supreme Court dealt with the question of ouster of jurisdiction of the civil courts under section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002. It held that section 34 bars the jurisdiction of civil courts to entertain any suit or proceeding in respect of any matter which a DRT or DRAT is empowered to determine under the SARFAESI Act, 2002. The Supreme Court held that section 34 completely barred the jurisdiction of civil court even in so far as the "measures" taken by a secured creditor under section 13(4), against which an aggrieved person has a right of appeal before the DRT or the DRAT, to determine as to whether there has been any illegality in the "measures" taken.

The question before the Supreme Court in Mukesh Jain[582] was that whether, in the instant case, the suit was maintainable against the proceedings initiated under the provisions of the SARFAESI Act, 2002. The application filed by the appellant under O VII, rule 11 of the CPC was rejected mainly for the reason that the tribunal had no jurisdiction to entertain the proceedings under the provisions of section 1(4) of the DRT Act as the value of the suit was less than Rs 10 lakh and therefore, a civil suit was the only remedy available to the respondents (original plaintiffs). It was held that the application submitted by the appellant bank under O VII, rule 11 of the CPC should have been granted by the trial court as, according to section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002, a civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain any appeal arising under the Act. Thus, it was held that the DRT constituted under the DRT Act has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal as per section 17 of the Act even if the amount involved is

---

575. Taj Mohammad v Agricultural Produce Market Committee, AIR 1982 Bom 553, at pp 556, 558.
576. Firm Kishore Chand v Budaun Electric Supply Co, AIR 1944 All 66.
577. Bhudeb Mookerjee v Kalachand Mallik, AIR 1921 Cal 129.
578. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78.
579. Wolverhampton New Water Works Co v Hawkesford, (1859) 6 CBNS 336 : (1859) 141 ER 486.
580. Bhagwan Motiram Mali v Jayant Shridhar Khare, AIR 1982 Bom 82, at pp 85, 90, para 26 (DB).
581. Jagdish Singh v Heeralal, (2014) 1 SCC 479 : 2014 (1) CTC 652 : (2013) 8 Mad LJ 84 (SC).
582. State Bank of Patiala v Mukesh Jain, (2017) 1 SCC 53 : 2016 (6) CTC 330.

less than Rs 10 lakh. However, as a note of abundant caution, it was observed that the appellate jurisdiction must not be misunderstood with the original jurisdiction of the tribunal.

However, in a case, where the plaintiff, an agriculturist, sought redemption of mortgage without payment, availing the benefit under the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1982 (50 of 1982), it was held by the Madras High Court that right of redemption is a common law remedy and the statute under which the special tribunal has been established, neither expressly nor impliedly bars the jurisdiction of civil court. It has been observed that the Act only provides additional body to indebted agriculturists.[583] In another case, it has been held that for obtaining relief under the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980 (13 of 1980), the jurisdiction of the civil court is not barred.[584]

From the provisions of the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980 (13 of 1980), the legislative scheme is clear that the scheme is not to allow interference by any court with determination of the question of eligibility to receive benefit under the Act by the applicant-debtor by the tahsildar and his order is made final subject to an appeal under section 8. The legislative intent is to vest the jurisdiction to determine the question relating to eligibility for the benefits under the Act in the statutory authorities, to the exclusion of the court so that a debtor who is entitled to the benefits under the Act is able to enjoy such benefit without a hassle of a protracted litigation in a civil court or revenue court. The view taken by the high court that if a civil suit for realisation of the amount or any other relief based on the debt in question has been filed or on the filing of such a suit the tahsildar would lose his jurisdiction to deal with the matter if accepted will defeat the very purpose for which the legislature enacted the statute, that is, to grant relief to a certain class of debtors. If the view taken by the high court is accepted, then it would be easy for a creditor to prevent the debtor from getting benefits granted under the Act by filing civil suit relating to the debt. On the other hand, in section 4(b), a declaration is made that any civil court which entertains any suit or other proceeding against the debtor for recovery of any amount of such debt (including interest, if any); all suits and other proceedings (including appeals, revisions, attachments or execution proceedings) pending at the commencement of the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980, against any debtor for the recovery of any such debt (including interest, if any) shall abate.[585] The further question that arises for consideration is what is the appropriate course to be followed in a suit which was filed by the creditor against the debtor before the debtor made the application to the tahsildar seeking relief under the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980, should it be dismissed immediately on filing or should it be suspended/stayed till the tahsildar disposes of the application filed by the debtor. In such a case, the proper and reasonable course to be followed is to stay the proceeding in the suit till the tahsildar/appellate authority disposes of the proceeding under the statute. If it is held in that proceeding that the debtor is not entitled to the benefit under the Act, then the civil suit may be proceeded with. If, on the other hand, it is held that the debtor is entitled to the benefits provided in the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980, then the suit has to be dismissed under section 4. In no case can it be held that by filing a civil suit for realisation of the mortgage amount the proceeding pending before the tahsildar or the appellate authority is to be dismissed without adjudication.[586] A full reading of section 34 of the SARFAESI Act, 2002 (54 of 2002) shows that the jurisdiction of the civil court is barred in respect of matters which a DRT or appellate tribunal is empowered to determine in respect of any action taken

---

583. Eswaramoorthy Velar v Parvathammal, (2000) 1 Mad LJ 291 (Mad).
584. Ramaswamy v Velliammal, (1998) Mad LJ (Supp) 314 (Mad).
585. P Nirathilingam v Annaya Nadar, AIR 2002 SC 42 : (2001) 9 SCC 673.
586. P Nirathilingam v Annaya Nadar, AIR 2002 SC 42 : (2001) 9 SCC 673.

"or to be taken in pursuance of any power conferred under this Act". That is to say prohibition covers even matters which can be taken cognizance of by the DRT though no measure in that direction has so far been taken under sub-section (4) of section 13. It is further to be noted that the bar of jurisdiction is in respect of a proceeding which matter may be taken to the tribunal. Therefore, any matter in respect of which an action may be taken even later, the civil court shall have no jurisdiction to entertain any proceeding thereof. The bar of civil court thus applies to all such matters which may be taken cognizance of by the DRT, apart from those matters in which measures have already been taken under sub-section (4) of section 13. Therefore, it is incorrect to say that before any action or measure is taken under sub-section (4) of section 13, there would be no bar to approach the civil court.[587]

On the factual score, a civil suit stands filed and thereafter the claim was preferred before the Commissioner of Payments in terms of the Sick Textile Undertakings (Nationalisation) Act, 1974 (57 of 1974). The right of a claimant to proceed before the commissioner and to file a suit to recover the amount due to him cannot, on a perusal of the statute, be taken away, though the claimant would not be entitled to recover any amount at both the ends. The amount paid by the commissioner would stand reduced to the extent of payment by the commissioner. The filing of the civil suit, thus, is not barred. Once the claim stands paid, though partially, question of proceeding with the suit would not arise. It is in this context, Supreme Court concurred with the findings of the Bombay High Court in Oriental Coal Co Ltd, Calcutta v Mohanlal Kisanlal,[588] and recorded its approval and similar concurrence also went to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Barakar Coal Co Ltd v NC Mehta.[589]

In Nahar Industrial Enterprises Ltd,[590] the Supreme Court has held that the term "suit" has to be confined in the context of sub-section (1) of section 22 of Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985 (SICA)[591] to those actions which are dealt with under the CPC and not in the comprehensive over-arching proceedings so as to apply to any original proceedings before any legal forum. The term "suit", therefore, would apply only to proceedings in civil court and not actions or recovery proceedings filed by banks and financial institutions before a tribunal such as DRT.

The DRT Act has been enacted with a view to provide a special procedure for recovery of debts due to the banks and the financial institutions. There is hierarchy of appeal provided in the Act, namely, filing of an appeal under section 20 against order passed by DRT directing sale of mortgaged property and this fast-track procedure cannot be allowed to be derailed either by taking recourse to proceedings under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India or by filing a civil suit, which is expressly barred. Even though a provision under an Act cannot expressly oust the jurisdiction of the court under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India, nevertheless when there is an alternative remedy available, judicial prudence demands that the court refrain from exercising its jurisdiction under the said constitutional provisions. The high court should not entertain the petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India and should direct the party to take recourse to the appeal mechanism provided by the Act.[592]

---

587. Mardia Chemicals Ltd v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 2371 : (2004) 4 SCC 311 : 2003 (9) Scale 185.
588. Oriental Coal Co Ltd, Calcutta v Mohanlal Kisanlal, AIR 1984 Bom 174; As cited in: IFCI Ltd v Cannanore Spg & Wvg Mills Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 1841.
589. Barakar Coal Co Ltd v NC Mehta, AIR 1984 Bom 174; As cited in: IFCI Ltd v Cannanore Spg & Wvg Mills Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 1841.
590. Nahar Industrial Enterprises Ltd v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp, (2009) 8 SCC 646 : 2003 (9) Scale 185; Inderjeet Arya v ICICI Bank Ltd, (2014) 2 SCC 229.
591. The SICA is repealed with effect from 1 December 2016.
592. Punjab National Bank v OC Krishnan, AIR 2001 SC 3208 : (2001) 6 SCC 569 : 2001 SCR 966 : 2001 (5) Scale 196.

An application was filed by the bank under the DRT Act before the tribunal for recovery against borrower company. During the pendency of the said application before the tribunal, the borrower company filed civil suit against the bank alleging breach by bank in not releasing sanctioned loans. It was held by the Supreme Court that the suit of the borrower company and bank's application before the tribunal are not inextricably connected and as such the provisions of section 31 of the Act are not applicable. Further, the suit was not counter-claim to the application filed by the bank. Thus, the application filed by the bank for transfer of the suit to the tribunal was not maintainable.[593] RV Raveendran J, speaking for the division bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 9. The issues that arose in the Bank's application was whether the borrower failed to repay the sums borrowed and whether the Bank was entitled to the amounts claimed. On the other hand, the issues that arose in the borrower's suit were whether the Bank had promised/agreed to advance certain monies; whether the Bank committed breach in refusing to release such loans in terms of the sanction letter; whether the borrower failed to fulfil the terms and conditions of sanction and therefore the Bank's refusal to advance was justified; and even if there was breach, whether the borrower suffered any loss on account of such non-disbursement and if so whether the borrower was entitled to the amounts claimed. While the claim of the Bank was for an ascertained sum due from the borrower, the claim of the borrower was for damages which required firstly a determination by the court as to whether the Bank was liable to pay damages and thereafter assessment of quantum of such damages. Thus there is absolutely no connection between the subject-matter of the two suits and they are in no way connected. A decision in one does not depend on the other. Nor could there be any apprehension of different and inconsistent results if the suit and the application are tried and decided separately by different forums. In the circumstances, it cannot be said that the borrower's suit and the Bank's application were inextricably connected.[594]

[s 9.59] Debt Recovery Tribunal Not Subordinate to High Court

Section 41(b) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 (47 of 1963) provides that there cannot be any injunction restraining a person from instituting or prosecuting any proceeding in a court not subordinate to that from which the injunction is sought. But, here it is not a case, which falls under section 41(b). The injunction restraining the respondents from proceeding with the case before the DRT does not fall within the scope of section 41(b). On the other hand, it is a question as to whether the high court had jurisdiction or not. If the DRT has exclusive jurisdiction and the high court ceases to have jurisdiction, in that event, it is not a question of granting injunction restraining the respondents from proceeding with the same. But it is a case whether the high court has jurisdiction to proceed with or not, if it has jurisdiction, in that event, it can very much grant the injunction. If it has no jurisdiction, it cannot do so. Even if it is assumed that section 41(b) applies, still then DRT as such is not a court subordinate to the high court. It does not fall within the hierarchy of the courts as provided in the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887. The tribunal constituted under the Debts Recovery Tribunals (Procedure) Amendment Rules, 1994 is not a court. It is a tribunal having the trappings of a court. A tribunal with trappings of court cannot be equated with a court as is understood from the expression "Court". Subordination under Article 226 of the Constitution of India does not make DRT a court subordinate to the high court within the meaning of section 41(b) or for the purpose of appeal or revision as the case may be. So far as Article 227 is concerned, it is a power conferred on the high court by the Constitution

---

593. Indian Bank v ABS Marine Products Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 1899 : (2006) 5 SCC 72.
594. Indian Bank v ABS Marine Products Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 1899, para 9, at p 1903 : (2006) 5 SCC 72.

of India, for exercising superintendence over all courts and tribunals subordinate to it. It makes a distinction between courts and tribunals and brings within its sweep both courts and tribunals. Therefore, subordination of tribunal under Article 227 of the Constitution of India subject to power of superintendence is not a subordination of a court within the meaning of section 41(b). Therefore, the high court cannot stay further proceedings pending before a tribunal in exercise of its jurisdiction envisaged under section 9 of the CPC and/or by reason of clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Therefore, DRT is not a court subordinate to the high court exercising co-ordinate jurisdiction under clause 12, as contemplated in section 41(b). This suit for injunction would not be maintainable before the high court by reason of section 18 of the DRT Act. This suit is maintainable before the DRT. Thus, so far as the high court exercising original side jurisdiction is nothing more than a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Inasmuch as, the same suit is sought to be proceeded with before the high court as a court of trial. Under section 31, the records of this suit are to be transmitted to the DRT. Whereas out of the same cause of action, the respondents have initiated the proceeding in the DRT. Therefore, in relation to these proceedings, the DRT and the high court cannot be placed at a level higher than court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.[595]

The petition filed by the bank before the DRT under section 17 of the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993 (51 of 1993) can only be adjudicated by the DRT constituted under the Special Act, namely the DRT Act. Therefore, by the introduction of the DRT Act, there cannot be any dispute that the high court or any civil court cannot adjudicate the claim of the bank to recover debts due under section 17 of the DRT and it is the DRT which alone has the exclusive jurisdiction to try such claims. Accordingly, the high court cannot have any jurisdiction to try and adjudicate the application filed by the bank to recover its dues from the company even if the said application can be transferred to the high court because the application filed by the bank before the DRT can only be decided by the DRT under the DRT Act. Therefore, the question of trying the same by the high court after transfer cannot arise at all. If such a suit is tried after transfer, the judgment and decree that would be passed by the high court would be a nullity and without jurisdiction. Therefore, the question of jurisdiction readily comes into play, that is to say, the high court has no jurisdiction or cannot have any jurisdiction to try the pending application filed by the bank before DRT under the DRT Act and such being the position in law, the question of entertaining a petition under clause (13) of the Letters Patent to transfer the application filed under section 17 by the bank against the company from the tribunal to the high court cannot arise at all. Similarly, the high court also cannot grant stay against proceedings pending before the DRT.[596]

[s 9.60] Finality

The fact that a provision in a statute declared a certain order to be "final", does not apply where the provisions of this Act have not been complied with, or the statutory tribunal has not acted as per fundamental principles of judicial procedure. Several other aspects, like the scheme of the Act, adequacy and sufficiency of remedies provided, etc, have to be considered.[597]

Whenever a right is created by a statute and that statute provides a machinery for the enforcement of the right, the civil court's jurisdiction is barred: but, if the right is a pre-existing

---

595. State Bank of India v Madhumita Construction Pvt Ltd, AIR 2003 Cal 7.
596. Vysya Bank Ltd v Shankarlal Export Pvt Ltd, AIR 2001 Cal 47 (DB).
597. Raja Ram Kumar Bhargava v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 752 : (1988) 1 SCC 681 : (1988) 2 SCR 352 : (1988) 17 ITR 254 (SC).

one at common law and the statute provides only a new remedy for its enforcement, then a civil suit is not barred.[598]

Under the Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 1959 (38 of 1959), sections 139 and 143, the Municipal Council sent a letter to inform the company that the agreement between them was terminated and octroi duty would be charged. No assessment or alteration of assessment was made by this letter. Nor was it a notice of demand. The civil court's jurisdiction is not ousted in such matters.[599]

[s 9.61] Partition

The plaintiff and his three brothers owned a property. The vacant site was leased by these four brothers to the defendants under a lease deed dated 28 October 1955, for the purpose of construction of a rice mill. The monthly rent agreed to was Rs 200/-. The defendant-lessees were permitted to put up a building to install machinery and to remove the same at the end of the lease period of 10 years. There was a clause that at the end of the 10 years' period, the defendants shall hand over vacant possession after removing the super-structure and the machinery. In September 1957, the defendant lessees purchased the three-fourth share of the three brothers of the plaintiff. Consequently, there was a fresh agreement between the plaintiff and the defendants in relation to the undivided one-fourth share of the plaintiff, for which the defendants agreed to pay a monthly rent of Rs 50/-. The plaintiff filed a suit for partition and separate possession of one-fourth share of the suit property. It was held that the suit as framed was maintainable and both the reliefs, namely, partition and separate possession and eviction could be prayed for in the same suit.[600]

[s 9.62] Amalgamation of Plots

Where the dispute between the parties is as to whether any permission was granted by the plaintiff to the defendants for the purpose of amalgamation of two plots or not and the plaintiff's specific case was that no such permission was given to the defendants either in the Development Agreement or in the Power of Attorney which was executed in their favour. The question which fell for consideration is as to whether the suit filed by the plaintiff can be tried in civil court or not.

From the perusal of the said section 149, Maharashtra Regional and Town Planning Act, 1966 (37 of 1966), it is apparent that every order passed or direction issued by the state government or order passed or notice issued by any regional board, planning authority or development authority under the Act shall be final and shall not be questioned in any suit or legal proceedings. The Maharashtra Regional and Town Planning Act, 1966 empowers the government to issue various orders or directions regarding numerous matters pertaining to either reservation or preparation of development plan, etc. The civil court's jurisdiction is ousted in respect of such matters where state government or its authorities alone are empowered under the Act to adjudicate or decide any matter. In the present case, dispute is regarding the question as to whether the plaintiff had permitted the defendants to apply for amalgamation for the two plots or not. The dispute therefore is one which is arising out of the terms and conditions of the contract or the terms and conditions in the power of attorney which is

---

598. Raja Ram Kumar v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 752 : (1988) 1 SCC 681 : (1988) 2 SCR 352 : (1988) 17 ITR 254 (SC).
599. JK Synthetics v Municipal Council Kota, AIR 1989 Raj 51.
600. KMSK Rabindranath v S Bakyam Pillai, AIR 1988 Mad 358.

executed by the plaintiff. Therefore, bar of section 149 would not be applicable to the facts of the present case. Moreover, a division bench of the Bombay High Court in a judgment in the case of Raja Bahadur Motilal,[601] in para 12 has observed as under:

> What is necessary under section 149 to acquire finality and invite the bar of civil suit is, it should be an order passed or direction issued by the State Government or it should be an order passed or notice issued by any Regional Board Planning Authority or Development Authority under this Act. It is provided by this section that no such order shall be questioned in any suit or in any legal proceedings. It is obvious therefore that a suit or legal proceeding for quashing a deemed permission under section 45(5) is maintainable. Even otherwise under section 149 what is barred is questioning of an order made under the Act in the civil suit. It does not bar any suit whereby a party to it can be prevented from acting on an action and order made under the Act. The bar spelt out by section 149 is therefore very limited.[602]

[s 9.63] Deemed Sanction of Construction

Where the building was constructed by the plaintiff on the basis of "deemed sanction" under section 31(5) of the Himachal Pradesh Town and Country Planning Act, 1977 (12 of 1977), the notices issued by the authority that the construction was without sanction and liable for demolition, the suit filed by the plaintiff that the notices were illegal and void was found maintained before civil court.[603]

[s 9.64] Restrictive Covenant

A company incorporated in Germany entered into contract with an Indian company. The Indian company was to sell certain goods in India. There was a negative covenant, restraining the company from selling goods after termination of the contract. It was held that this covenant was not enforceable.[604]

[s 9.65] Assignment

A contract was in the name of an individual. The suit was filed in the name of the company. There was no assignment from the individual, Ludwig Taprogge, to the company, Taprogge Geselleschaft MBH, as per pleadings. It was held that the company did not have any right to sue on the contract.[605]

[s 9.66] Special Statutes

Where a special statute creates a special right or liability and provides for its determination by a special forum, the jurisdiction of ordinary courts is still not ousted where:

(i) the relevant section in the special statute provides that the finality is "for the purposes of this Act" (and not generally or for all other purpose);

(ii) the statute does not lay down that all questions about the special right, etc. shall be determined by the special forum; or

---

601. Raja Bahadur Motilal, (2003) 1 Bom CR 251.
602. Gadre Constructions v Sadashiv Keshav Sathe, AIR 2004 Bom 392.
603. Narain Singh Bramta v State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 2003 HP 81.
604. Taprogge Geselleschaft MBH v IAEC India Ltd, AIR 1988 Bom 157.
605. Taprogge Geselleschaft MBH v IAEC India Ltd, AIR 1988 Bom 157.

(iii) if the remedy provided is not adequate to do all which a civil court can do.

(Dhulabhai's case[606] applied, as regards situations (i) and (ii) above).[607]

If the remedy provided by the special statute is not adequate, then the jurisdiction of the ordinary courts is not ousted. The use of the expression "finality" in section 2(1)(a), Bombay Personal Inams Abolition Act, 1952, is not intended to bar the jurisdiction of civil courts.[608] The jurisdiction of the civil court to adjudicate title of the parties is not barred by the virtue of the provisions of Tamil Nadu Minor Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1963.[609] The decision of a tahsildar under section 3 of Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1956, that the property was not a Wakf property was not within jurisdiction. In such circumstances, the bar of section 14 of the Act will not apply as it pre-supposes an order passed within jurisdiction.[610] No suit or proceedings shall lie before the civil court against the decision of the Wakf board to include property in the register of Wakf.[611]

Under the Christian Marriage Act, 1872, maintenance to neglected Christian wife and children can be awarded even though there is no provision for such relief in the said Act. A civil suit for maintenance can be instituted as taking cognizance of such a suit is neither expressly nor impliedly barred.[612] AS Pachhapure J in the above case observed as follows:

> 12. Law cannot be made to meet any sort of eventuality and in such circumstances, if the provisions of the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, (hereinafter called as "the Act 1872" for short) is perused, it provides the procedure regarding the performance of marriage, but at the same time does not contain any such provision as to the relief that has to be provided, in case, if the wife and children are neglected by the husband. Even if the marriage under the Indian Christian Act, 1872 is a contract, when a breach occurs, there are certain obligations on the part of the spouses. If the facts are looked into in the context of the provisions of the Act 1872, there is no prohibition so far as the award of maintenance, in case, if the wife or children do not have their own economic provision or source of income for their survival. Thereby, under the provisions of Section 9 of CPC, all the civil suits can be tried by the courts unless there is any specific bar.[613]

In the above decision, a passage from the decision of the Supreme Court in MV Elisabeth v Harwan Investment and Trading Pvt Ltd[614] was quoted, wherein it has been observed as follows:

> 17. The judicial power of this country, which is an aspect of national sovereignty, is vested in the people and is articulated in the provisions of the Constitution and the laws and is exercised by courts empowered to exercise it. It is absurd to confine that power to the provisions of imperial statutes of a bygone age. Access to court which is an important right vested in every citizen implies the existence of the power of the court to render justice according to law. Where statute is silent and judicial intervention is required, courts strive to redress grievances according to what is perceived to be principles of justice, equity and good conscience.

---

606. Dhulabhai v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 78 : (1968) 3 SCR 662.
607. State of Tamil Nadu v Ramalinga Samigal Madam, (1985) 4 SCC 10.
608. Sayed Mahomed v State of Gujarat, AIR 1981 SC 2016 : (1981) 4 SCC 383.
609. Sri-La-Sri Sivaprakasa Pandara Sannadhi Avargal v T Parvathi Ammal, (1998) 9 SCC 603.
610. Sayyad Ali v Andhra Pradesh Wakf Board, Hyderabad, (1998) 2 SCC 642.
611. Subhan Shah v Madhya Pradesh Wakf Board, AIR 1997 MP 8.
612. K Kumar v Smt. Leena, AIR 2010 Kant 75.
613. K Kumar v Smt. Leena, AIR 2010 Kant 75, para 12, at p 78.
614. M.V Elisabeth v Harwan Investment and Trading Pvt Ltd, AIR 1993 SC 1014 : JT 1992 2 65 (per TK Thommen J).

A suit for declaration and permanent injunction was filed for restraining cancellation of Patta granted under the Updating Registry Scheme. It was held by the Madras High Court that the provisions relating to abolition and vesting of property under the Tamil Nadu Minor Inams (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1963, do not have the effect of obliterating or destroying any pre-existing right. Since the statutory authorities have exercised their jurisdiction in a summary manner, the jurisdiction of civil court is not barred in respect of adjudication of claims of title and issues which are not required to be adjudicated for the purpose of enforcement of the laws, which intends to implement ryotwari settlement. It was further held that even where finality is accorded, civil court is entitled to nullify such order.[615]

In a case, where Inam land had been granted to a temple and the Inam Tehsildar granted Ryotwari Patta to the defendant, it was held by the Madras High Court that the suit filed by the temple for declaration of title is maintainable and civil court has jurisdiction to adjudicate.[616]

In another case, it was held by the Madras High Court that Ryotwari Patta granted by the tribunal constituted under the Tamil Nadu Minor Inams (Abolition and Conversion in Ryotwari) Act, 1963, could be a question before a civil court. Orders passed and decisions rendered under the Act being given finality does not have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of civil court.[617]

A civil court can interfere if the statutory authority acts in violation of rules, or acts in abuse of its authority or in violation of fundamental principles of judicial procedure. Where fresh interview was held for the post of assistant teacher in violation of the order of the court and in contravention of the statutory rules of recruitment, the civil court can interfere. Application under Article 227 of the Constitution of India challenging maintainability of a civil suit is liable to be dismissed.[618] If a right or liability is created by statute, two situations may arise:

(i) The statute may create a specific forum for its enforcement.

In such a case, the question of whether the civil court's jurisdiction is impliedly excluded within the meaning of section 9 of the CPC is one of statutory construction. If the right is new one, ouster may be inferred.

(ii) If, while creating a liability, no machinery is provided for enforcement, civil courts can entertain the suits, besides the suit of which the cognizance is expressly barred.

These are suits which are barred by general principles of law.

To ensure expeditious settlements of consumer disputes, the electricity board issued a commercial circular which provided settlement of all consumer dispute by circle level committee constituted by the board for that purpose. Where the consumer challenged the clubbing of two metres and demands of common bills, by way of civil suit, such suit was not maintainable as only the committed had the jurisdiction to entertain the petition.[619] A bare perusal of section 330(c) of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950, read with proviso to rule 285K framed thereunder, is sufficient to indicate that the institution of a suit in the civil court for the purpose of setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud is not barred.[620]

---

615. Ramakrishnan v Mayilsamy, (2007) 1 Mad LJ 72 (Mad).
616. Ramalingam v Idol of Sri Thayumanaswamy, (1998) Mad LJ (Supp) 354 (Mad) : (1998) 3 CTC 665.
617. Srinivasan v Sri Madhyarjuneswar Swami, Pattavaithalai, (1998) 2 Mad LJ 722 : (1998) 1 CTC 630.
618. Binal Sahoo, Secretary, Basudevpur Girls' High School v Gouri Rani Pahari, AIR 1991 Cal 120.
619. PSEB v Jeewan Kumar, AIR 1999 P&H 187.
620. Roshan Prasad v Shiv Pal, (1997) 8 SCC 167.

Where an order was passed by the collector for confiscation of goods under section 6A of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955, the aggrieved person has remedy of filing an appeal against that order under section 6C and civil suit filed against the order would not be maintainable as the civil court's jurisdiction is expressly barred under section 6E in case of seizure or any other order under the Act in relation to essential commodities.[621]

[s 9.67] Mines and Minerals

Forum under section 23 of the Coking Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1972 (36 of 1972) is an additional forum. It does not oust the jurisdiction of the civil court under the general law and the suit before the civil court is maintainable. Besides that the liability of the erstwhile owner of a coal mine does not cease due to vesting of coal mines.[622]

[s 9.68] Hard Coke Plant

An authority under the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971, has a very limited jurisdiction and it has to determine only a dispute that may arise, viz-a-viz a public premise. Upon an application made before it, it has to proceed in a summary disposal thereto. The question as to whether the area formed part of the Royal Tisra Colliery or not, consequently making it a public premise is a question that becomes the focal point of the instant case and it, therefore, obviously involves determination/finding of fact. Undoubtedly, while attempting to come to such finding, the authority may be faced with complicated question of title as is involved in the instant case. The authority in the aforementioned case cannot be said to have the jurisdiction to embark upon the domain of the civil court for the purposes of adjudicating on a question of a complicated title, which can only be done by a civil court. It would be extremely unreasonable to allow a court vested with summary procedure to give a finding which can only be arrived at by a civil court having the necessary judicial competence.[623]

[s 9.69] Service Matters

The broad guiding consideration for determining whether jurisdiction of civil court is excluded, is this:

(a) If a right, not pre-existing in common law, is created by a statute and that statute itself has provided a machinery for the enforcement of the right, both the right and the remedy having been created by that statute, a finality is intended. The civil court's jurisdiction is impliedly barred;

(b) If, however, a right pre-existing in common law, is recognised by the statute and a new statutory remedy for its enforcement provided, without expressly excluding the civil court's jurisdiction, then both the common law remedy and the statutory remedy might become concurrent remedies, leaving open an element of election to the persons entitled to sue in the civil court or in the statutory tribunal.[624]

---

621. State of Gujarat v Mer Parbat Ramaji, (1991) ILR Guj 185.
622. ML Harnarain v Karamchand Thaper & Bros Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Jhar 143.
623. Shree Bajrang Hard Coke Manufacturing Corp v Ramesh Prasad, AIR 2003 Jhar 17.
624. Raja Ram Kumar v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 752 : (1988) 1 SCC 681 : (1988) 2 SCR 352 : (1988) 17 ITR 254 (SC).

In a suit based on wrongful dismissal, the civil court cannot grant re-instatement, but can grant compensation.[625]

Where at the hearing of application relating to interim relief in a suit, objection of jurisdiction is taken, such issue is to be decided by the court as a preliminary issue.

The Central Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1965, neither expressly nor by necessary implication take away the jurisdiction of the civil courts to deal with service matters. Thus, where a Central Government employee, dismissed from service, filed a suit for re-instatement and the matter was litigated for more than five years, it was held by the Supreme Court that the high court in second appeal cannot hold that civil court has no jurisdiction in the matter.[626] Elaborating on the point, it was observed that it is an erroneous view that civil court does not have jurisdiction to adjudicate on an order passed by disciplinary authority, and that only writ application can be filed after exhausting departmental remedies. Provisions of Central Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1965, do not oust the jurisdiction of civil courts. It is a different matter to insist that departmental remedies should be exhausted before a person approaches the civil court but it is not proper for the single judge of the high court to hold after five years, while hearing second appeal, that civil court has no jurisdiction. The case should have been decided on merits. The appellant could not be non-suited on the ground that he had failed to take recourse to proceedings under the Central Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1965, against the order of dismissal. It was further held in the case that it is also an erroneous view that jurisdiction of civil court under section 34 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, is also ousted. Service rules neither expressly nor by implication have taken away jurisdiction of civil court to deal with service matters.[627]

An employee of the Life Insurance Corporation was dismissed from service and the employee challenged his dismissal in the civil court. A departmental inquiry had been conducted in the case but the copy of the inquiry report was not made available to the plaintiff. Even the show-cause notice did not disclose as to on what premise a finding of guilt was recorded by the inquiry officer or by disciplinary authority. It was held by a division bench of the Rajasthan High Court that there has been a violation of principles of natural justice and where principles of natural justice and service regulations are violated, the civil court will have jurisdiction. It was further held that if the dispute is not an industrial dispute and it does not relate to enforcement of any right under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, the remedy lies only in civil court.[628]

Where an individual workman filed a suit against his employer seeking relief in respect of grant of selection scale or with holding of increment as a measure of punishment, the dispute is not covered by section 2A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. Since the cause of the workman is not espoused by the union or the body of workmen and the dispute is not industrial dispute, it was held that the jurisdiction of civil court is not barred.[629]

In the case of dismissal of an employee of an insurance company on the basis of domestic enquiry, it was held by the Supreme Court that if the findings of the departmental proceedings are based on no evidence, the civil court can interfere in the matter.[630] In the above case, the Supreme Court laid down guidelines to be followed where the findings of a domestic enquiry

---

625. Sitaram v Pigment Cakes, AIR 1980 SC 10 : (1979) 4 SCC 12.
626. Ramendra Kishore Biswas v State of Tripura, AIR 1999 SC 294 : (1999) 1 SCC 472.
627. Ramendra Kishore Biswas v State of Tripura, AIR 1999 SC 294 : (1999) 1 SCC 472.
628. Life Insurance Corporation of India v Rampal Singh, 2006 (2) Civil Court Cases 649 (Rajasthan) (DB).
629. RSRTC v Ramesh Kumar Sharma, 2008 (4) Civil Court Cases 81 (Rajasthan).
630. Narinder Mohan Arya v United India Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 1748 : (2006) 4 SCC 713.

were challenged before civil court or a writ court. Speaking for the bench in the above case, SB Sinha J observed as follows:

> 26. In our opinion the learned Single Judge and consequently the Division Bench of the High Court did not pose unto themselves the correct question. The matter can be viewed from two angles. Despite limited jurisdiction a civil court, it was entitled to interfere in a case where the report of the Enquiry Officer is based on no evidence. In a suit filed by a delinquent employee in a civil court as also a Writ Court, in the event the findings arrived at in the departmental proceedings are questioned before it should keep in mind the following: (1) the enquiry officer is not permitted to collect any material from outside sources during the conduct of the enquiry.[631] (2) In a domestic enquiry fairness in the procedure is a part of the principles of natural justice.[632] (3) Exercise of discretionary power involve two elements—(i) objective and (ii) subjective and existence of the exercise of an objective element is a condition precedent for the exercise of the subjective element.[633] (4) It is not possible to lay down any rigid rules of the principles of natural justice which depends on the facts and circumstances of each case but the concept of fair play in action is the basis.[634] (5) The enquiry officer is not permitted to travel beyond the charges and any punishment imposed on the basis of a finding which was not the subject-matter of the charges is wholly illegal.[635] (6) Suspicion or presumption cannot take the place of proof even in a domestic enquiry. The Writ Court is entitled to interfere with the findings of the fact of any tribunal or authority in certain circumstances.[636]

[s 9.70] Service Matters Between Workmen and Management

The appellant, Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation, constituted under the Road Transport Corporations Act, 1950, contended that the suits filed by the respondent-employees impugning the termination of their services for misconduct on the ground of contravention of standing orders were barred and that the only remedy available to the respondents was a reference of the dispute for adjudication to a labour court.

The instant cases are governed by the decision in Jitendra Nath Biswas case and in accordance with the said decision, it must be held that the jurisdiction of the civil courts is excluded. It may be stated that from the point of view of the workmen also, the remedy of adjudication available under the Act would be more beneficial to them than that of a civil suit inasmuch as the civil court cannot grant the relief of reinstatement which relief can be granted by the labour court or the industrial tribunal.[637] On the date of filing the suit, none of the situations contemplated under section 2A of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, had happened so as to give the appellant a cause of action to approach the industrial court. It cannot be doubted that the maintainability of the suit has to be decided with reference to the date of institution of the proceeding and since on the day when the civil suit was filed, none of the eventualities covered by section 2A had happened, the appellant could not have approached the forum under the 1947 Act for relief.[638]

---

631. See State of Assam v Mahendra Kumar Das, AIR 1970 SC 1255 : (1970) 1 SCC 709.
632. See Khem Chand v UOI, AIR 1958 SC 300 and State of Uttar Pradesh v Om Prakash Gupta, (1969) 3 SCC 775.
633. See KL Tripathi v State Bank of India, AIR 1984 SC 273 : (1984) 1 SCC 43.
634. See Sawai Singh v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1986 SC 995 : (1986) 3 SCC 454 : 1986 SCR (2) 957.
635. See Director (Inspection & Quality Control) Export Inspection Council of India v Kalyan Kumar Mitra, 1987 (2) Cal LJ 344.
636. See Central Bank of India Ltd v Prakash Chand Jain, AIR 1969 SC 983; Kuldeep Singh v Commr of Police, (1999) 2 SCC 110. Narinder Mohan Arya v United India Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 1748, para 26, at p 1754 : (2006) 4 SCC 713.
637. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Ramesh Chandra Tailor, (1994) Supp 1 SCC 268; State of Haryana v Randhir Singh, (1995) Supp 1 SCC 144.
638. Ishar Singh v National Fertiliser Ltd, (1991) Supp 2 SCC 649.

In a case relating to employment on the work charge basis till the completion of project, the plaintiff's services were terminated on the completion of the project. The plaintiff challenged the termination as null and void in a civil suit. The claim of the employer was that the termination simpliciter was effected in the light of Rules under the Certified Standing Orders. On the other hand, the plaintiff claimed that the said Rules were completely ignored and highly arbitrary approach was adopted by the employer by picking and choosing plaintiffs for the purpose of termination. It was held by the Supreme Court that the dispute fell under the premise of Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and the jurisdiction of civil court stood barred.[639] VS Sirpurkar J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> . . . there is no doubt that the dispute and the main issue fell squarely under the premise of Industrial Disputes Act. Further as specifically held in Krishna Kant's case[640] that where the Certified Standing Orders were applicable and where the breach thereof is complained of, such issues fell in the exclusive area of the machinery provided by the Industrial Disputes Act and as such the civil court's jurisdiction was specifically barred. We are left with no doubt that the situation is identical in the present case.

In service matters between workman and management, the civil court has limited jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has held that the jurisdiction of civil court is not totally excluded. Thus, if a right is claimed under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, or the sister laws, the jurisdiction of civil court would be barred, but if no such right is claimed and the order of the management is claimed to be against the principles of natural justice, such matters are not beyond the jurisdiction of civil court.[641] SB Sinha J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 11. Civil court may have a limited jurisdiction in service matters but it cannot be said to have no jurisdiction at all to entertain a suit. It may not be entitled to sit in appeal over the order passed in the disciplinary proceedings or on the quantum of punishment imposed. It may not in a given case direct reinstatement in service having regard to Section 14(1)(b) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 but, it is a trite law that where the right is claimed by the plaintiff in terms of common law or under a statute other than the one which created a new right for the first time and when a forum has also been created for enforcing the said right, the civil court shall also have jurisdiction to entertain a suit where the plaintiff claim benefit of a fundamental right as adumbrated under Article 14 of the Constitution of India or mandatory provisions of statute or statutory rules governing the terms and conditions of service.[642]

Where the respondent, who was a daily wages employee, was removed from service by his employer, he filed a civil suit for his reinstatement and the suit was decreed by the lower courts. It was held by the Supreme Court that the respondent being a worker and the dispute being an industrial dispute, the civil court had no jurisdiction to try the case. The only remedy available to him is a reference under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and not by way of a civil suit.[643]

The disputes involving rights or obligations created by the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, do not fall within the jurisdiction of the civil court.

In a case from Haryana, a conductor was dismissed from service by the State Roadways. In the suit filed by the conductor, the civil court framed issues including the issue of whether it had jurisdiction to try the suit against the order of dismissal. However, without recording

---

639. Chief Engineer, Hydel Project v Ravinder Nath, AIR 2008 SC 1315 : (2008) 2 SCC 350.
640. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Krishna Kant, AIR 1995 SC 1715 : (1995) 5 SCC 75.
641. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Mohar Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2553 : (2008) 5 SCC 542.
642. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Mohar Singh, AIR 2008 SC 2553, para 11, at p 2554 : (2008) 5 SCC 542.
643. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Ramdhara Indolia, (2006) 6 SCC 287 : (2006) 4 Mad LJ 1269.

any finding on the issue of jurisdiction, the civil court decreed the suit. It was held by the Supreme Court that such a suit is beyond the jurisdiction of civil court and hence the decree is a nullity.[644]

A three-judge bench of the Supreme Court has rendered a decision which is of far-reaching consequence in regard to workmen and management, the rights of workmen and the powers and jurisdiction of the civil courts vis-à-vis the tribunals established under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. SB Sinha J, speaking for the three-judge bench in Bal Mukund Bairwa's case,[645] has observed as follows:

> Section 9 of the Code is in enforcement of the fundamental principles of law laid down in the maxim Ubi jus Ibi remedium. A litigant, thus, having a grievance of a civil nature has a right to institute a civil suit in a competent civil court unless its cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred by any statute. Ex facie, in terms of Section 9 of the Code, civil courts can try all suits, unless barred by statute, either expressly or by necessary implication.
>
> 10. The civil court, furthermore, being a court of plenary jurisdiction has the jurisdiction to determine its jurisdiction upon considering the averments made in the plaint but that would not mean that the plaintiff can circumvent the provisions of law in order to invest jurisdiction on the civil court although it otherwise may not possess. For the said purpose, the court in given cases would be entitled to decide the question of its own jurisdiction upon arriving at a finding in regard to the existence of the jurisdictional fact. It is also well settled that there is a presumption that a civil court will have jurisdiction and the ouster of civil court's jurisdiction is not to be readily inferred. A person taking a plea contra must establish the same. Even in a case where jurisdiction of a civil court is sought to be barred under a statute, the civil court can exercise its jurisdiction in respect of some matters particularly when the statutory authority or Tribunal acts without jurisdiction.

Explaining the point that the nature of the dispute, the reliefs claimed by the plaintiff and pleadings are important factors in determining the question of jurisdiction, it was further observed in the above case as follows:

> 21. A dispute arising in between an employer and employee may or may not be an industrial dispute. The dispute may be in relation to or arising out of a fundamental right of the employee, or his right under a Parliamentary Act and the Regulations framed thereunder, and/or a right arising under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act or the sister laws and may relate to same or similar rights or different rights, or even may be based on common law right or contractual right. The question in regard to the jurisdiction of the civil court must, therefore, be addressed having regard to the fact as to which rights or obligations are sought to be enforced for the purpose of invoking or excluding the jurisdiction of a civil court.[646]

It was further observed in the above case as follows:

> 23. If an employee intends to enforce his constitutional rights or a right under a statutory regulation, the civil court will have the necessary jurisdiction to try a suit. If, however, he claims his right and corresponding obligations only in terms of the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act or the sister laws so called, the civil court will have none. In this view of the matter, in our considered opinion, it would not be correct to contend that only

---

644. State of Haryana v Bikar Singh, AIR 2006 SC 2473 : (2006) 9 SCC 450. See also Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Zakir Hussain, (2005)7 SCC 447; Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Krishna Kant, AIR 1995 SCW 2683 : (1995) 5 SCC 75.
645. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Bal Mukund Bairwa, (2010) 4 SCC 299 : 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 545 (SC).
646. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Bal Mukund Bairwa, (2010) 4 SCC 299 : 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 545, para 23, at p 555 (SC).

> because the employee concerned is also a workman within the meaning of the provisions of the 1947 Act or the conditions of his service are otherwise governed by the Standing Order certified under the 1946 Act ipso facto the civil court will have no jurisdiction.[647]

The appellant, a probationer, fitter on daily basis was terminated from service on ground of unsatisfactory work. The appellant did invoke the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, for getting the dispute referred to an appropriate forum under the said Act for an adjudication but he failed and he did not pursue the remedy any further though such refusal could have been challenged by way of a writ petition. He having failed to do so, he cannot then resort to a remedy by way of a civil suit, which is otherwise not maintainable in law.[648]

The Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, is enacted by the Parliament to provide speedy, inexpensive and effective forum for resolution of disputes arising between workmen and the employers, the underlying idea being to ensure that the workmen do not get caught in the labyrinth of civil courts which the workmen can ill-afford. The procedure followed by civil courts are too lengthy and consequently, is not an efficacious forum for resolving industrial disputes speedily. The power of industrial courts also is wide and such forums are empowered to grant adequate relief as they think just and appropriate. It is in the interest of the workmen that their disputes, including the dispute of illegal termination are adjudicated upon by an industrial dispute within the meaning of section 2(k) and under section 17 of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. Every award of labour court, industrial tribunal or national tribunal is required to be published by the appropriate government within a period of 30 days from the date of its receipt and such award published under section 17(1) is held to be final.[649]

The workmen of the Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation challenged the orders of dismissal/ removal from service by filing a civil suit. Relief sought was whether the orders of termination of services were null and void, having been passed by an authority who had no competence to pass the same.

It was held by Supreme Court having regard to the relief sought for in the suits filed in the civil court, jurisdiction of the civil court is impliedly barred and the appropriate forum for resolution of such dispute is the forum constituted under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.[650]

[s 9.71] Consumer Protection Matters

The provisions of the Consumer Protection Act, 1986, do not strike at the independence of the judiciary. By reason of the provisions of section 3 of the Consumer Protection Act, 1986, it is evident that remedies provided thereunder are not in derogation of those provided under other laws. The said Act supplements and not supplants the jurisdiction of the civil courts or other statutory authorities. The said Act provides for a further safeguard to the effect that in the event a complaint involving complicated issues requiring recording of evidence of experts, the complainant would be at liberty to approach the civil court for appropriate relief. The right of the consumer to approach the civil court for necessary relief has, therefore, been provided under the Act itself. The provisions of the said Act are required to be interpreted as broadly as possible. It has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint despite the fact that other fora/courts would also have jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the lis.[651]

---

647. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Bal Mukund Bairwa, (2010) 4 SCC 299 : 2010 (1) Civil Court Cases 545, para 23, at p 555 (SC).
648. BS Bharti v IBP Co Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 4355.
649. CJ Nikam v Municipal Corp of Ahmedabad, AIR 2002 SC 997 : (2002) 2 SCC 542 : 2002 (1) LLJ 842.
650. CJ Nikam v Municipal Corp of Ahmedabad, AIR 2002 SC 997 : (2002) 2 SCC 542 : 2002 (1) LLJ 842.
651. State of Karnataka v Vishwabarathi House Building Coop Society, AIR 2003 SC 1043.

The proceedings under the Consumer Protection Act, 1986, and in a civil court can simultaneously go on, even if the issues involved in the two proceedings are substantially similar. The existence of parallel or other adjudicatory forums cannot take away or exclude the jurisdiction created under the Act. Thus, where the proceedings in the civil court and those in the consumer forum have been initiated by two different parties, and their grievances relate to the same incident, it was held that in fact they are independent and separate proceedings.[652]

Where given the nature of the claim in the complaint and the prayer for damages in the sum of Rs 15 crores and for an additional sum of Rs 60 lakhs for covering the cost of travelling and other expenses incurred by the appellant, it is obvious that very detailed evidence would have to be led, both to prove the claim and thereafter to prove the damages and expenses. It is, therefore, in any event, not an appropriate case to be heard and disposed of in a summary fashion. The National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission was right in giving to the appellant liberty to move the civil court. This is an appropriate claim for a civil court to decide and, obviously, was not filed before a civil court to start with because, before the consumer forum, any figure in damages can be claimed without having to pay court fees. This, in that sense, is an abuse of the process of the consumer forum.[653]

It has been held by the Supreme Court that a government servant cannot raise any dispute regarding his service conditions or for payment of gratuity or general provident fund or any of his retiral benefits before any of the forum under the Consumer Protection Act, 1986. A government servant does not fall under the definition of a "consumer" as defined under section 2(1)(d)(ii) of the Act. A government servant is entitled to claim his retiral benefits strictly in accordance with his service conditions and regulations or statutory rules framed for that purpose. The appropriate forum for redressal of any of his grievance may be the state administrative tribunal, if any, or civil court, but certainly not a forum under the Act.[654] It was also reiterated that the conferment of jurisdiction is a legislative function and it can neither be conferred with the consent of the parties nor by a superior court, and if the court passes a decree having no jurisdiction over the matter, it would amount to nullity as the matter goes to the root of the cause. An issue of such nature can be raised at any stage of the proceedings.

[s 9.72] Corporate

Unless jurisdiction is expressly or implicitly barred under a statute, for violation or redress of any such right, the civil court would have jurisdiction. There is nothing under the Companies Act, 1956, expressly barring the jurisdiction of the civil court, but the jurisdiction of the "Court" as defined under the Act, exercising its power under various sections where it has been invested with exclusive jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of civil court is impliedly barred. The jurisdiction of "Court" under section 155, to the extent it has exclusive jurisdiction; the jurisdiction of the civil court is impliedly barred. For what is not covered as aforesaid, the civil court would have jurisdiction. Similarly, even under section 446(1), its words itself indicate the jurisdiction of the civil court is not excluded, the words "except by leave of the court" itself indicate on leave, given the civil court would have jurisdiction to adjudicate one's right.[655] A bare perusal of the provisions leave no manner of doubt that thereby the jurisdiction of the

---

652. Hindustan Motors Ltd v Amardeep Singh Wirk, AIR 2009 Del 122 : 2009 (161) DLT 88 (DB).
653. Synco Industries v State Bank of Bikaner and Jaipur, AIR 2002 SC 568 : 2002 AIR SCW 151 : (2002) 2 SCC 1.
654. Jagmitter Sain Bhagat v Director, Health Services, Haryana, AIR 2013 SC 3060 : 2013 AIR SCW 4387 : (2013) 10 SCC 136 : 2013 (8) SCR 77.
655. Ammonia Supplies Corp Pvt Ltd v Modern Plastic Containers Pvt Ltd, (1998) 7 SCC 105.

civil court has not been ousted completely, when the civil court of the Indian Companies Act, 1956, was concerned with the rival claims of the parties as to whether one party has illegally been dispossessed by the other or not. Such a suit, apart from the general law, would also be maintainable in terms of section 6 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963. In such matters, the court would not be concerned even with the question as to title/ownership of the property.[656] The right to approach a civil court by a shareholder in a circumstance where there is a clear standing rift between the company secretary and the chairman and managing director, which can be saved only by conducting an urgent general meeting, is not taken away though there is a specific provision under sections 397 and 398 of the Indian Companies Act, 1956.[657] Where in a suit for injunction the plaintiff claimed that there was violation of provisions of Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, by the defendants, the suits would be maintainable in the civil court. Since the Act did not even provide a machinery through which the said remedy could be obtained, there was no ouster of the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain a complaint that the provisions of Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, were being violated by the defendants and that they were liable to be prevented from violating that statute. In such a case, the mere fact that the plaintiff could complaint to the authorities created by that Act and hope that the authorities under that Act would take action cannot be said to bar the rights of the plaintiff to approach the civil court for redressal of its grievances. Moreover, even assuming that the plaintiff was seeking to enforce a right created by the Act, this would be a case where the statute gives the right to sue but provides no particular form of remedy, thus relegating the aggrieved party to the civil court.[658] The relief claimed by the plaintiff was that he should be declared to be the owner of 300 shares and duplicate shares be issued to him cancelling the transfer of these shares in favour of the transferees. All other reliefs were consequential. In the circumstances of the case, when the plaintiff himself has stated that he had signed the transfer deeds and kept them along with the share certificates and ultimately it is found that someone has come to possess the transfer deeds and original shares and put them up before the company for the shares being registered in their names, it is clearly a case of cancellation of such registration of shares in the name of the transferees obtained by misrepresentation or fraud or any other reason. There is no question of declaration, because when the register is rectified, automatically, the shares would revert back to the plaintiff. Moreover, the transferees would be necessary parties to suit for any such declaration and they are not impleaded.[659]

In the aforesaid circumstances, the case is clearly cognisable by the company law board and not by the civil court under section 9 of the CPC.

[s 9.73] Land Grabbing

If the appellants could have availed the remedies of review under section 17A of the Act and the suit for declaration of title and right, in the author's view, the learned single judge ought not to have expressed any opinion on the merits of the case because after the high court has put its seal of approval on the judgment and order of the special court, the result of the review application and the suit would become a foregone conclusion. In regard to the remedy of the suit, having regard to the provisions of section 8(2) read with section 15 of the Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982 (12 of 1982), no suit for title in respect of the disputed

---

656. Dwarka Prasad Agarwal v Ramesh Chandra Agarwala, AIR 2003 SC 2696 : 2003 AIR SCW 3328 : (2003) 6 SCC 220 : JT 2003 (6) SC 377.
657. Jayanti R Padukone v ICDS Ltd, AIR 1994 Kant 354.
658. DL Walton v Cochin Stock Exchange, AIR 1995 Kant 106.
659. Eternit Everest Ltd v Neelmani Bhartiya, AIR 1999 Raj 235.

land which is alleged to be a land grabbed by the first appellant, could be entertained by the civil court. It may be apt to point out that under section 8(8) in any case, pending before any court or other authority immediately before the constitution of a special court, as would have been within the jurisdiction of such special court, stood transferred to the special court as if the cause of action on which the suit or proceeding is based had arisen after the constitution of the special court. In other words, the suit for declaration of title by the appellants would not be maintainable.[660]

The special court constituted under the Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982, gets jurisdiction to try a case of land grabbing only when it is alleged specifically that an act of land grabbing had been committed as otherwise it will not have any jurisdiction. To maintain a petition before the special court, it must be specifically averred in the application that an act of land grabbing has been committed by a land grabber without any lawful entitlement to the land and with a view to taking illegal possession of such land or to construct unauthorised structures or to perform any other acts as enumerated inter alia in clause (e) of section 2 of the Act. It was held by a division bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court that in the absence of any such averments in the application, the jurisdiction of the special court or the special tribunal, as the case may be, is not attracted although the question of title or right to or possession over the land in dispute is involved.[661]

The Supreme Court has held that under the Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982 (Act 12 of 1982), the tribunal constituted under it derives jurisdiction only when jurisdictional facts are disclosed in the petition. For invoking the jurisdiction of the court under the Act, it is necessary not only to allege the act of land grabbing within the meaning of the Act but also a prima facie case must be found out by the special court.[662] Sinha J, speaking for the bench, observed thus:

> Ordinary disputes with regard to a title of property are not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Special Court or the Tribunal. They have to be determined in ordinary civil courts. The Special Courts and the Tribunals are not substitutes for the civil courts in the litigations involving a civil dispute relating to immovable property within the meaning of Section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It has the exclusive jurisdiction where land grabbing is alleged or appeared from the application filed before it.[663]

In another case under the Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982, the Supreme Court held that in a proceeding before the special court, the only issue which falls for decision is whether there has been an act of land grabbing as alleged and who is the guilty party. The special court has no jurisdiction to decide questions relating to acquisition of title by adverse possession under the Act as the same would fall within the domain of the civil courts.[664]

[s 9.74] Constitutional Matters

The declaration of the President of India, under Articles 341 and 342 of the Constitution of India with respect to lists of scheduled tribes in relation to a state, that a particular caste or

---

660. LL Sudhakar Reddy v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2001 SC 3205 : (2001) 6 SCC 634 : 2001 (Suppl) SCR 383.
661. Basanthilal Aggarwal v PS Bhamdari, AIR 2007 (NOC) 999 : 2007 (3) Andh LD 805 (AP) (DB).
662. Om Prakash Singh v M Lingamaiah, AIR 2009 SC 3091 : (2009) 12 SCC 613.
663. Om Prakash Singh v M Lingamaiah, AIR 2009 SC 3091, at p 3095 : (2009) 12 SCC 613.
664. N Srinivasa Rao v Spl. Court under Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, AIR 2006 SC 3691 : (2006) 4 SCC 214. See also Andhra Pradesh Housing Board v Mohd. Sadatullah, (2007) 6 SCC 566.

tribe as defined in Articles 366(24) or (25) respectively, is conclusive subject to an amendment by Parliament. By necessary implication, the jurisdiction of the civil court to take cognizance of and give a declaration stands prohibited.[665] In view of provisions of Article 363(1) of the Constitution any dispute arising out of the merger agreement or the instrument of accession of Jammu and Kashmir is beyond the competence of the courts to inquire into.[666]

A decision by the Government of India that a certain property does not belong to ex-ruler of an erstwhile state as his private property cannot be challenged by a suit in the civil court, in view of specific bar under Article 363 of the Constitution of India. The issue as to whether the Government of India was obliged to recognise the private property of the ex-ruler and whether, under the terms of the covenant executed in 1948 (Article 12 of the covenant), the said ex-ruler of Kapurthala was entitled to have it thus recognised, are disputes which are clearly barred by Article 363 and the court had no jurisdiction to decide the said issues. By the covenant, all rights, authority and jurisdiction of erstwhile rulers were vested in the Patiala and East Punjab State Union (Pepsu) and all assets and liabilities of the covenanting state become the assets and liabilities of the Union. It is only Article 12 which ensured certain rights to the ruler with regard to full ownership, use and enjoyment of all private properties (as distinct from state properties) belonging to him on the date of his making over the administration of the state to the Raj Pramukh. Consequently, he was also required to furnish to the Raj Pramukh, before the deadline of the inventory of all the immovable properties, securities and cash balances held by him as such private property. This was obviously done so that the Government of India could ascertain the correctness of the claim. No doubt, clause (3) of Article 12 provides that a dispute arising as to whether any item of property was the private property of the ruler or state property was referrable to a nominee of the Government of India and such nominee's decision would be final and binding on all the parties concerned, provided that such dispute was to be referred by the deadline of 31 December 1948. Interpreting the said clause (3) it cannot be said that under the treaty the Government of India could not unilaterally refuse to recognise any property as private property of the ruler, and, if it did, it was obliged to refer it to a person contemplated by clause (3) and that failure to do so would imply recognition of the claim as to private property. Such a view would be erroneous on two counts. In the first place, this interpretation ignores the true nature of the covenant. The covenant is a political document resulting from an act of state. Once the Government of India decides to takeover all the properties of the ruler, except the properties, which it recognises as private properties, there is no question of implied recognition of any property as private property. On the other hand, clause (3) of the covenant merely means that if the ruler of the covenanting state claimed property to be his private property and the Government of India did not agree, it was open to the ruler to have this issue decided in the manner contemplated by clause (3). Clause (3) of Article 12 does not mean that the Government was obliged to refer to the dispute upon its failure to recognise it as private property. Secondly, the dispute as to whether a particular property was or was not recognised as private property of the ruler was itself a dispute arising out of the terms of the covenant and, therefore, not adjudicable by municipal courts as being beyond the jurisdiction of the municipal courts by reason of Article 363 of the Constitution of India.[667]

---

665. State of Tamil Nadu v A Guruswami, (1997) 3 SCC 542.
666. State of Jammu and Kashmir v Karan Singh, AIR 1997 J&K 132 (DB).
667. Draupadi Devi v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 4684.

[s 9.75] Equity Jurisdiction — Adjudicatory Fact-Jurisdictional Fact

A court of law cannot exercise its discretionary jurisdiction de hors the statutory law. Its discretion must be exercised in terms of the existing statute.[668] SB Sinha J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> In England, the Court of Equity exercises jurisdiction in equity. The courts of India do not possess any such exclusive jurisdiction. The courts in India exercise jurisdiction both in equity as well as law but exercise of equity jurisdiction is always subject to the provisions of law. If exercise of equity jurisdiction would violate the express provisions contained in law, the same cannot be done. Equity jurisdiction can be exercised only when no law operates in the field.[669]

In Shamsu Suhara Beevi v G Alex,[670] the Supreme Court while dealing with a matter relating to grant of compensation by the high court under section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, in addition to the relief of specific performance in the absence of prayer made to that effect, observed as follows:

> Grant of such a relief in the teeth of express provisions of the statute to the contrary is not permissible. On equitable consideration court cannot ignore or overlook the provisions of the statute. Equity must yield to law.

Referring to judicial flexibility to impart justice based on equity, Krishna Iyer J stated as follows:

> It is basic to our processual jurisprudence that the right to relief must be judged to exist as on the date a suitor institutes the legal proceeding. Equally clear is the principle that procedure is the handmaid and not the mistress of the judicial process. If a fact, arising after the lis has come to court and has a fundamental impact on the right to relief or the manner of moulding it, is brought diligently to the notice of the tribunal, it cannot blink at it or be blind to events which stultify or render inept the decretal remedy. Equity justifies bending the rules of procedure, where no specific provision or fair play is not violated, with a view to promote substantial justice . . .[671]

While dealing with the exemption granted under section 3(1)(b) of the Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999 (Act No 18 of 2000), to public limited companies on the basis of paid-up share capital, the Supreme Court held that eviction proceedings against such companies are not barred under section 22 of the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985.[672] CK Thakker J, speaking for the bench in the above case, pointed out the distinction between "jurisdictional fact" and "adjudicatory fact" in the following words:

> Stated simply, the fact or facts upon which the jurisdiction of a Court, a tribunal or an authority depends can be said to be a "jurisdictional fact". If the jurisdictional fact exists, a Court, Tribunal or Authority has jurisdiction to decide other issues. If such fact does not exist, a Court, Tribunal or Authority cannot act. It is also well settled that a Court or a Tribunal cannot wrongly assume existence of jurisdictional fact and proceed to decide a matter. The underlying principle is that by erroneously assuming existence of a jurisdictional fact, a subordinate Court or an inferior tribunal cannot confer upon itself jurisdiction which it otherwise does not possess.[673]

---

668. Shiv Kumar Sharma v Santosh Kumari, AIR 2008 SC 171 : (2007) 8 SCC 600.
669. Shiv Kumar Sharma v Santosh Kumari, AIR 2008 SC 171, at pp 174–175 : (2007) 8 SCC 600.
670. Shamsu Suhara Beevi v G Alex, (2004) 8 SCC 569.
671. Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu v Motor & General Traders, AIR 1975 SC 1409 : (1975) 1 SCC 770.
672. Carona Ltd v Parvathy Swaminathan, AIR 2008 SC 187 : (2007) 8 SCC 559.
673. Carona Ltd v Parvathy Swaminathan, AIR 2008 SC 187, at p 193 : (2007) 8 SCC 559.

Elaborating on the point and holding that the existence of a jurisdictional fact is the sine qua non or condition precedent to the assumption of jurisdiction by a court or tribunal, Thakker J further observed:

> But there is distinction between "jurisdictional fact" and "adjudicatory fact" which cannot be ignored. An "adjudicatory fact" is a "fact in issue" and can be determined by a court, Tribunal or Authority on "merits", on the basis of evidence adduced by the parties. It is no doubt true that it is very difficult to distinguish "jurisdictional fact" and "fact in issue" or "adjudicatory fact". Nonetheless the difference between the two cannot be overlooked.[674]

The above judgment quoted with approval, a passage from Halsbury's Laws of England, wherein it has been stated:

> Where the jurisdiction of a tribunal is dependent upon the existence of a particular state of affairs, that state of affairs may be described as preliminary to, or collateral to the merits of the issue. If, at the inception of an inquiry by an inferior tribunal, a challenge is made to its jurisdiction, the tribunal has to make up its mind whether to act or not and can give a ruling on the preliminary or collateral issue; but that ruling is not conclusive.[675]

[s 9.76] Land Acquisition Matters

The Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (1 of 1894) is a law of exceptional character. While on the one hand it aims at promoting important public interests by making available land for government for executing projects for public purposes, on the other hand it protects individual private interests by providing for adequate compensation to land owners. The Act is a complete code by itself.

In State of Bihar v Dhirendra Kumar,[676] the Supreme Court has held that the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is a complete code in itself and is meant to serve a public purpose. It was also held that a civil court has no jurisdiction to go into the question of the validity or legality of the notification under section 4 and declaration under section 6 of the Act except by the high court in a proceeding under Article 226 of the Constitution.

It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the question of validity of notification under section 4 and the declaration of public purpose under section 6 cannot be gone into by civil court. The issue can be decided only by writ court under Article 226 of the Constitution.[677]

In another case, it was held that where the challenge is neither with respect to the acquisition proceedings nor the amount of compensation but as to the entitlement who should receive the compensation, it was held by the Punjab and Haryana High Court that civil court has jurisdiction to entertain suit.[678]

It is clear that the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is a complete code in itself and is meant to serve a public purpose. By the doctrine of necessary implication, the power of a civil court to take cognizance of the case under section 9 stands excluded and a civil court has no jurisdiction to go into the question of the validity or legality of the notification under section 4, declaration under section 6 and subsequent proceedings except by the high court in a proceeding under Article 226 of the Constitution. Therefore, a civil court is devoid of jurisdiction to give declaration or even bare injunction on the invalidity of the procedure contemplated under

---

674. Carona Ltd v Parvathy Swaminathan, AIR 2008 SC 187, at pp 193–194 : (2007) 8 SCC 559.
675. Halsbury's Laws of England, Butterworths, 4th Edn, vol I, January 1, 1989, para 55, p 61.
676. Laxmi Chand v Gram Panchayat, AIR 1996 SC 523 : 1996 SCC (7) 218 : JT 1995 (8) SC 195.
677. Mahadeo Gopala Shinde v Nivrutti Sripati Jadhav, 2007 (2) Mah LJ 362 : 2007 (3) All MR 110.
678. Shyam Lal v Sham Lal, AIR 2007 P&H 89 : 2007 (2) Rec Civ R 484. See also State of Tamil Nadu v M Balakrishnan, (1999) Mad LJ (Supp) 81 (Mad).

the Act. The only right available for the aggrieved person is to approach the high court under Article 226 and the Supreme Court under Article 136 with self-imposed restrictions on their exercise of extraordinary power.[679]

Where notification was issued under section 4(1) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, and declaration made about public purpose under section 6 of the Act, civil court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the matter. Thus, application for injunction for restraining the land owner from alienating the land or plea seeking injunction against government from proceeding with acquisition proceedings are not maintainable.[680]

In another case, it was held by the Madras High Court that after issuance of notification under section 4 of the Act and declaration under section 6, the civil court cannot declare that acquisition proceedings are void.[681]

In author's view, it appears that a crucial provision of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, has failed to find space in all these judgments. Section 52 of the Act[682] provides that if any aggrieved person wants to file a suit for challenging "anything done in pursuance of the Act", then a month's prior notice is mandatory to be served on such person who acted under the Act. A similarly worded provision can be found in section 97 of the Right to Fair Compensation and Transparency in Land Acquisition, Rehabilitation and Resettlement Act, 2013. But the 2013 Act has been supplanted with section 63 as well, which expressly holds that no civil court, except a high court in a proceeding under Articles 226/227 of the Constitution shall have jurisdiction to entertain any dispute relating to land acquisition in respect of which the collector or the authority is empowered by or under this Act and no injunction shall be granted in respect of any such matter. So, by virtue of section 52, the jurisdiction of civil courts was not expressly barred and when the legislative enactment was refined, a separate dedicated provision had to be inserted to bar the jurisdiction of civil courts. The expression in section 52 "anything done in pursuance of the Act" has a wide meaning and it should cover all and any acts including acts done in pursuance of section 4 and section 6 of the said Act. The jurisdiction of a civil court needs to be expressly or impliedly barred as per section 9. A dedicated provision like section 63 of the 2013 Act, section 175 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 and section 34 of SARFAESI Act, 2002, cannot be traced to the Land Acquisition Act, 1894.

STATE AMENDMENT

[S 9A] (Maharashtra Amendment)[683].—Where at the hearing of application relating to interim relief in a suit, objection to jurisdiction is taken, such issue to be decided by the Court as a preliminary issue—

(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code or any other law for the time being in force, if, at the hearing of any application for granting or setting aside an order granting any interim relief, whether by way of stay, injunction, appointment of

---

679. Bangalore Development Authority v Brijesh Reddy, 2013 AIR SCW 2378 : (2013) 3 SCC 66 : 2013 (1) SCR 853.
680. UOI v Zurin Taj Begum, (1998) 1 Mad LJ 237 (Mad) : (1997) 2 LW 845.
681. State of Tamil Nadu v Rajamanickam, (2000) 3 Mad LJ 753 (Mad).
682. Section 52—Notice in case of suits for anything done in pursuance of Act.—No suit or other proceeding shall be commenced or prosecuted against any person for anything done in pursuance of this Act, without giving to such person a month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding, and of the cause thereof, nor after tender of sufficient amends.
683. Inserted by Maharashtra Act 65 of 1977, section 3 (w.e.f. 19-12-1977).

a receiver or otherwise, made in any suit, an objection to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain such suit is taken by any of the parties to the suit, the Court shall proceed to determine at the hearing of such application the issue as to the jurisdiction as a preliminary issue before granting or setting aside the order granting the interim relief. Any such application shall be heard and disposed of by the Court as expeditiously as possible and shall not in any case be adjourned to the hearing of the suit.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), at the hearing of any such application, the Court may grant such interim relief as it may consider necessary, pending determination by it of the preliminary issue as to the jurisdiction.

SYNOPSIS

[s 9A.1]	Scope	186	[s 9A.4]	Interim Orders	187
[s 9A.2]	Essence	186	[s 9A.5]	Moulding the Relief	187
[s 9A.3]	Stage	187	[s 9A.6]	Question of Limitation	188

[s 9A.1] Scope

Section 9A (Maharashtra Amendment of 1970), opens an umbrella under which there is provided a self-contained scheme with a definite object. The scheme indicates that the court has to determine the objection to the jurisdiction as a preliminary issue, on a consideration of all the aspects in which the said issue is enveloped. Determination of the issue after hearing even at that stage "would get a label of finality, in so far as all proceedings of the suit is concerned".[684]

But, where interim injunction was granted and the defendant transferred his tenancy rights in violation of the interim injunction, without raising any question of jurisdiction, it was held by the Bombay High Court that the purchaser of tenancy rights cannot seek setting aside of injunction order on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction to grant interim injunction.[685]

[s 9A.2] Essence

The essence of the provision is that the issue of jurisdiction should not only be decided at the interlocutory stage but at the threshold, before the court proceeds with the matter on any other issue; for if it has no jurisdiction to try and entertain the suit as presented, then obviously it should not dwell upon any other matter at all. The only exception is provided by sub-section (2) — to grant ad-interim relief, pending determination of the preliminary issue of jurisdiction. A priori, the court is obliged to decide the question of jurisdiction of the court at the interlocutory stage itself to avoid hearing of any other issue or relief on merits. Thus, the appellate court while considering the appeal filed by the respondents against the order passed by the trial court refusing to grant interim relief, having prima facie observed that the suit as presented is barred by jurisdiction, ought to have relegated the parties to the trial court to first resolve that issue.[686]

---

684. Kranti Mohan v Fatehchand, AIR 1982 Bom 263.
685. Ghanshyam Jamnomal Shewakramani v Lachmandas Tulsiram Nayar (HUF), 2010 (2) AIR Bom R 353 (DB).
686. Arjun Dada Gadage v Mallappa Gurappa Chongule, AIR 2003 Bom 441.

[s 9A.3] Stage

When the stage of filing written statement has been reached, then the only option available to the defendants is to file their written statement raising therein their objection regarding jurisdiction. There is no other stage which gives a right to defendants to take out notice of motion taking objection to jurisdiction. If and when the defendants file written statement and raise an objection to jurisdiction, then the issue will have to be framed on that point. The defendants will have to convince the court that the said issue has to be decided as a preliminary issue and if that is done by the court, then only the objection to jurisdiction can be decided. There is no intermediary stage for raising an objection to jurisdiction except filing of written statement and taking that plea or unless the matter is covered by section 9A of the CPC. Further, the stage of first hearing of the suit is after filing of the written statement and before framing of the issues. Consequently, O XV, rule 1 has no application in the present case; as a result, the only stage of raising objection to jurisdiction, if the matter does not come under section 9A of the CPC is by filing written statement and raising the objection therein.[687]

However, once parties and court have chosen not to try the issue regarding jurisdiction of court as preliminary issue and evidence was led on all issues and the matter was fixed for final order, the court has to record findings on all issues. If the court disposed of the matter simply on the point of jurisdiction at that stage, the very purport of provisions of O XIV, rule 2 of the Code would be defeated.[688]

[s 9A.4] Interim Orders

Section 9A lays down that where an objection to jurisdiction of a civil court is raised to entertain a suit and to pass any interim orders therein, the court should decide the question of jurisdiction in the first instance but that does not mean that pending the decision on the question of jurisdiction, the court has no jurisdiction to pass interim orders as may be called for in the facts and circumstances of the case. A mere objection to jurisdiction does not instantly disable the court from passing any interim orders. It can yet pass appropriate orders. At the same time, it should also decide the question of jurisdiction at the earliest possible time. The interim orders so passed are orders within jurisdiction when passed and effective till the court decides that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. These interim orders undoubtedly come to an end with the decision that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction. It is open to the court to modify these orders while holding that it has no jurisdiction to try the suit.[689]

Providing for hearing of issue of jurisdiction first as preliminary issue in applications filed for grant of ad interim relief in suits are not inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of O XIV, rule 2 of the Central Act. Hence, section 9A cannot be said to be repeated as a result of amendment of the Code by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) and Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 (22 of 2002).[690]

[s 9A.5] Moulding the Relief

Where the gravamen of the grievance made by the applicants under section 9A, CPC is that the Indian courts have no jurisdiction to try and entertain the dispute between the parties,

---

687. BSI Ltd v MV "Cristian-C", AIR 1999 Bom 320.
688. Jagdish Hari Thatte v Municipal Corporation of Greater Bombay, 2007 (2) AIR Bom R 256 (DB).
689. M Bagasarwalla v Hind Rubber Industrial Pvt Ltd, (1997) 3 SCC 443.
690. Madhuri Prabhakar Potole v Aruna Satischandra Gaikward, 2008 (5) AIR Bom R 378 (DB).

even though the relief in the application is couched in such a way so as to pray for return of plaint, however, that would not denude the petitioner or for that matter the court from dealing with the issue of jurisdiction of the court. And if the court were to hold that it had no jurisdiction to try and decide the dispute, then it would be the bounden duty on the court to mould the relief and pass such order as would be warranted in the fact situation of the case especially having regard to the mandate of section 9A of the CPC.[691]

[s 9A.6] Question of Limitation

Where the suit for specific performance of agreement to sell and for perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with the suit property was filed after 29 years of the date of execution of the agreement with no time limit fixed for performance thereof in the agreement, it was held that the suit for injunction would be governed by Article 113 of the Limitation Act, 1963, cause of action for the said reliefs arose when right to sue accrued and dismissal of suit as barred by limitation by treating issue of limitation as preliminary issue was found not proper as the said issue has to be decided on the basis of the evidence of the parties.[692]

PK Balasubramanyan J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> It is seen that the suit was dismissed by the trial court on the finding that the claim for the relief of specific performance was barred by limitation. The plaint contains not only a prayer for specific performance but also a prayer for perpetual injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the possession of the plaintiffs and from creating any documents or entering into any transaction in respect of the suit property. Of course, the latter part of that prayer is directly linked to the claim for specific performance, but the suit as regards the prayer for perpetual injunction to protect the possession of the plaintiff over the suit property on the claim that the predecessor of the plaintiffs was put in possession of the property pursuant to the agreement for sale, on a subsequent date, could not have been held to be not maintainable on any ground. Of course, the grant of the relief of injunction in a sense is discretionary and the court ultimately might or might not have granted the relief to the plaintiffs. The defendants could have also shown that the relief of injunction claimed is merely consequential to the relief of specific performance and was not an independent relief. But that is different from saying that the suit could be dismissed merely on a finding that the prayer for specific performance of agreement was barred by limitation.[693]

The Bench further went on to observe as follows:

> The question as to how long a plaintiff, even if he had performed the whole of his obligations under an agreement for sale, in which a time for performance is not fixed, could keep alive his right to specific performance and to come to court after 29 years seeking to enforce the agreement, may have also to be considered by the court especially in the context of the fact that the relief of specific performance is discretionary and is governed by the relevant provisions of the Specific Relief Act. But again, these questions cannot be decided as preliminary issues and they are not questions on the basis of which the suit could be dismissed as barred by limitation. The question of limitation has to be decided only on the basis of Article 54 of the Limitation Act and when the case is not covered by the first limb of that Article, normally, the question of limitation could be dealt with only after evidence is taken and not as a preliminary issue unless, of course, it is admitted in the plaint that the plaintiffs had notice that performance was refused by the defendants and it is seen that the plaintiffs approached the court beyond three years of the date of notice. Such is not the case here.[694]

---

691. Rhodia Ltd v Neon Laboratories Ltd, AIR 2002 Bom 502.
692. Gunwantbhai Mulchand Shah v Anton Elis Farel, AIR 2006 SC 1556.
693. Gunwantbhai Mulchand Shah v Anton Elis Farel, AIR 2006 SC 1556, para 8, at p 1559.
694. Gunwantbhai Mulchand Shah v Anton Elis Farel, AIR 2006 SC 1556, para 11, at p 1560.

However, the Bombay High Court has held that where specific plea is taken by the defendant that the suit claim was barred by limitation and the pleadings clearly showed that the suit claim was barred by limitation, the order dismissing the suit on the preliminary issue of limitation was proper.[695]

In Kamalakar,[696] the Supreme Court while seized of a question that whether the question of limitation could be considered as preliminary issue under section 9A as amended in Maharashtra, held that section 9A neither contemplates nor refers to any circumstance where an objection besides the jurisdiction of the court may be determined as a preliminary issue. It only contemplates an issue of jurisdiction to be framed and to be determined as a preliminary issue by the court. It was further held that the legislature inserted section 9A to ensure that a suit which is not maintainable for want of jurisdiction of the concerned court, ought not be tried on merits without first determining the question of maintainability of the suit as to jurisdiction of the court, approached by the plaintiff, as a preliminary issue. It was further observed that a perusal of the Statement of Object and Reasons of the Amendment Act would clarify that section 9A talks of maintainability only on the question of inherent jurisdiction and does not contemplate issues of limitation. The high court was found to have erred in not considering the statutory ambit of section 9A while approving the preliminary issue framed by the trial court and thus, rejecting the writ petition filed by the appellant.

Interestingly, immediately after three months from the date of pronouncement, the view taken in Kamalakar[697] was nullified and it was held to be per incuriam in Foreshore Coop Housing Society Ltd.[698] The Supreme Court was dealing with ambit and scope of section 9A as in Maharashtra vis-à-vis provisions of O XIV, rule 2. An ancillary question which was framed was that whether the phrase "an objection to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain such suit" as used in section 9A would include an objection with regard to limitation, i.e., whether an issue relating to a bar to the suit created by law of limitation can be tried as a preliminary issue under section 9A. A necessary corollary was drawn that whether courts shall be guided by the provisions of O XIV, rule 2 or section 9A as amended by the Code of Civil Procedure (Maharashtra Amendment) Act, 2018, in the matter of deciding the objection with regard to the jurisdiction of the court which concerns the bar of limitation as a preliminary issue. It was held that O XIV, rule 2 confers power upon the court to pronounce judgment on all the issues. But there is an exception to that general rule, i.e., where issues both of law and fact arise in the same suit and the court is of the opinion that the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issue of law, it may try that issue first if that issue relates to the jurisdiction of the court or a bar to the suit created by any law. Section 9A was held to be a complete departure from the procedure provided under O XIV, rule 2. It was further found that the decision in the case of Kamalakar[699] was contrary to the law settled by the constitution bench and three judges bench of Supreme Court, followed by other division bench in Pandurang Dhondi Chougule v Maruti Hari Jadhav,[700] Manick Chandra Nandy v Debdas Nandy,[701] National Thermal Power

---

695. Foreshore Co-op Housing Society Ltd, Bombay v Praveen D Desai, AIR 2009 (NOC) 902 (Bom—DB).
696. Kamalakar Eknath Salunkhe v Baburav Vishnu Javalkar, (2015) 7 SCC 321 : 2015 (3) Scale 34 : 2015 (2) Mad LJ 886.
697. Kamalakar Eknath Salunkhe v Baburav Vishnu Javalkar, (2015) 7 SCC 321 : 2015 (3) Scale 34 : 2015 (2) Mad LJ 886.
698. Foreshore Coop Housing Society Ltd v Praveen D Desai, AIR 2015 SC 2006 : 2015 AIR SCW 2671 : (2015) 6 SCC 412 : JT 2015 (9) SC 150.
699. Kamalakar Eknath Salunkhe v Baburam Vishnu Javalkar, (2015) 7 SCC 321 : 2015 (3) Scale 34 : 2015 (2) Mad LJ 886.
700. Pandurang Dhondi Chougule v Maruti Hari Jadhav, AIR 1966 SC 153 : 1966 SCR (1) 102.
701. Manick Chandra Nandy v Debdas Nandy, AIR 1986 SC 446 : (1986) 1 SCC 512 : 1985 (2) Scale 1478 : 1986 (1) UJ 209 SC.

Corp Ltd v Siemens Atkeingesellschaft,[702] Official Trustee v Sachindra Nath Chatterjee,[703] ITW Signode India Ltd v CCE[704] and Kamlesh Babu v Lajpat Rai Sharma.[705] It was conclusively held that section 9A as introduced by Code of Civil Procedure (Maharashtra Amendment) Act, 2018, is mandatory in nature and is a complete departure from the provisions of O XIV, rule 2.

[S 10] Stay of suit.—No Court shall proceed with the trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title where such suit is pending in the same or any other Court in [706][India] having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed, or in any Court beyond the limits of [707][India] established or continued by [708][Central Government] [709][] and having like jurisdiction, or before [710][the Supreme Court].

Explanation.—The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude the Courts in [711][India] from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action.

SYNOPSIS

[s 10.1]	Alterations in the Section	191	[s 10.16]	Sections 10 and 25 of the CPC	203
[s 10.2]	Scope	191	[s 10.17]	Consolidation of Suits	204
[s 10.3]	Object	192	[s 10.18]	Discretion of Court	204
[s 10.4]	Section Applies to Legally Maintainable Suits	193	[s 10.19]	Previously Instituted Suit	206
[s 10.5]	This Section and Section 5 of Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980 (13 of 1980)	193	[s 10.20]	Trial	207
[s 10.6]	Res judicata and Res sub judice — Distinction	194	[s 10.21]	Shall Not Proceed with the Trial	208
[s 10.7]	Fundamental Test	195	[s 10.22]	Between the Same Parties	209
[s 10.8]	Suit	195	[s 10.23]	Interlocutory Orders Pending Stay	209
[s 10.9]	Section Applies Only to Suits Filed in Civil Courts	195	[s 10.24]	Application Under Section 10 to Be Filed Where Subsequent Suit Is Pending	210
[s 10.10]	No Bar to File Second Suit	197	[s 10.25]	Contract Providing for Place of Suing	210
[s 10.11]	Stage	197	[s 10.26]	Comprehensive Latter Suit Cannot Be Stayed	211
[s 10.12]	Question of Jurisdiction	197	[s 10.27]	Revision	211
[s 10.13]	Decree Passed Disregarding This Section — Validity	198	[s 10.28]	Conditional Order	211
[s 10.14]	Matter in Issue	198	[s 10.29]	Letters Patent Appeal	211
[s 10.15]	Whether the Subject Matter of Both Suits Must Be the Same	198	[s 10.30]	Inherent Power to Grant Stay	212
			[s 10.31]	Summary Procedure	213
			[s 10.32]	Explanation I	213
			[s 10.33]	Probate Case and Partition Suit	214

---

702. National Thermal Power Corp Ltd v Siemens Atkeingesellschaft, AIR 2007 SC 1491 : 2007 AIR SCW 1985 : (2007) 4 SCC 451 : 2007 (3) SCR 399 : JT 2007 (4) SC 202.
703. Official Trustee v Sachindra Nath Chatterjee, AIR 1969 SC 823 : (1969) 3 SCR 92.
704. ITW Signode India Ltd. v CCE, (2004) 3 SCC 48 : 2003 (158) ELT 403 (SC).
705. Kamlesh Babu v Lajpat Rai Sharma, (2008) 12 SCC 577 : 2008 (6) SCR 653 : 2008 (6) Scale 403 : JT 2008 (4) SC 652.
706. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 for words "the States".
707. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 for words "the States".
708. Substituted by AO 1937 for "the G.G. in C".
709. The words "or the Crown Representative" omitted by A.O. 1948.
710. Substituted for the words "His Majesty in Council" by AO 1950.
711. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 for words "the State".

[s 10.1] Alterations in the Section

The words "proceed with the trial" have been substituted for the word "try". The words "except where a suit has been stayed under section 20", which occurred at the commencement of the corresponding section of the Code of 1882, the words "for the same relief" which occurred after the words "previously instituted suit", and the words "whether superior or inferior" which occurred after the words "any other court", have been omitted. The words "litigating under the same title" are new.

The words "or the Crown Representative" were omitted from this section by the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948, and the words "the Supreme Court" were substituted for the words "His Majesty in Council" by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

[s 10.2] Scope

The present section provides that where a suit is instituted in a court to which the Code applies, the court shall not proceed with the trial of the suit, if —

First, the matter in issue in the suit is directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties;

Secondly, the previously instituted suit is pending —

(i) in the same court in which the subsequent suit is brought; or

(ii) in any other court in India (whether superior, inferior or co-ordinate); or

(iii) in any court beyond the limits of India established or continued by the Central Government; or

(iv) before the Supreme Court (formerly His Majesty in Council); and,

Thirdly, where the previously instituted suit is pending in any of the courts mentioned in clause (b) or clause (c), such court is a court of jurisdiction competent to grant the relief claimed in the subsequent suit.[712]

A plain reading of section 10 of the CPC makes clear that where the subject matter of the suit is one and the same and the parties are also the same, under such circumstances, if there are two suits between the parties, it is the subsequent suit which has to be stayed and not the previous one.[713] Section 10 of the CPC will not be applicable if issue in both the concerned matters is not directly or substantially common, and judgments in both the matters may be contradictory with each other but is within the gamut of the statutory framework.[714]

Where execution proceeding is pending in a previously instituted suit and appeal against the decree is also pending, section 10 will have no application. Although pendency of appeal against the decree can be treated as pendency of suit, but once the suit is finally decided, there is no question of applying section 10. However, if the matter in issue in the subsequent

---

712. Nirmal Singh v Om Prakash, AIR 1965 J&K 99; JT Republike v Rungta & Sons, AIR 1966 Cal 382; Lekhraj Diddi v Sawan Singh, AIR 1971 MP 172; Channabasappa v Kishanchand, AIR 1972 Mys 112; Paira Mal v Rajnarain, (1919) PR 114, 298; Troyloknath v Macleod, (1900) ILR 28 Cal 28, 34; Kalipada v Charubala, AIR 1933 Cal 887, (1933) ILR 60 Cal 1096; Tara Devi v Kamla Gupta, AIR 1999 Pat 103; Bijender Kumar v Basant Kumar, AIR 1994 All 81.
713. MV Rajashekhar v MV Rajamma, AIR 2004 Kant 280.
714. Balamukund Bhatia v Lalit Bhatia, S.B. Civil Revision Petition No. 181/2018 decided by the High Court of Judicature for Rajasthan at Jodhpur on 24 July 2020.

suit was decided in the previous suit, the aggrieved party can take the plea of res judicata, because section 10 lays down a procedure and it does not confer any substantive right upon parties.[715]

The section does not of course empower one court to stay the proceedings of another court. A district court exercising insolvency jurisdiction under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 (Act 5 of 1920), cannot under this section stay a suit pending against the insolvent in a subordinate court.[716] Since however, the provisions of the section are mandatory, the court before which the subsequent suit is pending ought to stay it where all the conditions laid down in the section exist.[717]

[s 10.3] Object

The object underlying section 10 is to prevent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue. The object underlying section 10 is to avoid two parallel trials on the same issue by two courts and to avoid recording of conflicting findings on issues which are directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit.[718] The basic object of section 10 is to protect a person from multiplicity of proceedings between the same parties.[719] The object behind section 10 of CPC is to bar one of the courts having concurrent jurisdiction to try simultaneously. Even the parties are the same and courts are competent to try both the suits, the final decision reached in the previous suit will operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[720]

B, residing in Calcutta, has an agent A at Calicut employed to sell his goods there. A sues B in Calicut claiming a balance due upon an account in respect of dealings between him and B. During the pendency of the suit in the Calicut Court, B institutes a suit against A in Calcutta for an account and for damages caused by A's alleged negligence. Here, the matter at issue in B's suit is directly and substantially at issue in A's suit: further both the suits are between the same parties; therefore, if the court at Calicut is a court of jurisdiction competent to grant the relief claimed in B's suit, the Calcutta Court must not proceed with the trial of B's suit, and the suit in the Calicut Court, being the one instituted prior in point of time, should alone be proceeded with.[721] But if A was B's agent at Pondicherry instead of at Calicut, and the suit was brought by him in the Pondicherry Court, the Calicut Court, would not be precluded from proceeding with the trial of B's suit, the Pondicherry Court being then a "foreign" court. (See the Explanation to the section.).

This section enacts merely a rule of procedure and a decree therefore passed in contravention of it is not a nullity and cannot be disregarded in execution proceedings.[722] It can be waived, although the section is so worded as not to leave any discretion in the court where its conditions

---

715. S Kumar v Sudhakaran, AIR 2009 Ker 170 : 2009 (2) Ker LT 298.
716. Official Receiver v Palaniswami, AIR 1925 Mad 1051 : (1925) ILR 48 Mad 750.
717. Sequeira v P Francisco Sequeira, AIR 1976 Goa 48.
718. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242 : (2005) 2 SCC 256; see also Indian Express Newspapers v Basumari Pvt Ltd, AIR 1969 Bom 40; Naurati v Mehma Singh, AIR 1972 P&H 421; Life Pharmaceuticals Pvt Ltd v Bengal Medical Hall, AIR 1971 Cal 345; Gujarat State Road Transport Corp v Vimalaben L Shah, AIR 1995 Guj 220; Pukhraj D Jain v G Gopalakrishna, AIR 2004 SC 3504.
719. Munnilal v Sarvajeet, AIR 1984 Raj 22.
720. Balamukund Bhatia v Lalit Bhatia, S.B. Civil Revision Petition No. 181/2018 decided by the High Court of Judicature for Rajasthan at Jodhpur on 24 July 2020.
721. Padamsee v Lakhamsee, (1916) 43 Cal 144; Meckjee v Kasowji (1879) 4 CLR 282.
722. Sheopat Rai v Warak Chand, (1919) AL 294.

are satisfied.[723] Accordingly, even though the Representation of the People Act, 1951, provides that the provisions of the Code shall as far as possible apply to petitions filed under it, an election tribunal does not err in first taking up for hearing a subsequently filed petition by reason of a discretion vested in it under section 87 of that Act and also because of the parties to it having acquiesced.[724]

The section does not of course empower one court to stay the proceedings of another court. A district court exercising insolvency jurisdiction under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 (5 of 1920) cannot under this section stay a suit pending against the insolvent in a subordinate court.[725] Since, however, the provisions of the section are mandatory, the court before which the subsequent suit is pending ought to stay it where all the conditions laid down in the section exist.[726]

[s 10.4] Section Applies to Legally Maintainable Suits

Generally, help of section 10 of the CPC is taken in support of plea of maintainability of two or more suits by one plaintiff. Section 10 of the CPC is not the permissive provision, but is a restrictive provision and cannot be interpreted to hold that since only proceeding with the trial of issue or suit is restricted by section 10 of the CPC, therefore, it impliedly accepts maintainability of more than one suit by one plaintiff. Said plea is devoid of any force. Section 10 of the CPC applies only to those suits which are legally maintainable. Section 10 cannot be invoked to make the subsequently filed suit maintainable. Other view will be just contrary to entire scheme of the procedure provided for trial of suits in the CPC. All relevant provisions of the CPC are aimed towards avoiding more suits than one by the plaintiff, which also prohibits the plaintiff from even amending suit without leave of the court. Despite all provisions to avoid more than one suit, some unavoidable circumstances permit involvement of same issues in two suits. Those suits are like cross suits or where law permits second suit specifically like withdrawal of suit with permission to file fresh suit or due to accrual of cause of action or entitlement for the relief/ reliefs subsequent to filing of earlier suit to the plaintiff and plaintiff had no right to claim relief at the time of filing of earlier suit and where court either cannot grant relief after taking note of subsequent event or the court refuses to entertain subsequent event for moulding the relief, such suits are maintainable and are permissible. Even where such suits are lawfully maintainable, still law, under section 10, prohibits simultaneous trial of issue and if, due to any reason, trial of suit is proceeded, the decision given on an issue which earlier in time has been made final by section 11 of the CPC when specific provisions of law prohibit trial of even maintainable suit, then interpreting sections 10 and 11 of the CPC as a permissive provision making maintainable two suits simultaneously will be against the legislative intention.[727]

[s 10.5] This Section and Section 5 of Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act, 1980 (13 of 1980)

The question that arises for consideration is what is the appropriate course to be followed in a suit which was filed by the creditor against the debtor before the debtor made the application

---

723. Shanti Swaroop v Abdul Rehman, AIR 1965 MP 55, at p 59; Gangaprasad v Banaspati, AIR 1937 Nag 132 : (1937) ILR Nag 6.
724. Shanti Swaroop v Abdul Rehman, AIR 1965 MP 55, at p 59.
725. The Official Receiver v Palaniswami, AIR 1925 Mad 1051 : (1925) 48 Mad 750.
726. Sequeira v P Francisco Sequeira, AIR 1976 Goa 48.
727. Hari Ram v Lichmahiye, AIR 2003 Raj 319.

to the tahsildar seeking relief under the Act, should it be dismissed immediately on filing or should it be suspended/stayed till the tahsildar disposes of the application filed by the debtor. It is the author's view that in such a case, the proper and reasonable course to be followed is to stay the proceeding in the suit till the tahsildar/appellate authority disposes of the proceeding under the statute. If it is held in that proceeding that the debtor is not entitled to the benefit under the Act, then the civil suit may be proceeded with. If on the other hand, it is held that the debtor is entitled to the benefits provided in the Act, then the suit has to be dismissed under section 4. In no case can it be held that by filing a civil suit for realisation of the mortgage amount, the proceeding pending before the tahsildar or the appellate authority is to be dismissed without adjudication.[728]

[s 10.6] Res judicata and Res sub judice — Distinction

The rule of res judicata is readily distinguished from the rule in section 10 for the latter relates to a res sub judice, that is, a matter which is pending judicial inquiry; while the rule in the present section relates to res judicata that is, a matter adjudicated upon or a matter on which the judgment has been pronounced. Section 10 bars the trial of a suit in which the matter directly and substantially in issue is pending adjudication in a previous suit. The present section bars the trial of a suit or an issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has already been adjudicated upon in a previous suit. Moreover, public policy requires that there should be an end of litigation. The question of whether the decision is correct or erroneous has no bearing on the question of whether it operates or does not operate as res judicata;[729] otherwise, every decision would be impugned as erroneous and there would be no finality.[730]

While section 10 relates to res sub judice, that is, a matter which is pending a judicial adjudication, section 11 relates to res judicata, that is to say, a matter already adjudicated upon by a competent court. Whereas section 10 bars the trial of a suit in which the matter directly and substantially in issue is pending adjudication in a previous suit, section 11 bars the trial of a suit or an issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has already been adjudicated upon in a former suit. The object of both the sections is similar, namely, to protect the parties from being vexed twice, for the trial of the same cause and to achieve the public policy that there should be an end of litigation. Therefore, one of the objects of section 10 is to prevent competent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from having to try parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue, and thereby to pave the way for the application of the rule of res judicata contained in the next following section. So, what the court has really to see is if the decision of the matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit will or will not lead to the decision of the matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit, and if it is satisfied that it will, then it must stay the trial of the subsequent suit and await the decision in the former suit.[731]

---

728. BALCO Employees Union v UOI, AIR 2002 SC 350 : (2002) 2 SCC 333.
729. Tarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1928) 33 Cal WN 126 (FB); Mohanlal v Benoy Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 : (1953) SCR 377; MSM Sarma v Sri Krishna Sinha, AIR 1960 SC 1186 : (1961) SCR 96 : (1961) 2 SCJ 73 : (1961) 2 SCA 582; Govardanam Appalacharyulu v Govardhanam Rangacharyulu, AIR 1957 AP 1002 : (1956) Andh WR 954; Madathipathi v Bhargavan, (1957) Ker LJ 857 : (1957) Ker LT 1033; Dhirendranath v Naresh Chandra, AIR 1958 Cal 453 : (1958) 62 Cal WN 596; Jalodhan Singh v Kripa Singh, AIR 1963 P&H 178 : (1963) 65 Punj LR 26; Abdul Wasey v State, AIR 1978 All 247.
730. Behari v Majid, (1901) ILR 24 All 138; Phundo v Jangi Nath, (1893) ILR 15 All 327; Gouri Koer v Audh Koer, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1087; Mohideen v Syed Osman, (1918) Mad WN 580; Jari v Jaichand, (1918) PR 82.
731. Fulchand Motilal v Manbar Lal, AIR 1973 Pat 196; see also Radhika Kund Pandit v Kund Pandit, AIR 1993 Mad 90.

[s 10.7] Fundamental Test

The fundamental test to attract section 10 is whether on final decision being reached in the previous suit, such decision would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[732]

[s 10.8] Suit

The word "suit" is important for our purpose. As per the provisions of O IV, rule 1 of the CPC every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the court or such officer as it appoints in its behalf. Therefore, the word "suit" ordinarily means a civil proceeding instituted by presenting a plaint.[733]

A suit within the meaning of this section includes a pending appeal.[734]

[s 10.9] Section Applies Only to Suits Filed in Civil Courts

The language of section 10 suggests that it is referrable to a suit instituted in the civil court and it cannot apply to proceedings of other nature instituted under any other statute. The object of section 10 is to prevent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits between the same parties in respect of the same matter in issue.[735]

Application under section 20 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (repealed by the Arbitration & Conciliation Act, 1996) is not a suit within section 10 of the CPC.[736]

Section 10 does not justify stay of a suit under rent control statute for the eviction of a tenant on the ground that the tenant has filed a suit for specific performance against the landlord on the basis of an alleged agreement of sale of the disputed premises in favour of the tenant. The tenant cannot rely on section 53A, Transfer of Property Act, 1882, by claiming adversary title by claiming that under the agreement he continued in possession as a purchaser and not as a tenant.[737]

In a case from Madhya Pradesh, the plaintiff had filed a suit for declaration of title in respect of the property in dispute wherein the defendant had denied his title. The plaintiff filed another suit for ejectment of the defendant under the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961, wherein also the defendant denied the title of the plaintiff. The question of title in the suit for ejectment is not directly and substantially in issue but is incidental and collateral, because for getting a decree in ejectment suit, the plaintiff is not required to prove his title but only that he is the landlord within the meaning of the Act. Hence, section 10 will not be attracted.[738]

Thus, a suit for arrears of rent for a later year cannot be stayed because of the pendency in revision of a suit for rent for a previous year.[739] The Delhi High Court declined to apply

---

732. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242 : (2005) 2 SCC 256; see also Maharashtra State Co-op Mktg Federation Ltd v Indian Bank, AIR 1997 Bom 186; Mirta Line v Finlay Mills, AIR 1982 Cal 41.
733. SD Dhandepani v Branch Manager Indian Overseas Bank, AIR 2002 Mad 442 : (2002) 2 Mad LJ 656 (Mad).
734. JT Republike v Rungta & Sons, AIR 1966 Cal 382; Raj Spinning Mills v AG King Ltd, AIR 1954 P&H 113; Durgadass v Gitan Devi, AIR 1977 HP 65.
735. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242: (2005) 2 SCC 256.
736. Usha Rani v Indermal & Sons, AIR 1988 Raj 223.
737. NP Tripathi (Dr) v Dayawanti Devi, AIR 1988 Pat 123 (DB).
738. Rajesh Singh v Manoj Kumar, AIR 2010 MP 16 (DB) (Gwalior Bench).
739. Gillo Mal v Ratan Kumar, (1953) ILR Raj 141.

this section in an application under the Arbitration Act, 1940, on the ground that whereas under section 33 of that Act the court can only declare as to the existence or otherwise of an arbitration agreement, relief awardable under section 20 is more comprehensive in that the court cannot only direct the agreement to be filed but also appoint an arbitrator.[740]

As stated above, section 10 of the CPC is referrable to a suit instituted in a civil court. The proceedings before the labour court cannot be equated with the proceedings before the civil court. They are not the courts of concurrent jurisdiction. In the circumstances, section 10 of the CPC has no application to the facts of this case.[741]

The DRT is a special tribunal created under a Special Act and the provisions of the DRT Act (Act 51 of 1993) ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court. The tribunal cannot be considered a civil court and an application filed by a financial institution for recovery of debt cannot be considered a suit. Hence, section 10 has no application.[742]

A proceeding for an interim measure under section 9 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, is almost like an interlocutory application and hence such a proceeding cannot be construed as a suit within the meaning of section 10 of the Code. Therefore, section 10 is not applicable to such proceedings.[743]

In simultaneous prosecution of the defendant in the criminal case, the civil suit on the same subject-matter can be stayed only under very exceptional and compelling circumstances. There is no question to stay the civil suit instituted against defendants during the pendency of the criminal case when they have filed their written statement in the civil suit, no question of any embarrassment or premature disclosure of their defence in the criminal case arises in this case.[744]

The Supreme Court was engaged with a question of whether the high court was justified in staying the proceedings in a civil suit till the decision in criminal case. It was observed that the high court was not justified in doing so. Firstly, because even if there is a possibility of conflicting decisions in the civil and criminal courts, such an eventuality cannot be taken as a relevant consideration. Secondly, in the facts of the present case, there is no likelihood of any embarrassment to the defendants as they had already filed the written statement in the civil suit and based on the pleadings of the parties, the issues have been framed.[745]

In a company proceeding, no plaint is presented and hence, it cannot be regarded as a proceeding based on a suit. Therefore, when the proceedings are not based on a suit, they cannot be regarded as a trial of a suit and hence, the suit for recovery of money pending before the trial court could not be stayed till disposal of company petition.[746]

On the basis of the precedent as well as the principle, it has become evident that the proceedings in a regular suit and the proceedings which are summary in nature contemplated by section 372 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 (39 of 1925) are entirely different and the latter proceedings would not be covered by section 10 of the Act. The object of issuance of a certificate and its effect is entirely different which would not decide the issue finally between the parties.[747]

---

740. M Malsters Pvt Ltd v Allied Engineers, AIR 1975 Del 123.
741. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242 : (2005) 2 SCC 256.
742. Vee Cee Yes Granites v Central Bank of India, Chennai, (2000) 2 Mad LJ 392 (Mad).
743. Sovereign Developers and Infrastructure Ltd v Paramount Vijetha Holding, A Partnership Firm, AIR 2010 Kant 80.
744. Peroonhayil Remotty v Cheruvath Gangadharan, AIR 2001 Ker 276.
745. Guru Granth Saheb Sthan Meerghat Vanaras v Ved Prakash, (2013) 7 SCC 622.
746. SD Dhandapani v Branch Manager Indian Overseas Bank, AIR 2002 Mad 442.
747. Monica Bibli Sood v Kamal Seth, AIR 2004 P&H 366.

Where in a suit — application for stay of suit is filed on the ground that subject-matter of suit and second appeal was same, however, applicants failed to discharge their onus by establishing that both suits arose out of same cause of action, same subject-matter and same relief. In fact, cause of action in subsequent suit arose when order in suit under second appeal was passed. The application for stay of subsequent suit was found liable to be dismissed.[748]

[s 10.10] No Bar to File Second Suit

Though, the heading of this section is "stay of suit", it does not operate as a bar to the institution of the subsequent suit. It is only the trial of the suit that is not to be proceeded with.[749]

[s 10.11] Stage

Normally, the application under section 10 of the CPC is to be decided after filing of the written statement, then the court is in a better position to know as to whether the matter in issue in both the suits is directly and substantially the same or not. However, that does not mean that the court has no jurisdiction to entertain the application prior to filing of the written statement. In the given case, the court may decide the question before filing of the written statement if the defendant makes available the copy of the plaint of the earlier suit and the other documents which enables the court to decide as to what the dispute between the parties is. In case, if the court is not in a position to decide as to what dispute between the parties is on the basis of the plaint of previously instituted suit, the court may postpone the petition till the filing of the written statement,[750] because a proceeding instituted first in time cannot be stayed and if anything in terms of section 10 of the CPC which is only a subsequent proceeding as between the parties that can be stayed.[751]

However, the subsequent suit can be stayed only at the stage of trial. There cannot be any application of section 10 at the appellate stage.[752]

For maintaining an application under section 10, the defendant in the suit concerned need not first file his written statement; the section 10 application can be taken out even before filing the written statement.[753]

It is not necessary for the defendant to move the court under this section until he has filed his written statement in the later case.[754]

[s 10.12] Question of Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction with reference to the subject matter of a claim depends upon the allegations in the plaint and not upon allegations in the written statement. The question of jurisdiction raised by the defendant is a question that is virtually between the plaintiff and the court itself. The plaintiff invokes the jurisdiction of the court and the court has always jurisdiction to decide for itself whether it has jurisdiction to try the suit before it. There is nothing in section 10 of the 748. Devanayagi Ammal v Manicka Konar, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1429 (Mad).

---

749. Maharashtra State Co-op Mktg Federation Ltd v Indian Bank, AIR 1997 Bom 186.
750. Shri Ram Tiwary v Bholi Devi, AIR 1994 Pat 76.
751. Chandra Madhav Mishra v Kishore Mishra, AIR 2006 Pat 164.
752. C Arunachalam Pillai v S Krishnasamy, (2007) 2 Mad LJ 399 (Mad) : (2007) 1 CTC 223.
753. Ashok Kumar Yadav v Noble Designs Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Cal 237.
754. Wahid-UnNissa Bibi v Zamin Ali Shah, (1920) ILR 42 All 290; Mulchand v Gill & Co, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 283.

CPC to show or suggest that if an issue of jurisdiction has been raised in a previously instituted suit, the defendant cannot invoke provision of section 10 of the CPC in subsequent suit unless he withdraws or waives that objection.[755] Application cannot be dismissed as premature on ground that copy of plaint was not produced or written statement was not filed in instant suit.[756]

[s 10.13] Decree Passed Disregarding This Section — Validity

This section enacts merely a rule of procedure and a decree therefore passed in contravention of it is not a nullity and cannot be disregarded in execution proceedings.[757] It can be waived, although the section is so worded as not to leave any discretion in the court where its conditions are satisfied.[758] Accordingly, even though the Representation of the People Act, 1951, provides that the provisions of the CPC shall as far as possible apply to petitions filed under it, an election tribunal does not err in first taking up for hearing a subsequently filed petition by reason of a discretion vested in it under section 87 of that Act and also because of the parties to it having acquiesced.[759]

The object of the section is to prevent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue. The section enacts merely a rule of procedure and a decree passed in contravention thereof is not a nullity. It is not for a litigant to dictate to the court as to how the proceedings should be conducted, it is for the court to decide what will be the best course to be adopted for expeditious disposal of the case.[760]

[s 10.14] Matter in Issue

See notes under the heading "Plea of res judicata Cannot Be Raised for the First Time Before Supreme Court" under section 11.

[s 10.15] Whether the Subject Matter of Both Suits Must Be the Same

Section 10 applies only in cases where the whole of the subject matter in both the suits is identical. The key words in section 10 are "the matter in issue is directly and substantially in issue" in the previous instituted suit. The words "directly and substantially in issue" are used in contradiction to the words "incidentally or collaterally in issue". Therefore, section 10 would apply only if there is identity of the matter in issue in both the suits, meaning thereby, that the whole of subject matter in both the proceedings is identical.[761] The language used by the apex court in the above case is very significant. It has been stated that "the key words used in section 10 are 'the matter in issue is directly and substantially in issue' in the previous instituted suit. The words 'directly and substantially in issue' are used in contra-distinction to the words 'incidentally or collaterally in issue." Thus, section 10 would apply only if there is identity of the matter in issue in both the suits, meaning thereby, that the whole subject matter in both

---

755. Escorts Construction Equipment Ltd v Action Construction Equipment Pvt Ltd, AIR 1999 Del 73.
756. VP Vrinda v Indira Devi, AIR 1995 Ker 57.
757. Sheopat Ravi v Warak Chand, AIR 1919 Lah 294.
758. Shanti Swaroop v Abdul Rehman, AIR 1965 MP 55, 59; Gangaprasad v Banaspati, AIR 1937 Nag 132 : (1937) ILR Nag 6.
759. Shanti Swaroop v Abdul Rehaman, AIR 1965 MP 55.
760. Pukhraj D Jain v G Gopalakrishna, AIR 2004 SC 3504 : (2004) 7 SCC 251.
761. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242 : (2005) 2 SCC 256.

the proceedings is identical.[762] The provisions of section 10 would apply when decision in one suit would non-suit the other suit. Only in that event it could be said that the matter in issue in both the suits are directly and substantially the same. In case of two suits between the same parties when the facts clearly disclose and also establish that the suit property in the subsequent suit is absolutely distinct and separate from that of the earlier suit and there is no identity at all with regard to the cause of action and also the reliefs that are sought in both the suits, the subsequent suit between the same parties, was not liable to be stayed as provisions of section 10 of the CPC were not applicable.[763]

Section 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 contained the words "for the same relief" after the words "previously instituted suit". Hence, it was necessary for the application of the section not only that the matter in issue in the second suit should also be directly and substantially in issue in the first suit, but that the second suit must be for the same relief as that claimed in the first suit.[764]

It is not only the identical subject matter but also the relief claimed in both suits that determine the applicability of section 10. The trial of subsequent suit can be stayed only when the court trying the previously instituted suit had power to grant the relief claimed in the subsequent suit. Thus, where the earlier suit was filed for the relief of partition of specific share in property and the subsequent suit was filed in small cause court claiming ejectment of tenant and recovery of rent, it was held that section 10 would not apply.[765]

Even if the cause of action and the relief prayed for or some of the issues in the former and subsequent suits may differ, that will not be a ground for non-application of section 10 of the CPC if the CPC finds that the final decision in the former suit would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[766] The words "for the same relief" have been omitted in the present section. The omission of these words, however, does not materially alter the law. In a Calcutta case,[767] RANKIN, CJ, laid stress on the identity of the subject matter. When the two suits were for the recovery of ceses due for different periods, the learned Chief Justice said:

> But it must be observed that judgment for the recovery of subsequent ceses does not differ merely as being for a different form of relief. It is the same kind of relief for an entirely separate subject matter, namely, a debt which was not in existence at all at the time of the previous suit. It does not follow, because the words "the same relief" are no longer in the section, that section 10 is applicable to suits for recovery of successive rents.

It has even been held that a suit cannot be stayed if the main issue in both the suits is the same but the subject matter of the second suit is different from that of the first suit.[768]

Stay of subsequent suit cannot be ordered when one or some of the issues are identical. There must be substantial identity of subject-matter in both suits. Thus, where the main

---

762. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwara, AIR 2005 SC 242 : (2005) 2 SCC 256, Kapadia J (as he then was), speaking for the bench.
763. Ajit Singh v Sadhu Singh, AIR 2004 Del 320; see also Spice Communication Pvt Ltd v Lakwinder Singh, 2008 (2) Civil Court Cases 441 (P&H).
764. Balkishen v Kishanlal, (1889) ILR 11 All 148; Ramalinga v Ragunatha, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 418, p 420; Bissessur v Gunpur, (1880) 8 CLR 113; Raja Ransgit Singha v Bhagabutty, (1990) 7 Cal WN 720.
765. Hashmat Ullah Khan v Iqbal Ahmad, AIR 2007 (NOC) 182 : 2006 (6) All LJ 402 (All).
766. Shri Ram Tiwary v Bholi Devi, AIR 1994 Pat 76.
767. Chowdhury Jamini Nath v Midnapur Zamindary Co, AIR 1923 Cal 716 : (1923) 27 Cal WN 772 : 774; Bepen v Jogendra, (1916) 24 Cal LJ 514; Maharaja Kesho Prasad v Shiva Saran, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 557 (pension); Ma kho U v Maung Ba sein, AIR 1929 Rang 67 : (1928) 6 Rang 775; Dinshaw v Galstaun, AIR 1927 Bom 245 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 382.
768. Kuberan v Koman, AIR 1925 Mad 574 : (1925) 48 Mad LJ 251; Nasibanbi v Iqbal Begum, AIR 1935 Lah 816.

question involved in the previous suit related to the validity of termination of service of the defendant, the subsequent suit, which related to termination of licence to occupy the premises, cannot be stayed.[769] To attract section 10, it has to be looked into whether the judgment in the earlier suit would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. Therefore, where two suits related to different transactions relating to supply of materials on different dates, there cannot be said to be identity of cause of action and the matter in issue and as such section 10 would not apply because there cannot be any question of application of res judicata.[770]

The Indore Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that where parties in the subsequent suit are litigating under the title which was claimed by the respondents in the earlier suit, there is identity of jurisdiction in view of Explanation VIII contained in section 11 and as such section 10 would be applicable.[771]

The Jammu and Kashmir High Court has held that section 10 of the CPC forbids trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly or substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim under the same title where such suit is pending in the same or any other court in the state having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed. It has been further held in the same case that addition of a new party in the subsequent suit does not oust the application of section 10 on the ground that all the parties in the subsequent suit are not the same as in the earlier suit.[772]

Where the first suit was a title suit to declare a notice terminating "leave and licence" to be void, second suit by the defendant to eject the first plaintiff (and for mesne profits) is not barred.[773] A suit was filed alleging infringement of plaintiff-company's right by defendant company by using trade name of medicine and selling the same in wrapper and carton of identical design with the same colour combination, etc, as that of plaintiff-company. A subsequent suit was filed in a different court by the defendant company against plaintiff company with same allegations. Held, subsequent suit should be stayed. A simultaneous trial of two suits in different courts might result in conflicting decision as there was complete identity of issue in the two suits.[774] While in the first suit the question was only regarding the authority of first plaintiff to create the settlement, the subsequent suit questions the very legality of that settlement. The entitlement to create a document would be one thing while its legality in law would be quite another. That is the difference in the said suits. Thus, the subsequent suit could not be stayed under section 10, CPC till the decision of earlier suits.[775]

Main reliefs sought for in a company petition, filed after a civil suit, was on the basis of oppression, and prayer was for framing a scheme and appointment of directors. In the earlier civil suit, the main relief sought was to restrain government nominated directors from functioning. It was held that stay under section 10, CPC in respect of the company petition could not be granted.[776]

---

769. Madan Mohan Kukreti v Geeta Bhawan, AIR 2007 Uttr 32 : 2007 (3) All LJ 632.
770. Dwarka Trading Corp, Allahabad v Cheema Paper Mills (P) Ltd, Bazpur, AIR 2007 Uttr 83.
771. Poonamchand Mishrilalji Tunawat v Murti Madan Mohanji, AIR 2007 (NOC) 1877 (MP) (Indore Bench).
772. Shashi Devi v Raju Singh, 2008 (4) Civil Court Cases 062 (J&K).
773. Mirta Line v Finlay Mills, AIR 1982 Cal 41.
774. Wings Pharmaceuticals Pvt Ltd v Swan Pharmaceuticals, AIR 1999 Pat 96.
775. KV Subramaniam v Pattabi Bhagavathar, AIR 1999 Mad 99.
776. Piyush Kanti Guha v West Bengal Pharmaceuticals Ltd Corp, AIR 1982 Cal 94.

Two suits were filed between same parties, involving common question arising between them. It was held that consolidation and simultaneous hearing of the suits is not barred under section 10. Section 10 merely lays down a procedure and does not vest any substantive right in the parties. The claim in the later suit was his defence in earlier suit. The court had inherent power to consolidate the two suits and to direct analogous hearing of the same, in the ends of justice.[777]

Suit was filed in a court at A, for the recovery of damages by a company from a bank. Another suit was filed in a court at D for amount due to the bank on advance at D. Parties to both the suits were different. It was held that the suit in court at D could not be stayed under section 10. Section 10 applies only where, on the final decision being reached in the previous suit, such decision would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. In the instant case, the reliefs in the two suits were different and so were the causes of action. The object of section 10 is to prevent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously entertaining and adjudicating upon two parallel litigations in respect of the same cause of action, the same subject matter and the same relief.[778]

Section 10 would apply only if the whole of subject matter in both the suits is identical and not where merely one of many issues in two suits is identical. The key words in section 10 are "the matter in issue is directly and substantially in issue" in the previous instituted suit. The words "directly and substantially in issue" are used in contra-distinction to the words "incidentally or collaterally in issue". That means that section 10 would apply only if there is identity of the matter in issue in both the suits meaning thereby, that the whole of subject matter in both the proceedings is identical and not merely one of the many issues arising for determination.[779] Thus, where both suits, the earlier one and the subsequent one are not entirely identical and all the findings recorded in the second suit would not operate as res judicata in the first suit, section 10 would not apply.[780] However, in Pukhraj D Jain's case,[781] the Supreme Court held that mere filing of application under section 10 does not put an embargo on the power of the court to examine the merits of the suit. GP Mathur J, speaking for the bench, observed (at p 3507 of AIR):

> In a given case the stay of proceedings of later suit may be necessary in order to avoid multiplicity of proceedings and harassment of parties. However, where subsequently instituted suit can be decided on purely legal points without taking evidence, it is always open to the Court to decide the relevant issues and not to keep the suit pending which has been instituted with an oblique motive and to cause harassment to the other side.[782]

Matters in issue in both the suits need not be identical. It is enough if they are substantially the same.[783] Section 10 of the CPC contemplates substantial identity of matter in issue in the two suits. It is not the identity of main issue or all issues but the identity of matter in issue which is the determining test. The decision in one suit must non-suit the other suit. This must be the phraseology of answer, to win the question whether the matter in issue in the two suits is directly and substantially the same.[784]

---

777. Dr. Guru Prasad Mohanty v Bijay Kumar Das, AIR 1984 Ori 209 (DP Mohapatra J).
778. Grindlays Bank Ltd v Hindustan Embroidery Mills Pvt Ltd, AIR 1981 Del 332.
779. Sohal Engineering Works v Rustam Jehangir Vakil Mills, AIR 1981 Guj 110.
780. Spice Communications Pvt Ltd v Lakhwinder Singh, 2008 (2) Civil Court Cases 441 (P&H).
781. Pukhraj D Jain v G Gopalakrishna, AIR 2004 SC 3504 : (2004) 7 SCC 251 : (2004) 3 Mad LJ 183.
782. Pukhraj D Jain v G Gopalakrishna, AIR 2004 SC 3504, p 3507, para 4 : (2004) 7 SCC 251 : (2004) 3 Mad LJ 183.
783. Mehta Gandhi & Associates v Shree Pipes Ltd, AIR 1990 Del 139.
784. Arjies Aluminium Udyog v Sudhir Batra, AIR 1997 Del 232.

For determining whether the matter in issue in the subsequently instituted suit is directly and substantially in issue in the previously instituted suit, absolute identity of the parties in both the suits is not a consideration.[785]

Main reliefs sought for in a company petition, filed after a civil suit, was on the basis of oppression, and the prayer was for framing a scheme and appointment of directors. In the earlier civil suit, the main relief sought was to restrain the government nominated directors from functioning. It was held that stay under section 10, the CPC in respect of the company petition could not be granted.[786]

Where the first suit was by A for specific performance against the original owner, the second suit by B for the eviction of A, on the ground of personal necessity and default in the payment of rent, does not attract section 10.[787]

The mere fact that one issue is identical in two suits is not enough to attract section 10. It does not make the subject matter identical. As pointed out by SIR ASHUTOSH MOOKERJEE in Bipin Behari v Jogindra Chandra,[788] the matter in issue in section 10 is not equivalent to "any of the questions in issue". It means the entire subject matter in controversy.[789]

Two suits by the plaintiff were filed before the subordinate court. Subsequent suit was filed before the high court. Neither the parties nor the issues in earlier suit were the same as those in the subsequent suit. Subject matter in controversy was also not the same. It was held that application for stay of suit under section 10 was not maintainable. Considering various facts, including the position that the determination of the issues involved in the two earlier suits would not put an end to the controversy between the parties with regard to the several other issues that may be left in the subsequent suit, it was not a proper case where such a discretion under section 151 should be exercised for the purpose of stay of the present suit.[790]

Application under section 20, Arbitration Act, 1940 is not a suit within section 10, CPC (repealed by the Arbitration & Conciliation Act, 1996).[791]

Section 10 does not justify stay of a suit under rent control statute for the eviction of a tenant on the ground that the tenant has filed a suit for specific performance against the landlord on the basis of an alleged agreement of sale of the disputed premises in favour of the tenant. The tenant cannot rely on section 53A, Transfer of Property Act, 1882, by claiming adversary title by claiming that under the agreement he continued in possession as a purchaser and not as a tenant.[792]

Where in one suit the question was regarding the authority of a person to create a settlement and in the second suit the very legality of that settlement was questioned, it was held by the Madras High Court that the issues involved in both the suits were not directly and substantially the same and as such the stay of subsequent suit pending appeal against decree in the first suit was improper.[793]

---

785. Ashok Kumar Yadav v Noble Designs Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Cal 237.
786. Piyush Kanti Guha v West Bengal Pharmaceuticals Corp Ltd, AIR 1982 Cal 94.
787. Anant Ram v Mahesh Prasad, AIR 1984 Pat 161.
788. Bipin Behari v Jogindra Chandra, AIR 1917 Cal 248.
789. Adhish Chandra v Hindustan Gas and Industries Ltd, AIR 1985 Cal 154.
790. JC Roy Chowdhury v Krishna Paper Board Mills, AIR 1988 Cal 183.
791. Usha Rani v Indermal & Sons, AIR 1988 Raj 223 (MB Sharma J).
792. Dr. NP Tripathi v Dayawanti Devi, AIR 1988 Pat 123 (DB).
793. KV Subramanian v Pattabi Bhagavathar, AIR 1999 Mad 99 : (1998) 3 Mad LJ 421 (Mad).

Where a cultivating tenant filed a suit for injunction restraining the landlord from ejecting him from the suit land and then subsequently filed application before Tehsildar for recording him as a tenant under the Tamil Nadu Agricultural Lands Record of Tenancy Rights Act, 1969, it was held that section 10 was not applicable.[794]

But the section will apply if the subject matter is the same, and the only difference is that the second suit contains a prayer for a declaration that an interim order made in the first suit is illegal, or for an injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the first suit.[795] In these cases, the words "matter in issue" have been construed as having reference to the entire subject matter in controversy between the parties, and not merely one or more of several issues.[796] But in Calcutta case, it was pointed out that the section contains no reference to the subject matter or to the cause of action and that one test for the applicability of the section is whether on a final decree being reached in the previous suit, such decree would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[797] This test was adopted without comment in a Madras case[798] but came in for criticism in an Allahabad case[799] wherein it was held that as the matters directly and substantially in issue in both the suits were not identical, section 10 did not apply. It has been held by the same court that to attract this section, it was not necessary that there should be complete identity of the subject matter and that it would be sufficient if a matter directly and substantially in issue in an earlier suit is directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit.[800] Again, in a Calcutta case reported in 1912 where the first suit was for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, and the subsequent suit was by one of the partners for the return of a deposit, the section was held to apply.[801] Where a suit was filed for damages for breach of contract and the defendant filed a cross-suit claiming refund of monies paid under the contract on the ground that the opposite party was in default, it was held that as the issues in both the suits were substantially the same, section 10 was applicable.[802] Again, where cross-suits arising out of the same transaction were filed for different reliefs, it was held that section 10 was applicable because the matters in issue were substantially the same and it did not matter that the cause of action for the two suits and the reliefs claimed were not the same.[803]

[s 10.16] Sections 10 and 25 of the CPC

The suit at Nashik has been instituted first in point of time. By reference to section 10 of the CPC, the trial of the suit at Delhi, being the latter suit, shall be liable to be stayed. For the exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction under section 25 of the CPC, the only consideration which is relevant is "expediency for ends of justice". The court will have regard to and respect for the rule enacted in section 10 of the CPC. Of course, the considerations such as which is the place where most of the evidence is available, convenience of the parties and witnesses,

---

794. S Mani v NG Mani, (1993) 2 Mad LJ 368 (Mad).
795. Durgaprasad v Kantichandra, AIR 1935 Cal 1 : (1935) ILR 61 Cal 670.
796. Hariram v Hazi Mahomed, AIR 1954 All 141; Munisami v Raghupathi, AIR 1940 Mad 7; Kumarappa v Ramaswami, AIR 1948 Mad 150.
797. Life Pharmaceuticals Pvt Ltd v Bengal Medical Hall, AIR 1971 Cal 345; Durgaprasad v K Mukerji, AIR 1935 Cal 1; Laxmi Bank v Harikishan, AIR 1948 Nag 297; Naurati v Mehma Singh, AIR 1972 P&H 421; Shaw Wallace & Co v Bholanath, AIR 1975 Cal 411 : (1968) 72 Cal WN 830.
798. Shankar Ejaman v Venkappa Batta, AIR 1954 Mad 320.
799. Nemkumar v Nemakumar, AIR 1958 All 207 : (1957) All LJ 734.
800. Ram Narain v Ram Swarup, AIR 1962 All 108.
801. Mahadev v Gajadhar, (1912) 16 Cal WN 897.
802. Jai Hind Iron Mart v Tulsi Ram, AIR 1953 Bom 117.
803. Shorab Merwanji v Mansata Film Distributors, AIR 1957 Cal 727 : (1957) 61 Cal WN 559.

which one of the two places is more convenient to access and attend and so on are also the factors to be kept in view and may in an appropriate case persuade the court to direct a transfer of case in departure from the rule underlying section 10 of the CPC. All would depend on the facts and circumstances of a given case. So far as the present case was concerned, the Supreme Court deemed it proper to transfer the suit at Delhi to the court at Nashik for the purpose of hearing and decision thereat. In doing so, the Supreme Court followed the ordinary rule as there was no factor or consideration relevant for making a departure therefrom.[804]

Merely because plea under section 10 for stay of suit has been rejected, Supreme Court is not denuded of exercise of power to transfer the suit if ends of justice call for exercise of such power.[805]

[s 10.17] Consolidation of Suits

Generally, the purpose of transfer of the suit by Supreme Court under section 25 from one state to another or by the high court or the district judge under section 24 from one subordinate court to another is that two or more suits pending between the same parties on the same subject matter are tried jointly by one court by a convenient method known as consolidation of suits. This method is convenient to the litigants as the evidence is recorded in two or more suits and the deposition of the same witness in different suits is avoided, saving the time of litigants, lawyers and the court. However, it is to be noted that if the two suits pending between the parties are at different stages of the trial, say, for example, one suit is pending at a pre-issue stage and the other at the defendants' evidence, there is no point in consolidation of these suits.

Where in a revision petition before the high court the respondents had filed a suit for the relief of permanent injunction in respect of property in suit no 494/6 and the revision petitioners had filed another suit for various reliefs against the respondents and their mother in relation to the properties in the same suit no 494/6, it was held that the application for consolidation of suits should be allowed because the issue involved in both the suits being conveyance of property, and as such section 10 was no bar to considering such application.[806]

Two suits were filed between same parties, involving common question arising between them. It was held that consolidation and simultaneous hearing of the suits is not barred under section 10. Section 10 merely lays down a procedure and does not vest any substantive right in the parties. The claim in the later suit was his defence in earlier suit. The court had inherent powers to consolidate the two suits and to direct analogous hearing of the same, in the ends of justice.[807]

This section does not bar the power of the court to consolidate for the purpose of hearing an earlier suit and a later suit.[808]

[s 10.18] Discretion of Court

The proceedings in the trial of a suit have to be conducted in accordance with provisions of the CPC. Section 10 of the CPC no doubt lays down that no court shall proceed with

---

804. GC Care Centre and Hospital v OP Care Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 2339 : (2004) 6 SCC 756.
805. Chitivalase Jute Mills v Jaypee Rewa Cement, AIR 2004 SC 1687.
806. Sellammal v Mookan, (2000) Mad LJ (Supp) 363 (Mad).
807. Guru Prasad Mohanty v Bijay Kumar Das, AIR 1984 Ori 209.
808. Gupta v East Asiatic Co, AIR 1960 All 184.

the trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title where such suit is pending in the same or any other court in India having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed. However, mere filing of an application under section 10 of the CPC does not in any manner put an embargo on the power of the court to examine the merits of the matter. The object of the section is to prevent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue. The section enacts merely a rule of procedure and a decree passed in contravention thereof is not a nullity. It is not for a litigant to dictate to the court as to how the proceedings should be conducted; it is for the court to decide what will be the best course to be adopted for expeditious disposal of the case. In a given case, the stay of proceedings of later suit may be necessary in order to avoid multiplicity of proceedings and harassment of parties. However, where subsequently instituted suit can be decided on purely legal points without taking evidence, it is always open to the court to decide the relevant issues and not to keep the suit pending which has been instituted with an oblique motive and to cause harassment to the other side.[809]

In a case of stay against recovery of electricity dues under the Madhya Pradesh Electricity Duty Act, 1949, it was held by the Madhya Pradesh High Court that the State was not prohibited from recovering interest on delayed payment of dues after the vacation of the stay order because the stay order will not provide a protective umbrella for a defaulting consumer. It was observed by the division bench that "equity and fair play provide that if a man secures certain privileges or benefits flowing from an order passed by the court, then such a person should be required to return the benefit after vacation or rejection of the order."[810]

Although pendency of a criminal case is no ground for stay of a civil suit under section 10, courts in its discretion have sometimes directed the stay of civil suit. Thus, where the civil suit was sought to be stayed during the pendency of criminal case on the plea of defence being disclosed, the Andhra Pradesh High Court directed the criminal court to dispose of the case within three months and further directed the civil court to postpone trial of the suit till then.[811]

In this respect, the observations of Vivian Bose J, speaking for a five-judge bench of the Supreme Court in MS Sheriff v State of Madras,[812] deserve to be noticed:

> As between the civil and the criminal proceedings we are of the opinion that the criminal matters should be given precedence. There is some difference of opinion in the High Courts of India on this point. No hard and fast rule can be laid down but we do not consider that the possibility of conflicting decisions in the civil and criminal courts is a relevant consideration. The law envisages such an eventuality when it expressly refrains from making the decision of one court binding on the other, or even relevant, except for certain limited purposes, such as sentence or damages. The only relevant consideration here is the likelihood of embarrassment.
>
> Another factor which weighs with us is that a civil suit often drags on for years and it is undesirable that a criminal prosecution should wait till everybody concerned has forgotten all about the crime. The public interests demand that criminal justice should be swift and sure; that the guilty should be punished while the events are still fresh in the public mind and that the innocent should be absolved as early as is consistent with a fair and impartial trial. Another reason is that it is undesirable to let things slide till memories have grown too dim to trust. This, however, is not a hard and fast rule. Special considerations

---

809. Pukhraj D. Jain v G. Gopalakrishna, AIR 2004 SC 3504 : (2004) 7 SCC 251.
810. Vikram Cement, a Unit of Grasim Industries Ltd v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 MP 316 (DB).
811. K. Vasudeva Reddy v Kambala Sivanageswarappa, 2009 (3) Civil Court Cases 214 (AP).
812. MS Sheriff v State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397 : 1954 SCR 1144, at pp 1148–1149.

> obtaining in any particular case might make some other course more expedient and just. For example, the civil case or the other criminal proceeding may be so near its end as to make it inexpedient to stay it in order to give precedence to a prosecution ordered under Section 476. But in this case we are of the view that the civil suits should be stayed till the criminal proceedings have finished.

Even in cases where the issues may not be the same in both the suits, courts can exercise their discretion to stay the subsequent suit to secure the ends of justice. Thus, where divorce petition was filed by the wife and thereafter the husband filed petition for restitution of conjugal rights, the Calcutta High Court held as follows:

> Although in strict sense the issues in both the suits are not directly same, but nevertheless in our conscious judicious consideration the former suit to be tried and disposed of prior to the subsequent suit for the sake of natural justice in as much as in the former suit OP wife has challenged the legality of her marriage with the present petitioner and if the former suit succeeds and the wife obtains decree in that event there will be no need to proceed with the subsequent suit.[813]

A division bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court has held that where the petitioner's case is based on a will in respect of which the plaintiff has made allegations of forgery and fabrication and in that regard criminal proceedings are pending against the petitioner, the proceedings in the civil suit deserve to be stayed.[814]

[s 10.19] Previously Instituted Suit

It is the pendency of the previously instituted suit that constitutes a bar to the trial of the subsequent suit. Though the word "suit" includes an appeal, it does not include an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council, or the Supreme Court for the application may not be granted at all, and if granted, the applicant may not prefer any appeal.[815] It seems that it does not also include applications under section 47.[816] An application under section 19 of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950, raising the question whether the trust was a public trust cannot be stayed under this section as that is a matter within the exclusive jurisdiction of the charity commissioner.[817] Proceedings under section 18 of the Displaced Persons Debts Adjustment Act, 1951, cannot be stayed under this section.[818] Application was made under the Arbitration Act, 1940 (repealed by the Arbitration & Conciliation Act, 1996) section 20 for the appointment of an arbitrator. Application was made by the non-petitioners under section 10, the CPC for staying further proceedings. It was held that section 10 CPC, cannot apply and the arbitration proceedings cannot be stayed merely because an application under section 20 is registered as a suit, it does not become 'suit' within the meaning of the CPC.[819] An application for determining fair rent by the rent controller under the Orissa House Rent Control Act, 1958, not being a suit, a subsequent suit for recovery of arrears of suit is not liable to be stayed.[820] An eviction proceeding against a tenant under the Andhra Pradesh (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act, 1960, is not a suit and therefore is not liable to be stayed on the ground of a partition suit against the landlord being pending.[821]

---

813. Biswajit Sharma v Deblina Panja, 2010 (2) Civil Court Cases 618 (Cal).
814. Ved Prakash v Guru Granth Saheb Sthan, Meerghat Town, AIR 2009 MP 134 (DB).
815. Nainappa v Chidambaran, (1898) ILR 21 Mad 18.
816. Venkata v Venkatarama, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 256.
817. TB Parikh v Charity Commr, (1955) 57 Bom LR 1069.
818. Pratab Krishna v Stirling General Insurance Co, AIR 1953 P&H 226.
819. Usha Rani v Indermal & Sons, AIR 1988 Raj 223.
820. Khalli Panda v Dharam Gouda, AIR 1967 Ori 172.
821. M Subbaramayya v B Narasimha Swamy, AIR 1972 AP 186.

In order that section 10 may apply, the court in the earlier suit must also have jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed under the subsequent suit. It is not enough that the subject matter in both the suits is the same. If the conditions of section 10 are not satisfied, the court cannot, in its inherent jurisdiction order stay of suit.[822]

The jurisdiction for the removal of executor or administrator under a Will vests with the high court under section 301 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 and that power is not affected by the remedy provided under section 92 of the Code. Thus, a proceeding under section 92 of the Code cannot be said to be pending before a court competent to try the application for removal of executor and an order dismissing application under section 92 of the Code for non-prosecution cannot be said to be by a court competent to grant the relief for removal of executor. In that view of the matter, proceedings under section 301 of the Succession Act cannot be said to be barred on the principle of res sub-judice under section 10 or on the principle of res judicata under section 11.[823]

Pending stay of suit under section 10, court can still pass interlocutory orders (in this case orders on an application for amendment and for appointment of a receiver). Passing of such orders does not mean proceeding with the trial of the suit.[824]

Even where the reliefs are based on different causes of action, yet, if the subject matter in the two suits is the same, the later suit should be stayed under section 10.[825]

[s 10.20] Trial

The word "trial" is of wide import. In its widest sense, it would include all the proceedings right from the stage of institution of a plaint in a civil case to the stage of final determination by a judgment and decree of the court. Whether the widest meaning should be given to the word "trial" or that it should be construed narrowly must necessarily depend upon the nature and object of the provision and the context in which it is used.[826]

In the above case, the Supreme Court observed as follows:

> Therefore, the word "trial" in section 10 will have to be interpreted and construed keeping in mind the object and nature of that provision and the prohibition "to proceed with the trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit". The object of the prohibition contained in section 10 is to prevent the Courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits and also to avoid inconsistent findings on the matters in issue. The provision is in the nature of a rule of procedure and does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to entertain and deal with the later suit nor does it create any substantive right in the matters. It is not a bar to the institution of a suit. It has been construed by the courts as not a bar to the passing of interlocutory orders such as an order for consolidation of the later suit with the earlier suit, or appointment of a Receiver or an injunction or attachment before judgment. The course of action which the court has to follow according to section 10 is not to proceed with the "trial" of the suit but that does not mean that it cannot deal with the subsequent suit any more or for any other purpose.[827]

---

822. Minocher Behramji v Hema Dadachanji, AIR 1982 Bom 151.
823. Tara Chand Sharma v Smt. Uma Aggarwal, AIR 2010 P&H 30 (DB).
824. VR Balakrishnan Nadar v R Velayudhan Nadar, AIR 1980 Ker 161.
825. Challapalli Sugars v Swadeshi Sugar Supply, AIR 1983 Cal 199.
826. Indian Bank v Maharashtra State Co-op Mktg Federation Ltd, AIR 1998 SC 1952 : (1998) 5 SCC 69.
827. Indian Bank v Maharashtra State Co-op Mktg Federation Ltd, AIR 1998 SC 1952, para 8 : (1998) 5 SCC 69.

Relying on the above judgment of the Supreme Court, the Gauhati High Court in the undernoted case[828] held that an application under section 10 of the Code can be decided even before the filing of the written statement and prior to framing of issue. It further held that even if an application under section 10 is pending or accepted, that cannot preclude the court from disposing of an application under O XXXIX, rules 1 and 2 read with section 151 of the Code.

[s 10.21] Shall Not Proceed with the Trial

These words indicate the action to be taken by the court under this section. The second suit is not to be dismissed as barred;[829] it is only the trial of the suit that is not to be proceeded with. That may render the institution of a subsequent suit unnecessary in many cases but the section is no bar to the institution of such suit. Nay, there are cases in which it is necessary for a party to institute a regular suit to establish a right claimed by him, and failure to institute the suit within the period of limitation may preclude the party from asserting the right in any other suit or proceedings. Suits referred to in O XXI, rule 63 (Code of 1882 section 283) are suits of this character. This section does not dispense with the necessity of instituting such suits.[830] This is no longer the position in view of the deletion of rule 63 of O XXI by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976). A suit may be stayed under this section even after the hearing has commenced.[831] The application for stay of the suit should be made to the court which is seized of the case.[832]

The Supreme Court has held that for the application of the provisions of section 10, it is required that the court, in which the previous suit is pending, is competent to grant the relief claimed. The use of negative expression in section 10, i.e., "no court shall proceed with the trial of any suit" makes the provision mandatory and the court, in which the subsequent suit has been filed, is prohibited from proceeding with the trial of that suit if the conditions laid down in section 10 are satisfied. The basic purpose and the underlying object of section 10 is to prevent the courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously entertaining and adjudicating upon two parallel litigations in respect of the same cause of action, same subject matter and the same relief. The question which invited Supreme Court's adjudication was as to whether "the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in previously instituted suits". It was held that the test for applicability of section 10 is whether on a final decision being reached in the previously instituted suit; such decision would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. To put it differently one may ask, can the plaintiff get the same relief in the subsequent suit, if the earlier suit has been dismissed? It was further held that if the answer is in affirmative, the subsequent suit is not fit to be stayed. However, when the matter in controversy is the same, it will be immaterial what further relief is claimed in the subsequent suit.[833]

Hearing of appeal is not part of "trial" of suit within section 10. If an objection that previous suit was pending between the same parties with the same issues, was not taken in the trial court, section 10 is not attracted in appeal.

---

828. Smt. Gomti Devi Sharma v Smt. Chanda Devi Kar, AIR 2009 Gau 31 : 2009 (2) Gau LR 94 (Shillong Bench).
829. Firm Asharfilal v Firm Ganeshram, AIR 1952 All 546.
830. Nemagauda v Paresha (1898) 22 Bom 640.
831. Wahid-Un-Nissa v Zamin, (1920) ILR 42 All 290.
832. Nagappa v Ramsing, AIR 1941 Bom 160 : (1941) ILR Bom 325.
833. Aspi Jal v Khushboo Rustom Dadyburjour, AIR 2013 SC 1712 : (2013) 4 SCC 333; see also Dunlop India Ltd v AA Rahna, (2011) 5 SCC 778.

Where there are similar contracts of the same date for rendering services entered into with two different companies A and B, the stay of suit against B cannot be granted, merely for the pendency of appeal in the suit filed against company A.

[s 10.22] Between the Same Parties

For determining whether the matter in issue in the subsequently instituted suit is directly and substantially in issue in the previously instituted suit, absolute identity of the parties in both the suits is not a consideration.[834]

The mere fact that the first suit is between Z and J as plaintiffs and W, X and Y, as defendants, and the second suit is between W as plaintiff and Z, J and S (not a party to first suit) as defendants, will not take the case out of the operation of this section, if the other conditions of the section are satisfied.[835] It is sufficient if there is a sufficient identity of parties. If the additional defendants in the subsequent suit, who are all directors of the plaintiff-company in the earlier suit do not raise any separate and substantial issue as between them and the plaintiff in the subsequent suit, the addition of such defendants does not make the subsequent suit any less a suit between the same parties.[836] The expression "the same parties" means the parties between whom the matter substantially in issue has arisen and also has to be decided. It has accordingly been held that the section does not become inapplicable by reason of there being in addition a party against whom no separate and substantial issue is raised.[837]

Where there are independent contracts with two different limited companies, the parties are not the same, even though company B is subsidiary of company A.[838]

[s 10.23] Interlocutory Orders Pending Stay

In cases where in a suit further proceedings are stayed for some reason or the other, in order to carry on the process of the suit, certain steps are to be taken in aid of proceedings to keep them alive. Thus, if the interlocutory matters are decided and the suit is kept ready to proceed further as soon as the stay of further proceedings ceases to be operative from a stage which could have arrived to ripen the case, by disposing of interlocutory matters in between, without affecting the merit of the case would be in aid of judicial process.[839] A prayer to stay all further proceedings in the suit cannot be allowed. The application under section 10 cannot bar the court from entertaining interlocutory application.[840] A stay order under this section does not take away the power of the court in the stayed suit to make interlocutory orders, such as orders for a receiver or an injunction, or an attachment before judgment.[841] An order of stay under this section does not take away the jurisdiction of the court to refer the suit to arbitration with the consent of parties.[842]

---

834. Ashok Kumar Yadav v Noble Designs Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Cal 237.
835. SK Rungta & Co v Naval Kishore Debi Prasad, AIR 1964 Cal 373; Rup Chand v Basant Lal, AIR 1975 P&H 171.
836. Arun General Industries Ltd v Rishabh Manufacturers Pvt Ltd, AIR 1972 Cal 128.
837. Shorab Merwanji v Mansata Film Distributors, AIR 1957 Cal 727; but see Radha Shyam v Kashinath, AIR 1960 MP 169; Mahanju Prasad v Prayag, AIR 1975 Gau 40.
838. N Dutta v Jardin Victor Ltd, AIR 1984 Pat 7.
839. Rameshwar v Fifth Addl Disrict Judge, Basti, AIR 1999 All 1.
840. VP Vrinda v Indira Devi, AIR 1995 Ker 57.
841. Sennaji v Pannaji, AIR 1922 Bom 276 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 431; Kulsumum Nisan v Mohammad Farooq, AIR 1969 All 479.
842. Jawarlal v Jagadish, AIR 1951 All 335.

When a suit is stayed by an order under section 10 of the Code, it does not take away the power of the court to make an order on an interlocutory application for urgent relief. The court has to see whether there is a bar for entertaining such applications.[843]

Where a suit was stayed by appellate court and an interlocutory application was filed before the trial court during the pendency of the stay, it was held that orders passed allowing the commissioner to visit the property and submit report was valid even though the stay was in operation.[844]

Consideration of applications for interlocutory reliefs, such as grant of injunction, appointment of receiver, attachment before judgment, impleadment of a party, amendment in the plaint etc, is not prohibited in spite of the stay, because such an order cannot be taken to be a step in the trial of the suit.[845]

Before considering the question of the stay of the suit under section 10, the civil court is well within its powers to consider the prayers for the issuance of the interim relief and a plea raised under section 10 cannot preclude the court from disposing of an application under O XXXIX, rules 1 and 2 read with section 151 of the CPC.[846]

[s 10.24] Application Under Section 10 to Be Filed Where Subsequent Suit Is Pending

Application for stay of suit under section 10 should be presented to the court in which the subsequent suit is pending.[847]

[s 10.25] Contract Providing for Place of Suing

It is sometimes provided in a contract that suits in respect of matters contained therein shall be instituted in a specified court. That such agreements are valid in law is well-settled.[848] The question of whether a suit instituted by one of the parties in a forum agreed to by them is liable to be stayed under section 10 when the opposite party has filed earlier a suit on the same agreement in a court different from that mentioned in the agreement has often been discussed and the view largely held is that there was nothing in the section to prevent the court from giving effect to the agreement.[849] The controversy has been set at rest by a decision of the Supreme Court wherein it has been held that the language of section 10 was clear, definite and mandatory and prohibited the trial of a subsequent suit and it did not make any difference that the earlier suit was in violation of the agreement of parties or vexatious.[850]

The object of consolidation of suits is to avoid multiplicity of proceedings and unnecessary delay and protraction of litigation. These objects are not in conflict with the principles of section 10, but are in aid of the object of that section. It was clear from the facts of the case that

---

843. K Balu v Madasamy, (1999) 2 Mad LJ 521 (Mad).
844. A Subramania Mudaliar v VG Subramania Battar, (2000) 2 Mad LJ 702 (Mad).
845. Surendra Sawhney v Murlidhar, AIR 2008 (NOC) 652 (Raj) (Jaipur Bench) (DB).
846. Sneh Lata Mathur v Brij Raj Bahadur, AIR 2003 Del 259. See also Baburao Vithalrao Sulunke v Kaderappa Prasappa, Dabbanhavar, AIR 1974 Mys 63; VR Balakrishnan Nader v R Velayudhan Nader, AIR 1980 Ker 161; Jagdamba Oil Agency v State of Madhya Pradesh, 2006 (3) Civil Court Cases 282 (MP).
847. Ambika Sahu v Sumitra Sahu, AIR 1990 Ori 127.
848. See notes to section 20: "Agreement as to Choice of Court".
849. Tilakram v Kodumal, AIR 1928 Bom 175 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 546; Bhagat Singh v Jagbir Sawhney, AIR 1941 Cal 670 : (1941) ILR 1 Cal 490; Ram Bahadur Thakur Co v Devidayal, AIR 1954 Bom 176 : (1954) ILR Bom 334; Becharam v Baldev Sahai, AIR 1940 All 241 : (1940) ILR All 232 in which an injunction was issued restraining the defendant from proceeding on with the suit instituted earlier.
850. Manoharlal v Seth Hiralal, AIR 1962 SC 527; reversing Manoharlal v Kishan Merik, AIR 1935 MB 145

the contesting parties in the case of the two suits were the same, the disputed property in the suit filed earlier to it and the case of the plaintiff in the earlier suit was substantially his defence in the later suit and the case of the plaintiff in the later suit was his defence in the earlier suit. The court had inherent power to consolidate the two suits and to direct analogous hearing of the same, in the ends of justice.[851]

[s 10.26] Comprehensive Latter Suit Cannot Be Stayed

The court would not stay the latter suit if it is more comprehensive than the earlier one though both the suits are between the same parties and the cause of action arises out of the same contract.[852]

[s 10.27] Revision

There is practical unanimity of opinion among the high courts that an order under this section is revisable.[853] (But see the proviso to section 115.)

[s 10.28] Conditional Order

It has been held that where the conditions laid down in the section are satisfied, the court should pass an unconditional order for stay and not impose conditions.[854]

[s 10.29] Letters Patent Appeal

An order staying a suit is a judgment under clause 15 of the Letters Patent and an appeal lies therefrom.[855] So also an order refusing to stay a suit.[856] The Madras High Court, however, has held in a full bench decision that an order under section 10 is not a judgment within the letters patent.[857] There is no question of a Letters Patent appeal as section 100A inserted in the Code in 1976 bars it.

Even where the requirements of section 10 are not satisfied, court can grant injunction under its inherent power, restraining a person from proceeding with another suit in the interests of justice.[858]

Application was made under the Arbitration Act, 1940 (repealed by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996), section 20, for the appointment of an arbitrator. Application was made by the non-petitioners under section 10, CPC for staying further proceedings. It was held that section 10, CPC cannot apply and the arbitration proceedings cannot be stayed. Merely because an application under section 20 is registered as a suit, it does not become "suit" within the meaning of the CPC.[859]

---

851. Guru Prasad Mohanty v Bijay Kumar, AIR 1984 Ori 209.
852. Brijlal & Co v MPE Board, AIR 1975 Cal 69.
853. Ramachandran v Neelambar, AIR 1923 Mad 88; Bishen v Bishen, 61 IC 830; Dayanand Modi v UOI, AIR 1952 Pat 373; Ram Richeal v Dayanand, (1955) ILR All 309; overruling Sultanat Jahan v Sunder Lal, 42 All 409.
854. Appala Naidu v Chinnam Naidu, (1962) 2 Andh WR 257; Ratan Singh v Musaddi Lal, AIR 1972 All 473.
855. Jivanlal v PR Vakharia & Co, AIR 1933 Bom 85 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 364.
856. Durgaprasad v Kantichandra, AIR 1935 Cal 1 : (1934) ILR 61 Cal 670; Jai Hind Iron Mart v Tulsi Ram, AIR 1953 Bom 117.
857. Central Brokers v Ram Narayana Poddar & Co, AIR 1954 Mad 1057 : (1954) ILR Mad 1052.
858. Subhu Ram Kalita v Dharmeswar Das Koch, AIR 1987 Gau 73 (DB).
859. Usha Rani v Indermal & Sons, AIR 1988 Raj 223.

[s 10.30] Inherent Power to Grant Stay

In the case of Manohar Lal Chopra v Rai Bahadur Rao Seth Hiralal,[860] it has been held that inherent jurisdiction of the court to make orders ex debito justitiae is undoubtedly affirmed by section 151 of the CPC but that jurisdiction cannot be exercised so as to nullify the provisions of the CPC. Where the CPC deals expressly with a particular matter, the provision should normally be regarded as exhaustive. In the present case, as stated above, section 10 of the CPC has no application and consequently, it was not open to the high court to by-pass section 10 of the CPC by invoking section 151, CPC.[861] It is only in cases where the proceedings are fraudulent, vexatious or for want of being bona fide, malicious and improper, then it comes within the meaning of abuse of the process of the court.[862]

In cases not covered by the provisions of section 10 of the CPC in terms, the court may, in very exceptional circumstances, stay a suit under section 151 as the inherent jurisdiction of the court to make orders ex debito justitiae is undoubtedly affirmed by section 151; but the court cannot overlook the well-settled principle of law governing the stay of suits. In such cases also, there must be identity of the subject matter and field of controversy between the parties in the two suits. Though subject matter contemplated and field of controversy need not be identical in every particular suit, at least the court must be satisfied that to allow the subsequent suit to continue would be oppressive or vexatious to the defendant and that the stay would not cause injustice to the plaintiff in the subsequent suit.[863]

While laying down the principle regarding applicability of sections 10 and 151 of the CPC, the court observed that where a party claims interference of the court to stop another action between the same parties, it lies upon him to show to the court that the multiplicity of action is vexatious, and the whole burden of proof lies upon him. He does not satisfy that burden of proof by merely showing that there is a multiplicity of actions; he must go further. However, it was held that the inherent powers are to be exercised by the court in very exceptional circumstances for which the Code lays down no procedure. It was thereafter held that the provisions of section 10 are clear, definite and mandatory. A court in which a subsequent suit has been filed is prohibited from proceeding with the trial of that suit in certain specified circumstances. However, where two suits were filed in respect of the properties of Math of Lord Jagannath, the plaintiff of one suit being the defendant in the other and a third proceeding in the form of appeal dealing with the vesting of intermediary interest in the State was pending before collector, it was held by the Orissa High Court that where section 10 has no application, the court could exercise inherent jurisdiction under section 151 of the Code for the ends of justice.[864] When there is a special provision in the Code for dealing with the contingency of two such suits being instituted, recourse to the inherent powers under section 151 is not justified. The provisions of section 10 do not become inapplicable on a court holding that the previously instituted suit is a vexatious suit or has been instituted in violation of the terms of the contract.[865] It is true that the CPC does not provide for joint trial of the suits, but at the same time it is a well-accepted position of law that under section 151 of the Civil Procedure in appropriate cases, an order for consolidation of the cases can be made. The courts have even ordered joint trial of the cases. A court has inherent power ex debito justitiae to consolidate

---

860. Manohar Lal Chopra v Rai Bahadur Rao Seth Hiralal, AIR 1962 SC 527.
861. National Institute of MH&NS v C Parameshwar, AIR 2005 SC 242: (2005) 2 SCC 256.
862. MV Rajashekhar v MV Rajamma, AIR 2004 Kant 280.
863. See notes to O XXXIX, rule 1.
864. Chandrasekhar Mohanty v State of Orissa, 2008 (1) Civil Court Cases 60 (Ori).
865. Tara Devi v Kamla Gupta, AIR 1999 Pat 103.

suits, where it is in the ends of justice to do so to avoid needless expenses and inconvenience to parties. Where it appears that there is sufficient unity, or similarity in the matter in issue in the suits, and the determination of the suits rests mainly on common questions, it is convenient to have them tried as analogous cases.

Ordinarily, since judgment in the probate proceeding is judgment in rem, it would be appropriate for the court to direct the court to dispose off the probate proceeding first in point of time and to stay the civil suit till the probate proceeding is decided. However, in the facts and circumstances of this case, since the probate proceedings as well as special civil suit are of the year 1982, and since the period of more than 11 years has already elapsed, in the court's opinion, it would not be proper to interfere with the discretion exercised by the trial court where the trial court has ordered consolidation of the two proceedings.[866] If the exigencies demand, cause of action or defence for both, civil and criminal proceedings is the same and the defence of the defendant or accused is likely to suffer; or the defendant or accused has to suffer serious prejudice because of particular or peculiar facts of the case, the court can stay the civil proceedings. As a principle of law, it cannot be laid down that whenever a criminal case is instituted, then the civil court on the same cause of action must be stayed. The court may be guided by the attending circumstances. Where a criminal action provides a cause of action for the civil action, then the court may, if the facts so demand, stay proceedings in the civil suit.[867]

[s 10.31] Summary Procedure

Section 10 is a general provision applicable to all categories of cases. The provisions contained in O XXXVII applies to certain classes of suit. One provides a bar against proceedings with the trial of the suit, the other provides for granting of quick relief. Both these provisions have to be interpreted harmoniously so that the objects of both are not frustrated. The words "trial of any suit" will have to be construed in the context of provisions of O XXXVII of the Code. The scheme of summary procedure provided by O XXXVII is that a stage of determination of the matter in issue will arise in a summary suit only after the defendant obtains leave. The trial would really begin only after leave is granted to the defendant.

Considering the objects of both the provisions, i.e., section 10 and O XXXVII, wider interpretation of the word "trial" is not called for. The word "trial" in section 10, in the context of a summary suit, cannot be interpreted to be the entire proceedings starting with the institution of the suit by lodging a plaint. In a summary suit, the "trial" really begins after the court or the judge grants leave to the defendant to contest the suit. Therefore, the court or the judge dealing with the summary suit can proceed upto the stage of hearing the summons for judgment and passing the judgment in favour of the plaintiff if: (i) the defendant has not applied for leave to defend, or if such application has been made and refused; or if, (ii) the defendant who is permitted to defend fails to comply with the conditions on which the leave to defend is granted.[868]

[s 10.32] Explanation I

The contention that the Explanation 1 of section 11 permits second suit is absolutely misconceived. The Explanation 1 of section 11 of the CPC merely deals with a situation where

---

866. Multivahuji v Kalindivahuji, AIR 1994 Guj 42.
867. Sai Udyog Pvt Ltd v Central Bank of India, AIR 1998 MP 191.
868. Indian Bank v Maharashtra State Co-op Mktg Federation Ltd, AIR 1998 SC 1952 : (1998) 5 SCC 69.

two suits are pending in court/courts of competent jurisdiction and in a situation when any of the suit is decided by the court before another suit, then decision given in that suit irrespective of the fact whether it was filed earlier or later, decision on the issue bars re-trial of the same issue.[869]

[s 10.33] Probate Case and Partition Suit

It is well settled that in the probate proceedings the only thing that the court does is declare upon the validity of the execution of Will in respect of the properties mentioned therein. It does not declare or decide upon the validity, legal disposition contained therein. For this purpose, the jurisdiction of the high court and the district judge under the provision of the Succession Act, 1925 are original and exclusive. No civil court can entertain any dispute with regard to validity or otherwise of a Will. Once a Will is probated and letter of administration is issued, if there be any dispute as regard disposition made therein, the parties can institute proceedings in civil courts without impugning the execution of the Will which has already been decided in the probate proceedings. It would thus be seen that the jurisdiction of two courts even in the two proceedings are different and exclusive. In that view of the matter, it cannot be said that one court can stay the proceeding pending decision of the other but as would presently show it also cannot be said that the decision given in the probate case would not have a material effect on the outcome of the partition suit.[870]

Be that as it may, the decision in the probate proceedings on the question of proof of the Will can have a direct impact on the suit.[871]

So, the decision in probate case would have material effect on the suit.[872]

The Delhi High Court has held that a civil court hearing a civil suit cannot stay proceedings in a probate court even though the probate petition was filed later in point of time.[873] It was observed by the high court as follows:

> The legal position which has emerged from the above decisions is that a Probate Court seized with a petition for grant of Probate of Will or Letters of Administration is not a civil court within the meaning of the term under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure though the proceedings of the Probate Court in relation to the granting of Probate and Letters of Administration is to be regulated, so far as the circumstances of the case may permit, by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. Once a Probate Court is considering a petition for grant of Probate or Letters of Administration in respect of a Will, that court alone is competent to decide on the question of execution and/or validity or otherwise of the Will in question. In such a situation, it is not open to the civil court to go into that question. [874]

[S 11] Res judicata.—No Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, and has been heard and finally decided by such Court.

---

869. Hari Ram v Lichmaniya, AIR 2003 Raj 319.
870. Chandra Madhav Mishra v Braj Kishore Mishra, AIR 2006 Pat 164.
871. Nirmala Devi v Arun Kumar Gupta, (2005) 12 SCC 505.
872. Chandra Madhav Mishra v Braj Kishore Mishra, AIR 2006 Pat 164.
873. Amar Deep Singh v State, 125 (2005) Del LT 627.
874. Amar Deep Singh v State, 125 (2005) Del LT 627, at p 630.

Explanation I.—The expression "former suit" shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question whether or not it was instituted prior thereto.

Explanation II.—For the purpose of this section, the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provisions as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court.

Explanation III.—The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other.

Explanation IV.—Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit.

Explanation V.—Any relief claimed in the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall for the purposes of this section, be deemed to have been refused.

Explanation VI.—Where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating.

[875][Explanation VII.—The provisions of this section shall apply to a proceeding for the execution of a decree and references in this section to any suit, issue or former suit shall be construed as references, respectively, to a proceeding for the execution of the decree, question arising in such proceeding and a former proceeding for the execution of that decree.

Explanation VIII.—An issue heard and finally decided by a Court of limited jurisdiction, competent to decide such issue, shall operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, notwithstanding that such Court of limited jurisdiction was not competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 11.1] Alterations in the Section 216
[s 11.2] Scope 216
[s 11.3] Binding Nature of Judicial Decisions..... 218
[s 11.4] The Doctrine of Res Judicata 218
[s 11.5] Maxim of Roman Jurisprudence..... 222
[s 11.6] Section Mandatory..... 223
[s 11.7] Res Judicata and Res Sub Judice — Distinction 223
[s 11.8] Res Judicata and Industrial Disputes..... 225
[s 11.9] Res Judicata and Estoppel 226
[s 11.10] Res Judicata and Order II, Rule 2 228
[s 11.11] Res Judicata and lis Pendens..... 230
[s 11.12] Cause of Action Estoppel; Issue Estoppel and Res Judicata 232
[s 11.13] Mixed Question of Facts and Law... 233
[s 11.14] Two Stages in the Same Litigation... 234
[s 11.15] Suits..... 236
[s 11.16] Court 237
[s 11.17] Explanation to a Section..... 238
[s 11.18] Interlocutory Orders 238
[s 11.19] Procedural Orders 241
[s 11.20] Former Suit..... 242
[s 11.21] Suits Tried Together — One Judgment..... 242
[s 11.22] Suits Tried Together — Separate Judgments 244
[s 11.23] Applications Decided Together..... 245
[s 11.24] Plea of Res Judicata Cannot Be Raised for the First Time Before Supreme Court Previous Judgments Still Relevant 245
[s 11.25] Non-framing of Particular Issue..... 246

875. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 6 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 11.26] Conditions of Res Judicata 247
[s 11.26.1] Essentials of Res Judicata 247
[s 11.26.2] Matter in Issue 248
[s 11.27] Section not Exhaustive—Principle of Res Judicata Applicable apart from Section 363
[s 11.28] Probate proceedings 370
[s 11.29] Succession Proceedings 370
[s 11.30] Orders in Execution Proceedings and Explanation VII 371
[s 11.30.1] Constructive Res Judicata in Execution Proceedings 375
[s 11.30.2] Ex parte Orders 380
[s 11.30.3] Consent Orders 381
[s 11.30.4] Interlocutory Orders ... 382
[s 11.31] Insolvency Proceedings 383
[s 11.32] Summary Proceedings 383
[s 11.33] Application for Amendment of Decree 384
[s 11.34] Application for Review 384
[s 11.35] Plea of Res Judicata 385
[s 11.36] Waiver of Plea of Res Judicata 387
[s 11.37] Conflicting Decrees 387
[s 11.38] Maintenance Order 387
[s 11.39] Income-tax Proceedings 388
[s 11.40] Sales Tax Proceedings 388
[s 11.41] Writs 389
[s 11.41.1] Habeas corpus 394
[s 11.41.2] Service Matters 394
[s 11.41.3] Representative Suits 396
[s 11.42] Arbitration 396
[s 11.43] Appeal 398
[s 11.44] Special Leave Petition 400
[s 11.45] Land Acquisition 402
[s 11.46] Ceiling Act and Res Judicata 402
[s 11.47] Exceptions to Res Judicata 403

[s 11.1] Alterations in the Section

Explanations VII and VIII have been added by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976). Explanation VII has been added to ensure legislatively what had in several decisions been recognised as the general principle of res judicata apart from this section applied to proceedings in execution. Explanation VIII has been added to provide as against certain decisions to the contrary that the decision of a court of limited jurisdiction shall in so far as it is within the jurisdiction of such court operate as res judicata, although such court was not competent to try the subsequent suit in which the same question is subsequently raised.

[s 11.2] Scope

The principle of res judicata is based on the need of giving finality to judicial decisions. What it says is that once a res is judicata, it shall not be adjudged again. Primarily, it applies as between past litigation and future litigation. When a matter, whether on a question of fact or on a question of law, has been decided between two parties in one suit or proceeding and the decision is final, either because no appeal was taken to a higher court or because the appeal was dismissed or no appeal lies, neither party will be allowed in a future suit or proceeding to canvass the matter again. This principle of res judicata is embodied in relation to suits in section 11 of the CPC; but even where section 11 does not apply, the principle of res judicata has been applied by courts for the purpose of achieving finality in litigation. The result of this is that the original court as well as any higher court must in any future litigation proceed on the basis that the previous decision was correct.

The Supreme Court has held that the doctrine of res judicata, though stated to belong to the realm of procedural law, is not a mere technical doctrine. It is a doctrine of fundamental importance that seeks to ensure that there is an end to all litigation. This is the public policy of Indian law as well.[876]

876. Canara Bank v NG Subbaraya Setty, AIR 2018 SC 3395 : (2018) 16 SCC 228.

In Subramanian Swamy v State of Tamil Nadu,[877] the Supreme Court explained the doctrine of res judicata in the following words:

> The literal meaning of "res" is "everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status" and "res judicata" literally means "a matter adjudged; a thing judicially acted upon or decided; a thing or matter settled by judgments". "Res judicata pro veritate accipitur" is the full maxim which has, over the years, shrunk to mere "res judicata", which means that res judicata is accepted for truth. The doctrine contains the rule of conclusiveness of the judgment which is based partly on the maxim of Roman jurisprudence "interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium" (it concerns the State that there be an end to law suits) and partly on the maxim "nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa" (no man should be vexed twice over for the same cause).

Relying on the earlier judicial decisions,[878] the court also stated that even an erroneous decision on a question of law attracts the doctrine of res judicata between the parties. The correctness or otherwise of a judicial decision has no bearing upon the question of whether or not it operates as res judicata.

The principle of res judicata applies also as between two stages in the same litigation to the extent that a court, whether the trial court or a higher court having at an earlier stage decided in a matter one way, will not allow the parties to reagitate the matter again at a subsequent stage of the same proceedings.

Where neither the reliefs claimed in two suits were identical, nor the parties were the same and nor could the decision in the first suit said to have been on the merits, it was held that the principles of res judicata cannot be applied.[879]

But an interlocutory order which had not been appealed from either because no appeal lay, or even though an appeal lay, an appeal was not taken can be challenged in an appeal from the final decree or order.[880]

Section 11 of the CPC embodies the rule of conclusiveness as evidence, or bars the plea of an issue tried in an earlier suit founded on a plaint in which the matter is directly and substantially in issue and became final. In a later suit between the same parties or their privies in a competent court to try such subsequent suit in which the issue has been directly and substantially raised and decided in the judgment and decree in the former suit, would operate as res judicata. Section 11 does not create any right or interest in the property, but merely operates as a bar to try the same issue once over. In other words, it aims to prevent multiplicity of the proceedings and accords finality to an issue which directly and substantially had arisen in the former suit between the same parties or their privies, decided and became final, so that parties are not vexed twice over; vexatious litigation would be put to an end and the valuable time of the court is saved. It is based on public policy, as well as private justice. They would apply, therefore, to all judicial proceedings, whether civil or otherwise. It equally applies to quasi-judicial proceedings of the tribunals other than the civil courts.

---

877. Subramanian Swamy v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2015 SC 460 : (2014) 5 SCC 75.
878. Sha Shivraj Gopalji v Edappakath Ayissa Bi, AIR 1949 PC 302; Mohanlal Goenka v Benoy Kishna Mukherjee, AIR 1953 SC 65 : 1953 SCR 377.
879. City Municipal Council Bhalki v Gurappa, AIR 2015 SC 3826 : (2016) 2 SCC 200 : JT 2015 (9) SC 1.
880. Satyadhan v Deorajin Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941. See also Shanmughasundaram v Diravia Nadar, AIR 2005 SC 1836 : 2005 AIR SCW 1426 : (2005) 10 SCC 728 : 2005 (2) SCR 649 : JT 2005 (3) SC 186.

Doubtless the principle of res judicata is a fundamental doctrine of law, that there must be an end to litigation.[881] But the plea of res judicata has to be specifically and expressly raised.[882] The foundation of the plea of res judicata must be laid in the pleadings. If this was not done, no party would be permitted to raise it for the first time at the stage of the appeal. The only exception to this requirement is when the issue of res judicata is in fact argued before the lower court.

For the purpose of applying the principle of res judicata, the case needs to be subjected to the triple tests regarding — (i) factum of the identity of the parties, (ii) cause of action, and (iii) the subject matter.[883] To answer the subject matter test, it is necessary to determine, in the first place, what matter has been "directly and substantially in issue" in a previous case. Such questions often arise before the courts for determination. The Supreme Court, in Rithwik Energy Generation (P) Ltd,[884] endorsed the two tests laid down by this book for determination of what matter has been "directly and substantially in issue" as opposed to being "collaterally and incidentally" in issue in a case. The two tests laid down are:

(i) Whether the issue was "necessary" to be decided for adjudicating on the prime issue involved in a case? If yes, was it decided? or

(ii) Whether adjudication of the said issue is considered material and essential for its decision by the court. The question must be decided keeping in view the facts of each case.

[s 11.3] Binding Nature of Judicial Decisions

A judicial decision binds whether it is right or wrong. An error of law or fact, committed by a judicial or quasi-judicial body cannot be impeached otherwise than in appeal, unless it relates to a matter of jurisdiction. The finding would be binding on the parties even though the abstracted proportion of law dissociated from the facts, may not be so.[885]

It has been reiterated by the Supreme Court repeatedly that to attract the doctrine of res judicata there must be conscious adjudication of an issue. A plea of res judicata cannot be claimed unless the judgment carries an expression of an opinion on the merits. Although res judicata is applicable between the two stages of the same litigation, but the question or issue involved must have been decided at an earlier stage of the same litigation.[886]

[s 11.4] The Doctrine of Res Judicata

Res judicata is a plea available in civil proceedings in accordance with section 11 of the CPC. It is a doctrine applied to give finality to "lis" in original or appellate proceedings. The doctrine in substance means that an issue or a point decided and attaining finality should not be allowed to be reopened and re-agitated twice over. The literal meaning of res is "everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status" and res

---

881. Daryao v State of UP, (1962) 1 SCR 574.
882. Medapati Surayya v Tondapu Bala Gangadhare Ramakrishna Reddi, AIR 1948 (35) PC 3; see also V Rajeshwari v TC Saravanabava, (2004) 1 SCC 551 ; 2003 (6) SCR 927 : (2003) 10 Scale 768.
883. Andanur Kalamma v Gangamma (deceased) by LRs, (2018) 15 SCC 508 : 2018 (4) Mad LJ 607 : 2018 (3) Scale 653.
884. Rithwik Energy Generation (P) Ltd v Bangalore Electricity Supply Co Ltd, (2018) 17 SCC 223 : 2018 (5) SCJ 653 : 2018 (2) Scale 399.
885. Bharathi Amma v Kumaran Peethambaran, AIR 1990 Ker 88.
886. Erach Boman Khavar v Tukaram Shridhar Bhat, AIR 2014 SC 544 : 2014 AIR SCW 61 : (2013) 15 SCC 655 : JT 2013 (15) SC 581 : 2014 (138) AIC 10.

judicata literally means "a matter adjudged; a thing judicially acted upon or decided; a thing or matter settled by judgment". Section 11 of the CPC engrants this doctrine with a purpose that "a final judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction on the merits is conclusive as to the rights of the parties and their privies, and, as to them, constitutes an absolute bar to a subsequent action involving the same claim, demand or cause of action".[887]

> Plea of res judicata is a restraint on the right of a plaintiff to have an adjudication of his claim. The plea must be clearly established; more particularly where the bar sought is on the basis of constructive res judicata. The plaintiff who is sought to be prevented by the bar of constructive res judicata should have notice about the plea and have an opportunity to put forth his contentions against the same.[888]

Plea of res judicata is also not available where there is no contest on an issue between the parties and there is no conscious adjudication of an issue.[889] Res judicata cannot stand in the way of an erroneous interpretation of statutory prohibition.[890]

The present section deals with the doctrine of res judicata. The leading case on the subject is the Duchess of Kingstone's case,[891] and the following classic passage from the judgment of Sir William de Grey is a statement of the leading principles of res judicata:

> From the variety of cases relative of judgments being given in evidence in civil suits, these two deductions seem to follow as generally true; first that judgment of a court of concurrent jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is, as a plea, a bar, or as evidence, conclusive, between the same parties, upon the same matter, directly in question in another court; secondly that the judgment of a court of exclusive jurisdiction, directly on the point, is, in like manner, conclusive upon the same matter, between the same parties, coming incidentally in question in another court, for a different purpose. But neither the judgment of a court of concurrent or exclusive jurisdiction is evidence of any matter which came collaterally in question, though within their jurisdiction nor of any matter incidentally cognizable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the judgment.

Section 11 is not exhaustive of the general doctrine of res judicata and that the rule of res judicata as enacted in section 11 has some technical aspects, i.e., the general doctrine is founded on consideration of high public policy to achieve two objectives namely, that there must be a finality to litigation and that the individual should not be harassed twice over on account of the same litigation. Technical aspects of section 11, as for instance, pecuniary or subject-wise competence or earlier form to adjudicate the subject matter or grant reliefs sought in the subsequent litigation would be immaterial when the general doctrine of res judicata is to be invoked.[892]

Doubtless, the principle of res judicata is a fundamental doctrine of law, that there must be an end to litigation.[893]

Where the stand taken by the State in the earlier round of litigation was that the temple in question was a Hindu temple and the Supreme Court categorically opined that it is a Jain temple, it was held by the Supreme Court that the principle of res judicata would come into

---

887. Escorts Farms Ltd v Commr, Kumauon Division, Nainital, AIR 2004 SC 2186 : AIR 2004 SCW 1960 : 2004 (4) SCC 281 : 2004 (2) SCR 543 : JT 2004 (2) 481.
888. RV Raveendran J in Alka Gupta v Narender Kumar Gupta, (2010) 10 SCC 141.
889. Alka Gupta v Narender Kumar Gupta, (2010) 10 SCC 141.
890. SCG Contracts (India) Pvt Ltd v KS Chamankar Infrastructure Pvt Ltd, AIR 2019 SC 2691 : (2019) 12 SCC 210 : 2019 (4) Scale 574.
891. Duchess of Kingstone's case, (1776) 2 Smith's LC, 13th Edn, pp 644–645.
892. Ghulam Abbas v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1982) 1 SCC 71.
893. Daryao v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1962) 1 SCR 574; ITC Ltd v Commr of Central Excise, (New Delhi), AIR 2005 SC 1370 : 2004 (7) SCC 591.

play and the State would not be allowed to still contend that it was a Hindu temple. It was observed that the issue cannot be permitted to be reopened.[894]

In Kalipada De v Dwijpada Das,[895] the Privy Council observed as follows:

> The question as to what is to be considered to be res judicata is dealt with by Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. In that section are given many examples of circumstances in which the rule concerning res judicata applies; but it has often been explained by this Board that the terms of Section 11 are not to be regarded as exhaustive.

In the above case, Lord Justice Darling quoted with approval the observations of Sir Lowrence Jenkins on res judicata in Sheoparsan Singh v Ramnandan Singh[896] which is as follows:

> . . . their Lordships desire to emphasise that the rule of res judicata, while founded on ancient precedent, is dictated by a wisdom which is for all time. "It hath been well said", declared Lord Coke, "interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium—otherwise great oppression might be done under colour and pretence of law" (6 Coke, 9a). Though the rule of the Code may be traced to an English source, it embodies a doctrine in no way opposed to the spirit of the law as expounded by the Hindu Commentators. Vijnanesvara and Nilakantha include the plea of a former judgment among those allowed by law, each citing for this purpose the text of Katyayana, who described the plea thus: "If a person, though defeated at law, sue again, he should be answered, 'You were defeated formerly.'" This is called the plea of former judgment. (See the Mitakshara (Vyavaharaj, bk-II, ch. I, edited by J.R. Gharpure, p. 14 and the Mayuka, ch 1, section 1, p. 11, of Mandalik's edition.) And so the application of the rule by the courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law.

In a case under the Slum Areas (Improvement and Clearance) Act, 1956, the plaintiff, in an earlier round of litigation was allowed relief in respect of only a part of the claim by the competent authority who were empowered under the Act. In the second round of litigation when the matter reached the Supreme Court, it was held that the suit was barred not only under section 37A of the Act but also by the principles of res judicata. YV Chandrachud J (as he then was), speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> The fact that section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot apply on its terms, the earlier proceeding before competent authority not being a suit, is no answer to the extension of the principle underlying that Section to the instant case. Section 11, it is long settled, is not exhaustive and the principle which motivates that section can be extended to cases which do not fall strictly within the letter of the law. The issues involved in the two proceedings are identical, those issues arise as between the same parties and thirdly, the issue now sought to be raised was decided finally by a competent quasi-judicial tribunal. The principle of res judicata is conceived in the larger public interest which requires that all litigation must, sooner than later, come to an end. The principle is also founded on equity, justice and good conscience which require that a party which has once succeeded on an issue should not be permitted to be harassed by a multiplicity of proceedings involving determination of the same issue.[897]

The argument that principle of res judicata cannot apply because in the previous suit only a part of the property was involved when in the subsequent suit the whole property is the subject-matter, cannot be accepted. The principle of res judicata under section 11 of the CPC is attracted where issues directly and substantially involved between the same parties in the

---

894. Deewan Singh v Rajendra Prasad Ardevi, AIR 2007 SC 767 : (2007) 10 SCC 528.
895. Kalipada De v Dwijpada Das, AIR 1930 PC 22 : 57 IA 24 (Lord Justice Darling, speaking for the Bench).
896. Sheoparsan Singh v Ramnandan Singh, AIR 1916 PC 78 : 43 IA 91.
897. Lal Chand (deceased) by LRs v Radha Kishan, AIR 1977 SC 789 : (1977) 2 SCC 88 : (1977) 2 SCR 522 at p 532.

previous and subsequent suit are the same — may be — in the previous suit only a part of the property was involved when in the subsequent suit, the whole property is the subject-matter.[898]

In order to decide the question of whether a subsequent proceeding is barred by res judicata, it is necessary to examine the question with reference to:

(i) The form or a competence of the court;

(ii) the party and the representatives;

(iii) matters in issue;

(iv) matters which ought to have been made ground for defence or attack in the former suit;

(v) the final decision.

In order that a defence of res judicata may succeed, it is necessary to not only show that the cause of action was the same but also that the plaintiff had an opportunity of getting the relief which he is seeking in the subsequent proceedings. The test is whether the claim in the subsequent suit or proceeding is infact founded upon the same cause of action which was the foundation of the former suit or proceedings. The cause of action for a proceeding has no relation whatsoever to the defence which may be set up, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff or the applicant. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint or the application as the case may be as the cause of action or in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff or the applicant asked the court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour.[899] The principles of res judicata do not apply in a case involving pure question of law.[900]

In a matter, the question in the earlier suit filed by the appellants in the civil writ petition and in the present suit was whether H had only a life estate in the property or full ownership. The earlier suit was dismissed and though the appellants filed a second appeal, the same was withdrawn. The question as to whether or not H had only a life interest in the suit property or full ownership was not resolved by the discovery that H was alive and the appeal could have been prosecuted. The plea of the appellant that H had full ownership in the property and so they are the owners of the property was negated. In such circumstances, it is not open to the appellant to put forth the same plea in the fresh suit. The plea was rightly negated by holding that the present suit is barred by res judicata.[901]

It is well-known that res judicata is a mixed question of fact and law. It has to be specifically pleaded and the party relying on the principle of res judicata should place before the court all material particulars which would be sufficient to give a finding whether the particular case is barred by the principles of res judicata.[902] The order of the previous case between the parties was passed on the basis of agreement between the parties; hence, would not operate as res judicata and thus, would not operate as a bar to the consideration of the application for custody of a child under the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890.[903] If a plaint claims improper remedies and reliefs, then the principle of res judicata would not

---

898. K Ethirajan v Lakshmi, AIR 2003 SC 4295 : AIR 2003 SCW 4951 : 2003 (10) SCC 578.
899. Jaswant Singh v Custodian of Evacuee Property, (1985) 3 SCC 648.
900. UOI v Pramod Gupta, AIR 2005 SC 3708 : AIR 2005 SCW 4645 : (2005) 12 SCC 1 : (2005) 8 JT 203 (SC).
901. Hansraj v State of Punjab, (1995) Supp 1 SCC 405.
902. Krishna Chand Nayak v Neela Kanthi Mohanti, AIR 1996 Ori 1. See also Madhukar D Shende v Tarabai Aba Shedage, AIR 2002 SC 637.
903. Rehana Praveen v Naimuddin, AIR 2000 MP 1.

operate as the issues could not be tried due to improper pleading.[904] "Lis" disposed off on merits by a speaking order, even if passed in limine, amounts to a decision which can operate as res judicata in subsequent proceedings. The dismissal in limine of a writ petition cannot possibly bar the subsequent writ petitions but at the same time such a dismissal in limine may inhibit the discretion of the court. Normally, the court would be disinclined to entertain or to hear petitions raising identical points again where on an earlier occasion, the matter was heard and dismissed. It is not that the court will have no jurisdiction to entertain such matters, but it would normally exercise its discretion against it.[905] Even where notice might not have been issued to the opposite party till dismissal of a petition in limine may amount to create a bar upon a subsequent trial as to the same issue, on the principles of res judicata; provided the issue has been decided by a speaking order, on merits thus, whether any order passed in limine operates as res judicata or not would depend on the nature of the particular order passed.[906] When a finding as to the title of immovable property is rendered by a court of small causes, res judicata cannot be pleaded as a bar in a subsequent regular suit for the determination or enforcement of any right or interest in immovable property. In order to operate as res judicata, the finding must be one disposing off a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and the issue should have been heard and finally decided by the court trying such suit. A matter which is collaterally or incidentally in issue for the purpose of deciding the matter which is directly in issue in the case cannot be made the basis of a plea of res judicata. It has long been held that a question of title in a small cause suit can be regarded as incidental only to the substantial issue in the suit and cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in which the question of title is directly raised.[907] The rule of res judicata may thus be put upon two grounds — one, the hardship to the individual that he should be vexed twice for the same cause, and the other, public policy, that it is in the interest of the State that there should be an end to litigation.[908] Putting in another form, it may be said that every suit must be sustained by a cause of action, and there is no cause of action to sustain the second suit, since it is being merged in the judgment of the first.[909]

When the matter regarding the promotion and seniority has been decided earlier and has attained finality, the same cannot be re-opened by the state, being barred by principle of res judicata.[910]

[s 11.5] Maxim of Roman Jurisprudence

Section 11 contains the rule of the conclusiveness of the judgment based upon the maxim of Roman jurisprudence "Interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium" (it concerns the state that there be an end to law suits); and, partly on the maxim "Nemo debet bis vexari pro uma at eadam causa" (no man should be vexed twice over for the same cause). The section does not effect the jurisdiction of the court but operates as a bar to the trial of the suit or issue, if the matter in the

---

904. Anant Shankar Bhave v Kalyan Dombivli Municipal Corp. (2019) 4 SCC 348 : 2019 (6) SCJ 282 : 2019 (5) Scale 689.
905. Bar Council of India v UOI, (2012) 8 SCC 243.
906. Maghraj Calla v Kajodimal, AIR 1994 Raj 11.
907. Gangabai v Chabubai, (1982) 1 SCC 4.
908. Lockyer v Ferryman, (1877) LR 2A 7519; Raja of Venkatagiri v Province of Madras, AIR 1947 Mad 5, (1947) II R Mad 190; Sobha Singh & Sons v Delhi Administration, AIR 1967 P&H 193 : (1967) ILR 1 Punj 673.
909. King v Hoare, (1844) 13 M&W 494, at p 504; Kendall v Hamilton, (1879) LR 4 AC 504, at p 526; Ramagya Prasad v Murli Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 1320 : (1974) 2 SCC 266.
910. N Birendra Singh v Priyokumar Singh, AIR 2006 SC 2228 : (2006) 9 SCC 650.

suit was directly or substantially in issue in the previous suit between the same parties litigating under the same title in a court, competent to try the subsequent suit in which judgment in section 96, such issue has been raised.[911]

[s 11.6] Section Mandatory

The section is mandatory and the ordinary litigant claiming under one of the parties to the former suit can only avoid its provisions by taking advantage of section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. The grounds of avoidance under that section are fraud and collusion.[912] Gross negligence is different from fraud or collusion.[913] Collusion of one of the several defendants with the plaintiff is not enough to avoid the rule of res judicata.[914]

The Supreme Court has observed that the plea of res judicata, like the plea of limitation, concerns the jurisdiction of the court and a finding on the plea in favour of the party raising it would oust the jurisdiction of that court.[915]

[s 11.7] Res Judicata and Res Sub Judice — Distinction

The rule of res judicata is readily distinguished from the rule in section 10, for the latter relates to a res sub judice, that is, a matter which is pending judicial inquiry; while the rule in the present section relates to res judicata that is, a matter adjudicated upon, or a matter on which the judgment has been pronounced. Section 10 bars the trial of a suit in which the matter directly and substantially in issue is pending adjudication in a previous suit. The present section bars the trial of a suit or an issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has already been adjudicated upon in a previous suit. Moreover, public policy requires that there should be an end to litigation. The question of whether the decision is correct or erroneous has no bearing on the question of whether it operates or does not operate as res judicata;[916] otherwise, every decision would be impugned as erroneous and there would be no finality.[917]

While section 10 relates to res sub judice, that is, a matter which is pending a judicial adjudication; section 11 relates to res judicata, that is to say, a matter already adjudicated upon by a competent court. Whereas section 10 bars the trial of a suit in which the matter directly and substantially in issue is pending adjudication in a previous suit. Section 11 bars the trial of a suit on an issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has already been

---

911. Deva Ram v Ishwar Chand, (1995) 6 SCC 733.
912. Venkata Seshayya v Koteswara, AIR 1937 PC 1 : (1937) ILR Mad 263 : 64 IA 17; Pandurang v MRT, Nagpur, AIR 1974 Bom 20 : (1974) ILR Bom 816 : (1973) Mah LJ 792.
913. Venkata Seshayya v Koteswara, AIR 1937 PC 1 : (1937) ILR Mad 263 : 64 IA 17; Nagamma v Korathi, AIR 1950 Mad 546 : (1950) ILR Mad 326.
914. Baboo v Kirpa, AIR 1950 All 488.
915. Pandurang v Maruti, AIR 1966 SC 153 : (1966) 1 SCR 102 : (1966) 68 Bom LR 41.
916. Tarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1928) 33 Cal WN 126 (FB); Mohanlal v Benoy Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 : (1953) SCR 377 : (1953) SCJ 130; MSM Sarma v Sri Krishna Sinha, AIR 1960 SC 1186 : (1961) SCR 96 : (1961) 2 SCJ 73 : (1961) 2 SCA 582; Govardanam Appalacharyulu v Govardhanam Rangacharyulu, AIR 1957 AP 1002 : (1956) Andh WR 954; Madathipathi v Bhargavan, (1957) Ker LJ 857 : (1957) Ker LT 1033; Dhirendranath v Naresh Chandra, AIR 1958 Cal 453 : (1958) 62 Cal WN 596; Jaljodhan Singh v Kripa Singh, AIR 1963 P&H 178 : (1963) 65 Punj LR 26; Abdul Wasey v State, AIR 1978 All 247.
917. Behari v Majid, (1901) ILR 24 All 138; Phundo v Jangi Nath, (1893) ILR 15 All 327; Gouri Koer v Audh Koer, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1087; Mohideen v Syed Osman, (1918) Mad WN 580; Tani v Tarachand, (1918) PR 82.

adjudicated upon in a former suit. The object of both the sections is similar, namely, to protect the parties from being vexed twice, for the trial of the same cause and to achieve the public policy that there should be an end to litigation. Therefore, one of the objects of section 10 is to prevent competent courts of concurrent jurisdiction from having to try parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue, and thereby to pave the way for the application of the rule of res judicata contained in the next following section. So, what the court has really to see is if the decision of the matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit will or will not lead to the decision of the matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit, and if it is satisfied that it will, then it must stay the trial of the subsequent suit and await the decision in the former suit.[918]

In Canara Bank v NG Subbaraya Setty,[919] the Supreme Court dealt with a question as to when does res cease to be sub judice and become judicata. After examining the case laws, the court reiterated the legal position that res is not to be considered judicata until the limitation period for filing an appeal is over. Till that time res remains sub judice. It is only after the limitation period is over, res (subject matter) can be considered judicata (stand adjudicated).

The Court also explained the procedure that should be followed in the second suit or proceedings initiated by a party to a previous suit before the expiry of limitation period for filing appeal or immediately after its expiry. In such cases, the Court opined that the court hearing the second proceeding can very well ask the party who has lost the first round whether he intends to appeal the aforesaid judgment. If the answer is yes, then it would be prudent to first adjourn the second proceeding and then stay the aforesaid proceedings, after the appeal has been filed, to await the outcome of the appeal in the first proceeding. If, however, a sufficiently long period has elapsed after limitation has expired, and no appeal has yet been filed in the first proceeding, the court hearing the second proceeding would be justified in treating the first proceeding as res judicata.

The Court, however, stated that no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down and what needs to be done has to be decided on case-to-case basis. The court hearing the second proceedings must take into account the entire facts and circumstances of the case for deciding whether to dismiss the same on the basis of res judicata or to stay/adjourn the proceedings by treating the earlier proceedings as sub judice. The Court was of the view that the judicious use of the weapon of stay would, in many cases, obviate a court of first instance in the second proceeding treating a matter as res judicata only to find that by the time the appeal has reached the hearing stage against the said judgment in the second proceeding, the res becomes sub judice again because of condonation of delay and the consequent hearing of the appeal in the first proceeding. This would result in setting aside the trial court judgment in the second proceeding, and a de novo hearing on merits in the second proceeding commencing on remand, thereby wasting the court's time and dragging the parties into a second round of litigation on the merits of the case. In cases where the appeal is grossly belated or where it is unlikely that the appellate court would condone the delay owing to creation of the third-party right in the interregnum, etc. the court hearing the second proceedings may proceed to decide the case on the basis of res judicata.

---

918. Fulchand Motilal v Manbar Lal, AIR 1973 Pat 196. See also Radhika Kanal Pandit v Kanal Pandit, AIR 1993 Mad 90.
919. Canara Bank v NG Subbaraya Setty, AIR 2018 SC 3395 : (2018) 16 SCC 228.

[s 11.8] Res Judicata and Industrial Disputes

It is well-established that although the entire CPC is not applicable to industrial adjudication, the principle of res judicata laid down under section 11 of the CPC are applicable; including the principle of constructive res judicata. Thus, in State of Uttar Pradesh v Nawab Hussain,[920] it was held that the dismissal of a writ petition challenging disciplinary proceedings on the ground that the charged officer had not been afforded reasonable opportunity to meet the allegations against him, operated as res judicata in respect of the subsequent suit in which the order of dismissal was challenged on the ground that it was incompetently passed. Supreme Court also held:

> .....it may be that the same set of facts may give rise to two or more causes of action. If in such a case a person is allowed to choose and sue upon one cause of action at one time and to reserve the other for subsequent litigation, that would aggravate the burden of litigation. Courts have, therefore, treated such a course of action as an abuse of its process.[921]

At this stage, the Pondicherry Khadi and Village Industries Board case, deserves to be noticed with some greater detail. In that case, a dispute was raised about the termination of service of a temporary workman by way of writ petition. The high court passed a reasoned order on merits after contested hearing. That order became final. It was held by the Supreme Court that re-agitation of the same issue before labour court would be barred by res judicata, more so when the "lesser relief" of reinstatement which was subject-matter of the industrial dispute had already been claimed by the workman in the writ petition.[922] Explaining the principle of law, Mrs. Ruma Pal J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 11. The principle of res judicata operates on the court. It is the courts which are prohibited from trying the issue which was directly and substantially in issue in the earlier proceedings between the same parties, provided the court trying the subsequent proceeding is satisfied that the earlier court was competent to dispose of the earlier proceedings and that the matter had been heard and finally decided by such court. Here the parties to the writ petition filed by the respondent in the Madras High Court and the industrial dispute were the same. The cause of action in both was the refusal of the appellant to allow the respondent to rejoin service. The Madras High Court was competent to decide the issue which it did with a reasoned order on the merits and after a contested hearing. This was not a case where the earlier proceedings had been disposal of on any technical ground as was the case in Workmen of Cochin Port Trust v Board of Trustees of the Cochin Port Trust, (AIR 1978 SC 1283); Smt. Pujari Bai v Madan Gopal (dead) L.Rs. (AIR 1989 SC 1764). The "lesser relief" of reinstatement which was the subject-matter of the industrial dispute had already been claimed by the respondent in the writ petition. This was refused by the High Court. The correctness of the decision in the writ proceedings has not been challenged by the respondent. The decision was, therefore, final. Having got an adverse order in the writ petition, it was not open to the respondent to re-agitate the issue before the Labour Court. . .

and the labour court was incompetent to entertain the dispute raised by the respondent and re-decide the matter in the face of the earlier decision of the high court in the writ proceedings.[923]

---

920. State of Uttar Pradesh v Nawab Hussain, AIR 1977 SC 1680 : (1977) 2 SCC 806 : (1977) Lab IC 911.
921. Workmen of the Straw Board Mfg Co Ltd v Straw Board Mfg Co, AIR 1974 SC 1132 : (1974) 4 SCC 681 : (1974) Lab IC 730; see also Pondicherry Khadi & Village Industries Board v P Kulothangan, AIR 2003 SC 4701 : 2003 AIR SCW 5725 : (2004) 1 SCC 68 : 2003 (9) Scale 115.
922. Pondicherry Khadi & Village Industries Board v P Kulothangan, AIR 2003 SC 4701 : 2003 AIR SCW 5725 : (2004) 1 SCC 68 : 2003 (9) Scale 115.
923. Pondicherry Khadi & Village Industries Board v P Kulothangan, AIR 2003 SC 4701 : (2004) 1 SCC 68.

When the second reference of industrial dispute made by appropriate government to labour court/industrial tribunal for adjudication has nothing to do with the earlier reference of industrial dispute, the principle of res judicata has got no application.[924]

The principles embodied in O XXIII, rule 1 of the CPC laying down a public policy is not applicable to a case where the writ petition filed by the workman was not adjudicated on merit, as the petitioner did not avail the more efficacious remedy available to her in another jurisdiction in terms of the provisions of the statute. A writ petition filed by the workman could have been dismissed even on the ground that another alternative remedy which was more efficacious was available and furthermore on the ground that the writ court would not go into the disputed question of fact. Even in such an event, it was open to the workman to approach the labour court or to take recourse to other remedies which were otherwise available to her.[925]

But when the writ petition was dismissed on findings of fact that the petitioners-daily wagers were not entitled to continue in service, the said finding operates as res judicata before labour court, where, re-instatement with back wages was sought. The general principle of res judicata applies to industrial adjudication.[926]

[s 11.9] Res Judicata and Estoppel

The principle of res judicata is a species of the principle of estoppel. When a proceeding based on a particular cause of action has attained finality, the principle of res judicata shall fully apply.[927]

Res judicata is sometimes treated as part of the doctrine of estoppel, but the two are essentially different. Estoppel is part of the law of evidence and prevents a man from saying one thing one time and the opposite thing at another time, while res judicata precludes a man from avowing the same thing in successive litigations.[928] A court which has no jurisdiction in law to try an eviction suit cannot be vested with the jurisdiction by applying principles of res judicata. There can be no estoppel on a pure question of law and the question of jurisdiction is a pure question of law.[929] The operation of the doctrine is the transformation of a question of fact into a question of law.[930] In Sita Ram v Amir Begam, Mahmud J[931] said:

> Perhaps the shortest way to describe the difference between the plea of res judicata and an estoppel, is to say that while the former prohibits the court from entering into an inquiry at all as to a matter already adjudicated upon, the latter prohibits a party, after the inquiry has already been entered upon, from proving anything which would contradict his own previous declaration or acts to the prejudice of another party, who, relying upon those declaration or acts to the prejudice of another party has altered his position. In other words, res judicata prohibits an inquiry in limine, whilst an estoppel is only a piece of evidence.

---

924. KPTC Ltd v Amalgamated Electricity Co Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 291 : 2001 I LLJ 556.
925. KPTC Ltd v Amalgamated Electricity Co Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 291 : 2001 I LLJ 556.
926. Executive Engineer, ZP Engg., Division v Digambara Rao, AIR 2004 SC 4839 : AIR 2004 SCW 5546 : (2004) 8 SCC 262.
927. Iswar Dutt v Land Acquisition Collector, AIR 2005 SC 3165 : (2005) 7 SCC 190.
928. Cassomally v Carrimbhoy, (1911) ILR 36 Bom 214; Bhagirathi v Balishwar, (1913) ILR 41 Cal 69; Raja of Venkatagiri v Province of Madras, AIR 1947 Mad 5; Radha Rani v Binoda Moyee, AIR 1942 Cal 92 : (1942) 1 ILR Cal 169.
929. Isabella Johnson v MA Susai, AIR 1991 SC 993 : (1991) 1 SCC 494.
930. Radha Rani Dassi v Binodamoyee Dassi, AIR 1942 Cal 92 : (1942) 1 ILR Cal 169.
931. Sita Ram v Amir Begam, (1886) ILR 8 All 324, at p 332.

The Supreme Court has held that where the decision is on a pure question of law, then a court cannot be precluded from deciding such a question of law differently. Such bar cannot be invoked either on principle of equity or estoppel. No equitable principle or estoppel can impede powers of the court to determine an issue of law correctly in a subsequent suit which relates to another property founded upon a different cause of action though parties may be same.[932]

The doctrine of res judicata as embedded in section 11 of CPC, corresponds to what is known as estoppel by judgment in English law. It is one of convenience and not of absolute justice. The section does not strike at the jurisdiction of the court. The very basis of the rule of estoppel is public interest. If a property is liable to be taxed under the statute which is law of the land, it must be so taxed without regard to the fact that for an earlier year it has successfully escaped taxation upon an erroneous view of fact and/or law. The public interest would be better served by passing the rule of res judicata and taxing the property in a year of assessment, if the incidence of tax be rightly attracted under the law and ignoring the factum of its having been excluded in an earlier year though by a conscious and deliberate decision. The court held that the civil court judgment restraining recovery of tax, in a suit based on a cause of action arising out of assessment for a particular year and holding the plaintiff as not liable to payment of tax, does not constitute res judicata for liability to pay tax or assessment of tax for subsequent years.[933]

The Supreme Court considering the ratio regarding "cause of action" in Kunjan Nair Sivaraman Nair v Narayanan Nair,[934] found that the suit filed by the plaintiff in 1962, based on the settlement deed executed by her husband in her favour and the sufferance of the dismissal of the suit, will not be a bar for making a claim for her share in the family property. In the instant case, the suit for the entire property was based on a settlement deed and it was a suit for possession. Whereas, the later suit for partition was for plaintiff's one-half share in the property based on her birth right. The Supreme Court held that the cause of action was therefore entirely different and res judicata did not apply.[935]

In a suit, the petitioner took the plea that his dismissal was illegal as he had been appointed by the Inspector-General of Police, but was dismissed by an officer lower in rank, i.e., Deputy Inspector-General of Police. However, the petitioner did not raise the said plea in the writ petition filed by him, which he could have raised. It was held by the Supreme Court that the subsequent suit raising that plea is barred by constructive res judicata.[936] PN Singhal, speaking for the three-judge bench in the above case, observed as follows on the doctrine of estoppel and res judicata:

> 3. The principle of estoppel per res judicata is a rule of evidence. As has been stated in Marginson v Blackburn Borough Council (1939) 2 KB 426 at p. 437 it may be said to be "the broader rule of evidence which prohibits the reassertion of a cause of action". This doctrine is based on two theories: (i) the finality and conclusiveness of the judicial decisions for the final termination of disputes in the general interest of the community as a matter of public policy and (ii) the interest of the individual that he should be protected from multiplication of litigation. It therefore serves not only a public but also a private purpose by obstructing the reopening of matters which have once been adjudicated upon. It is thus not permissible to obtain a second judgment for the same civil relief on the same cause of

---

932. Satyendra Kumar v Raj Nath Dubey, (2016) 14 SCC 49.
933. Delhi Golf Club Ltd v NDMC, AIR 1997 Del 347.
934. Kunjan Nair Sivaraman Nair v Narayanan Nair, AIR 2004 SC 1761 : (2004) 3 SCC 277.
935. Nagabhushanmmal v C Chandikeswaralingam, (2016) 4 SCC 434.
936. State of Uttar Pradesh v Nawab Hussain, AIR 1977 SC 1680 : (1977) 2 SCC 806.

> action, for otherwise the spirit of contentiousness may give rise to conflicting judgments of equal authority, lead to multiplicity of actions and bring the administration of justice into disrepute. It is the cause of action which gives rise to an action, and that is why it is necessary for the courts to recognise that a cause of action which results in a judgment must lose its identity and vitality and merge in the judgment when pronounced. It cannot therefore survive the judgment, or give rise to another cause of action on the same facts. This is what is known as the general principle of res judicata.[937]

In another three-judge bench decision, SB Sinha J, speaking for the bench, explained the distinction between estoppel and res judicata as follows:

> 30. Res judicata debars a court from exercising its jurisdiction to determine the lis if it has attained finality between the parties whereas the doctrine of issue estoppel is invoked against the party, if such an issue is decided against him, he would be estopped from raising the same in the latter proceeding. The doctrine of res judicata creates a different kind of estoppel viz. Estoppel by Accord.[938]

In a case under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, an award was passed under section 140 of the Act in favour of the person injured in the accident. No appeal was preferred either by the owner or the insurer of the said vehicle. At a later stage, the fact of the said vehicle being involved in the accident was challenged in the proceeding under section 166 of the Act. It was held by a division bench of the Calcutta High Court that the question of the said vehicle being involved in the accident cannot be reopened again at the instance of the owner or the insurer. The doctrine of estoppel and acquiescence can be invoked against the insurer and the owner.[939]

The division bench in the above case has quoted a passage from the decision of the Supreme Court in Satyadhyan Ghoshal v Deorajin Debi,[940] wherein Das Gupta J, speaking for the three-judge bench, stated as follows:

> The principle of res judicata is based on the need of giving a finality to judicial decisions. What it says is that once a res is judicata, it shall not be adjudged again. Primarily it applies as between past litigation and future litigation. When a matter—whether on a question of fact or on a question of law—has been decided between two parties in one suit or proceeding and the decision is final, either because no appeal was taken to a higher court or because the appeal was dismissed, or no appeal lies, neither party will be allowed in a future suit or proceeding between the same parties to canvass the matter again. This principle of res judicata is embodied in relation to suits in section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure; but even where section 11 does not apply, the principle of res judicata has been applied by courts for the purpose of achieving finality in litigation. The result of this is that the original courts as well as any higher court must in any future litigation proceed on the basis that the previous decision was correct.

[s 11.10] Res Judicata and Order II, Rule 2

Order II of the CPC deals with the frame of the suit and each plaintiff is supposed to include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action.[941]

Order II, rule 2 of the CPC confers certain privileges in favour of the plaintiff who brings the suit, but simultaneously it imposes an embargo or restriction in claiming/bringing another suit for any of the reliefs which he could have prayed in the earlier suit. Order II, rule 2 of the

---

937. State of Uttar Pradesh v Nawab Hussain, AIR 1977 SC 1680, para 23 : (1977) 2 SCC 806.
938. Bhanu Kumar Jain v Archana Kumar, AIR 2005 SC 626 : (2005) 1 SCC 787.
939. Prakash Chandra Biswas v New India Assurance Co Ltd, AIR 2010 Cal 19 : 2011 ACJ 622.
940. Satyadhyan Ghoshal v Deorajin Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941 : (1960) 3 SCR 590, at p 594.
941. Gujarat Electricity Board v Saurashtra Chemicals, AIR 2004 Guj 83 (DB).

CPC is divided into three sub-rules and the scheme is based on the principle that defendant may not be and should not be vexed twice for one of the same causes of action. It is true that this rule is not really a matter of substance, but it simply deprives the plaintiff claiming his remedy and does not vest any right in favour of the defendant. Therefore, in absence of permission, defendant can positively make a grievance that he has been wrongly vexed again for the same alleged wrong. Again the phraseology used in O II, rule 2(3) of the CPC creates implied bar.[942]

When the earlier suit filed by the plaintiff company was not decided on merits, requirement of section 11 of the CPC cannot be said to have been satisfied and therefore, the second suit could not have been dismissed by treating it as barred by the principles of res judicata.[943]

The ground of res judicata under section 11 is also not applicable when the judgment and order of dismissal in the application under O I, rule 10 of the CPC did not decide the issue involved in the suit. Moreover, such proceeding was not a "suit" within the meaning of section 11 of the CPC. Hence, the subsequent suit is maintainable.[944]

The second writ petition from the same cause of action is not maintainable due to bar of res judicata and the principle incorporated in O II, rule 2 is also applicable to writ proceedings.[945] The principles of constructive res judicata are also a part of the doctrine of res judicata. The doctrine of res judicata applies to what is actually adjudicated or determined in a previous case, and on the other hand, constructive res judicata applies to every other matter which the parties might and ought to have litigated or which was incidental to or essentially connected with the subject matter of the previous litigation. Those principles are applicable to writ proceedings as well.[946]

In an execution case, the construction on the suit property made in violation of the decree was ordered to be removed by the executing court. The objection raised by the judgment debtor was rejected. Thereafter, the judgment debtor filed a second objection petition raising new grounds not taken in the earlier petition. The Rajasthan High Court held that the second objection petition, although on grounds not taken in the earlier objection petition, would be barred by res judicata as also the principles contained in O II, rule 2 of CPC.[947]

In Sucha Singh Sodhi v Baldev Raj Walia,[948] two interesting questions with regard to application of O II, rule 2(2), CPC arose for the consideration of the Supreme Court —

(i) Whether a bar contained in O II, rule 2(2) applies to the second suit for "specific performance" filed after withdrawing the first suit filed for "permanent injunction"?

(ii) Whether the plaintiff was entitled to file a second suit for "specific performance" in the absence of permission or liberty granted to him by the trial court at the time of withdrawing the first suit for permanent injunction?

In the instant case, the plaintiff-appellant had filed a first suit for permanent injunction. In the plaint, he had averred that the defendant-respondent had agreed to sell suit property to him and accordingly an agreement to sell had been entered into between them. On payment

---

942. Gujarat Electricity Board v Saurashtra Chemicals, AIR 2004 Guj 83 (DB).
943. Gujarat Electricity Board v Saurashtra Chemicals, AIR 2004 Guj 83 (DB).
944. Anadi Mohan Rashit v Nalin Sarker Street UP School, AIR 2002 Cal 22 (DB).
945. Awadhesh Narain Pandey v District Inspector of Schools, Varanasi, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1266 (All) : (2006) AIHC 1825.
946. Shiv Chander More v Lt. Governor, 2014 AIR SC 2669 : (2014) 11 SCC 744 : 2014 (4) SCR 417 : JT 2014 (4) 143.
947. Renu v Baboolal, 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 301 : 2007 (3) Raj LW 2508.
948. Sucha Singh Sodhi v Baldev Raj Walia, AIR 2018 SC 2241 : (2018) 6 SCC 733 : 2018 (4) SCJ 413.

of advance, the appellant was placed in possession of the property and later the respondent had threatened to dispossess him from the same. It is on this cause of action the suit was filed for permanent injunction. In the said suit, the respondent had filed his written statement stating, inter alia, that he had already transferred the suit property to another person and, therefore, the proper remedy for the plaintiff would be to file suit for specific performance and not seeking permanent injunction. After this, the plaintiff sought to withdraw the suit for the purpose of initiating the proceedings before the "competent forum for appropriate relief". The respondent did not object for the withdrawal. The trial court, after recording the statement of both the parties, allowed plaintiff to withdraw the suit. The order allowing the withdrawal of the suit did not, however, explicitly state that the plaintiff has the liberty to file a subsequent suit for appropriate relief.

When the second suit for specific performance was filed, the defendants, apart from filing a written statement, also filed an application under O VII, rule 11 for rejection of the plaint on the ground that the suit is hit by the provisions of O II, rule 2(2), CPC. According to them, "non-claiming of relief of specific performance of the agreement in the previously instituted suit though available to the plaintiff for being claimed on the cause of action pleaded in the previous suit would attract the bar contained in O II Rule 2..." The trial court allowed the said application and dismissed the suit. The said decision was upheld by the high court.

While dealing with the appeal against the aforesaid decisions, the Supreme Court answered the first question in the negative and the second in the affirmative.

As regards the first question, it held that the sine qua non for invoking O II, rule 2(2) against the plaintiff by the defendant is that the relief which the plaintiff has claimed in the second suit was also available to the plaintiff for being claimed in the previous suit on the causes of action pleaded in the previous suit against the defendant and yet not claimed by the plaintiff.

Having noted the facts of the case, the court held that the plaintiff could not have claimed a relief of specific performance of agreement in the earlier suit on the basis of the cause of action pleaded therein. It further observed that when both the reliefs/claims, namely, (1) permanent injunction and (2) specific performance of agreement are not identical, when the causes of action to sue are separate, when the factual ingredients necessary to constitute the respective causes of action for both the reliefs/claims are different and lastly, when both the reliefs/claims are governed by separate articles of the Limitation Act, 1963, then, it is not possible to claim both the reliefs together on one cause of action.

As regards the second question, even though the court thought that the same does not survive for consideration as a result of answering the first question in the negative, it opined, relying on Gurinderpal,[949] that both the statement of the plaintiff and order of the court granting permission to withdraw the suit are to be read together to understand whether the court has granted liberty to file a subsequent suit or not. In the instant case, reading them together would satisfy the requirement of O XXIII, rule 1(3) and, thus, the plaintiff was entitled to file the second suit.

[s 11.11] Res Judicata and lis Pendens

Res judicata means a matter adjudicated upon, or a matter on which judgment has been pronounced. The rule of res judicata has been put on two grounds, one, the hardship to the

---

949. Gurinderpal v Jagmittar Singh, (2004) 11 SCC 219 : 2005 (3) Scale 326.

individual that he should not be vexed twice for the same cause, and the other, public policy, that it is in the interest of the state that there should be an end to litigation.[950]

Lis pendens is an action pending and the doctrine of lis pendens is that an alienee pendente lite is bound by the result of the litigation.[951]

It is also settled law that in the absence of fraud or collusion, the doctrine of lis pendens applies to a suit which is decided ex parte or by compromise. If the compromise has not been fairly and honestly obtained, the suit which ended in a compromise will not operate as lis pendens. This is the doctrine of lis pendens.[952]

To determine whether in the event of a conflict arising between the rule of res judicata and the doctrine of lis pendens either the one or the other should prevail. The rule of res judicata rests on the necessity of having a finality in litigation, and so does the doctrine of lis pendens. Both have the same end in view, the former that, as between the same parties, or their representatives-in-interest litigating under the same title, once the decision is reached in a suit, the same question shall not be canvassed in any other suit, and the latter that whatever the party may choose to do by way of transfers pendente lite, the transferee pendente lite shall be bound by the result of the litigation. There is, however, this difference between the two that the rule of res judicata is concerned with more actions than one, whereas the doctrine of lis pendens is concerned with the very same suit during the pendency of which there is an alienation of the right, title and interest of one of the parties thereto. In the case of res judicata, the same cause of action may sustain various actions simultaneously, but once the cause of action is merged in the judgment pronounced in a previously decided suit, there is no cause of action left to sustain the second suit. In the case of lis pendens, however, the cause of action continues as it was, sustaining the suit which has been filed for the adjudication of the rights of the various parties thereto and the doctrine applies during the pendency of that suit sustained on that cause of action.

Whatever be the transfers, pendente lite, they do not affect the result of the litigation qua the parties to the suit, and the transferee pendente lite is bound by the result of that litigation, irrespective of whatever has happened between his transferor and himself. Once, however, even in the case where the doctrine of lis pendens applies, a judgment is pronounced and the cause of action is merged in the judgment. That judgment is the final pronouncement which binds not only the parties to the suit but also the transferees, pendente lite from them. The conveyance is treated as if it never had any existence. The effect of it is not to annul the conveyance but only to render it subservient to the rights of the parties in the litigation. Whether this decision is reached in the same suit or in a different one and whether the cause of action which sustained the suit in which the doctrine of lis pendens applies was merged in the judgment pronounced in the very same suit or in another one, the position would be that that decision would determine the rights of the parties and would be binding on them as well as the transferees pendente lite from them. The transferee pendente lite would be legitimately treated as the representative-in-interest of the parties to the suit and the judgment which has been pronounced, whether in the same suit or in another, would be determinative of the rights of the parties. There would be then no lis or action which would survive. The lis or action can only be sustained by a cause of action. If the cause of action was merged in a judgment duly pronounced by a competent court, there would be no more occasion for any lis to continue

---

950. Digambarrao Hanmantrao Deshpande v Rangrao Raghunathrao Desai, AIR 1949 Bom 367 (DB).
951. Digambarrao Hanmantrao Deshpande v Rangrao Raghunathrao Desai, AIR 1949 Bom 367 (DB).
952. Digambarrao Hanmantrao Deshpande v Rangrao Raghunathrao Desai, AIR 1949 Bom 367 (DB).

pending. If a judgment duly pronounced on that particular cause of action was to merge the cause of action in itself, that judgment would govern the rights of the parties, whether it is pronounced in the same suit in which the doctrine of lis pendens applies or in any other. If it is in the same suit, there would be no question of the applicability of the rule of res judicata. The rule of res judicata would come into operation only if it was pronounced in another suit which came to be decided earlier than the one in which the doctrine applied. But once that judgment was pronounced, it would have the effect of finally determining the rights of the parties and the cause of action which would sustain the suit in which the doctrine of lis pendens applied would be merged in the judgment duly pronounced in what may be described as the previously decided suit. Therefore, the rule of res judicata prevails over the doctrine of lis pendens and the conclusion is that once a judgment is duly pronounced by a competent court in regard to the subject matter of the suit in which the doctrine of lis pendens applies, that decision is res judicata and binds not only the parties thereto but also the transferees pendente lite from them.[953]

The final decree passed before the institution of the suit cannot be held to be ineffective on account of the institution of the subsequent suit. As a matter of fact, the principle of section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, applicable to transfers of property is not applicable to suits and decrees passed in such suits. The plaintiff should have taken steps to get the proceedings stayed and if he failed to do that and allowed a decree to be passed against him, then the mortgage suit became "a former suit" within the meaning of section 11 of the CPC, by virtue of Explanation I added thereto.[954]

The doctrine of lis pendens cannot prevail over the rule of res judicata, in case the latter rule applies.[955]

The rule of res judicata prevails over the doctrine of lis pendens and once a judgment is duly pronounced by a competent court in regard to the subject-matter of the suit in which the doctrine of lis pendens applies, that decision is res judicata and binds not only the parties thereto but also the transferees pendente lite from them.[956]

[s 11.12] Cause of Action Estoppel; Issue Estoppel and Res Judicata

The issue has been discussed in Thoday v Thoday as follows . . .

> "cause of action estoppel" is that which prevents a party to an action from asserting or denying, as against the other party, the existence of a particular cause of action, the non-existence or existence of which has been determined by a court of competent jurisdiction in previous litigation between the same parties. If the cause of action was determined to exist, that is, judgment was given on it, it is said to be merged in the judgment... If it was determined not to exist, the unsuccessful plaintiff can no longer assert that it does; he is estopped per rem judicatam.[957]

The above dicta was followed in Barber's case.[958] A cause of action estoppel arises where in two different proceedings identical issues are raised, in which event, the latter proceedings between the same parties shall be dealt with similarly as was done in the previous proceedings.

---

953. Digambarrao Hanmantrao Deshpande v Rangrao Raghunathrao Desai, AIR 1949 Bom 367 (DB).
954. Mustafai Begam v Raghuraj Singh, AIR 1937 All 108 (DB).
955. Official Assignee v Jagabandhu Mullick, AIR 1934 Cal 552 (DB).
956. Digambarrao Hanmantrao Deshpande v Rangrao Raghunathrao Desai, AIR 1949 Bom 367 (DB).
957. Thoday v Thoday, (1964) 1 All ER 341.
958. Barber v Staffordshire Country Council, (1996) 2 All ER 748.

In such an event, the bar is absolute in relation to all points decided save and except allegation of fraud and collusion.

In Arnold v National Westminster Bank Plc,[959] the House of Lords noticed the distinction between cause of action estoppel and issue estoppel. Cause of action estoppel arises where the cause of action in the later proceedings is identical to that in the earlier proceedings, the latter having been between the same parties or their privies and having involved the same subject-matter. In such a case, the bar is absolute in relation to all points decided unless fraud or collusion is alleged, such as to justify setting aside the earlier judgment. The discovery of new factual matter which could not have been found out by reasonable diligence for use in the earlier proceedings does not, according to the Law of England, prevent the latter from being reopened. Issue estoppel may arise where a particular issue forming a necessary ingredient in a cause of action has been litigated and decided and in subsequent proceedings between the same parties involving a different cause of action to which the same issue is relevant, one of the parties seeks to reopen that issue. Here also bar is complete to litigation but its operation can be thwarted under certain circumstances.

There is a distinction between "issue estoppel" and "res judicata". Res judicata debars a court from exercising its jurisdiction to determine the lis if it has attained finality between the parties whereas the doctrine of issue estoppel is invoked against the party. If such an issue is decided against him, he would be estopped from raising the same in the latter proceeding. The doctrine of res judicata creates a different kind of estoppel, namely estoppel by accord.[960]

[s 11.13] Mixed Question of Facts and Law

It is true that in determining the application of the rule of res judicata, the court is not concerned with the correctness or otherwise of the earlier judgment. The matter in issue, if it is one purely of fact, decided in the earlier proceeding by a competent court must in a subsequent litigation between the same parties be regarded as finally decided and cannot be reopened. A mixed question of law and fact determined in the earlier proceeding between the same parties may not, for the same reason, be questioned in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties. But, where the decision is on a question of law, that is, the interpretation of a statute, it will be res judicata in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties where the cause of action is the same.[961]

It is well-known that res judicata is a mixed question of fact and law. It has to be specifically pleaded and the party relying on the principle of res judicata should place before the court all material particulars which would be sufficient to give a finding whether the particular case is barred by the principle of res judicata.[962]

Rather, a decision on a question involving facts as well as the application of law to the facts, would be res judicata. One cannot dissociate the decision on law from the decision on facts.[963]

---

959. Arnold v National Westminster Bank Plc, (1991) 3 All ER 41.
960. Bhanu Kumar Jain v Archana Kumar, AIR 2005 SC 626 : AIR 2005 SCW 270 : (2005) 1 SCC 787 : JT 2005 (1) 220.
961. Mathura Prasad Bajoo Jaiswal v Dossibai NB Jeejeebhoy, AIR 1971 SC 2355 : (1970) 1 SCC 613 : 1970 SCR (3) 830; see also Secunderabad Cantonment Board v Mohammed Mohiuddin, AIR 2004 SC 784 : AIR 2003 SCW 6973 : (2003) 12 SCC 315.
962. Krishna Chand Nayak v Neela Kanthi Mohanti, AIR 1996 Ori 1; see also Madhukar D Shende v Tarabi Aba Shedage, AIR 2002 SC 637 : (2002) 2 SCC 85.
963. Bharathi Amma v Kumaran Peethambaran, AIR 1990 Ker 88.

Contentions of res judicata based on mixed question of law and facts cannot be entertained by the Supreme Court for the first time at the stage of special leave petition.[964]

Questions of fact or even mixed questions of law and fact which have attained finality in absence of appeal, cannot be referred to a larger bench because of the application of the doctrine of res judicata. A reference to a larger bench is made when a bench finds that there is already a precedent of a co-ordinate bench of the same court on a particular point of law and the referring bench is unable to concur with that earlier view on the question of law taken by the co-ordinate bench. In other words, the reference must be on a pure question of law already decided by a co-ordinate bench which is a precedent on that point of law. There is no scope of referring a question of fact or even a mixed question of law and fact already decided by a co-ordinate bench in the earlier judicial proceedings between the same parties or parties claiming through them which has attained finality. Thus, a full bench of the Calcutta High Court held that a referring bench even if it did not agree with the findings given by the first division bench on a question of fact or a mixed question of law and fact was bound to accept such findings as the doctrine of res judicata stood in the way of reopening the said issue. The doctrine of res judicata cannot be surmounted by making reference to a larger bench.[965]

[s 11.14] Two Stages in the Same Litigation

Res judicata applies also between two stages in the same litigation. Where a court, (whether a trial court or a higher court) has, at an earlier stage, decided the matter in one way, the parties cannot re-agitate the matter at a subsequent stage of the same proceeding.[966]

The principle of res judicata applies as between two stages in the same litigation, so that if an issue has been decided at an earlier stage against a party, it cannot be allowed to be reagitated by him at a subsequent stage in the same suit or proceeding. Thus, where the question of whether section 15 of the Kerala Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1965 (2 of 1965) bars the eviction petition, was decided against the tenants by the appellate authority at the earlier stage of suit and it was allowed to become final, it is not open to the tenants to reagitate the same at the subsequent stage of the suit.[967]

The principle of res judicata is based on the need of giving a finality to judicial decisions. The principle which prevents the same case being litigated twice is of general application and is not limited by the specific words of section 11 of the CPC in this respect. Res judicata applies also as between two stages in the same litigation to the extent that a court, whether

---

964. Ram Harakh v Hamid Ahmed Khan, (1987) 7 SCC 484.
965. General Manager (PA), Allahabad Bank v Shib Sankar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 Cal 105 (FB).
966. Puranmal Bajoria v Nagarmal, AIR 1980 Pat 143.
967. CV Rajendran v NM Muhammed Kunhi, AIR 2003 SC 649 : (2002) 7 SCC 447 : 2002 (6) Scale 485 : JT 2002 (7) 174; see also Aparnath Mukherjee v Kanailal, AIR 1950 Cal 300; Ramchandra v Ramchandra, AIR 1922 PC 80 : (1922) ILR 45 Mad 320 : 49 IA 129, p 138; Maharajadhiraj Sir Rameshwar Singh v Hitendra Singh, (1925) 29 Cal WN 413 (PC), Bank of Baroda v Fischo, AIR 1975 Cal 225 : (1974) 78 Cal WN 535; Suryanarayanrao v Rajeshwari, AIR 1966 AP 269; Abdul Ghani v Mahant Ram Saran, AIR 1976 J&K 72. Rajalakshmi v Banamali, AIR 1953 SC 33 : (1953) SCR 154; Burn & Co v Employees, AIR 1957 SC 38 : (1956) SCR 781 : (1957) SCJ 28 : (1957) SCA 1175; MSM Sarma v Krishna Sinha, AIR 1960 SC 1186 : (1961) 1 SCR 96 : (1961) 2 SCJ 73 : (1961) 2 SCA 582; Daryao v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1961 SC 1457 : (1962) 1 SCR 574 : (1962) 1 SCJ 702; Staya Dhyan v Deo Ranjni Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941 : (1960) 3 SCR 590 : (1961) 1 SCA 10; Abdul Shukur v Kotwaleshwar, AIR 1958 All 54; Corp of Calcutta v Sirajuddin & Co, AIR 1957 Cal 399 : (1957) 61 Cal WN 1009; Benode Behari v State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 Cal 400; Braj Bhushan v Nigendra Singh, AIR 1977 Pat 129; YB Patil v YL Patil, AIR 1977 SC 392 : (1977) 1 SCR 320; Prabhu Halwai v Fulchand, AIR 1969 Pat 16.

the trial court or a higher court, having at an earlier stage decided a matter in one way, will not allow the parties to re-agitate the matter again at a subsequent stage of the same proceedings."[968]

In a proceeding for execution of a decree, warrant of attachment was issued by the executing court and thereafter the judgment-debtor raised objection. It was held by the Supreme Court that failure on the part of the judgment-debtor to raise the objection earlier thereby allowing the preliminary stage to come to an end, disentitles him to raise objection at a subsequent stage after issuance of warrant of attachment as it would be barred by the principle of constructive res judicata."[969] Dr. Arijit Pasayat J, speaking for the bench in the above case, observed as follows to explain the law:

> There is no dispute and it has not been agitated that the order for proceeding by the judgment under O XXI, rule 22 amounts to a decree under Section 47 of CPC and it is appealable as a decree i.e. to say it is not an appeal against the interim order but an appeal against the decree which is provided against the final order. It means that at the different stages of the execution orders passed by the executing court have attained finality unless they are set aside by way of appeal before the higher forum. Otherwise they bind the parties at the subsequent stage of the execution proceedings so that the smooth progress of execution is not jeopardised and the stage which reached the finality by dint of various orders of the O XXI, operates as res judicata for the subsequent stage of the proceedings. Since the order passed at different stage itself operates as a decree and is appealable as such, the same cannot be challenged in appeal against subsequent orders also, because appeal against an order passed under O XXI, rule 22 does not amount to appeal against order at initial stage, but amounts to a decree finally determining the question. That is why no appeal against orders made under O XXI has been provided under O 43."[970]

It has been held by the Kerala High Court that the contention originally raised and overruled by the court at the time of passing of preliminary decree for partition, cannot be agitated again at the time of passing of final decree.[971]

A suit for specific performance of agreement to sell was filed. In that suit, an application for being impleaded as a party was filed by another person claiming an earlier agreement to sell from the same land-owner. The said application for being impleaded was dismissed on objection from the plaintiff who was said to be subsequent purchaser. However, the court granted him liberty to file a separate suit. The separate suit filed by the earlier purchaser was decreed and was got executed and a sale deed in favour of the earlier purchaser was executed. Now the subsequent purchaser filed an application for impleading the earlier purchaser as a necessary party in the same suit filed by him. It was held by the Punjab and Haryana High Court that the second application for being impleaded was barred by res judicata.[972]

Where in an execution proceedings to execute the order passed by the consumer forum, objections to execution were rejected and no appeal was filed against the order of rejection, it was held by a division bench of the Karnataka High Court that reagitation of identical claim at a subsequent stage of the same proceedings would be barred by res judicata.[973]

---

968. Uttar Pradesh State Road Transport Corp v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2005 SC 446 : AIR 2004 SCW 7025 : (2005) 1 SCC 444.
969. Barkat Ali v Badri Narain (dead) by LRs, AIR 2008 SC 1272 : (2008) 4 SCC 615.
970. Barkat Ali v Badri Narain (dead) by LRs, AIR 2008 SC 1272, at p 1274, para 7 : (2008) 4 SCC 615.
971. Sarojini Prabhu v Pappikutty Adiesiar, AIR 2007 Ker 44.
972. Bahadur Singh v Avtar Singh, 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 417 : 2007 (3) Rec Civ R 44.
973. Gokulram Farms and Estates Pvt Ltd v Muneer Pasha, AIR 2008 (NOC) 2239 : 2008 AIHC 3044 (Kant) (DB).

[s 11.15] Suits

Section 11 applies in terms to cases where the matter in issue in a subsequent "suit" was in issue in a former "suit". A "suit" is a proceeding which is commenced by a plaint (section 26). The section is made applicable to execution proceedings by adding to the section the new Explanation VII which provides inter alia that the provisions of the section shall apply to proceedings for execution of decrees and that references in the section to any suit shall be construed as references to proceedings for execution of decrees.

Some cases extending the doctrine beyond the limits of the Code have given a more extensive meaning to the word "suit." Thus, when probate was refused after a contentious proceeding, the judgment was held to operate as res judicata, for section 295 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, requires the proceeding to take the form as far as possible of a suit.[974] Similarly, proceedings under section 54 of the Companies Act, 1956, have been treated as a suit for the purposes of this section.[975] On the other hand, although an application to file a private award was required by Eleventh Schedule, para 20, to be numbered and registered as a suit, refusal to file a private award has been held not to operate as res judicata.[976] In a case decided under section 10 of the Code it was said the term "suit" is a very comprehensive one. It is understood to apply to any proceeding in a Court of Justice by which an individual pursues that remedy in a court of Justice which the law affords him, that the modes of proceedings may be various, but that if a right is litigated between parties in a Court of Justice the proceeding by which the decision of the Court is sought is a suit.[977]

By non-payment of court-fee on the counter-claim in appeal, the appellate court is not in a position to consider the question of counter-claim. Thus, it has to be held that the counter-claim as rejected by the lower court has become final. That portion of the discharge of the suit amount as raising the counter-claim cannot be considered by the appellate court on the principle of res judicata, however, at the same time the question of discharge of decree amount can be considered by the appellate court.[978] The section is not exhaustive, and the doctrine of res judicata has been extended to adjudications in proceedings other than suits.[979] In certain matters, the doctrine of suit has been given an extended meaning which goes beyond the limits of the Code. Thus, when probate was refused after a contentious proceeding, the judgment was held to operate as res judicata for, section 295 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, requires the proceedings to take the form as far as possible of a suit.[980] Similarly, proceedings under section 54 of the Companies Act, 1956, have been treated as a suit for the purposes of this section.[981] On the other hand, although an application to file a private award was required by the Second Schedule, para 20, to be numbered and registered as a suit, refusal to file a private award has been held not to operate as res judicata.[982]

---

974. Kalianchand v Sitabai, (1914) 38 Bom 309; Venkataratnam v Yanamandara, AIR 1924 Mad 578 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 383.
975. Jayanthi Bai v Popular Bank Ltd, AIR 1966 Ker 296 : (1966) 2 Ker 187.
976. Rajmal v Maruti, AIR 1921 Bom 389 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 329; Abdul Aziz v Chandu, AIR 1925 Bom 418 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 652. But see Guru Charan v Uma Charan (1921) Cal WN 940.
977. Arikapudi Balakotayya v Yadlapalli Nagayya, AIR 1946 Mad 509 : (1946) Mad 566; Venkata Chandrappa Nayanivaru v Venkatarama Reddi, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 256, at p 257.
978. Nherapoyil P. Moiden v K. Narayanan Nair, AIR 1997 Ker 318.
979. See note "Section Not Exhaustive", below.
980. Kalianchand v Sitabai, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 309; Venkataratnam v Yanamandara, AIR 1924 Mad 578 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 383.
981. Jayanthi Bai v Popular Bank Ltd, AIR 1966 Ker 296 : (1966) ILR 2 Ker 187.
982. Rajmal v Maruti, AIR 1921 Bom 389 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 329; Abdul Aziz v Chandu, AIR 1925 Bom 418 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 652. See also Guru Charan v Uma Charan, (1921) 25 Cal WN 940.

It has been held that an insolvency proceeding is not a suit for the purpose of this section.[983] The proceedings before the district judge, under the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, 1920, are of a summary nature, and do not fall within the definition of a suit and his decision holding that the property was not a religious endowment, cannot operate as res judicata; so also, a proceeding under section 26J of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885,[984] but not a proceeding under section 84(1) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1927 (2 of 1927), as it is not a summary one and the decision of the district judge under section 84(2), operates as res judicata.[985] An assistant collector or commissioner acting under section 12 of the United Provinces Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act, 1949, is not a court and his decisions are not res judicata in proceedings, before regular courts.[986] In deciding whether a dispute should be referred to a tribunal under section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, the government is exercising executive power and the principle of res judicata has no application to its decisions which can be reviewed or altered,[987] but a proceeding under section 36 of the Bengal Money-Lenders Act, 1940, to reopen a personal decree is a suit and a second suit for the same relief will be barred.[988]

[s 11.16] Court

The expression "court" is neither defined in CPC nor defined in General Clauses Act, 1897 but section 2(e) of the Indian Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 defines "court" as follows:

> "Court" means the Principal civil court of original jurisdiction in a district, and includes the High Court in exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, having jurisdiction to decide the questions forming the subject-matter of the arbitration if the same had been the subject matter of a suit, but does not include any civil court of a grade inferior to such Principal civil court or any Court of Small Causes.

The principle of res judicata operates on the court. It is the courts which are prohibited from trying the issue which was directly and substantially in issue in the earlier proceedings between the same parties, provided the court trying the subsequent proceeding is satisfied that the earlier court was competent to dispose of the earlier proceedings and that the matter had been heard and finally decided by such court.[989]

The Supreme Court has held that in order to operate as res judicata, a judicial finding must be such that it disposes of a matter that is directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, and that the said issue must have been heard and finally decided by the court trying such suit. It further held that a matter which is collaterally or incidentally in issue for the purpose of deciding a matter which is directly in issue in the case cannot be made the basis for a plea of res judicata. Therefore, a question regarding title in a small cause suit, may be regarded as incidental only to the substantial issue in the suit, and therefore, when a finding as regards the

---

983. Beni Madhab v Abdul Razak, AIR 1933 Cal 673 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 390.
984. Amirthalinga v Chandrasekhara, AIR 1945 Mad 242 : (1946) ILR Mad 36; Srish v Kala Chand, AIR 1942 Cal 445 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 510; Prem Nath v Her Ram, AIR 1934 Lah 771.
985. Arikapudi Balakotayya v Yadlapali Balakotayya, AIR 1946 Mad 509 : (1946) ILR Mad 566; Sankaran Nambudri v Parameswaran Nambudri, AIR 1959 Ker 156 : (1958) ILR Ker 1184; Arikapudi Balakotayya v Yadlapali Nagayya, AIR 1946 Mad 506 : (1946) ILR Mad 566.
986. Budhu Singh v Board of Revenue, AIR 1957 All 719.
987. LH Sugar Factories and Oil Mills v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1962 All 70.
988. Haridas Mondal v Ananthanath Mitra, AIR 1961 SC 1419.
989. Pondicherry Khadi & Village Industries Board v P Kulothangan, AIR 2003 SC 4701 : 2003 AIR SCW 5725 : (2004) 1 SCC 68 : 2003 (9) Scale 115; see also Executive Engineer, ZP Engg Division v Digambara Rao, AIR 2004 SC 4839 : AIR 2004 SCW 5546 : (2004) 8 SCC 262.

title to immovable property is rendered by a small causes court, res judicata cannot be pleaded as a bar in the subsequent regular suit, for the determination or enforcement of any right or interest in the immovable property.[990]

[s 11.17] Explanation to a Section

It is settled law that explanation to a section is not a substantive provision by itself. It is entitled to explain the meaning of the words contained in the section or to clarify certain ambiguities or clear them up. It becomes a part and parcel of the enactment. Its meaning must depend upon its terms. Sometimes, it would be added to include something within it, or to exclude from the ambit of the main provision, or condition on some words occurring in it. Therefore, the explanation, normally, should be so read as to harmonise with and to clear up any ambiguity in the same section.[991]

[s 11.18] Interlocutory Orders

It is needless to point out that interlocutory orders are of various kinds, some like orders of stay, injunction or receiver are designed to preserve the status quo pending the litigation and to ensure that parties might not be prejudiced by normal delay which the proceeding before the court usually take. They do not, in that sense, decide in any manner the merits of the controversy in issue in the suit and do not, of course, put an end to it even in part. Such orders are certainly capable of being altered or varied by subsequent applications for the same relief, though normally only on proof of new facts or new situations which subsequently emerge. As they do not impinge upon the legal rights of parties to the litigation, the principle of res judicata does not apply to the findings on which these orders are based, though if applications were made for relief on the same basis after the same has once been disposed of, the court would be justified in rejecting the same as an abuse of process of court. There are other orders which are also interlocutory, but would fall into a different category. The difference from the ones just now referred to lies in the fact that they are not directed to maintaining the status quo, or to preserve the property pending the final adjudication but are designed to ensure the just, smooth, orderly and expeditious disposal of the suit. They are interlocutory in the sense that they do not decide any matter in issue arising in the suit nor put an end to the litigation.[992]

Placing reliance on the above decision of the Supreme Court, the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that where application for grant of temporary injunction was rejected on ground of delay and not on merit, the subsequent application for injunction on account of subsequent developments would not be barred by the principles of res judicata.[993] Where an earlier application filed in a suit to recognise a person as duly constituted Attorney on the basis of a power of Attorney, was returned without passing any order, subsequent application for the same cause is not hit by res judicata as no order was passed on the earlier application.[994]

The case of an application under O IX, rule 7 would be an illustration of this type. If an application made under the provisions of that rule is dismissed and an appeal were filed against

---

990. Ramji Gupta v Gopi Krishan Agarwal, AIR 2013 SC 3099 : (2013) 9 SCC 438 : 2013 (5) SCR 398 : JT 2013 (10) SC 443.
991. Sadanand Keot v Juna Ram Saikia, AIR 1998 Guj 109.
992. Arjun Singh v Mohindra Kumar, AIR 1964 SC 993. See also Tara Devi v District Judge, Basti, AIR 2003 All 64.
993. Kashi Bai v Sundarlal Vaidh, AIR 2007 MP 112 (Gwalior bench).
994. RBK Rajeswari Nachiar v NNSA Mohammed Kasim, AIR 2007 Mad 155 : 2007 (53) All Ind Cas 504 (Madurai bench).

the decree in the suit in which such application were made, there can be no doubt that the propriety of the order rejecting the re-opening of the proceeding and the refusal to relegate the party to an earlier stage might be canvassed in the appeal and dealt with by the appellate court. In that sense, the refusal of the court to permit the defendant to "set the clock back" does not attain finality. However, it needs to be seen whether the same court is finally bound by that order at later stages, so as to preclude its being reconsidered. Even if the rule of res judicata does not apply, it would not follow that on every subsequent day on which the suit stands adjourned for further hearing, the petition could be repeated and fresh orders sought on the basis of identical facts. The principle that repeated applications based on the same facts and seeking the same reliefs might be disallowed by the court does not however necessarily rest on the principle of res judicata. Thus, if an application for the adjournment of a suit is rejected, a subsequent application for the same purpose, even if based on the same facts, is not barred on the application of any rule of res judicata, but would be rejected for same grounds on which the original application was refused. The principle underlying the distinction between the rule of res judicata and a rejection on the ground that no new facts have been adduced to justify a different order is vital. If the principle of res judicata is applicable to the decision on a particular issue of fact, even if fresh facts were placed before the court, the bar would continue to operate and preclude a fresh investigation of the issues, whereas in the other case, on proof of fresh facts the court would be competent, i.e., would be bound to take those into account and make an order conformably to the facts freshly brought before the court.[995]

A decision or direction in an interlocutory proceeding of the type provided for by O IX, rule 7 is not of the kind which can operate as res judicata so as to bar the hearing on the merits of an application under O IX, rule 13.[996] Where the earlier application of the defendant under O IX, rule 7 of the CPC was dismissed, being filed after next date of hearing, but subsequently the application by plaintiff for amendment of plaint was allowed, thereafter fresh application under O IX, rule 7 of the CPC was filed to submit additional written statement, merely because amendment application of plaintiff was allowed, could not give any fresh right to the defendant to file another application under O IX, rule 7 of the CPC, so the second application under O IX, rule 7 of the CPC was found barred by principles of res judicata.[997] When the application for amendment of pleading under O VI, rule 17, CPC, for addition of plea of acquisition of title by adverse possession is dismissed, the second application for amendment of pleadings for the same purpose filed after two years is barred by the principle of res judicata.[998]

Interlocutory orders do not operate as res judicata.[999] That the decision given by the court at an earlier stage of a case binding at a later stage is well-settled though interlocutory judgments are open for an adjudication in an appeal against the final judgment. It however, does not mean that because at an earlier stage of litigation, the court has decided an interlocutory matter in one way and no appeal has been taken therefrom or no appeal did lie, a higher court cannot at a later stage of the same litigation consider the matter again.[1000]

The doctrine of res judicata cannot be applied to the application of the legal representative of the deceased appellant when the court felt that the earlier applications were not applicable.[1001]

---

995. RBK Rajeswari Nachiar v NNSA Mohammed Kasim, AIR 2007 Mad 155 : 2007 (53) All Ind Cas 504.
996. Arjun Singh v Mohindra Kumar, AIR 1964 SC 993. See also Tara Devi v District Judge, Basti, AIR 2003 All 64.
997. Prahlad Singh v Niyaz Ahmad, AIR 2001 All 78.
998. Prabhunath Dixit v Third Addl Distt Judge, Deoria, AIR 2001 All 355.
999. Mahadeo Mahto v Hiralal Venna, AIR 1991 Pat 235.
1000. Prahlad Singh v Sukhdev Singh, (1987) 1 SCC 727.
1001. Ganeshprasad Badrinarayan Lahoti v SJ Chourasiya, AIR 2004 SC 4158 : AIR 2004 SCW 4607.

A second application for issue of temporary injunction under O XXXIX rules 1–2, is not barred if the petitioner shows that such consideration is necessary in view of new facts and new situations and circumstances that have taken place subsequently. Interlocutory orders like the temporary injunctions are meant only to preserve the status quo during the pendency of the proceeding and not decide the controversy in issue on merits. Such orders are therefore, capable of being altered or varied, but only on proof of new facts or new situations, which may have emerged subsequently.[1002]

A party is not bound to appeal against an interlocutory order, such as an order appointing or not appointing a receiver. Even if the court has refused to appoint a receiver in partition suit it does not necessarily mean that later where there is a change in circumstances, the court cannot make such an order.[1003] It is not open to the court to have allowed or even entertained a fresh application for appointment of a receiver in the year 1992, when a similar application of petitioner was dismissed on contest and on merits by the same court in the year 1988, through the medium of a reasoned and speaking order. The maintainability of the second application for the same relief was patently barred on the principles of res judicata. The second application might have been maintainable, had the petitioner brought to the notice of the court certain facts which have occurred after the dismissal of the first application.[1004]

Revision from an interlocutory order was dismissed, not on the merits, but as not maintainable. Observations by revisional court upon the Stamp Act, 1899 were held not binding on the lower court. The revisional judge in the instant case, after analysing the case law, eventually held that no revision lay. Having categorically held that revision was not maintainable, any observation, cannot be held to be a "decision" which could bind the parties. No doubt, the judge held that the document in question could not be admitted in evidence unless stamp duty as well as penalty was paid. But those observations were of no avail as they had been made in the exercise of a jurisdiction which did not vest in the judge. Therefore, they cannot be said to be amounting to res judicata and would not bind the subordinate judge while again trying the case.[1005]

Where the applications under section 45 of the India Evidence Act, 1872, were filed by the petitioners for sending the promissory notes for opinion of the expert, an exercise, to be undertaken under section 45 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, vis-a-vis, a document, must be comprehensive and total. A party cannot be permitted to split the purposes in the context of examination through an expert under section 45 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. In other words, if several parts of the documents are to be subjected to expert opinion, the relief must be claimed in relation to all. Different applications cannot be permitted to be made in relation to each and every facet of the document. In a way, it can be said that such a course is prohibited under O II, CPC, in so far as it governs the course of applications also.[1006] Therefore, the second application to obtain opinion of the expert is barred by res judicata.

Though res judicata can apply even in the same proceedings at different stages, this does not mean that temporary injunction cannot be varied.[1007]

1002. Madan Lal Khutala v Badri Narayan, AIR 1988 Raj 61. See also Bhura v Addl Distt Judge, Jaipur, AIR 2004 Raj 67.
1003. Anirudha Adhikari v Amarendra Adhikari, AIR 1988 Ori 42.
1004. Nityanand Ghosh v Alo Rani Ghosh, AIR 2000 Cal 89.
1005. Pillai Narasimhaswamy Patrudu v Bank of Baroda, AIR 1982 AP 240.
1006. Vajjala Sree Rama Murthy v Tadepalli Narayane Murthy, AIR 2006 AP 315.
1007. Prahlad Singh v Col. Sukhdar Singh, AIR 1987 SC 1145 : (1987) 1 SCC 727; Satya Dhan Ghosal v Deoranjan Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941 : (1960) 3 SCR 590 reiterated.

Where the order of temporary injunction is passed, and the said order is confirmed in the revision, the finding of revisional court with reference to maintainability of suits in revision would not operate as res judicata in final proceedings.[1008]

The dismissal of the previous application for issue of ex parte temporary injunction, restraining the beneficiary from encashing of the bank guarantee proceeded on the ground of the same being premature. Even though the applicants did bring a revised petition in which they mentioned the existence of fraud, that petition was dismissed in limine and an adjudication was not made in respect of the perpetration of fraud or otherwise, obviously because, till then, the ground of the application being premature, still continued to exist, as no demand of encashment of bank guarantee was made by the beneficiary. It was held that the second application for injunction would not be barred by the previous judgment.[1009] It is, no doubt true, that the orders relating to custody of children are by their very nature not final, but are interlocutory in nature and subject to the modification at any future time upon proof of change and circumstances requiring the change of custody but, such change in custody must be proved to be in the paramount interest of the child. However, in respect of orders as to custody already passed in favour of the appellant, the doctrine of res judicata applies and the family court cannot re-examine the facts which were formerly adjudicated between the parties on the issue as to custody, or are deemed to have been adjudicated.[1010] An order directing parties to produce an affidavit in support of their cases was passed wherein it was specifically stated that the affidavit would be treated as evidence-in-chief and the appellant would be entitled to cross-examination of the deponents upon the affidavit, on payment of cost. The order was not challenged and was allowed to become final. Thereafter, the appellant challenged the order permitting the production of affidavits which was barred by the principles of res judicata.[1011] The hon'ble high court relying upon the matter of YB Patel v YL Patil,[1012] and Prahlad v Sukhdev,[1013] held that the principle of res judicata even applies to the different stages of the same proceedings. It was held that once the appellant had sought to introduce the document and had suffered an order which had since been challenged unsuccessfully in the present petition; it was not open to the appellant to fill up the same lacuna by filing a subsequent application and taking advantage thereof. If such a situation is permitted, in that event, the principle of public policy, on which section 11 is introduced in the Code or the principle of res judicata is conceived, would altogether stand frustrated.[1014]

[s 11.19] Procedural Orders

There is a distinction between a procedural statute and a substantive statute for applicability of the principle of res judicata.[1015]

The order passed on an application by plaintiff under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 seeking permission to deposit an amount due under mortgage does not operate as res judicata in the suit filed for a declaration that the transaction in question, although ostensibly expressed in the shape of a deed of sale, was in fact a transaction of usufructuary

---

1008. Thressiamma v Sebastian Mathew, AIR 2002 Ker 1.
1009. Banwarilal Radha Mohan v Punjab State Co-op Supply and Mktg. Federation Ltd, AIR 1983 Del 86.
1010. Dhanwati Joshi v Madhav Unde, (1998) 1 SCC 112.
1011. Punjab & Sindh Bank v Manjit Properties Pvt Ltd, AIR 1995 Del 355.
1012. YB Patel v YL Patil, AIR 1977 SC 392 : (1976) 4 SCC 66 : 1977 (1) SCR 320.
1013. Prahlad v Sukhdev, AIR 1987 SC 1145 : (1987) 1 SCC 727 : JT1987 (1) 541 : 1987 (1) UJ 406.
1014. Narayan Das v Second Addl District Judge, Muradabad, AIR 1999 All 74.
1015. Rajendra Kumar v Kalyan, AIR 2000 SCW 3537 : (2000) 8 SCC 99.

mortgage. The function of a court in terms of section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, is procedural in nature. The provision merely permits the mortgagor to deposit the mortgage amount. Even in a case where such deposit is made, in the event the mortgagee refused to accept the deposit, the mortgagor would have no option but to institute a suit for redemption relying on the mortgage money deposited. The respondent did not file a suit for redemption. It may be that the appellant-defendant objected to the said deposit but despite the fact the purported mortgage amount was allowed to be deposited, the same being not binding upon the mortgagee as he could not be compelled to accept the same, the question of applying the principles of res judicata would not arise.[1016]

The contention that the court of the munsif was a court exercising limited jurisdiction while entertaining an application under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and the decision of such a court of limited jurisdiction would also operate as res judicata is not tenable. The question of determination in the suit, being a pure question of law, the principle of res judicata shall have no application.[1017]

[s 11.20] Former Suit

The Explanation I of section 11 of the CPC merely deals with a situation where two suits are pending in court/courts of competent jurisdiction. In a situation when any of the suit is decided by the court before another suit, then decision given in that suit, irrespective of fact whether it was filed earlier or later, decision on issue bars re-trial of same issue.[1018]

The expression "former suit" means a previously decided suit, and the same interpretation applies to appeals. Explanation I confirms previous decisions to the same effect.[1019] It matters not that the previously decided suit was instituted subsequently[1020] or decided during the pendency of an appeal or revisional application in the subsequent suit.[1021]

[s 11.21] Suits Tried Together — One Judgment

There was a conflict of decisions as to whether if two suits involving common issues are disposed off in one judgment and an appeal is filed against the decree in one and not in the other, the matter decided in the latter suit becomes res judicata so that it cannot be reopened in the appeal. The Supreme Court was inclined to the view that the matter would not be res judicata.[1022] This decision lends support to the view which has been taken in the following cases[1023] which proceed on the basis that a decision given simultaneously cannot be said to be

---

1016. Bishwanath Prasad Singh v Rajendra Prasad, AIR 2006 SC 2965.
1017. Bishwanath Prasad Singh v Rajendra Prasad, AIR 2006 SC 2965.
1018. Hari Ram v Lichmaniya, AIR 2003 Raj 319.
1019. Balkishen v Kishan Lal, (1889) ILR 11 All 148; Ram Lal v Chab Nath, (1890) ILR 12 All 578; Beni Madho v Indar Sahai, (1909) ILR 32 All 67; Gurujammah v Venkatta, (1901) ILR 24 All 350.
1020. Isup Ali v Gour Chandra, AIR 1923 Cal 496 : (1923) 37 Cal LJ 184; Lonakutty v Thomman, AIR 1976 SC 1645.
1021. Chokalinga v Sankarappa, AIR 1942 Mad 421 : (1942) ILR Mad 677; Rangachariar v Rangaswami, AIR 1936 Mad 190; Krishnan v Kambi, AIR 1937 Mad 544.
1022. Narahari v Shankar, AIR 1953 SC 419 : [1950] SCR 754; Sukhlal v Deep Chand, AIR 1954 Raj 58 : (1954) ILR Raj 17; K Bivi Ammal v A Nadar, AIR 1970 Mad 76 : (1969) 1 Mad LJ 241; Tulison Traders v Gurdit Singh, AIR 1974 Del 190.
1023. Man Mohan v Shib Chandra, AIR 1931 Cal 353 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 839; Shankar v Bhagwan Sahai, AIR 1946 Oudh 33 (FB) : (1945) ILR 20 Luck 339; Manohar Vinayak v Laxman, AIR 1947 Nag 348 : (1947) ILR Nag 691; Damodar v Narayan, AIR 1941 Nag 199; Abdul Majid v Jeva Nemya, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 233; Mariamnissa v Jaynab, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 1101; Punchanada v Vaithinatha, (1906)

[Footnote No. 1023 contd.]

a decision in a former suit. The contrary view has been taken by the Patna,[1024] Rangoon,[1025] Calcutta,[1026] Orissa[1027] and Allahabad High Courts.[1028] Cross suits were disposed by a common judgment. One decree was appealed against but the appeal failed. The other decree which had been allowed to become final operated as res judicata.[1029] If several suits are decided by a common judgment and separate appeals are preferred, the appeals do not become incompetent merely on the ground that one of the appeals has abated or is dismissed on some grounds other than the merits of the appeal. Each appeal is preferred against the separate decree and even if appeal preferred is affirmed in one of the appeals, it does not operate as res judicata. It is the finding or decision which operates as res judicata and not a decree.[1030] The Allahabad High Court has held that where two or more suits are consolidated and decided by a common judgment and appeals are filed against the decrees passed in all the suits, no question of res judicata can arise if the appeals are also heard and decided simultaneously. But if one of such appeals is either heard and decided separately or is dismissed for want of prosecution or for some other reason and the decision of the court below stands thereby confirmed, the bar of res judicata will apply to the other surviving appeals. This is on the basis that an appeal is a continuation of the suit and the decision in one appeal decided separately becomes a decision in a former suit which is prior in point of time.[1031]

The Supreme Court in a case noted this view but declined to express its opinion.[1032]

In Narahari v Sanker,[1033] A sued B and C for possession and obtained a decree in the trial court. B and C filed separate appeals, which were heard together. One judgment was delivered but two decrees, one in each of those appeals were made. A appealed against one of those decrees. It was held that there was no scope for the application of the rule of res judicata as there was only one suit.

In Ghansham Singh v Bhola Singh,[1034] A, a mortgagee, sued B, the mortgagor, to recover the amount due on a mortgage. The munsif passed a decree for A and directed each party to bear his own costs. A appealed as to costs, and B filed a separate appeal as to the amount found due on the mortgage. Both appeals were disposed off in one judgment which reduced the amount payable on the mortgage and awarded A proportionate costs; but, two decrees were drawn up — one for each appeal. A filed a second appeal against the reduction of the decretal amount in B's appeal, but did not appeal against the decree in his own appeal. It was held that the decree

---

[Footnote No. 1023 contd.]
ILR 29 Mad 333; Ramaswami v Karwooan, (1915) 29 Mad LJ 551; Simana v Muthupalani, AIR 1926 Mad 378; Lacchmi v Bhulli, AIR 1927 Lah 289 : (1927) 8 Lah 384 (FB); Ghansham v Bhola Singh, AIR 1923 All 490 : (1923) ILR 45 All 506; Sriram v Sripath Singh, AIR 1957 All 106; Umrao v Munni, AIR 1958 P&H 83 : (1957) ILR Punj 1080; Abraham v Abraham, AIR 1959 Ker 75 : (1958) ILR Ker 643; Sarvannath v Ram Kishen, AIR 1963 P&H 131 : (1962) ILR 1 Punj 76; Subramonian v Nagarama, AIR 1954 TC 235; Ram Surat v Ram Murat, AIR 1955 All 543.

1024. Raghunandan v Soubhagya, AIR 1948 Pat 191; Getrude Oates v Milicent D'Silva, AIR 1933 Pat 78, (1933) ILR 12 Pat 139; Dhani Singh v Sri Chandra, AIR 1924 Pat 823.
1025. Anwar Ali v Ameer Ali, AIR 1925 Rang 104 : (1925) 2 Rang 633.
1026. Isuf Ali v Gour, AIR 1923 Cal 496 : (1923) 37 Cal LJ 184.
1027. Sumi Devi v Pranakrushna, AIR 1956 Ori 68 : (1956) ILR Cut 319.
1028. Bhagwan v Daryao Kuman, AIR 1963 All 210 (FB).
1029. Maniram Saikia v Bordolo, AIR 1990 Gau 32.
1030. Tata Chemicals Ltd v Sadhu Singh, AIR 1994 All 66.
1031. Jai Narain v Bulaqi Das, AIR 1969 All 504.
1032. Ramayya Prasad v Murli Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 1320 : (1974) 2 SCC 266.
1033. Narahari v Sanker, AIR 1953 SC 419 : (1950) SCR 754; Sukhlal v Deep Chand, AIR 1954 Raj 58 : (1954) ILR 4 Raj 17; K Bivi Ammal v A Nadar, AIR 1970 Mad 76 : (1969) 1 Mad LJ 241; Tulison Traders v Gurdit Singh, AIR 1974 Del 190 : (1974) ILR 1 Del 190.
1034. Ghansham Singh v Bhola Singh, AIR 1923 All 490 : (1923) ILR 45 All 506 (FB).

in that appeal did not operate as res judicata as A had no reason to appeal from a decree which did not prejudice him. The full bench approved of the decision in Damodhar Das v Sheo Ram Das.[1035] This was also a case of one suit and two appeals. A sued B, his agent to recover profits made by the agent in dealings on his own account. A's claim was decreed in part. A and B both appealed and the court dismissed A's appeal and allowed B's appeal. Two decrees were drawn up which were exactly similar. A filed a second appeal against the decree in his own appeal and it was objected that the appeal was barred by res judicata as he had not appealed against the decree in B's appeal. The objection was overruled on the ground that the two decrees were in substance one decree. The full bench also distinguished the case of Zaharia v Debia.[1036] In this case, there were two rival suits for pre-emption filed by two claimants A and B. B was a defendant in A's suit, and A was a defendant in B's suit. A's suit was dismissed and B's suit was decreed. The full bench observed that it was not necessary to invoke the principle of res judicata for A had lost his right by allowing B's decree to become final against him. A later full bench has followed Damodhar Das's case holding that decrees in cross appeals in the same suit are infact one decree.[1037] But where there are two suits involving different subject matters even though they are disposed off by a single decision, such a decision is really two decisions. An appeal filed in one suit will be barred by res judicata if no appeal is filed against the decision in the other suit.[1038]

[s 11.22] Suits Tried Together — Separate Judgments

If two cross suits are tried together and the same issue is tried and disposed off in two separate judgments, the omission to appeal from the decree in one suit will make the decree in the other res judicata so as to bar the appeal.[1039] There were suits by A against B, and B against A. In each suit, the issue was, whether A was the trustee or B was the trustee. A's suit was decreed, and B's suit was dismissed by two separate decrees. B appealed only against the decree dismissing his suit. He did not appeal against the decree granting A's suit. It was held that the appeal was barred by res judicata, as the decree in A's suit had not been appealed against.[1040] The doctrine of dependent judgment[1041] has no application to such cases unless the adjudication in one of them is made dependent on the result of the other.[1042] When different suits in which the parties and the properties involved are different, are tried together because an important issue is common to them; and thereafter, they are disposed off by different judgments wherein separate decrees are drawn up, the failure to appeal against any of them does not bar the hearing of the appeal against the others on the grounds of res judicata.[1043]

1035. Damodhar Das v Sheo Ram Das, (1907) ILR 29 All 730.
1036. Zaharia v Debia, (1911) ILR 33 All 51.
1037. Beharilal v Ramchandra, AIR 1942 Oudh 335 : (1942) ILR 17 Luck 702; Nannu v Nazim, AIR 1928 All 274 : (1928) ILR 50 All 517.
1038. Natesa Chettiar v N Krishniah, AIR 1971 AP 179.
1039. Gangadhar v Sekali, AIR 1921 Cal 291 : (1921) 34 Cal LJ 281; Abdul Basit v Ashfaq, (1906) 28 All WN 211, at p 213; Lacchmi v Bhulli, AIR 1927 Lah 289 : (1928) ILR 8 Lah 384, pp 404–14; contra Manohar Vinay v Laxman, AIR 1947 Nag 298 : (1947) ILR Nag 691; Ramakrishna v Chandrashekhara, AIR 1953 Mys 114 : (1951) ILR Mys 503; Despal v Parswanath, AIR 1956 Raj 166 : (1956) ILR Raj 127.
1040. S Kandaswami Chettiar v RA Murugesa, AIR 1983 Mad 333.
1041. Chandra Singh v Midnapore Zamindari, AIR 1942 PC 8, 69 IA 51.
1042. Nalininath v Bipin Bihari, AIR 1956 Cal 525.
1043. Khetra Mohan v Rasananda, AIR 1962 Ori 141.

[s 11.23] Applications Decided Together

The first application was on the ground that the provisions of sections 38, 39 and 40 of the CPC had not been complied with. In that application, the defence taken was that the decree was being executed under the provisions of section 44A of the CPC. In view of this stand, before any decision was given, the second application had been filed. Both the applications were heard together. In other words, the second application was filed and heard before any decision was given in the first application. Both the applications were only decided on 15 March 1999.

When the second application was filed before any decision on the first application was given, the applicants could have, instead of filing a second application, amended their first application and taken these pleas in that application itself. Had they amended the first application, there would be no bar of res judicata or constructive res judicata. If that be so, one fails to understand how the second application was barred by principles of res judicata or constructive res judicata. It is to be remembered that the orders were passed after hearing arguments on both the applications. Under such circumstances, no question arises of there being any res judicata or constructive res judicata.[1044]

[s 11.24] Plea of Res Judicata Cannot Be Raised for the First Time Before Supreme Court Previous Judgments Still Relevant

Res judicata is a mixed question of fact and law. In the case at hand, the Supreme Court did not find the plea of res judicata having been raised in the plaint. Copies of pleadings and issues framed in the earlier suit had not been tendered in evidence, and they did not find any issue on res judicata having been framed and tried between the parties in the present suit. No submission raising the plea of res judicata was made before any of the courts below or the high court. Therefore, it was held that such a plea cannot be permitted to be raised before Supreme Court for the first time and that also at the hearing. However, still it cannot be lost sight of that the earlier litigation was between the same parties wherein this very Will was relied on by this very plaintiff in support of his title to the property in dispute therein. The plaintiff's right to sue based on this very Will was claimed and asserted in the earlier suit and was upheld, though denied by this very defendant. These facts and finding are recorded in the previous judgment and have relevance in the present suit. Thus, away from res judicata, the judgment given in the earlier suit is relevant piece of evidence under sections 11, 13 and 35 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 and has a material bearing on the controversy arising for decision in the present suit. A relevant and material piece of documentary evidence of undoubted veracity, it ignored and that is a serious error of law having a vitiating effect on the finding on most vital issue in the case.[1045]

It has been reiterated that the plea of res judicata cannot be raised for the first time in the appeal before Supreme Court.[1046]

The law where a suit is instituted before the Supreme Court directly is little different. A constitution bench of the Supreme Court has held that a suit under Article 131 of the

---

1044. International Wollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134.
1045. Madhukar D Shende v Tarabai Aba Shedage, AIR 2002 SC 637 : (2002) 2 SCC 85 : 2002 (1) SCR 132 : JT 2002 (1) 74; see also Tirumala Tirupati Devasthanams v KM Krishnaiah, AIR 1998 SC 1132 : AIR 1998 SCW 945 : (1998) 3 SCC 331.
1046. ITC Ltd v CCE, New Delhi, AIR 2005 SC 1370 : 2004 AIR SCW 7208 : (2004) 7 SCC 591 : JT 2004 (7) SC 409.

Constitution of India cannot and ought not to be decided with extreme technical approach insofar as pleadings and procedure are concerned. A suit filed invoking the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is not governed by the procedure prescribed in the CPC, save and except the procedure which has been expressly made applicable by the Supreme Court Rules. The conflicts between the states are to be settled in the large and ample way that alone suits the dignity of litigants concerned. It was further held that principles of res judicata were attracted in the case as the 2006 judgment[1047] was rendered in exercise of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under Article 32 of the Constitution and the petitions which were transferred to the Supreme Court were under Article 139A but to say that such judgment does not bind the court while deciding the instant suit, which confers exclusive jurisdiction upon it, was found to be incorrect. An earlier decision of the Supreme Court cannot be regarded as a judgment rendered without jurisdiction. The legal position with regard to rule of res judicata is fairly well-settled that the decision on a matter in controversy in writ proceeding (Article 226 or Article 32 of the Constitution) operates as res judicata in subsequent suit on the same matters in controversy between the same parties.[1048]

[s 11.25] Non-framing of Particular Issue

If the parties went to the trial knowing fully well the real issues involved and adduced evidence in such a case without establishing prejudice, it would not be open to a party to raise the question of non-framing of particular issue.[1049]

In Swamy Atmananda's case (supra), SB Sinha J, speaking for the Bench, observed as follows:

> 33. The appellants did not object to the raising of the said plea by Tapovanam in the suit. As the said plea had adequately been raised in the plaint, in relation whereto the Appellants herein had adequate opportunity of traverse and furthermore both the parties having brought on records all the relevant documents the appellants herein cannot be said to have been prejudiced in any manner by reason of non-framing of the issue as regards res judicata.

In the Commr Endowments' case (supra), Shivraj V Patil J, speaking for the bench, observed as follows:

> These findings have attained finality. Failure to frame a formal issue by the court would not invalidate the findings of the binding judgment between the parties. The aforementioned findings against the appellants could neither dilute nor deprive their binding character merely because specific issue was not raised in the suit.

Plea of res judicata is not available where there is no contest on an issue between the parties and there is no conscious adjudication of an issue.[1050]

DM Dharmadhikari J, speaking for the Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 51. Res judicata is a plea available in civil proceedings in accordance with section 11 of the code of Civil Procedure. It is a doctrine applied to give finality to "lis" in original or appellate proceedings. The doctrine in substance means that an issue or a point decided and attaining finality should not be allowed to be reopened and re-agitated twice ever. The literal meaning of res is "everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status" and res judicata literally means: "a matter adjudged; a

---

1047. Mullaperiyar Environmental Protection Forum v UOI, AIR 2006 SC 1428 : (2006) 3 SCC 643 : .
1048. State of Tamil Nadu v State of Kerala, (2014) 12 SCC 696.
1049. Swamy Atmananda v Sri Ramakrishna Tapovanam, AIR 2005 SC 2392 : (2005) 10 SCC 51. See also Commr of Endowments v Vittal Rao, AIR 2005 SC 454 : AIR 2004 SCW 7036 : (2005) 4 SCC 120.
1050. Escorts Farms Ltd v Commr, Kumaon Division, Nainital, AIR 2004 SC 2186 : AIR 2004 SCW 1960 : (2004) 4 SCC 281.

> thing judicially acted upon or decided; a thing or matter settled by judgment". Section 11 of CPC engrafts this doctrine with a purpose that "a final judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction on the merits is conclusive as to the rights of the parties and their privies, and, as to them, constitutes an absolute bar to a subsequent action involving the same claim, demand or cause of action". [See: Black's Law Dictionary at pages 1304-1305]

On the question of applicability of the doctrine of res judicata on the proceedings under the Uttar Pradesh Imposition of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1961, it was further observed as follows:

> 52. Proceedings under the Ceiling Act are not adversarial as are proceedings in suit. The Ceiling Act is a legislation to give effect to the Directive Principles contained in clauses (b) and (c) of Article 39 of the Constitution. The State is advised by the Directive Principles contained in Constitution to take necessary legislative measures so as to ensure social justice by equitable distribution of ownership and control of material resources and avoid concentration of wealth and means of production in few hands. The laudable social objectives sought to be achieved by the ceiling legislation is to take surplus land from the holders and distribute the same landless agricultural labourers and peasants surviving on agriculture. In applying the principles of res judicata, therefore, to the ceiling proceedings, the object of the Act cannot be lost sight of. All principles of res judicata contained in section 11 of the CPC cannot be strictly and rigorously made applicable to ceiling proceedings. Section 38-B introduced by Amendment Act of 1976 with the transitory provisions made both in the Amendment Act No. 18 of 1973 and Act No. 20 of 1976 is a departure from the provisions of Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure and indicate non-applicability of bar of res judicata in ceiling proceedings under the Act.[1051]

[s 11.26] Conditions of Res Judicata

It is not every matter decided in a former suit that can be pleaded as res judicata in a subsequent suit. To constitute a matter res judicata, the following conditions must concur:[1052]

[s 11.26.1] Essentials of Res Judicata

(i) The matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit or issue must be the same matter which was directly and substantially in issue either actually (Explanation III) or constructively (Explanation IV) in the former suit.

(ii) The former suit must have been a suit between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim. Explanation VI is to be read with this condition.

(iii) The parties as aforesaid must have litigated under the same title in the former suit.

(iv) The court which decided the former suit must have been a court competent to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised. Explanation II is to be read with this condition.

(v) The matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit must have been heard and finally decided by the court in the first suit. Explanation V is to be read with this condition.

The new Explanation VIII extends the application of the section by providing that a decision of a court of limited jurisdiction on an issue heard and finally decided shall, if it is within the competence of such court, operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, although such court is not competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such question is subsequently raised. The above conditions are considered in order.

---

1051. Escorts Farms Ltd v Commr, Kumaon Division, Nainital, AIR 2004 SC 2186, at pp 2202–2203, paras 51 and 52 : AIR 2004 SCW 1960 : (2004) 4 SCC 281.

1052. S Labbai v Hanifa, AIR 1976 SC 1569; Perraju v Venkamma, AIR 1971 AP 74.

[s 11.26.2] Matter in Issue

For the expression "the matter in issue" in section 11 of the CPC means the right litigated between the parties, i.e., the facts on which the right is claimed or denied and the law applicable to the determination of that issue. Where, however, the question is one purely of law and it relates to the jurisdiction of the court or a decision of the court sanctioning something which is illegal, by resort to the rule of res judicata, a party affected by the decision will not be precluded from challenging the validity of that order under the rule of res judicata, for a rule of procedure cannot supersede the law of the land.[1053]

Matters in issue may be classified as follows:

[s 11.26.2.1] Condition I: Matter Directly and Substantially in Issue

(A) Matter Actually in Issue

(a) Cause of Action Distinguished from Matter Directly and Substantially in Issue.—The expression used in section 2 of the Code of 1859 was "cause of action". As to that expression, their Lordships of the Privy Council said in Krishna Behari Roy v Brojeswari Chowdranee:[1054]

> The expression "cause of action" cannot be taken in its literal and most restricted sense. But however that may be, by the general law where a material issue has been tried and determined between the same parties in a proper suit and in a competent court as to the status of one of them in relation to the other, it cannot, in their opinion, be again tried in another suit between them".

The expression "matter directly and substantially in issue" was first introduced in the corresponding section 13 of the Code of 1877. The law is accordingly well-settled that to invoke the bar of res judicata, it is not necessary that the cause of action in the two suits should be identical. It is only required that the matters directly and substantially in issue should be the same in both the suits.[1055] If the cause of action is the same both, in the former Act and subsequent proceedings, then the decision on an issue of law will be res judicata between the 1053. Mathura Prasad Bajoo Jaiswal v Dossibai NB Jeejeebhoy, AIR 1971 SC 2355 : (1970) 1 SCC 613 : 1970 SCR (3) 830; see also Secunderabad Cantonment Board v Mohammed Mohiuddin, AIR 2004 SC 784 : AIR 2003 SCW 6973 : (2003) 12 SCC 315; Ashok Kumar Yadav v Noble Designs Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Cal 237.

---

1054. Krishna Behari Roy v Brojeswari Chowdranee, (1875) ILR 1 Cal 144 : 2 IA 283, at p 285; Soorjeemoney Dayee v Suddannud, 1 IA Supp 212 : (1874) 12 Beng LR 304.
1055. Gauri Shankar v Ram Singhasan, AIR 1952 Pat 472; Chiranji Lal v Life Insurance Corp, AIR 1959 Bom 396 : (1959) ILR Bom 140.

same parties. If the cause of action is not the same in both the proceedings, it will not operate as res judicata. When the law has, since the earlier days been altered by a competent authority, that will not operate as res judicata.[1056]

(b) Matter Directly and Substantially in Issue: Explanation III.—The word "substantial" means of importance and value. A matter is substantially in issue if it is of importance and value for the decision of the main proceeding.[1057] At the same time, it is not necessary to constitute a matter "directly and substantially" in issue, that a distinct issue should have been raised upon it; it is sufficient if the matter was in issue in substance.[1058]

In Sri Gangai Vinayagar Temple v Meenakshi Ammal,[1059] there was a divergence of opinion between Justice Katju and Justice Ganguly on the question that where an issue has been framed in a case by a court and a finding has been reached on the same issue, the said finding, in view of Explanation III to section 11, will be one which has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties. While Justice Katju answered it in the negative, Ganguly J affirmed it. The matter was therefore referred to a three-judge bench. The three-judge bench speaking through Justice Vikramjit Sen found the view taken by Justice Ganguly correct finding that the decisions of the three-judge benches in Lonankutty[1060] and Prabhu[1061] should have been considered by the two-judge bench.[1062] It was also found that on the issue of applicability of res judicata in cases where two or more suits have been disposed of by one common judgment, but separate decrees, and where the decree in one suit has been appealed against but not against the others, various high courts have given divergent and conflicting opinions and decisions. The High Court of Madras and erstwhile High Courts of Lahore, Nagpur and Oudh have held that there could be no res judicata in such cases, whereas the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta, Patna, Orissa and erstwhile High Court of Rangoon have taken contrary views. It was also noted that there are instances of conflicting judgments within the same high court as well.[1063, 1064]

1056. Three Aces, Hyderabad v Municipal Corp of Hyderabad, AIR 1995 AP 17.
1057. Mangu Ramdas v M Venkataraman, AIR 1973 AP 256; Basti Ram v Ved Prakash, AIR 1974 P&H 152; Hanumant Rao v Amrutnamma, AIR 1966 AP 221.
1058. Soorjomonee v Suddanund, (1873) 12 Beng LR 304 : 1 IA Supp 212; Lilabati v Bishun Chobey, (1907) 6 Cal LJ 621.
1059. Sri Gangai Vinayagar Temple v Meenakshi Ammal, (2009) 9 SCC 757 : (2009) 12 Scale 215.
1060. Lonankutty v Thomman, AIR 1976 SC 1646 : (1976) 3 SCC 528.
1061. Narayana Prabhu Venkateswara Prabhu v Narayana Prabhu Krishna Prabhu, AIR 1977 SC 1268 : (1977) 2 SCC 181.
1062. Sri Gangai Vinayagar Temple v Meenakshi Ammal, (2015) 3 SCC 624 : (2009) 12 Scale 215.
1063. See the decision of Tek Chand J in full bench judgment of the Lahore High Court in Lachhmi v Bhulli [AIR (1927) Lah 289] and full bench judgment of the Madras High Court in Panchanda Velan v Vaithinatha Sastrial [ILR (1906) 29 Mad 333] and of the Oudh High Court in B Shanker Sahai v B Bhagwat Sahai [AIR 1946 Oudh 33 (FB)] — the hesitancy or reluctance to the applicability of the rigorous of res judicata in these decisions flowed from the notion that section 11 refers only to "suits" and as such does not include "appeals" within its ambit; that since the decisions arrived in the connected suits were articulated simultaneously, there could be no "former suit" as stipulated by the said section; that substance, issues and finding being common or substantially similar in the connected suits tried together, non-filing of an appeal against one or more of those suits ought not to preclude the consideration of other appeals on merits; and that the principle of res judicata would be applicable to the judgment, which is common, and not to the decrees drawn on the basis of that common judgment.
1064. On the other hand, the verdict of full bench of the Allahabad High Court in Zaharia v Debia, ILR (1911) 33 All 51 and decisions of the Calcutta High Court in Isup Ali v Gour Chandra Deb, AIR 1923 Cal 496 : 37 Cal LJ 184 and of the Patna High Court in Mrs. Getrude Oates v Mrs. Millicent D'Silva, AIR 1933 Pat 78 : ILR 12 Pat 139 are of the contrary persuasion. These decisions largely proceeded on the predication that the phraseology "suit" is not limited to the court of first instance or trial court but encompasses within its domain proceedings before the appellate courts; that non-applicability of res

[Footnote No. 1064 contd.]

It is not enough to constitute a matter res judicata that it was in issue in the former suit. It is further necessary that it must have been in issue directly and substantially. A matter cannot be said to have been "directly and substantially" in issue in a suit unless it was alleged by one party and denied or admitted, either expressly or by necessary implication, by the other.[1065] It is not enough that the matter was alleged by one party.[1066] A matter in issue is the matter claimed by one and denied by the other. Claim of right in its very inception depends upon proved facts and application of the relevant law. Directly and substantially in issue could be constructively so. Matter in issue may be an issue of fact, an issue of law or one mixed of fact and law. An issue of fact or an issue of mixed fact and law decided by a competent court is finally decided between the parties and cannot be reopened between them in another proceeding.

The claim of right depends upon proof of facts and application of law relevant thereto. When it is said that a previous decision is res judicata, it is meant that the right claimed has already been adjudicated upon and cannot again be placed in contest between the same parties. The decision on law cannot be dissociated from decision on facts on which the right is founded. In other words, when the finding on an issue is based on certain view of the law, that view of the law, as an abstract proposition and dissociated from the actual matter in issue, will not be res judicata so as to be applicable to all future disputes between the same parties which may give rise to the applicability of the same abstract question of law. Res judicata is a rule of procedure and cannot change the law applicable to parties.[1067] If a plaintiff sues in the revenue court which returns the plaint for want of jurisdiction and does not appeal against the revenue court's order, he cannot again sue in the civil court on the same cause of action.[1068] Where a person could not claim a relief in the earlier suit as per the law then in force (eg, where he could not challenge a court sale), he is not debarred by res judicata from claiming that relief subsequently.[1069] Where the earlier suit decided that riparian owners of land near a natural stream had no right to cross the bound and divert the water to their own lands, this decision does not operate as a res judicata in a later suit involving the question of whether riparian owners could take water for irrigation without diminishing the flow.[1070] The application of the rule (of res judicata) by the courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by a matter of substance within the limits allowed by law.[1071] Thus, if there is judicata may lead to inconsistent decrees and conflicting decrees, not only due to multiplicity of decrees but also due to multiplicity of the parties, and thereby creating confusion as to which decree has to be given effect to in execution; that a decree is valid unless it is a nullity and the same cannot be overruled or interfered within appellate proceedings initiated against another decree; that the issue of res judicata has to be decided with reference to the decrees, which are appealable under section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not with reference to the judgment (which has been defined differently), but with respect to decrees in the Code of Civil Procedure; that non-confirmation of a decree in appellate proceedings has no consequence as far as it reaching finality upon elapsing of the limitation period is concerned in view of the Explanation II of section 11, that provides that the competence of a court shall be determined irrespective of any provisions as to right of appeal from the decision of such court; and that section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not exhaustive of the doctrine of res judicata, which springs up from the general principles of law and public policy.

---

[Footnote No. 1064 contd.]

1065. Lonakutty v Thomman, AIR 1976 SC 1645 : (1976) 3 SCC 528.
1066. Sheo Ratan v Sheo Sahai, (1884) ILR 6 All 358, at p 362; Sharma Churn v Prosunno, (1879) 5 Cal LR 251.
1067. Bharathi Amma v Kumaran Peethambharan, AIR 1990 Ker 88.
1068. Avtar Singh v Jagjit Singh, AIR 1979 SC 1911 : (1979) 4 SCC 83 : (1980) 1 SCJ 181.
1069. Jaswant Singh v Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1985 SC 1096 : (1985) 3 SCC 648.
1070. M Sesha Reddy v K Gopal Reddy, AIR 1987 AP 1 (DB).
1071. Shankar Sahai v Bhagwat Sahai, AIR 1946 Oudh 33 : (1945) ILR 20 Luck 339 (FB); Sheoparsan v Ramnandan, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 694, at p 706, 43 IA 91; followed in Mohammed Ali v Upendra Nath, AIR 1934 Cal 179.

a mutual account between A and B, and A sues B and obtains a decree on the account, a subsequent suit by B against A on the same account for the same year, though beginning and ending about a month earlier, will be barred as res judicata.[1072]

A decision on a question involving facts as well as the application of law to the facts would be res judicata. One cannot dissociate the decision on law from the decision on the facts.[1073]

A judicial decision binds whether it is right or wrong. An error of law on fact, committed by a judicial or quasi-judicial body cannot be impeached otherwise than in the appeal, unless it relates to a matter of jurisdiction. The finding is binding on the parties even though the abstracted proportion of law dissociated from the facts, may not be so.[1074]

In a case from Andhra Pradesh, the property originally belonged to a Mutt granted permanent lease patta in respect of suit land to predecessors of the appellant. The Mutt filed suit for declaration of title and possession. The suit was disposed of by holding that civil court has no jurisdiction to grant the relief of possession. However, it was held in the suit that the appellant has perfected his title as regards tenancy right by adverse possession. The said decision was allowed to become final. It was held by the Supreme Court that subsequent proceeding for eviction of the appellant under Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Tenancy Act, 1956 was not barred by res judicata by the earlier decision of the civil court.[1075]

P Sathasivam J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 17. Therefore, the High Court in that instance held two things, (1) that the court did not have jurisdiction over the matters owing to the special process prescribed under the Tenancy Act; and (2) the title with respect of tenancy rights was perfected owing to adverse possession. These two rulings are not in conflict with each other, and are equally binding. The jurisdiction of the High Court was ousted only to a limited extent, i.e., with respect to the eviction of the tenants and possession of the property, as the procedure for that was provided under the Act. But the court continued to have jurisdiction with respect to the determination of the title of the property.
>
> 18. The appellants seem to have misunderstood the import of the High Court decision while relying on it for the purposes of res judicata. The court, in no uncertain terms, held that the title of ownership belongs to the present respondents, but the present appellants had the title with respect of tenancy rights. This decision was perfected by non-appeal and is binding on the parties. Thus, the present appellants are not the owners of the property, but tenants on conditions prescribed under the permanent lease patta dated 11-03-1931 mentioned above. Thus, we hold that the decision of the High Court in 1973 would not bar any proceedings under the Tenancy Act as the issue decided by the court in that instance was merely the tenancy title in favour of the appellants, while the present case is eviction of tenants under section 13 of the Act.[1076]

Where in a suit the issue regarding the genuineness of agreement and whether there was any interpolation was settled and finally determined and the party gave an undertaking that she will not raise the issue of interpolation, it was held by the Supreme Court that the party could not be allowed to raise the same issue again in a different suit between the same parties.[1077]

In a suit, the plaintiff did not raise the issue of ownership in relation to the entire property but the defendant Wakf raised the plea that the entire property belonged to Wakf and the suit

---

1072. Nizam-ud-din v Ahmed, AIR 1927 All 799 : (1928) ILR 50 All 28.
1073. Bharathi Amma v Kumaran Peethambaran, AIR 1990 Ker 88 (S Padmanabhan J).
1074. Bharathi Amma v Kumaran Peethambaran, AIR 1990 Ker 88.
1075. Chittor Chegaiah v Pedda Jeeyangar Mutt, AIR 2010 SC 1278 : (2010) 3 SCC 776.
1076. Chittor Chegaiah v Pedda Jeeyangar Mutt, AIR 2010 SC 1278, at p 1284, paras 17 and 18.
1077. Amrendra Komalam v Ush Rani, AIR 2005 SC 2758 : (2005) 11 SCC 251 : (2005) 2 Mad LJ 101 (SC).

was liable to be dismissed. The suit was, however, decreed holding that the plaintiffs were title holders. The matter was taken upto the Supreme Court, where also the appeal was argued on the basis of the defendant's plea that the property belonged to Wakf. The decree was finally upheld by the Supreme Court, subsequent suit filed by Wakf seeking a declaration that the decree-holders had no night over the disputed property; it was held by the Supreme Court that another suit based on claims contrary to the earlier plea would be barred by res judicata.[1078]

(c) Matter Directly and Substantially in Issue — Instances.—Following are the instances where bar of res judicata was attracted as the matter directly and substantially in issue were found common to both previous and subsequent suit:

(i) Merely because the petitioner was not a party to those petitions, which were filed for objecting the refinery project, it could not be said that the same has no bearing on the present proceedings. Those proceedings were also filed by the petitioners in the public interest for the protection of environment and ecology. Thus, all these proceedings were filed for the same "interest and claim". Therefore, when the subject matter of the earlier proceedings and the present proceedings is one and when the petitioners in both proceedings were having the same status, then the earlier decision will create the general principle of constructive res judicata.[1079]

(ii) On the same principle, an issue will be res judicata if the judgment of an appellate court shows that the issue was treated as material and was decided, although the decree passed merely affirms the decree of the lower court which did not deal with the issue.[1080]

(iii) Likewise, when parties go to trial on a particular issue treating it as material and invites the court to give a decision thereon, that will be res judicata.[1081]

(iv) Thus, where the issue, that the respondent has acquired the status of an occupant on the abolition of the inam under the Hyderabad Abolition of Inams and Cash Grants Act, 1954, was adjudicated upon in a former application, the appellant-landlord cannot re-agitate the same issue in a subsequent application under the Hyderabad Tenancy and Agricultural Land Act, 1950 (Act No 21 of 1950).[1082]

(v) A decree for the recovery of loan by sale of mortgaged property was passed by the Bombay High Court overruling the judgment-debtor's objection as to local jurisdiction. The question of whether or not the appellant was a licensee of the flat or a tenant thereof was directly and substantially in issue between the parties in the previous suit. The finding that he was not a tenant but had only the status of a licensee operates as res judicata between the parties. The appellant having failed in his suit for declaration of his alleged status of a tenant brought in the court of small causes, cannot be permitted to re-agitate the same question in these proceedings.[1083]

(vi) In a case, the earlier court recorded a finding that the larger joint family had disrupted and five brothers had separated from each other. The finding was necessitated by

---

1078. Nazim Ali v Anjuman Islamia, Chhatarpur, AIR 1999 SC 1089 : (1999) 3 SCC 91 : (1999) 3 Mad LJ 43 (SC).
1079. Gujarat Navodaya Mandal v State of Gujarat, AIR 1998 Guj 141.
1080. Midnapur Zamindary Co Ltd v Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1924 PC 144 : 51 IA 293 : 51 Cal 631; Vertannes v Robinson, AIR 1930 PC 224 : (1930) ILR 8 Rang 326 : 57 IA 208.
1081. Madhavan v Kumaran, AIR 1952 TC 383 : (1952) II R TC 175; Swamee v Muthukrishnan, AIR 1955 TC 13 : (1955) TC 1071; Nemkumar v Nemkumar, AIR 1958 All 207.
1082. Rangnath v Daulat Rao, AIR 1975 SC 2146 : (1975) 1 SCC 686.
1083. ON Bhatnagar v Rukibai Narsin Das, (1982) 2 SCC 244.

reason of specific contentions raised by an appellant before that court. The finding becomes res judicata in a subsequent suit in which a declaration is sought that the larger joint Hindu family still existed and in which the appellants sought partition of a share in such larger joint Hindu family.[1084]

(vii) Where the issue of excess land under FWA (Framework Agreement) was directly and substantially in issue in the previous public interest litigation and the finding recorded therein had reached finality; the matter could not be reopened by filing another public interest litigation due to bar of res judicata.[1085]

(viii) It cannot be held to operate as res judicata between parties, only in respect of portion of suit property, which alone was subject-matter of dispute in earlier suit. The principle of res judicata under section 11 is attracted where issues directly and substantially involved between the previous and subsequent suit are same. It may be that in previous suit only a part of property was involved, while in the subsequent suit the whole matter is the subject matter.[1086]

(ix) An earlier suit filed by the plaintiff for declaration of his ownership in the suit property on the basis of sale deed and claiming that the defendant was a tenant in the said property. The suit was dismissed negating the claim of the plaintiff and it was held in that suit that both parties were joint owners entitled to half share each. It was held by the Uttarakhand High Court that the said finding would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit claiming similar relief.[1087]

(d) Matter Not Directly and Substantially in Issue — Instances

In the following cases, the bar of res judicata did not apply as matters directly and substantially in issue in the decided suit and the subsequent suit were found different:

(i) The decision in the previous suit confined to a question of substitution of receptacles by administrator. The question in the subsequent case was whether beneficial enjoyment attached to the religious duties assigned to sevaks are separable, or an integral part of religion. It was held that the earlier case does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent case.[1088]

(ii) The previous suit was for injunction, wherein plea of benami was taken as the defence. The main question involved in that suit was injunction and the plea of benami was only incidental. The subsequent suit was instituted for partition, wherein the defendant was not a party to the earlier suit for injunction. It was held that plea of benami taken by the defendant in subsequent suit is not barred by res judicata.[1089]

(iii) The order was not set aside in appeal, etc. It was held that judgment-debtor cannot later agitate the question of jurisdiction before the Bihar courts (where execution proceedings against the mortgaged property were being pursued).[1090]

1084. Jaikishan Das v Nirmala Devi, AIR 1984 SC 589 : (1984) 1 SCC 682.
1085. State of Karnataka v All India Manufacturers Organization, AIR 2006 SC 1846 : (2006) 4 SCC 683: 2006 (4) Scale 398 : JT 2006 (11) 337.
1086. K Ethirajan v Lakshmi, AIR 2003 SC 4295 : AIR 2003 SCW 4951 : (2003) 10 SCC 578.
1087. Kallu Ram v Jai Bhagwan, AIR 2008 Uttr 29 : 2008 (4) All LJ 179.
1088. Chinta Mani Khuntia v State of Orissa, AIR 1994 Ori 46.
1089. Murugesa Naicker (died) v M Sadayappa Naicker, AIR 1997 Mad 4.
1090. LIC of India v Canneshwar Prasad, AIR 1985 Cal 98.

(iv) However, a mere expression of opinion on a question not in issue cannot operate as res judicata.[1091]

(v) In an earlier suit by the lessor, it was alleged by him that the lease had determined. He withdrew that suit. He then sued for recovery of Khas possession of the premises, alleging (in the second suit) that lease had been determined by time. It was held that the first suit did not operate as res judicata because:

(i) there was no decision on merits; and

(ii) the second suit was based on a new cause of action, alleged to have arisen in the meantime.[1092]

(vi) Where the earlier proceeding did not decide the question of heirship, that question is not res judicata.[1093]

(vii) Eviction order was passed against the tenant who appealed, but died during the pendency of the appeal. It was not an issue in appeal, as to whether any permission was required to be taken from the competent authority under the Rent Control Act, for executing the decree against the legal representatives of the tenant. A decision in appeal that execution cannot proceed till the necessary permission is obtained, did not operate as res judicata in an objection petition to the application for execution.[1094]

(viii) In a Gujarat case, the first suit was to challenge the legality and validity of search and seizure carried on in the premises of a licensed dealer. The second suit was intended to challenge a show-cause notice for cancellation of the licence. It was held that finding in one cannot be res judicata in the other.[1095]

(ix) With reference to the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code, 1959, section 258, the decision of the revenue court on title in mutation proceedings does not operate as res judicata in probate proceedings. In the probate proceedings, sole question involved is as to the proof of the Will.[1096]

(x) Where a person was sued on the basis that he was either a tenant or a licensee and the court held that he was only a licensee, it was held that he cannot later sue claiming to be a tenant.[1097]

(xi) Where the land in the subsequent suit is distinctly different from the point of view of location of lands and Khasra Nos from the subject matters of earlier suit, by no stretch of imagination it can be said that the subsequent dispute is hit by principle of res judicata in view of the decision rendered in earlier civil suit which has attained finality.[1098]

(e) Matter Collaterally or Incidentally in Issue.—Every suit must involve a matter "directly and substantially" in issue. It may also involve a matter "collaterally or incidentally" in issue. To constitute a matter res judicata, it is necessary that it must be in issue "directly and substantially"

1091. Ragho Prasad v Shrikrishna, AIR 1969 SC 316 : (1969) 1 SCR 834.
1092. Thakuruddin Ramjash v Sourendra Nath, AIR 1982 Cal 133 : 86 Cal WN 230 (DB).
1093. State of Uttar Pradesh v Civil Judge, Nagpur, AIR 1987 SC 16 : (1986) 4 SCC 558 : (1986) JT 774.
1094. Krishan Kant v Tulsi Bhai, AIR 1988 Del 203.
1095. State of Gujarat v Mangal Traders, Jamnagar, AIR 1987 Guj 234.
1096. Balwant v Mainabai, AIR 1991 MP 11.
1097. ON Bhatnagar v Rukibai Nirsingdar, AIR 1982 SC 1097 : 1982 (2) SCC 244 : [1982] 3 SCR 681.
1098. Begum Sunaiya Rashid v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 1283 : (2006) 3 SCC 505 : 2006 (2) SCR 379 : 2006 (3) SCJ 482.

in the suit under trial, and that it must have been in issue also "directly and substantially", as distinguished from "collaterally or incidentally", in a former suit. The question of whether a person should be admitted as a legal representative of the deceased plaintiff to continue the suit is a question collateral to the suit.[1099] The principles of res judicata would be applicable only when an issue arose directly and substantially in an earlier suit, a finding regarding an incident or collateral question reached for the purpose of arriving at the final decision would not constitute res judicata.[1100]

Where in a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession on the basis of gift deed executed by the plaintiff and the defendant denied the parentage and claimed himself to be the adopted son of the testator, it was held by the Supreme Court that any finding by revenue authorities with regard to mutation of revenue records or on the question of adoption would not operate as res judicata. Findings on incidental or collateral question to arrive at such a decision would not be a bar in the subsequent suit.[1101]

A finding on an issue must be distinguished from an option as to the effect of a piece of evidence. In a suit for rent by A against B, the court held that a rent note, in which certain land was not included, was genuine. B then sued A for a declaration that the land was infact part of his holding. In this suit, the question of the genuineness of the rent note is not res judicata, for the finding in the first suit is not the decision of an issue but an opinion as to the effect of a piece of evidence.[1102]

All matters involved in a suit may be "directly and substantially" in issue, but they cannot all be "collaterally or incidentally" in issue. A collateral or incidental issue is one that is ancillary to a direct and substantive issue; the former is an auxiliary issue, the latter the principal issue. The expression "collaterally or incidentally" in issue implies that there is another matter which is "directly and substantially" in issue. The first-respondent filed this suit for declaration that the suit property known as "Badi Takia" is a Wakf. In respect of this property, there are several rounds of litigation. The first of them was for declaration, possession and damages against the respondents on the ground that they were owners of the whole property, and the respondent had without the consent of the plaintiff put their Tazia on the land. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs. The appellate court reversed the decree of the trial court, and held the property to be Wakf property which was reversed by the high court. An appeal to the Supreme Court was also dismissed upholding the judgment of the high court in second appeal.

In another round of litigation commenced by the respondent, a suit for declaration was filed praying that the appellants here have no right over the property; the trial court dismissed the suit. The appeal filed by the respondent was allowed by the high court, holding that the decision in the earlier suit was not res judicata. It was held by the Supreme Court in the appeal that in the earlier judgment of the Supreme Court, the only question was whether the plot on which Tazia was placed was Wakf property, and on that question no satisfactory proof was placed by the defendants before the court and therefore, the Supreme Court agreed with the view of the high court. When those findings had become final and not disturbed by the

---

1099. Koneridoss v N Subbiah, AIR 1975 Mad 124 : (1974) 2 Mad LJ 252.
1100. Mahila Bajrangi v Badribai w/o Jagannath, AIR 2003 SCW 129 : (2003) 2 SCC 464.
1101. Mahila Bajrangi v Randribai, (2003) 2 SCC 464 : (2003) 1 Mad LJ 92 (SC); Madhavi Amma Bhavani Amma v Kunjikutty Pillai Meenakshi Pillai, AIR 200 SC 2301 : (2000) 6 SCC 301 : (2000) 3 Mad LJ 78 (SC).
1102. Ramcharitar Sao v Bawan Prasad Singh, AIR 1946 Pat 225; Narendranath v Ananda, AIR 1934 Cal 60 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 1307.

Supreme Court, the district judge in another round of litigation was justified in holding that the proceedings were barred by res judicata.[1103]

(f) Distinction Between Matter "Directly and Substantially" in Issue and Matter "Collaterally or Incidentally" in Issue.—The leading case on the subject is Barrs v Jackson.[1104] Every suit must involve a matter or matters in respect of which relief is claimed by the plaintiff. It may also involve matters which, though there is no relief claimed in respect of them, are brought in issue for the purpose of deciding matters in respect of which relief is claimed.

Matter Directly and Substantially in Issue—Every matter in respect of which relief is claimed in a suit is necessarily a matter "directly and substantially" in issue.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A sues B for the rent due for the year 1907. The defence is that no rent is due. Here, the claim for rent is the matter in respect of which relief is claimed. This, therefore, is a matter "directly and substantially" in issue.

(ii) A sues B:

(a) for a declaration of title to certain lands; and

(b) for the rent of those lands. B denies A's title to the lands, and contends that no rent is due. Here, there are two matters in respect of which relief is claimed, namely: (1) the matter of title; and (2) the claim for rent. Both these are matters "directly and substantially" in issue. But where the former suit was for injunction only and was concerned with the right of possession, a subsequent suit on the question of title is not barred.[1105]

Matter Collaterally or Incidentally in Issue—A matter in respect of which no relief is claimed, but which is put in issue for the purpose of enabling the court to adjudicate on a matter in respect of which relief is claimed may be "directly and substantially" in issue or it may be in issue "collaterally and incidentally". It would be a matter "directly and substantially" in issue if it was necessary to decide it in order to adjudicate on the principal issue and if it was infact decided, and if the judgment was based upon that decision; otherwise, it would be a matter "collaterally or incidentally" in issue. A matter cannot be directly and substantially in issue if the judgment would be correct whether the matter exists or not.[1106]

In UOI v SP Sharma,[1107] the Supreme Court, observed that "fraud is not a term or ornament nor can it be presumed to exist on the basis of a mere inference on some alleged material that is stated to have been discovered later on." In the opinion of the Court, the discovery of a reinvestigated fact could have been a ground of review in the same proceedings, but the same cannot be made the basis for reopening the issue through a fresh round of litigation. A fresh writ petition or letters patent appeal which is in continuation of a writ petition cannot be filed collaterally to set aside the judgment of the same high court rendered in an earlier round of litigation. To establish fraud, it is the material available which may lead to the conclusion that the failure to produce the material was deliberate or suppressed or even otherwise occasioned a failure of justice. This also can be attempted, if legally permissible, only in the said proceedings and not in a collateral challenge raised after the matter has been finally decided in the first 1103. Nizam Ali v Anjuman Islamia Chattarpur, (1999) 1 LRI 247; Sajjadanashin Sayed v Musa Dadabhai Umer, (2000) 4 LRI 119.

---

1104. Barrs v Jackson, (1842) 1 Y&C Ch Cas 585.
1105. Selliamman Ayyanar Uthiraosomasundareswarar Temple v Rajanga Asari, AIR 1965 Mad 355 : (1965) ILR 1 Mad 232.
1106. Hafiz Md. Fateh Nasib v Swarup Chand, AIR 1942 Cal 1 : (1941) ILR 2 Cal 434; Alagamma Achi v Veerappa, AIR 1956 Mad 428 : (1956) ILR Mad 252.
1107. UOI v SP Sharma, (2014) 6 SCC 351 : 2014 (4) All WC 3319 (SC).

round of litigation. Thus, on facts, the court held that the high court had committed a manifest error by not lawfully defining the scope of the fresh round of litigation on the principles of res judicata and doctrine of finality.

The court stated that:

> A decision rendered by a competent court cannot be challenged in collateral proceedings for the reason that if it is permitted to do so there would be "confusion and chaos and the finality of proceedings would cease to have any meaning".

In Kaviraj v State of Jammu & Kashmir,[1108] it was held as follows:

> The factual position in the present controversy is slightly different. Before this Court two Special Leave Petitions were filed. The Assistant Surgeons against whom the Letters Patent Appeal was dismissed in default, are also before this Court. They have also been afforded an opportunity of hearing. This Court has expressed the opinion that the order passed by the Letters Patent Bench of the High Court on 24.2.2006 deserves to be upheld. If the Assistant Surgeons whose Letters Patent Appeal was dismissed in default, had not been before this Court, it may not have been possible for us to re-adjudicate upon their claim. Since all of them are before us, and have been represented through counsel, we have no doubt in our mind, that the determination on merits in the instant controversy should be extended to them, as well. Since such a choice can be made in the present case, we are of the view, that the proposition which has been upheld as legal, should be extended to the others similarly situated. The converse proposition, does not commend itself for acceptance. It would be unthinkable to implement an order, which has been set aside after due notice and hearing. We, therefore, find no merit in the technical plea advanced at the hands of the learned counsel for the appellants.

Where a suit was filed for a declaration that an alienation by a widow was not binding on the reversioners, the finding given therein that the plaintiff was not the nearest reversioner is not res judicata in a subsequent suit for possession brought after the death of the widow as the issue as to relationship was only incidental in the previous suit.[1109] It is not to be assumed that the matters in respect of which issues have been framed are all directly and substantially in issue, nor is there any special significance to be attached to the fact that a particular issue is the first in the list of issues. Which of the matters are directly in issue and which collaterally or incidentally must be determined on the facts of each case. A material test to be applied is whether the court considers the adjudication of the issue material and essential for its decision.[1110]

If the parties to the earlier suit are not the same as those in the subsequent suit and the matters directly in issue in the subsequent suit were not directly in issue in the earlier suit, then the observations in the judgment in the earlier suit have no binding force in the latter case, particularly when the matter was not argued in the earlier case.[1111]

ILLUSTRATION

> A sues B for rent; B pleads abatement of rent on the ground that the area is less than that entered in the lease. The court finds that the area is greater than that shown in the lease. The finding as to the excess area is not res judicata for it is only ancillary to the direct and substantial issue whether the area is equal to that shown in the lease; or, less.[1112]

1108. Kaviraj v State of Jammu & Kashmir, AIR 2013 SC 767 : (2013) 3 SCC 526 : 2013 (3) SCR 620 : JT 2013 (1) 526.
1109. Sarangapani v Venkata, AIR 1952 Mad 384 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 464; Valliammal v Palani Goundan, AIR 1955 Mad 533.
1110. Laxman Shivshankar v Saraswathi, AIR 1959 Bom 125 : (1958) ILR Bom 869 : (1958) 60 Bom LR 382.
1111. Bank of India v Mehta Brothers, AIR 1991 Del 194.
1112. Ekram v Holodhur, (1873) ILR 3 Cal 271.

(g) Examination of Pleadings and Judgment.—Whether a matter was directly and substantially in issue in a former suit is to be determined by a reference to the plaint, the written statement, the issues and the judgment.[1113] Even if a point is not properly raised in the plaint, yet if both parties join issues upon a matter in dispute, the decision will operate as res judicata.[1114] For the application of res judicata under section 11, of the CPC, it is not necessary that the issue in conflict must be raised in the pleadings. Such conflict may come up for decision otherwise also, i.e., in view of the stand taken by parties in the hearing of the suit.[1115] In the absence of pleadings, or any finding, it is not open to the defendants to invoke the rule of res judicata on the ground that in the earlier suit it was found by the trial court that they were the tenants of the land and dispute under the plaintiff.[1116] Section 38B of the Uttar Pradesh Imposition of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1960, provides that the finding or decision given before the commencement of this section will not operate as a bar for the re-trial of such proceedings or issue in accordance with the provisions of the Act as amended from time to time. The appellant has raised a similar objection before the high court but the same was rejected on the ground that if an earlier judgment is said to operate as res judicata in the subsequent proceedings, then all the necessary facts including pleadings of the earlier litigation must be placed in the subsequent proceedings. This view was affirmed by the Hon'ble Supreme Court.[1117] The decree may also be referred to, but it is not enough to refer to the decree without the judgment, for a decree states merely how a suit is disposed off, and it is in the judgment that the findings on the issues are recorded.[1118] The judgment is admissible under section 40 of the Evidence Act, 1872. (See O XXII, rules 5–6.)

(h) Suits for Rent or Other Recurring Liability

The distinction between a matter directly and substantially in issue and a matter collaterally in issue is well-illustrated by suits for rent or for other recurring liability. These may be divided into three classes, namely:

(i) Where the first suit is for rent, and the subsequent suit is for title.

(ii) Where both suits are for rent, or other recurring liability.

(iii) Where both suits relate to rate of rent or to the area for which rent is payable.

(i) First Suit for Rent, Subsequent Suit for Title.—In this class of cases, it is clear that the subsequent suit being one for title, the question of title is a matter "directly and substantially" in issue in that suit. Whichever party therefore, raises the plea of res judicata in that suit must show that the question of title was also "directly and substantially" in issue in the former suit, that is, in the previously decided suit. If the question of title was in issue in its entirety in the former suit, it would be a matter that was "directly and substantially" in issue in that suit. But if the issue in the former suit did not cover the entire question of title, in other words, if it fell

---

1113. Isher Singh v Sarwan Singh, AIR 1965 SC 948; S Labbai v Hanifa, AIR 1965 SC 1569.
1114. Krishna Chendra v Ramanna, AIR 1932 PC 50 : (1932) 36 Cal WN 365 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 508.
1115. Thakur Ram Sahai Sinha v Bimla Devi, AIR 1980 Pat 204, pp 208, 210 (paras 10, 13) (FB).
1116. Deva Ram v Ishwar Chand, AIR 1996 SC 378 : (1995) 6 SCC 733; see also Mariam Bibi v Rachman Ali, AIR 2004 Gau 66.
1117. Darshan Prasad v Civil Judge, (II), Gorakhpur (1992) Supp 2 SCC 87.
1118. Kali Krishna v Secretary of State, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 173, at p 183 : 15 IA 186, at p 193; Run Bahadur's case, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 301, at p 310 : 12 IA 23; Soorjomonee v Suddanund, (1874) 12 Beng LR 304; Igirdhar v Dayabhai, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 174, at p 180; Ghela v Sanbalchand, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 597, at p 601; Amriteswari v Secretary of State, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 504, at p 519 : 24 IA 33; Jalasutram v Bommadevara, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 42; Kunwarjan v Nazbat ud-Daula, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 116 : 32 IA 244; Mitar Poddar v Jadab Chandra, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 159; Raja Sashikanta v Raja Sarat Chandra, AIR 1921 Cal 699 : (1921) 34 Cal LJ 415.

short of going to the very root of the title, and was confined only to some of the incidents of title, the question of title would be a matter which was "collaterally or incidentally" in issue in the former suit.[1119] Where the landlord sued the tenant in ejectment and he pleaded that he held under a permanent tenure, it was held by the Supreme Court that his pleas was not barred as res judicata by reason of a decree obtained by the landlord in a prior suit, wherein the only issue raised was whether Jummaa could be assessed under the regulation. Permanency of a tenure, it was observed, did not imply fixity of rent.[1120] But where in a former suit for eviction, the landlord's plea that the defendant-tenants were liable to be evicted was rejected on the ground that the defendants had perfected their title by adverse possession, a similar plea in a subsequent suit would not be allowed to be raised even if the subsequent suit is for declaration of title and possession.[1121] The principle is that irrespective of the nature of the suit if the question of title has gone into the making of the decree and not incidentally or collaterally, the decree in the former suit would operate as res judicata.[1122]

In the following illustrations, it is assumed that the other conditions of res judicata are fulfilled:

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A, claiming to be the chela and heir of a deceased mohunt sues B for rent of certain lands forming part of the estate of the mohunt. C claims that he, and not A, is the chela and heir of the deceased and that he is entitled to the rent. C is thereupon joined as a defendant to the suit. The issues raised are:

- Whether A or C is the chela and heir of the mohunt?
- Whether any and if so what rent is due from B?

The court finds that A is the chela and heir of the mohunt. It also finds Rs 2,500 due by B for rent, and A's claim is decreed.

Subsequently, C sues A for a declaration that he is the chela and heir of the mohunt and claims that as such he is entitled to the whole of the property left by the mohunt. A contends that the question, who is the chela and heir of the deceased, is res judicata. Is the question res judicata? The answer is that it is, for, though the former suit was for rent, the entire question of title to the property of the deceased was directly and substantially in issue in that suit and it was decided against C.[1123]

(ii) A, a Hindu, dies leaving a widow and a brother C. The widow sues B for rent of certain property forming part of the estate of her husband. C claims the rent on the ground that it was the joint property of himself and his deceased brother and that he became entitled to it by survivorship. C is thereupon joined as a defendant to the suit. The issues are:

- Whether the deceased alone received the whole rent of the property in his life-time, or whether the rent was received by him jointly with C?
- Whether any and what rent is due by B?

1119. Lalit Shaheb v Lal Babu, AIR 1943 All 340 : (1943) ILR All 843; Gobind v Taruck, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 145; Radha v Monohur, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 756 : 15 IA 97; Kasiswar v Mohendra Nath, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 136; Dwarkanath v Ramchand, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 428; Keramat v Kumar Krishna, AIR 1926 Cal 1228 : (1926) 47 Cal LJ 536; Mugtakeshi v Manilal, AIR 1930 Cal 579 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 371; Surendra Nath v Kamakhya Narain, AIR 1930 PC 45 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 515; Shankar v Khem Sawant, AIR 1932 Bom 3 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 1303.
1120. Bejoy Gopal Mukherjee v Pratul Chandra Ghosh, AIR 1953 SC 153 : (1953) SCR 930 : (1953) SCJ 195.
1121. Koshal Pal v Mohan Lal, AIR 1976 SC 688 : (1976) 1 SCC 449 : 1976 SCR (2) 827; Deepchand v Santhinath, AIR 1971 Ori 57.
1122. Sita Ram v Hukmi Ram, AIR 1971 All 399.
1123. Toponidhee v Sreeputty, (1880) ILR 5 Cal 832; Gobind v Taruck, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 145; Harekrishna v Gourhari, AIR 1932 Cal 894 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 1250 : 141 IC 56; Jitendra v Biswanath, AIR 1952 Cal 201 : (1952) ILR 1 Cal 383; Parsa v Durga, (1961) ILR MB 44; Ram Karan v Parbati, AIR 1954 Pat 443.

The finding on the first issue is that the deceased alone received the whole rent in his lifetime. The finding on the second issue is unnecessary for our present purpose.

Subsequently, C sues the widow for a declaration that he and his brother were joint, and claimed the said property by right of survivorship. The question of whether the deceased and C were joint or separate is not res judicata, for it was not "directly and substantially" in issue in the former suit. It was in issue in that suit only "collaterally or incidentally", for it will be seen on referring to the first issue in that suit that it did not cover the entire question of C's title but related merely to the joint or separate receipt of rent.[1124]

(ii) Both Suits for Rent or Other Recurring Liability — Maintenance Suits.—The rules which apply to the preceding class of cases apply also to this class. Thus, where A sues B for rent due for a particular period, and the defence is that A has no title to the land of which the rent is claimed, then, if a direct issue is raised and decided on the question of title, the decision will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by A against B for the rent for a subsequent period either of the same[1125] or other[1126] property held under the same title; but, if there is no direct issue raised on the question of title, and the finding falls short of going to the very root of the title upon which the claim for rent is based, it will not have effect of res judicata. If the question of title is gone into in the previous suit as if the right of rent were sought to be established not for one particular year, but once for all, it will be said to have been directly and substantially in issue; but if the question of title is gone into in the previous suit as if the right of rent were sought to be established not once for all, but for one particular year, it will be said to have been in issue collaterally or incidentally.[1127] The same principles apply to other cases of recurring liability such as malikana,[1128] maintenance,[1129] interest,[1130] annuity,[1131] etc. Where the question is whether the decision in a previous litigation could operate as res judicata in a later suit relating to a similar claim for subsequent years, the test to be applied is whether the prior decision was based on a general principle applicable to later years or whether it proceeded on considerations peculiar to that year. A subsequent suit would be barred in the former but not in the latter case. It would make no difference whether the prior judgment was on an issue of law or fact.[1132]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A sues B for rent due for the year 1902. The defence is that the land is rent-free. An issue is raised, "whether the land is rent-free". The court finds that the land is rent-free, and A's suit is dismissed. Subsequently, A sues B claiming rent for the year 1904. B again sets up the same defence, namely, that the land is rent-free. Here, the question of A's right to recover the rent having been "directly and substantially" in issue in the previous suit, a suit for the rent for 1904 is barred as res judicata.[1133]

(ii) A sues B for rent in kind for betel trees for the year 1897–98 alleging that B was liable to pay. B applied for time to file a written statement which was refused. The only issue raised was as to amount of produce and the suit was decreed. Next year, A again sued B for rent in kind for

---

1124. Run Bahadur v Lucho Koer, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 301 : 121 IA 23; Srihari v Khitish Chandra, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 569; Raguban v Hardeo, AIR 1955 Pat 39 : (1955) ILR 34 Pat 324.
1125. Bishun Das v Laxmi Narayan, AIR 1949 All 596; Nobo v Foyzbux, (1876) ILR 1 Cal 202; Gnanada Gobinda Chowdhury v Nalini Bala Debi, AIR 1926 Cal 650 : (1926) 43 Cal LJ 146.
1126. Chandi Prasad v Mahendra, (1902) ILR 24 All 112.
1127. Gnanada Gobinda Chowdhury v Nalini Bala Debi, AIR 1926 Cal 650 : (1926) 43 Cal LJ 146.
1128. Balkishen v Kishan Lal, (1889) ILR 11 All 148; Gopi Nath v Bhugwant, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 697.
1129. Bhikabhai v Bai Bhuri, (1903) ILR 27 Bom 418.
1130. Pahlwan v Risal, (1882) ILR 4 All 55.
1131. Dwarka Das v Akhay Singh, (1908) ILR 30 All 470.
1132. Govardhan Appalacharlu v Govardhan Rangacharlu, AIR 1957 AP 1002 : (1956) Andh WR 954.
1133. Rakhal Doss v Heera, (1874) 22 WR 282; Venkatachalapati v Krishna, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 287; Natesa v Venkatarama, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 510; Dwarka Das v Akhay Singh, (1908) ILR 30 All 470

> 1898–99 and B pleaded that he was not liable to pay any rent. Here, the question of B's liability for all years was not alleged in the previous suit and was not therefore, directly and substantially in issue and that suit is not barred by res judicata.[1134]

It may here be observed that each year's rent is in itself a separate and entire cause of action, and where a suit is brought for the rent due for a particular year, or a judgment obtained in that suit, whatever the defence may have been, would seem only to extend to the subject matter of the suit, and hence, the landlord is at liberty to bring another suit for the next year's rent and the tenant is at liberty to set up to that suit, any defence he thinks proper. The above proposition, however, is subject to this, and here comes in the doctrine of res judicata, that neither party is at liberty to re-open in the suit for rent for the next year, any question that was substantially and necessarily tried and determined between them in the suit for rent for the previous year.[1135] For, the essence of the doctrine of res judicata is that where a material issue has been tried and determined between the same parties in a proper suit and in competent court as to the status of one of them in relation to the other or as to a right or title claimed by either of them against the other, it cannot again be tried in a new suit against them.[1136] A competent court would include by reason of the new Explanation VIII, a court of limited jurisdiction provided the issue determined by that court, though not the subsequent suit, was within its competence. When the nature of requirement pleaded in the earlier suit was different from that in the present suit, the bar of res judicata will not operate.[1137]

Maintenance—As regards maintenance, it is to be noted that a decree for maintenance at a particular rate is no bar to a subsequent suit for maintenance at an enhanced rate on the ground of altered circumstances, for the rate of maintenance is a variable quantity changing from time to time according to the circumstances of the parties affected by the decree;[1138] but, a right to maintenance may be barred by res judicata.[1139]

Status—In cases where the question of status liable to change from time to time arises, such question though decided previously does not attract the principle of res judicata. Thus the question of whether a person is Adhiar as defined by the Assam Adhiars Protection and Regulation Act, 1948, can be examined during each year as it is dependent on many circumstances liable to alter from time to time.[1140]

(iii) Rate of Rent or Area for Which Rent Is Payable.—In this class of cases also, both suits are for rent, the first suit being for rent for a particular period and the second for rent for a subsequent period. The matter which is pleaded as res judicata is not the plaintiff's title to the land of which the rent is claimed, but the rate of rent or the area for which rent is payable. If the court in the first suit tries and determines the issue, "what is the proper rate of rent", or "what is the proper area for which rent is payable" the issue relates not merely to the rent for a particular period but to the rent payable for the full term of the lease, and the question as to the rate of rent or the area, as the case may be, will be res judicata in subsequent suits for rent for the remaining period of the lease.[1141]

1134. Vishnu v Ramling, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 25.
1135. Nobo v Foyzbux, (1876) ILR 1 Cal 202.
1136. Krishna v Bunwari, (1874) ILR 1 Cal 144 : 21 IA 283; Raj Kumar v Gopinath, AIR 1971 All 273.
1137. Surajmal v Radhe Shyam, (1988) 3 SCC 18.
1138. Bangaru v Vijayamachi, (1889) ILR 22 Mad 175.
1139. Durga v Sashibala, (1911) 16 Cal WN 603.
1140. Rahimuddin v Trilok Chandra, AIR 1965 Assam 18 : (1964) ILR 16 Assam 254.
1141. Bakshi v Nizamuddin, (1893) ILR 20 Cal 505; Nil Madhub v Brojo Nath, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 236; Beni Pershad v Chowbey, (1902) 6 Cal WN 589; Mane v Dhani, (1913) 17 Cal WN 76; Bayyan Naidu v Suryanarayana, (1914) ILR 37 Mad 70 (FB); Mittar Poddar v Jadab Chandra, (1917) 2 Pat

[Footnote No. 1141 contd.]

(i) Ex parte Decree.—Ex parte decree operates to render the matter decided res judicata,[1142] and the defendant's failure to appear will not deprive the plaintiff of the full benefit of his decree;[1143] but in the case of a suit in which a decree is passed ex parte (see O IX, rule 6; Code of 1882, section 100), the only matter that can be "directly and substantially" in issue is the matter in respect of which relief has been claimed by the plaintiff in the plaint. A matter in respect of which no relief is claimed cannot be "directly and substantially" in issue in a suit in which a decree is passed ex parte though the court may have gone out of its way and declared the plaintiff to be entitled to relief in respect of such matter. In a case where an insolvency court made an ex parte order declaring a mortgage to be void although no motion to that effect had been made by the official receiver, the decision could not operate as res judicata for the matter was never directly and substantially in issue.[1144] In order that an ex parte decree might be res judicata, it is necessary that the opposite party should have express notice from the pleadings and the prayer that the particular issue or matter would be decided.[1145]

A decree was passed ex parte in favour of the husband under section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Later, the wife also filed a petition for restitution and the husband pleaded res judicata taking the plea in an amendment application filed after framing all the issues. It was held that the suit was barred by res judicata and the fact that the husband should have taken the plea in a written statement under section 41, Indian Evidence Act, 1872, would not come in the way in the case of the decree in the prior suit produced before the court.[1146] A party setting up an ex parte decree as res judicata is not bound to prove that in the earlier suit, the summons had been duly served on the defendant.[1147]

A wrong decision on jurisdiction does not becomes res judicata.[1148]

The reason why even an ex parte judgment becomes res judicata is that such a judgment is pronounced after examining the evidence needed to support the factual allegations in the plaint and after the court is satisfied that the case put forth in the plaint has been substantiated.

ILLUSTRATION

A sues B to recover Rs 500, being the rent due for the year 1906, at the rate of Rs 2 per sq yard. A does not pray for a declaration in the suit that the rate of rent is Rs 2 per sq yard. B does not appear and a decree ex parte is passed against him for Rs 500. Subsequently, A sues B for rent due for the year 1907, also, at the same rate. B appears at the hearing, and contends that the rate is Re 1 per sq yard. B is not precluded from raising that contention, for the question of rate was not "directly and substantially"' in issue between A and B in the former suit, and it cannot therefore, be res judicata. Even if the court in the former suit had declared that A was entitled to rent at the rate of Rs 2 per sq yard, the question of rate would not be res judicata, for A had not asked for a declaration in that suit in respect of the rate of rent. A's claim in the former suit

---

[Footnote No. 1141 contd.]
LJ 159 (incidentally in issue); Beni Madhab v Sarbananda, AIR 1926 Cal 698 : (1926) 48 Cal LJ 135; Rajah of Ramnad v Ramanathaswami, AIR 1921 Mad 306 : (1921) ILR 44 Mad 514.

1142. Hara Chandra v Bepin, (1911) 13 Cal LJ 38; Ram Kumar v Alimaddi, (1912) 17 Cal WN 627; Mohammad Gauhar v Samiruddin, (1913) 18 Cal WN 33; Sarojini v Lakhi, AIR 1925 Cal 427, (1925) 29 Cal WN 253; Baldevdas v Mohanpal, AIR 1948 Bom 232, (1948) ILR Bom 145 : (1947) ILR 49 Bom LR 902.

1143. Biraj Mohini v Chintamoni, (1901) 5 Cal WN 877; Markanda v Varda Kameshwar Naidu, AIR 1949 Pat 197 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 717; Gopalaswami v Pàdmaraju, AIR 1966 AP 210.

1144. Chenchayya v Bapayya, AIR 1932 Mad 233 : (1932) 62 Mad LJ 177.

1145. Life Insurance Corp v Seshi Ammal, AIR 1958 Mad 463.

1146. Nand Kishore v Shanti Kapoor, AIR 1982 All 138.

1147. Brahmanand Rao v Dy Director of Consolidation, Gorakhpur, AIR 1987 All 100 (DB).

1148. Hat Narain v Vinod Kumar, AIR 1987 All 319; Mathura Prasad v Dossibai, AIR 1971 SC 2355 : (1970) 1 SCC 613 : 1970 SCR (3) 830.

> was merely for arrears of rent amounting to Rs 500, and the decree in that suit has not a greater effect than evidence that Rs 500 was due when the decree was passed. Had A in the former suit also prayed for a declaration in respect of the rate of rent as part of the substantive relief, and had the court then declared that the rate of rent was Rs 2, the question of rate would have been res judicata though the decree was passed ex parte; for it would then have been a matter "directly and substantially" in issue.[1149]

A suit to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground that it was obtained by fraud may be barred by res judicata if an application to set it aside on the same ground has been dismissed under O IX, rule 13.[1150]

An ex parte decree was passed in a former suit against "K" during the pendency of the subsequent suit between the purchaser from "K" and the plaintiff. The matter was directly and substantially the same in both the suits. In spite of service of summons "K" did not contest the suit. It was held by the Supreme Court that the ex parte decree passed against him could be taken as final decision on hearing and as such it would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[1151] Explaining the conditions to be satisfied for operation of the principle of res judicata, Tarun Chatterjee J, speaking for the Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> We have carefully examined the provisions under section 11 of the CPC. After a careful reading of the provisions under section 11 of the CPC, it is discernible that in order to constitute res judicata, the following conditions must be satisfied—
>
> (i) There must be two suits—one former suit and the other subsequent suit;
>
> (ii) The Court which decided the former suit must be competent to try the subsequent suit;
>
> (iii) The matter directly and substantially is issue must be the same either actually or constructively in both the suits;
>
> (iv) The matter directly and substantially in issue is the subsequent suit must have been heard and finally decided by the court in the former suit;
>
> (v) The parties to the suits or the parties under whom they or any of them claim must be the same in both the suits;
>
> (vi) The parties in both the suits must have litigated under the same title. [1152]

(j) Suit for Eviction

Where, the suit for eviction was filed by the landlord on the ground that the premises were required for starting business by plaintiff's son, the plaintiff's son became advocate and the plea for requirement of premises for starting business was withdrawn, the second suit for eviction on the ground that the premises were required for starting office of plaintiff's advocate son is not barred by res judicata.[1153]

The basic principle of res judicata is that the cause of action for the second suit being merged in the first suit, it does not survive anymore. Thus, in a case, the earlier suit filed under section 11 (2) of the Kerala Building (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1965 on the ground of arrears of rent was dismissed with a finding that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant and no rent was paid. The said finding was upheld in appeal. It was held by a Full

---

1149. Madhusudun v Brae, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 300.
1150. See note under that rule, "Ex parte Decree Obtained by Fraud".
1151. Saroja v Chinnusamy, AIR 2007 SC 3067 : (2007) 8 SCC 329 : 2007 (4) Civil Court Cases 101 (SC).
1152. Saroja v Chinnusamy, AIR 2007 SC 3067, at p 3068, para 4 : (2007) 8 SCC 329 : 2007 (4) Civil Court Cases 101 (SC).
1153. SS Khurana v Mahaveer Prasad, AIR 2004 Raj 107.

Bench of the Kerala High Court that the finding is the earlier suit will operate as res judicata in subsequent suit under section 11(2) of the Act in view of section 15 of the said Act.[1154]

Explaining the provisions of the Kerala Act of 1965, JB Koshy J (as he then was), observed as follows:

> In this case, earlier in R.C.P. No. 41 of 1989 even though it was found that the rent control petitioner had title to the property there was no landlord-tenant relationship with the counter petitioner and there is no obligation to pay rent and petition for arrears of rent was dismissed. The above was confirmed by the appellate authority R.C.A. No. 36 of 1991 rightly or wrongly. No revision application was filed and the above became final. In view of Section 15, we only hold that since, in the earlier proceedings under section 11(2), it was held that there is no landlord-tenant relationship and no rent was paid, subsequent petition under section 11(2) is barred. It is true that in an earlier small cause suit rent deed was accepted by the revision petitioner. Effect of the same has to be decided by the civil court. All these matters can be agitated in the civil court as final adjudication of the dispute has to be done by the civil court and notwithstanding the earlier findings regarding title to the property and landlord-tenant relationship and arrears of rent. All the matters can be re-agitated in the civil court. Therefore, without prejudice to the right of the parties to approach the civil court, we set aside the order of eviction passed under section 11(2) as it is hit by the principles of res judicata adopted in section 15 of the Kerala Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act.[1155]

(k) Suspension of Rent.—If the landlord's suit for rent for a particular period has been dismissed on the ground that the premises are let for one rent and that he has dispossessed the tenant of part of the tenure; then if the landlord sues again for rent for a subsequent period, the tenant claiming a suspension of rent must again prove that he has been kept out of possession during the period of the subsequent suit. This is because the onus of proving eviction is on the tenant, and the subject matter of the two suits is different.[1156]

(l) Election.—Where in relation to reserved constituency, the election to the office of "Pradhan of the Panchayat" was challenged by way of election petition on the ground that the candidate did not belong to the reserved category, the said election petition was dismissed and no revision petition was filed resulting into the attaining of the finality of the order of election tribunal. The re-agitation of the same issue that the petitioner was not entitled to contest the election in the constituency reserved for the schedule caste, before district magistrate, under section 95(1)(g)(iii-a) Uttar Pradesh Panchayati Raj Act (26 of 1947) was found not permissible.[1157]

(m) Suit under Section 77, Registration Act, and Res Judicata.—If a suit under section 77 of the Indian Registration Act, 1908 to enforce registration of a sale deed is infructuous, the purchaser is not debarred from suing for specific performance of the contract of sale;[1158] but, when a party refuses to admit execution on the ground that the document has been materially altered and the court finds in a suit under section 77 of the Indian Registration Act that the document has been materially altered, the finding operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.[1159]

(n) Divorce Petition and Res Judicata.—Where, in the earlier petition under Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, the finding was recorded by the trial court that the averments made in para no

---

1154. Bharathi v Vinod S Sivasudha, AIR 2008 Ker 125 : (2008) 1 Ker LT 93 (FB).
1155. Bharathi v Vinod S Sivasudha, AIR 2008 Ker 125, para 7 p 131-132 : (2008) 1 Ker LT 93 (FB).
1156. Sateeshchandra v Resheekesh, AIR 1933 Cal 290 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 247.
1157. Hotilal v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2002 All 257.
1158. Balkishen v Bechan, (1932) ILR 54 All 68.
1159. Dwijendra v Jogeshchandra, AIR 1924 Cal 600 : (1924) 39 Cal LJ 40.

4(b) of the written statement filed by the wife did not constitute cruelty and in the absence of filing appeal the said finding had attained finality, the subsequent petition for divorce filed by the husband on the ground that the imputations made by the wife in her written statement in earlier petition was itself an act of cruelty, was found barred by principle of res judicata.[1160]

In a divorce case, the husband sought divorce on the ground that the wife deserted him. Whereas wife led evidence that the husband the kept a woman and she left her matrimonial home because of ill-treatment by husband. There was a finding by the trial court in an earlier petition filed by husband for judicial separation that wife was forced to leave and the husband himself deserted her. It was held by the Chhattisgarh High Court that the earlier finding would operate as res judicata.[1161]

Where the ground of cruelty available at the time of earlier petition for divorce under section 13(1)(ia) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1956 was not raised and no explanation was afforded for not raising it earlier, it was held that the subsequent divorce petition on the said ground would be barred by principles of constructive res judicata.[1162]

(o) Decree for Restitution of Conjugal Rights and Res Judicata.—A sues B, his wife, for restitution of rights. Restitution is granted, and B goes and lives with A (that is to say, the decree is satisfied). B again leaves A, and A again sues B for the same relief. The suit is not barred as res judicata.[1163] The distinction between this and the case of an injunction is that while in a suit for injunction the defendant is forever restrained from doing the acts complained of, the wife cannot be directed in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights to live with her husband for the rest of her life, for many things may occur entitling her to leave him, eg, gross cruelty. On the other hand, where two suits are filed one after the other, one for restitution of conjugal rights and the other for judicial separation, even though the two suits and reliefs claimed therein are of a different nature, a finding in the former suit, if not challenged in appeal, may constitute res judicata in the second suit.[1164]

(p) Custom.—A mere negative finding that a custom is not proved will not operate as res judicata, for one man may prove more than another.[1165]

(q) Decree for Possession Conditional on Payment.—Where in a suit by the heirs of a Mahomedan against his widow in possession of his estate in lieu of her dower, a decree is passed against her that they should have possession of their shares of the estate upon payment of a proportionate part of the dower debt within six months, and that upon failure to pay their suit should be dismissed, and the plaintiffs fail to pay within six months, the decree is no bar to a subsequent suit for immediate possession by the same plaintiffs against the widow on the ground that the dower debt had in the meantime been satisfied out of the income of the estate in the hands of the widow.[1166] A right to get possession of land at the date when the suit to recover it is instituted is a wholly different thing, a wholly different res from the right to recover it at some future time and possibly under wholly altered circumstances.[1167] So, a consent decree

---

1160. Santosh Sharma v Ashok Kumar, AIR 2001 Del 422 (DB).
1161. Shiv Kumar Chandrakar, (2006) 1 CgLJ 30 : (2006) 37 All Ind cas 771.
1162. Maya Tiwari v Ajay alias Baba Shukla, AIR 2008 (NOC) 2308 (Chh) (DB).
1163. Keshavlal v Parvati, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 327.
1164. Trilok Singh v Savitri Devi, AIR 1972 All 52. See also Krishna Pillai v Subhadra Amma, AIR 1971 Ker 44.
1165. Ram Chandar v Darayoo Singh, AIR 1933 Lah 593 : (1933) 14 Lah 365.
1166. Maina Bibi v Chaudhari, AIR 1925 PC 63 : (1925) ILR 47 All 250 : 52 IA 145; affirming (1919) ILR 41 All 538; Nawazi Begam v Dilfaroz Begam, AIR 1927 All 39 : (1926) ILR 48 All 803; compared in Hadi v Kasim, AIR 1927 Oudh 60.
1167. Maina Bibi v Chaudhari, AIR 1925 PC 63 : (1925) ILR 47 All 250 : (1925) 52 IA 145.

between a usufructuary mortgagee and his mortgagor-tenant will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the latter to redeem the mortgage.[1168]

(r) Compensation for Land Acquisition.—The courts while determining the amount of compensation for acquisition of land would be bound to take into consideration only the materials brought on records. However, factors which would be relevant for determining the amount of compensation would vary from case to case and no hard and fast rule can be laid down therefor. The principle of res judicata will, therefore, have no application in the fact of the present matter.[1169]

In a case of acquisition of land and grant of its compensation, the high court issued directions by way of mandamus, the land acquisition officer while passing award took into consideration, said directions of high court and awarded 12% additional compensation at market value. The said order never came to be questioned and, thus, attained finality. The reference court in reference by some of the land owners, or for that matter, the high court exercising its appellate jurisdiction could not have dealt with the said question, as the principle of res judicata fully applies. Furthermore, the writ of mandamus is required to be obeyed unless judgment is overruled or legislation by way of validating statute is brought into force.[1170]

Where on the question whether the claimants were entitled to receive entire compensation or whether it was the right of state government to receive compensation amount, there was no finding on the reference made to district judge by the three claimants, which had attained finality, the bar of res judicata was not attracted.[1171]

(s) Suit for Injunction.—It cannot be contended that the remedy of injunction is an equitable relief and in equity, the doctrine of res judicata cannot be extended to a decree of a court of limited pecuniary jurisdiction. It is settled law that in a suit for injunction when title is in issue for the purpose of granting injunction, the issue, directly and substantially, arises in that suit between the parties. When the same issue is put in issue in a later suit based on title between the same parties or their privies in a subsequent suit the decree in the injunction suit equally operates as res judicata.[1172]

Where, the earlier suit filed by appellant was withdrawn with liberty to file fresh suit and the earlier suit for injunction filed by respondent was dismissed on the ground that it was not a proper remedy, the fresh suit filed by appellant on the same cause of action is not barred by res judicata.[1173] Where, the earlier suit for mandatory injunction was filed for removal of hut in the suit property and the finding of perfection of title of the defendant by adverse possession made therein attained finality, the said finding of title in the earlier suit would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession of the same property between the same parties as matter directly and substantially in issue in both suits were same.[1174]

1168. Ambu Nair v Kelu Nair, AIR 1930 Mad 305 : (1930) ILR 33 Mad 805.
1169. UOI v Pramod Gupta, AIR 2005 SC 3708 : AIR 2005 SCW 4645 : (2005) 12 SCC 1 : (2005) 8 JT 203 SC.
1170. Ishwar Dutt v Land Acquisition Collector, AIR 2005 SC 3165 : (2005) 7 SCC 190.
1171. Kiran Tondon v Allahabad Development Authority, AIR 2004 SC 2006 : AIR 2004 SCW 2089 : (2004) 10 SCC 745.
1172. Aanaimuthu Thevar v Alagammal, AIR 2005 SC 4004 : 2005 AIR SCW 3516 : (2005) 6 SCC 202 : JT 2005 (6) SC 333.
1173. K Sivaramaiah v Rukmani Ammal, AIR 2004 SC 508 : AIR 2003 SCW 6490 : (2004) 1 SCC 471
1174. Kodepaka Narsiah v Dandi Narasimha, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1126 (AP) : (2006) 2 Andh LD 716.

In a case where a dispute arose about succession and management of "Gaddi" of Math, the plaintiff filed a suit for permanent injunction on the basis of his entitlement to succeed to the Gaddi. The matter was taken to the Supreme Court where the judgment of the high court was reversed and the dismissal of the suit recorded by the two lower courts was upheld. However, while disposing of the case, the Supreme Court observed that the plaintiff may file suit for possession, if he is so advised. When the matter reached the Supreme Court again, it was held that the observation of the Supreme Court in the earlier round of litigation would not prevent the court from dismissing the suit as barred by res judicata. The plaintiff's claim on the basis of his legal entitlement was rejected by the Supreme Court in earlier suit. Once the issue of entitlement stood determined the same would operate as res judicata.[1175]

In a suit for permanent injunction against interference with possession, the trial court held that the plaintiff was in possession and granted a decree of permanent injunction. In a separate suit filed by the applicant for declaration of title and recovery of possession, it was held by the Supreme Court that the decree of permanent injunction does not bar a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession. It is one thing to say that someone is in possession of the suit land and it is quite another to say that he has a right to possess.[1176] The Apex Court quoted a passage from Corpus Juris Secundum (vol 50, para 735, p 229) where a similar aspect in regard to findings on possession and incidental findings on title were dealt with. It is stated:

> Where title to property is the basis of the right of possession, a decision on the question of possession is res judicata on the question of title to the extent that adjudication of title was essential to the judgment; but where the question of the right to possession was the only issue actually or necessarily involved, the judgment is not conclusive on the question of ownership or title.

A suit was filed by a person claiming to be in-charge of the affairs of a Gurudwara that he was the Mohtmim of the said Gurudwara and praying for a decree of permanent injunction. Another suit was filed by the Managing Committee of the said Gurudwara for declaration that the plaintiff in the connected suit was not Mohtmim of Gurudwara. A decree of permanent injunction was granted in the first suit in favour of the plaintiff restraining the Managing Committee from interfering with the plaintiff's possession. The decree attained finality. A second appeal filed by the Vice-President of the Managing Committee not claiming any interest in his individual capacity, was held by Supreme Court to be barred by res judicata.[1177] Explaining the status of the parties in the earlier and subsequent suit, SB Siha J speaking for the Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> The judgment and decree passed in the suit filed by Sant Hari Singh might not have been binding upon the appellant here in had he claimed any right or interest over the said property in his individual capacity and not as a member of the Managing Committee. Indisputably, the Managing Committee did not file any Second Appeal against the judgment and decree passed against it. The said judgment and decree, therefore, attained finality.[1178]

In a case under the Jammu and Kashmir Civil Procedure Code, where the earlier suit based on agreement to sell, was for permanent injunction to restrain the defendant to sell the property to someone else whereas the subsequent suit accrued when despite presentation of

---

1175. Dadu Dayalu Mahasabha, Jaipur (Trust) v Mahant Ram Niwas, AIR 2008 SC 2187 : (2008) 11 SCC 753.
1176. Williams v Laurdusamy, AIR 2008 SC 2212 : (2008) 5 SCC 647 : (2008) 3 Civil Court 022 (SC).
1177. Harbans Singh v Sant Hari Singh, AIR 2009 SC 1819 : (2009) 2 SCC 526 : (2009) 2 Civil Court C 315 (SC).
1178. Harbans Singh v Sant Hari Singh, AIR 2009 SC 1819, para 12 at p 1821 : (2009) 2 SCC 526 : (2009) 2 Civil Court C 315 (SC).

Hundies demand of money was refused, it was held that the subsequent suit was not barred under O II, rule 2 or section 11 of the CPC.[1179]

(t) Subject Matter of Suits may be Different.—As the test of res judicata is the matter directly and substantially in issue, it follows that the subject matter of the second suit may be entirely different. Unless the relief claimed in the former suit is the same or alike as the relief claimed in the subsequent suit, the subject matters in the two litigations are different.[1180] Thus, if A claims certain property as the adopted son of X, and the defendant denies the adoption, a finding in A's favour on the issue as to adoption will be binding on the defendant as res judicata in a subsequent suit by A against the same defendant to recover another property claimed under the same title.[1181] It is not open to the defendant to contend that the properties claimed in the two suits being different, the decision on the question of A's adoption in the first suit cannot operate as res judicata in the second. On the same principle, where in a suit brought by A against B for possession of one of the two properties comprised in a sale-deed passed by B to A, B contends that the deed is fictitious, and the court finds that the deed is fictitious, the finding that the sale-deed is invalid will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by A against B to recover the other property under the same sale-deed.[1182] Similarly, in Illustration 1 cited under class (ii) of rent-suits, it is no answer to the plea of res judicata that the subject matters of the two suits are different. The reason is that the matter directly and substantially in issue in both the suits is the same, namely, whether the particular land of which the rent is claimed is rent-free, and the decision thereof on that issue in the first suit operates as res judicata in the subsequent suit; but, the decision cannot apply to other lands unless they form part of the same tenure.[1183] A decision on a question of title in a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties relating to other properties covered by the same title, as the test of res judicata is identity of title and not of property.[1184] Likewise, a decision that certain properties were ancestral would operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties relating to other properties held under the same title.[1185] Difference in the reliefs claimed in the two suits does not render res judicata inapplicable. In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, the court held that the wife had been turned out of the home and the husband sued for divorce on grounds of desertion by the wife. The trial of the issue whether the wife had deserted the husband was barred.[1186]

From the same fundamental principle that the matter directly and substantially in issue, and not the subject matter, constitutes the test of res judicata, it also follows that where a matter directly and substantially in issue in a suit is not the same as that in a previously decided suit, the trial of that matter will not be barred, as res judicata though the subject matter of the two

---

1179. Balwant Rai v Mohan Lal, AIR 2009 J&K 71 : (2009) 3 Cur CC 300.
1180. Dina Dinshaw v Dinshaw Ardeshir, AIR 1970 Bom 341 : (1969) ILR Bom 1043.
1181. Pittapur Raja v Buchi, (1885) ILR 8 Mad 219 : 12 IA 16; Krishna v Bunwari Lal, (1876) ILR 1 Cal 144 : 2 IA 283; Radha Prasad v Lal Saheb, (1891) ILR 13 All 53, p 62 : 17 IA 150; Balkishen v Kishan Lal, (1889) ILR 11 All 148, p 157; Ananta v Damodhar, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 25; Chandi Prasad v Maharaja Mahendra, (1902) ILR 24 All 112; Sitanath v Basudeo, (1900) 2 Cal LJ 540; Dwarka Das v Akay Singh, (1908) ILR 30 All 470; Kedar Nath v Sheo Shankar, AIR 1923 All 613 : (1923) ILR 45 All 515; Abdul Gani v Nabendra Kishore, AIR 1930 Cal 47 : (1929) ILR 57 Cal 258; Mahalingeshwara Devaru v Seetharama, AIR 1978 Kant 213; Rajinder Kumar v Kalyan, (2000) 3 LRI 1119.
1182. Kedar Nath v Sheo Shankar, AIR 1923 All 613 : (1923) ILR 45 All 515.
1183. Ram Chunder v Madho, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 484 : 12 IA 188; Appu v Manradiar, AIR 1961 Ker 298.
1184. Rajalakshmi Dasi v Banamali Sen, AIR 1953 SC 33 : (1953) SCR 154 : (1952) SCJ 618; Venkatasubbiah v Janakiramiah, (1959) Andh LT 156.
1185. Subbarayudu v Balaramiah, AIR 1955 AP 194.
1186. C Sarala v K Nalinakishan, AIR 1991 Ker 362 (DB).

suits may be the same.[1187] An application by a landlord to eject a tenant under the provisions of the West Bengal Rent Control Act, 1950, on the ground that he required the premises for his own use is not barred as res judicata by an order dismissing a previous application because though the subject matter is the same; the matter for decision whether the landlord required the house for his own use at the time of the action is different.[1188]

Canteen workers of the Indian Oil Corporation filed a petition seeking the relief of abolition of Contract Labour System in operation at the canteen run by the corporation and for absorption of the canteen workers as employees. The said petition was rejected. Thereafter, a second petition was filed by the canteen workers seeking the making of a reference under section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 to decide whether the contract between the principal employer and the canteen contractor was sham, nominal and was camouflaged. It was held by the Supreme Court that the second petition is not barred either by res judicata or the principle of estoppel.[1189] Explaining the point, RV Raveendran J speaking for the Bench, observed as follows:

> 10. The assumption that there is an absolute bar on inconsistent pleas being taken by a party, is also not sound. What is impermissible is taking of an inconsistent plea by way of amendment thereby denying the other side, the benefit of an admission contained is the earlier pleading. Mutually repugnant and contradictory pleas, destructive of each other may not be permitted to be urged simultaneously by a plaintiff/petitioner. But when there is no inconsistency in the facts alleged, a party is not prohibited from taking alternative pleas available in law. Similarly, on the same facts, different or alternative reliefs can also be claimed. When the case of the workers is that the contract was sham and nominal, they could seek a relief that they be declared as the direct employees of the principal employer; and if that contention failed and it is found that the contract was valid, then they can seek issue a direction to the Central Government to consider their representation for abolition of contract labour. Similarly where the workers contend that the contract between principal employer and the contractor was sham and merely a camouflage to deny them the benefits of labour laws, and if their prayer for relief under CLRA Act is rejected, they can then seek relief under the ID Act. The contention of IOC that on account of the dismissal of the first petition, the second petition for a different relief was barred either by principle of res judicata or by principle of estoppel is liable to be rejected.[1190]

The earlier suit for eviction was filed on the ground that sub-tenants had been illegally inducted by the tenant. The suit was dismissed. After that, the West Bengal Premises Act, 1956, was enacted and another suit was filed for eviction, on the ground inter alia that section 13(1)(a) of the Act had been violated. It was held that the earlier dismissal did not operate as res judicata.[1191]

The earlier suit was to claim title to certain items of property which were the subject matter of a deed. The suit did not involve questions of coparcenership. Present suit for partition was based on coparcenary. It was held that the earlier suit did not operate as res judicata.[1192]

The plaintiff in a suit was the auction purchaser of the premises. He filed a suit for injunction praying for restraining the Electricity Board from enforcing the demand of dues of the previous owner. The suit was dismissed and second suit was filed for declaration that the 1187. Jagatjit v Sarabjit, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 159, p 172 : 18 IA 165, p 176; Ragho v Gopal, AIR 1930 Bom 132 : (1930) ILR 54 Bom 162.

---

1188. Official Receiver v UOI, AIR 1961 Cal 432; Harak Chand v Karodi Mal, AIR 1958 MP 5.
1189. Sarva Shramik Sangh v Indian Oil Corp, AIR 2009 SC 2355 : (2009) 11 SCC 609.
1190. Sarva Shramik Sangh v Indian Oil Corp, AIR 2009 SC 2355, para 10 at p 2359 : (2009) 11 SCC 609.
1191. Shantilal Rampuria v Vega Trading Corp, AIR 1989 SC 1819 : (1989) 3 SCC 552 : (1989) 3 SCR 632 : (1989) 3 JT 301.
1192. Shankarrao Daji Saheb Shinde v Vithalrao Ganpatrao Shinde, AIR 1989 SC 879 : (1989) 2 Sup SCC 162.

notice threatening disconnection for non-payment of dues of previous owner was illegal. It was held by the Supreme Court that the matter that was directly and substantially in issue in the second suit was completely different from the matter that was directly and substantially in issue in the first suit. The reliefs claimed were also different, as the first suit was for a permanent injunction and the second suit was for a declaration and consequential relief. Therefore, the second suit was not barred by res judicata.[1193]

Where both the matter directly and substantially in issue and the subject matter are the same in both the suits, the matter in issue will be res judicata not because of the identity of the subject matter, but because of the identity of the matter directly and substantially in issue.[1194] Where the matter directly and substantially in issue and the subject matter are both different in the two suits, the matter in issue is not res judicata not because the subject matters are different but because the matters directly and substantially in issue in the two suits are different;[1195] but, before a decision given in a previous suit with reference to a particular subject matter could be held to operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit relating to a different subject matter, it must be shown that the issue raised in the subsequent suit was directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit. Where it was not put in issue, no bar of res judicata can arise, merely on the basis of the reasoning and observations in the previous judgment.[1196]

(B) Matter which Might and Ought to have been Made Ground of Attack or Defence

Even otherwise, it is settled law that in every proceeding the whole of the claim which a party is entitled to make should be made and where a party omits to sue in respect of any portion of the claim he cannot afterwards sue for the portion so omitted. Explanation 4 to section 11 of the CPC also provides that any matter which might or ought to have been made a ground of defence or attack in a former proceeding will be deemed to have been a matter directly and subsequently in issue in that proceeding. Therefore, clearly the claim now made was barred on principle of res judicata or principles analogous thereto.[1197]

(a) Matter Constructively in Issue: Explanation IV

A matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence is a matter which is constructively in issue. In the cases cited in the note under (A)—Actually in Issue: Explanation III, the matters were "actually" in issue for they were actually alleged by one party and denied by the other. It often happens, however, that a matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack by the plaintiff to substantiate the relief claimed by him in the suit is not alleged by him as a ground of attack; and also that a matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence by the defendant is not set up as a ground of defence. A matter, which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence in the former suit, but which has not been alleged as a ground of attack or defence, will be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit (Explanation IV); that is to say, though it has not been actually in issue directly and substantially, it will be regarded as having been constructively in issue directly and substantially. This section draws no distinction between the claim that was actually made in a suit and the claim that might and 1193. Haryana State Electricity Board v Hanuman Rica Mills, Dhanauri, AIR 2010 SC 3835 : (2010) 9 SCC 145.

1194. Triloki v Pertab, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 809 : 15 IA 13.
1195. Zamindar of Pittampuram v Proprietors of Kolanki, (1878) ILR 2 Mad 23 : 5 IA 206.
1196. Jai Prakash v Bishambar Das, AIR 1954 All 215; New Victoria Mills v Labour Court, AIR 1970 All 210. See further under the same heading.
1197. Meher Rusi Dalal v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 3491 : (2004) 7 SCC 362 : (2004) 4 AWC 3266 SC : JT 2004 (5) SC 129.

ought to have been made. If the parties had an opportunity of controverting it, that is the same thing as if the matter had been actually controverted and decided.[1198]

The principle and philosophy behind Explanation-IV is to prevent "the abuse of process of the court", through re-agitation of the settled issues.[1199]

A conjoint reading of section 11 and Explanation IV shows that a plea which might and ought to have been taken in the earlier suit, shall be deemed to have been taken and decided against the person raising the plea in the subsequent suit. In a particular case the high court in the writ petition filed by the petitioner challenging the validity of the notice of eviction given to him by government under the Land Encroachment Act, gave liberty to the government to establish its title in civil court which order was also confirmed by the division bench in the writ appeal filed by the government. Although before the date of the disposal of the writ appeal the Andhra Pradesh Land Grabbing (Prohibition) Act, 1982 had come into force, the government did not seek liberty from the court to approach the special court under that Act, it cannot be held that on the principle of "might and ought", government was barred from approaching the special court. It also cannot be held that the proceeding before the special court was barred by the principle of res judicata, when the government had accordingly filed the civil suit before civil court for declaration of its title and recovery of possession of land in dispute and by operation of law, under sub-section (8) of section 8 of the Act it stood transferred to the special court and the government also invoked the jurisdiction of the special court under sections 7 and 8 of the Act by filing a petition against the petitioner. Thus, the principles of constructive res judicata, on the ground that the fact of enforcement of the Act on 6 September 1982 was not brought to the notice of the division bench of the high court at the time of disposal of the writ appeal, would not be available to the petitioner. Further, as a statutory right was created in favour of the state under the Act, to eradicate a public mischief, it cannot be precluded from having recourse to the provisions of the Act by operation of the principle of "might and ought" in Explanation IV of section 11 of the CPC, when its title or interest had not been finally determined by the high court.[1200]

In the first round of litigation when the high court had gone into the question of mala fide, though the minister was impleaded as a party, it had remitted the matter for disposal on merits. Obviously the words "might and ought" used in section 11 of CPC stand in the way and therefore, it operates as res judicata for raising the same question in the present writ petition. The high court could not have gone into that question, much less giving direction to the appellate authority, namely the Excise and Taxation Commissioner to go into that question.[1201] What ought to be pleaded and argued by a party by challenging an order, is the discretion of the party but all points available would be deemed to have been considered by the court while disposing off such matters.[1202]

The company against whom the money suits claiming mesne profits for wrongful occupation of premises by the company were filed, did not challenge the jurisdiction of the court trying the suit, either at the time of filing the suit by the original plaintiff in his capacity as executor

---

1198. Beharilal v Ram Swarup, AIR 1949 All 265 : (1949) ILR All 144; Sukra v Ram Harakh, AIR 1951 All 195 (FB); Cheria Veetil v Chattu Nambiar, AIR 1951 Mad 285; Newington v Levy, (1870) LR 6 CP 180.
1199. State of Karnataka v All India Manufacturers Organization, AIR 2006 SC 1846 : (2006) 4 SCC 683 : (2006) (4) Kant LJ 369.
1200. Konda Lakshmana Bapuji v Govt of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2002 SC 1012 : (2002) 3 SCC 258 : (2002) 1 SCR 651 : JT 2002 (2) 253.
1201. State of Punjab v Surender Kumar, (1997) 9 SCC 66.
1202. Rocky Tyres v Ajit Jain, AIR 1998 P&H 202.

under a will executed by the owner of the premises, or at the time of substitution of his personal representatives. Hence, the plea by the company in the winding up proceedings for the first time, as to the incompetency of the personal representatives to continue the proceeding on the ground that the premises were transferred pendente lite, would squarely come within the mischief of the principle of constructive res judicata. A plea deliberately given up in the earlier suit must not be allowed to be raised in the subsequent proceedings.[1203] It would not be just and proper to deny relief to the appellant, which is otherwise due on the ground that earlier it had only assailed the question of eligibility to tax. It is correct that the plea now taken could have been advanced earlier as well, but the fact this was not done should not be a ground to deny the relief which was otherwise due to the appellant. The technical plea of constructive res judicata should not stand in the way of appellant in a case of the present nature.[1204]

As suit was filed for eviction from premises let out for commercial purposes, the grounds of eviction was the bona fide need of the landlord. It was dismissed. Second suit for eviction would have been competent if a new ground had later arisen for eviction.[1205]

The principle of res judicata comes into play when by judgment and order a decision of a particular issue is implicit in it, that is, it must be deemed to have been necessarily decided by implication, even than the principles of res judicata on that issue is directly applicable. When any matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence or attack in a former proceeding but was not so made, then such a matter in the eye of law, to avoid multiplicity of litigation and to bring finality in it, is deemed to have been constructively in issue and, therefore, is taken as decided. Thus, in a case relating to right to hereditary office, the issue of adoption was already decided by a competent civil court between the same parties, the Sub-Divisional Officer could not decide that issue and without giving any decision thereon could not have allowed the claim. Therefore, the principle of res judicata would be applicable to the proceeding before the Sub-Divisional Officer.[1206]

If an earlier judgment has to operate as res judicata in the subsequent proceedings, then all the necessary facts including the headings of the earlier litigation must be placed on record in the subsequent proceedings. However, where in the subsequent suit, the trial Judge in extenso had dealt with the pleadings of the parties in the earlier suit, it was held that there was no question of non-compliance of the mandatory and basic requirement for the application of the principle of res judicata.[1207]

The plea of res judicata applies, except in special cases, not only to points on which the court was actually required by the parties to form an opinion and to pronounce judgment. but to every point which properly belonged to the subject of the litigation, and which the parties exercising reasonable diligence might have brought forward at the time.[1208] The principle underlying Explanation IV is that res judicata is not confined to issues which the court is actually asked to decide but covers issues or facts which are so clearly part of the subject matter of the litigation and so, clearly could have been raised that it would be an abuse of the process

---

1203. Re Bajrangbali Engineers, AIR 1989 Cal 356.
1204. Jeypore Sugar Co Ltd v Sales Tax Officer, (1998) 9 SCC 358.
1205. Sumjmal v Radheysham, AIR 1988 SC 1345 : (1988) 3 SCC 18 : JT 1988 (2) SC 210 : (1988) 2 UJ 233 SC.
1206. Ravichandra Dagdu Sonavane v Vithu Hira Mahar, AIR 2010 SC 818 : (2009) 10 SCC 273.
1207. Ravichandra Dagdu Sonavane v Vithu Hira Mahar, AIR 2010 SC 818 : (2009) 10 SCC 273.
1208. Sobhag Singh v Ranjit Singh, AIR 1945 PC 132 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 743 (PC); Thakur Durga Baksh Singh v Rama Umanath, AIR 1944 Oudh 94 : (1944) ILR 19 Luck 428; Mathuralal v Jamnadas, AIR 1941 Ngp 346; Vinayak v Dattatraya, (1902) ILR 25 Bom 661, p 667; Krishna Chandra v Surendra Nath, AIR 1932 Cal 385 : (1932) 36 Cal WN 72; Mohor Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 1281.

of the court to allow a new proceeding to be started in respect of them.[1209] Where the plea which is sought to be raised in the subsequent litigation was not available to the party at the time of the previous litigation, it cannot be constructively res judicata;[1210] but, where a plea was available at the time of the suit but was not availed of, the same plea would not be allowed to be taken at a later stage against the execution of the decree passed in that suit.[1211] If the plea of sections 2(25) and 125(3) of the Land Reforms Act has not been raised in a suit of redemption, it operates as constructive res judicata on the principle of "might and ought". If it is taken and rejected, it operates as res judicata and the same cannot be raised in execution. Even if it is left open, in equity, justice and good conscience, it must not be extended to the mortgage.[1212]

Earlier award (based on compromise) and decree in terms of award were based on surrender by the tenant himself. The tenant cannot thereafter say that it was an eviction decree,[1213] in case where ground of attack or defence which was not available when the earlier proceeding commenced but arose only during its pendency.[1214]

Constructive res judicata—There is no question of constructive res judicata where there is no adjudication in the earlier proceedings.[1215] The principle of constructive res judicata means any matter which "might and ought" to have been made a ground of defence or attack must be made in the same suit and cannot be brought in the subsequent suit as it would be deemed to be a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit.[1216] The appellant had applied for a grant of mining lease for chromite extraction in the State of Orissa. The lease was originally granted to Tata Iron and Steel Company (TISCO) for a period of 20 years in 1953. TISCO in 1993 applied for a second renewal of lease for the entire area. The central government approved the renewal but for a limited period of 10 years. The central government, on a complaint, reviewed this order and granted approval for the renewal of lease for TISCO, reducing the area by half and directed the rest of the area be made available to other industries. TISCO challenged this order before the high court. The other steel manufacturers, including the appellant, joined the proceedings by filing cross petitions.

The high court held that the order of the Central Government cannot be sustained in law and requires re-considerations. An expert committee was constituted to consider the submissions of all the parties. The Central Government acted on the report of the committee and requested the state government to grant renewal of mining lease in favour of TISCO for a period of 20 years over a lesser period. Accordingly, the state sliced down the claim of TISCO for allotment by 50%. The remaining 50% was to be distributed between the other applicants on pro-rata basis. The appeal to the Supreme Court by Special Leave, on behalf of TISCO was dismissed. Neither the appellant nor any of the contesting respondents challenged the order of the State to the extent it sliced down their claim for allotment by 50% from the available area.

During the pendency of the aforesaid SLP, the appellant filed a writ petition in the high court, after its representation to the central government for grant of mining lease in the entire

---

1209. Greenhall v Mollard, (1947) 2 All ER 255; State of Uttar Pradesh v Nawab Hussain, AIR 1977 SC 1680 : (1977) 2 SCC 806 : (1977) 3 SCR 428.
1210. Gurbindar v Lal Singh, AIR 1959 P&H 123 : (1958) ILR Punj 2258.
1211. Harihar Prasad v Jodh Singh, AIR 1971 Pat 284; Sarjug Singh v Basisth Singh, AIR 1970 Pat 237 : (1968) ILR 47 Pat 178.
1212. Victoria v KV Naik, (1997) 6 SCC 23.
1213. Kamlabai v Mangilal, (1987) 4 SCC 585.
1214. Subbaraju v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1989 AP 233.
1215. Kewal Singh v Lajwanti, AIR 1980 SC 161 : (1980) 1 SCC 290 : (1980) 1 SCJ 486.
1216. Shalini Agarwal v Sri Shandar Industries Pvt Ltd, Civil Revision No. 157 of 2019, decided on 8 December 2020 (Uttarakhand HC).

area was turned down and state government sliced down the claim of the four parties covered by the order by 50%. The petition was rejected on the ground of res judicata in view of TISCO's case. The issue before the Supreme Court was whether the writ petition filed by the appellant before the high court was barred by the res judicata and whether the said petition was barred by the principle of constructive res judicata.

It was held that the TISCO's case did not raise a question for considering the assessment of the relative needs of the appellant and the other respondents for chrome ore. Such an issue was not expressly adjudicated upon and the findings thereon, cannot be made the subject matter of fresh proceedings between the parties.[1217]

Where a decree operated as res judicata, its operativeness does not depend on the correctness of the former decision.[1218]

Principle of constructive res judicata applies to execution proceedings.[1219] Doctrine of res judicata partakes of the character of substantive law, though it is usually regarded as belonging to procedure, and applies to proceedings under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.[1220] Judgment of a high court is binding in all proceedings in the same case; more so, upon a judgment unsuccessfully challenged before the Supreme Court.[1221] The issue involved in two earlier suits was same as in the instant suit. The party filed three suits accepting decree in earlier two suits and allowed opportunity at his hand to be lost to contest by not filing appeal. It was held that the party was estopped by the principle of constructive res judicata to reopen same issue in respect of same property between the same parties.[1222] The courts in an earlier litigation between the appellant and a partnership firm recorded the clear finding about disruption of joint Hindu family resulting in separation of five brothers and carrying on the family business by them as partners. Subsequent suit was filed by the appellant in capacity as son of one of the five brothers, for a declaration that he along with the other appellant were members of larger joint family and as such, entitled to the share in the business and properties of the firm. The Supreme Court held that the finding in the previous suit sufficiently barred the present suit as the principles of res judicata were applicable.[1223]

In the earlier suit, issue regarding "Maurisadar" could not be raised regarding the land in defendants' possession. It was held that as regards that issue, the earlier decision cannot be res judicata.[1224] But, when the question raised in the suit could have been raised before revenue authorities in the earlier proceedings and the revenue authorities had competence to decide that, the same issue could not be raised in the subsequent civil suit due to bar of constructive res judicata.[1225]

Deputationists from the State Government were absorbed in the Food Corporation of India as Assistant Grade III. Claiming absorption in the post of Assistant Grade II, they filed a writ petition which was allowed. Second writ petition was filed by them claiming grant of advance increment in accordance with the Regulation. It was held by the Supreme Court that the plea

---

1217. Ferro Alloys Corp Ltd v UOI, [1999] 2 LRI 163.
1218. Kalpu v Sanaurar Khan, AIR 1982 All 307.
1219. Kamlabai v Mangilal, (1987) 4 SCC 585; Raghunath v Damodar, AIR 1978 SC 1820 : (1979) 1 SCC 508.
1220. G Vijaya Lakshmi v G Ramachandra Sakshar Sastry, AIR 1981 SC 1143 : (1981) 2 SCC 646 : (1981) SCR 3 223.
1221. AR Antulay v RS Nayak, AIR 1988 SC 1531 : (1988) 2 SCC 602 : JT 1988 (2) 325.
1222. Shyama Devi v Seventh Addl District Judge, Allahabad, AIR 1998 All 392.
1223. Jai Kishan Dass v Nirmala Devi, (1984) 1 SCC 682.
1224. Nagta Singh v Shiv Singh, AIR 1981 All 75.
1225. Abdul Rahman v Prasony Bai, AIR 2003 SC 718 : (2003) 1 SCC 488 : (2003) 1 SCW 14.

of the bar of res judicata and/or O II, rule 2 of the code was not tenable, as the said claim could not have been made in the earlier writ petition when the petitioners were not certain as to the grade in which they would be fitted. Moreover, since the plea of bar of res judicata had not been taken before the high court, it could not be raised for the first before the Supreme Court.[1226]

Where a petition was made prior to maturity of insurance policy claiming directions to the LIC to make a statement on oath under section 226(3)(vi) of the Income Tax Act, 1961, petition was dismissed after issuing direction to the LIC. The ITO had not withdrawn notice issued to the assignee of policy-holder under section 226(3) of the Income Tax Act, despite the filing of the requisite statement by an LIC petition for policy payment, together with interest. This petition against the LIC was dismissed as withdrawn, as a result of withdrawal of notice by ITO. It was held that subsequent petition raising the question of LIC's liability to pay interest upon principal amount was not barred by res judicata.[1227]

A person who in earlier proceedings (between the same parties) takes the plea that he is not a tenant of the suit land but was cultivating it only as a member of the owner's family cannot in a later suit take the plea that he is a permanent tenant. Constructive res judicata bars such a plea.[1228]

In execution of a money decree passed against a member of a scheduled tribe, his property was sold without prior permission of the competent authority, as required by Orissa Regulation of 1956. Judgment-debtor raised no objection about the want of such permission, either in the suit or in the execution. It was held that he cannot subsequently raise such a plea, which was barred by constructive res judicata, as the basic issue was validity of the sale.[1229]

In a Calcutta case, proceedings were taken under section 8(i), West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955. The holder of the pre-emption alleged that the pre-empted land was non-agricultural. Issue was not raised in earlier proceedings under section 24 of WB Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949. It was held that it could not be raised in proceedings under section 8(i). The party whose representation or conduct led to earlier judgment is precluded from pleading anything contrary to his representation or conduct—not so much because of his earlier representation or conduct, as because of the judgment which precludes the court from adjudicating any issue to be raised by such contrary proceedings.[1230]

Appointment of a receiver depends on the circumstances existing at the time when the matter falls for consideration. The fact that on a particular date, such appointment was refused does not mean that the refusal operates as res judicata even when the circumstances have undergone change.[1231]

Where there is no adjudication in the earlier proceedings, there is no res judicata.[1232] Without any application for recalling or setting aside the impugned order or review, the prayer made in the application under section 86(1) of the Representation of the People Act, 1950 cannot be granted. No challenge has been thrown to the said order. The unsuccessful candidate is a respondent in the election petition. No appeal has been filed and has such no dispute with regard to the said order can be made or entertained at this stage and the contention of the respondent has become barred by principle of res judicata.[1233] If the court came to the 1226. Food Corp of India v Ashish Kumar Ganguly, AIR 2009 SC 2582 : (2009) 7 SCC 734.

---

1227. LIC v Gangadhar Vishwanath Ranade, AIR 1990 SC 185 : (1989) 4 SCC 297 : (1989) Supp 1 SCR 97.
1228. Patel Naranbhai Jhingabhai v Patel Gopaldas Venidas, AIR 1982 Guj 340.
1229. K Adikanda Patra v Gandua, AIR 1983 Ori 89.
1230. Bharat Bhushan Ray v Nirmal Kanti Chakraborti, AIR 1981 Cal 347.
1231. P Anirudha Adhikari v Amarendra Adhikari, AIR 1988 Ori 12.
1232. Kewal Singh v Lajwanti, AIR 1980 SC 161 : (1980) 1 SCC 290 : (1980) 1 SCJ 486.
1233. Zainal Abedin v Srisree Kumar Mukherjee, AIR 1998 Cal 339.

conclusion that the applicant had not pleaded ingredients of O XXXVIII, rule 3(2) of the CPC, the principle of res judicata do not come into play. It is well- established that where there is a dismissal on technical grounds and not on merits, principles of res judicata do not apply. The same principle would operate in case of application of principles of constructive res judicata.[1234]

Where, in an earlier suit, the tenant while invoking the power of the rent court under section 11, Bombay Rent Control Act, 1947, did not press the issue of standard rent (which could have been dealt with under section 11), he cannot assert the same right again. He is deemed to have waived his right to such determination. The second assertion is barred by a res judicata or at least a principle analogous to res judicata and estoppel.[1235]

Where a matter has been actually in issue, it is necessary to constitute the matter res judicata that it should have been heard and finally decided; but, where a matter has been constructively in issue, it could not, from the very nature of the case, be heard and decided; and it will be deemed to have been heard and decided against the party omitting to allege it except when an admission by the defendant obviates a decision.[1236] This is in accordance with the view of the section taken by the high courts of Allahabad and Bombay.[1237] In Kailash Mondal v Baroda Sundari Dasi,[1238] Banerjee J observed that though a matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence, should be deemed as provided by Explanation IV to have been directly and substantially in issue, yet it could not be deemed to have been "heard and finally decided" as there was nothing in Explanation IV to suggest that such matter should also be deemed to have been heard and finally decided. This view was followed in a subsequent case,[1239] but it is obviously incorrect, and it was rejected by the same court in later cases,[1240] and it has been dissented from by the High Court of Lahore.[1241] Moreover, in one case the judicial committee took exception to the language in which the observations of Banerjee J were couched saying that the language was not so careful as it might have been.[1242] The Privy Council case illustrates the rigidity with which the principle laid down in Explanation IV is to be applied. In that case, it was held that where a matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack is not raised in the plaint, and an application is afterwards made to amend the plaint, but it is refused, the matter will be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in that suit.[1243]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) X, a Hindu, dies leaving a widow. The widow makes a gift to her brother B, of certain property belonging to her husband. After the death of the widow, A, alleging that he and X were members of a joint family sues B for a declaration that he is entitled to the property by right of survivorship. The court finds that A and X were separate, and A's suit is dismissed. Subsequently,

---

1234. State Bank of India v Madhya Pradesh Iron and Steel Works Pvt Ltd, AIR 1998 MP 93.
1235. Yakubhai Ahmedji Mistri v Imamuddin Hussenuddin Kadri, AIR 1991 Guj 180.
1236. Govt of the Province of Bombay v Pestonji Ardeshir Wadia, AIR 1949 PC 143 : 76 IA 85 : (1949) 51 Bom LR 635 : (1949) 53 Cal WN 489.
1237. Sri Gopal v Pirthi Singh, (1898) ILR 20 All 110, p 113; confirmed on appeal in (1902) ILR 24 All 429 (PC); Guddappa v Tirkappa, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 189.
1238. Kailash Mondal v Baroda Sundari Dasi, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 711.
1239. Woomesh v Barada, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 17.
1240. Jamadar Singh v Serazuddin, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 979; Mohim Chandra v Anil, (1908) 13 Cal WN 513; Shib Chandra v LakhiPriya, AIR 1925 Cal 427 : (1924) 40 Cal LJ 507; Rayyan Naidu v Suryanarayana, (1914) ILR 37 Mad 70; Maung No v Maung Po, AIR 1923 Rang 236 : (1923) 1 Rang 363.
1241. Gobindlal v Baldeo Singh, (1915) PR 12, p 69; Muhammad v Ghulam Bi, (1929) ILR 11 Lah LJ 97.
1242. Fateh Singh v Jagannath Baksh Singh, AIR 1925 PC 55 : (1925) ILR 47 All 158 : 52 IA 100.
1243. See Illustration (iv) below.

A sues B for the recovery of the same property, alleging that as the nearest reversionary heir of X, he became entitled to the property on the death of the widow, and that the alienation made by her in favour of B was not binding upon him. The suit is barred as res judicata. A might and ought to have set up the title by heirship as a ground of attack in the former suit. It will therefore be deemed to have been "directly and substantially in issue" in that suit, and it will also be deemed to have been "heard and finally decided" against A.[1244]

(ii) A, a Hindu, dies leaving a widow and a brother, B. The widow sues B for recovery of certain property alleging that it was the self-acquired property of her husband, and that a will alleged to have been executed by her husband and relied on by B is a forgery. B alleges that the property was joint family property, and that on the death of A he became entitled thereto by right of survivorship, but he does not claim any title to the property under will. The court finds that the property was the self-acquired property of A, and decrees the widow's claim. Subsequently, B sues the widow to recover the same property from her, now claiming the same as a devisee under A's will. The suit is barred as res judicata. B might and ought to have set up the claim under the will as a ground of defence in the former suit. When a plaintiff claims an estate, and the defendant, being in possession, resists that claim, he is bound to resist it upon all the grounds that it is possible for him, according to his knowledge then to bring forward.[1245]

(iii) A sues B to recover certain property belonging to the estate of C, alleging that his father had been adopted by C's brother, D, to whom the property descended on C's death. The suit is dismissed on the ground that the adoption is not proved. A then sues B to recover the same property claiming it as C's bandhu. The suit is barred as res judicata. A ought to have claimed the property in the first suit in the alternative as C's bandhu.[1246]

(iv) A, claiming as the next reversioner of a deceased Hindu, sues his widow for a declaration that a gift by her to D of property inherited by her from her husband was void. D was joined as a party defendant, and so also, G who claimed to be a reversioner nearer than A. As to G, A alleged that he was in collusion with the widow and the donee, D. The defence was that G was the nearest reversioner and the only person entitled to dispute the gift. In this state of pleadings, the widow died. On the death of the widow, the question of collusion became comparatively unimportant; for if G was the nearest heir, A could get no title to the property. A then applied for leave to amend the plaint by setting forth the death of the widow and claiming that he had become entitled to institute a suit for possession and by setting up a family custom that he was equal in degree with G. The application was rejected on the ground that it was an attempt to introduce a new case. The question then arose whether it was worthwhile contesting the suit. A's counsel admitted that, apart from custom, A was one degree more remote than G, and that if A could not make out the case of a family custom, the suit must fail. The trial judge thereupon dismissed the suit with costs, but gave liberty to A to bring a fresh suit for possession. Subsequently, A sued D and G for possession of one-half of the property, founding his title on family custom. The Privy Council held that the second suit was barred, for A "might and ought" to have alleged the family custom in the first suit, it being clearly a "ground of attack" in that suit. As the first suit was dismissed and not withdrawn under O XXIII, the trial judge had no power to grant leave to bring a fresh suit.[1247]

(v) A sues B, C, D and E as joint tenants for rent on the basis of a pottah. The property in respect of which the rent is claimed consists of 25 kittas of land. None of the defendants appeared in the suit, and a decree was passed against them ex parte. Subsequently, A sued B, C, D and E for rent for a subsequent period. B appeared and contended that he did not hold the land jointly with C, D and E, and that he was liable only for one-fourth rent of the whole area. B is

---

1244. Guddappa v Tirkappa, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 189. The Bombay ruling was dissented from in Ramaswami v Vythinatha, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 760, a case on different facts altogether. The grounds of dissent, it is submitted, are not satisfactory; Masilamania v Thiruvengadam, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 385.
1245. Srimut Rajah v Katama Natchiar, (1866) 11 MIA 50, 73; Doorga Persad v Doorga Konwari, (1870) ILR 4 Cal 190 : 5 IA 149.
1246. Masilamania v Thiruvengadam, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 385.
1247. Fateh Singh v Jagannath Baksh Singh, AIR 1925 PC 55 : (1925) ILR 47 All 158 : 52 IA 100; Mautorni v Krishna Ballab Rai, AIR 1949 Pat 340 : (1948) ILR 27 Pat 835; SR Singh v Royal, AIR 1972 Del 150.

precluded from setting up the case of separate tenancy, because he might and ought to have set up that case in the previous suit. It is immaterial that the decree in the previous suit was passed ex parte.[1248]

(vi) In April 1921, a consent order was made referring to arbitration, three suits relating to syndicates of two, six, and 10 firms each. In a chamber summons for extension of time for making the award, some of the defendants objected that the syndicate of 10 was an illegal association as it was not registered under section 4 of the Companies Act, 1956, although it was composed of more than 20 persons. These defendants, therefore, objected that the reference was invalid; but, in August 1927, a consent order was made superseding the reference of April 1921 and referring to arbitration the same three suits along with two other suits also. In this consent order, all the parties agreed that the issue as to the legality of the syndicate should be treated as res judicata. Nevertheless, a suit was filed by one of the parties to declare the reference to arbitration as invalid on the ground that the syndicate was illegal. It was held that the suit was barred by res judicata as the question was not raised when the consent order of April 1921 was taken and that on this point, the order was not superseded but given effect to by the order of August 1927. It was also held that the number of persons composing a syndicate is a mixed question of law and fact which could be the subject of a valid compromise.[1249]

(vii) A, a Mohammedan heir, sued to recover his share of inheritance from the widow of the deceased who was in possession of her husband's estate in lieu of dower. A's suit was decreed subject to the payment of Rs 35,223 less the profits of the property in the possession of the widow from the date of the decree to the date of delivery of possession. More than 20 years later A's legal representative sued the representatives of the widow alleging that the amount of the decree had been satisfied out of the usufruct. The widow's representatives urged that interest should be added to the decretal amount which was the balance of the dower debt. The Privy Council held that the claim to interest might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the first suit and that it was barred by res judicata in the second suit.[1250]

(viii) One PK filed a suit for a declaration that certain lands belonged exclusively to his father and that he became entitled to them as his heir and prayed for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with his possession. The court negatived the exclusive title set up by the plaintiff. Thereafter, PK filed a second suit claiming that he had acquired an exclusive title to the property by adverse possession. This was a plea available to him when he filed the previous suit and it was held that it was constructively res judicata.[1251] First suit was filed on the basis that the suit property belonged to T, plaintiff's father, and on his death plaintiff succeeded to it. The subsequent suit was filed on the basis that T was a mortgagee in possession, and the mortgage not having been redeemed within time, the plaintiffs, as descendants of T, became full owners. It was held that subsequent suit was barred by res judicata.[1252]

(b) Test Rules.—The question whether a matter might have been made a ground of attack or defence in the former suit rarely presents any difficulty. Whether it ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence depends on the facts in each case. As a general rule, every ground of attack with reference to the title sued on must be pleaded if necessary in the alternative;[1253] for the plaintiff will not be allowed to make out a fresh case afterwards. Thus, if a plaintiff sues for possession on the ground of ownership, and his suit is dismissed, he cannot afterwards claim possession as mortgagee, for it was an alternative ground of attack which he did not raise in the first suit.[1254] If the matter raised as a defence would have defeated, varied, or in any way

---

1248. Sarojini v Lakhi Priya, AIR 1925 Cal 427 : (1924) 29 Cal WN 253 : 85 IC 123.
1249. Raoji v Ratansi, (1930) ILR 54 Bom 696 : 126 IC 305.
1250. Nawazi Begum v Dilafroz Begam, AIR 1930 PC 177 : (1930) ILR 52 All 273 : 126 IC 430 : 57 IA 181.
1251. Popat Kala v Bachu Rugnath, AIR 1958 Bom 152 : (1957) ILR Bom 548.
1252. Sivatham v Kaliammal, AIR 1984 NOC 38.
1253. Alluni v Kunjusha, (1884) ILR 7 Mad 264; Shah Jawaharlal v Shah Chaganlal, AIR 1959 Raj 197 : (1959) ILR Raj 224.
1254. Gosbuvarali v Adhiklal, AIR 1948 Pat 302 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 24; Imam Khan v Ayub Khan, (1897) ILR 19 All 517.

affected the decree in the previous suit, it ought to have been raised.[1255] Conversely, if the decree in the previous suit is inconsistent with a defence which ought to have been raised, that defence must be deemed to have been raised and finally decided, and is barred by res judicata.[1256] Thus, if the plaintiff sues on a contract and obtains a decree, the defendant cannot afterwards sue for rescission of the contract on the ground that it did not fully represent the agreement between the parties.[1257] Similarly, if it is found that in a former suit for eviction by the landlord, the defendant-tenant had failed to raise the plea that the landlord before filing the suit ought to have terminated the contractual tenancy which he might and ought to have raised, he cannot be allowed to raise that plea in a subsequent suit for eviction.[1258] If a matter could have been set up as a ground of attack or defence in the former suit, and if its introduction into that suit was necessary for a complete and final decision of the right claimed by the plaintiff therein, it will be deemed to be a matter which ought to have been made a ground of attack or defence in that suit, unless the matters in that and the subsequent suit are so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion.[1259] Thus, in Illustration (i), the title by heirship could have been made a ground of attack in the alternative in the first suit; it was necessary to do so for the complete and final disposal of all questions as to A's right to the property, and it was not forbidden by any rule of pleading; and, further, the question in both suits being the same, namely, whether A was entitled to the property or B, the title by survivorship and the title by heirship could not be said to be so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion. It may appear at first sight that the two matters are dissimilar, for the title by survivorship and the title by heirship have to be supported by different evidence; but, the test of evidence which was relied on in some old cases[1260] is not a satisfactory test, and though it was advanced in argument in two cases before the judicial committee of the Privy Council, no notice was taken of it in the judgments.[1261] The reason is when a plaintiff sets up alternative grounds of attack, or when a defendant sets up alternative grounds of defence, the evidence in support of such alternative grounds would in most cases be different; but, it has been said where the evidence in support of one ground is such as might be destructive of the other ground, the two grounds need not be set up in the same suit. The reason given is that the test of determining whether both the grounds ought to have been set up in the same suit is afforded by provision of O II, rule 1 and the provisions of that rule as to the framing of suits are only to be applied "as far as practicable".[1262]

It is clear that it cannot be said of any matter that it ought to have been set up as a ground of attack in a former suit, if its introduction would have been incongruous to or destructive

---

1255. Shib Chandra v Lakhi, AIR 1925 Cal 427 : (1925) 29 Cal WN 253; Gopi Lal v Benarsi Prasad, (1906) ILR 31 Cal 428.
1256. Mahim v Anil Bandhu, (1909) 13 Cal WN 513; Maung No v Maung Po, AIR 1923 Rang 239, (1923) 1 Rang 363.
1257. CJ Phillips v AE Mitchell, AIR 1932 Cal 889 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 985.
1258. RK Jain v MH Singh, AIR 1971 Del 213.
1259. Goshwarali v Adhiklal, AIR 1948 Pat 302 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 24; Rajah Chattar Singh v Diwan Roshan Singh, AIR 1946 Ngp 277 : (1946) ILR Nag 159; Priombada v Joburilal, AIR 1941 Cal 574; Rai Bajrang Bhadur v Hubraj Kuer, AIR 1944 Oudh 281; Kameswar v Rajkumari, (1893) ILR 20 Cal 79, p 85 : 19 IA 234; Moosa v Ebrahim, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 1 : 39 IA 237; Guddappa v Tirkappa, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 189, p 192; Srimut Rajah v Katama Natchiar, (1866) 11 MIA 50, p 73; Woomatara v Unnopoorna, (1873) 11 Beng LR 158, p 167; Girdhari Lal v Umdajan, AIR 1921 Lah 17 : (1921) 3 Lah LJ 215, p 221; Debendra Nath v Nagendra Nath, AIR 1933 Cal 900 : (1933) 60 ILR Cal 1158.
1260. Muttu Chetti v Muttan Chetti, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 296, p 299; Naro v Ramchandra, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 326, p 329.
1261. Srimut Rajah v Katama Natchiar, 11 MIA 50, (1873) 11 Beng LR 158.
1262. Masilamania v Thiruvengadan, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 385, p 396; Ramaswami v Vythinatha, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 760; Rangaswamy v Appaswamy, (1916) Mad WN 286; Raman v Bacha, AIR 1921 Pat 326; Anant v Mahableshwar, AIR 1931 Bom 114 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 1473.

of the matter of that suit.[1263] Thus, a person claiming property on the allegation that it is wakf property and that he is the manager thereof is not bound to claim the same property in the same suit alternatively in his own right in the event of its being held that the property was not wakf property. As observed:

> Having asserted that the... property was wakf property, [he] could not have consistently claimed the same property as [his] personal property except possibly in an alternative form. [He was], however, not under an obligation to adopt the latter course.

The mere fact that he could have claimed the property in the alternative as his own property is no ground for saying that he ought to have done so.[1264] And so a suit to recover possession of properties on a claim that they belonged personally to the plaintiff is not barred by reason of a decision in a previous suit in which they were claimed as belonging to a Tarwad of which he was a member;[1265] and likewise, where a person sued for partition claiming that he was the legitimate son of the deceased and the suit was dismissed, a subsequent suit for partition on the ground that he was the illegitimate son of the deceased is not barred as the two claims are inconsistent with each other.[1266] A suit for accounts on the footing that the plaintiff was a sub-partner of the defendant is not barred under Explanation IV by a previous suit wherein the claim was made on the footing of partnership.[1267] Again, Explanation IV does not apply, unless the parties are litigating under the same title. Thus, if A sues B for a declaration that he is the owner of a certain property, he is not bound to plead in the alternative that if he is not the owner he is a permanent tenant. If his suit in the capacity of owner is dismissed and B files a suit against him for possession, he may plead in the second suit that he is a permanent tenant and defend the suit in that capacity.[1268] Where a person who is joined as a defendant in a mortgage suit as being interested in the equity of redemption is entitled to the property by a paramount title, but his title is not disputed in the plaint, he is not bound to set it up as a ground of defence in that suit;[1269] but, if there is an allegation in the plaint derogatory to the title of the prior mortgagee and the latter consents to have his title decided, then he will be bound by the decision and it would be res judicata.[1270] Where a party acquires a title during the pendency of a suit and fails to put it forth in that suit, he is not barred from raising it in a subsequent suit.[1271] It has also been held that the principle of constructive res judicata has no application to reliefs which are the discretion of the court. If there is no express decision with reference thereto, Explanation IV does not bar a fresh suit thereof.[1272]

1263. Han Soran Das v Bhagwat Prosad, AIR 1942 Cal 286; Deputy Commr of Kheri v Khanjan Singh, (1907) ILR 29 All 331 : 34 IA 72; Lala Soni Ram v Kanhaiya, 40 IA 74 : (1913) 17 Cal WN 605 (PC); Diwan Chand v Hari Chand, (1914) PR 102, p 383; Aishan v Muhammad, (1916) PR 94, p 282; Re Ayya Nadar, AIR 1953 Mad 933; Karimi Banawali v Gulasu Lakhano, AIR 1977 Ori 128 : (1977) ILR Cut 74.
1264. Kanhaiya Lal v Ashraf Khan, AIR 1924 All 355 : (1924) ILR 46 All 230, p 231; Dola v Balya, AIR 1922 Bom 29 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 803; Bankey Prasad v Thakur Prasad, AIR 1954 Pat 12.
1265. Madhavan v Chathu, AIR 1951 Mad 285 : (1950) 2 Mad LJ 501 : (1950) 63 Mad LW 956 : (1950) Mad WN 713.
1266. Kokila v Rajabathar, AIR 1957 Mad 470 : (1957) ILR Mad 968.
1267. Veeraraghaviah v Seshachalam, AIR 1957 AP 76.
1268. Afzalunnissa v Fayazuddin, AIR 1931 Lah 610 : (1932) ILR 13 Lah 195.
1269. Asmatulla v Gamir, AIR 1929 Cal 672 : (1929) 33 Cal WN 659; Ramana v Venkatanarayana, AIR 1927 Mad 301 : (1927) 52 Mad LJ 52; Sohannessa v Abdul Hamid, AIR 1932 Cal 12 : (1932) ILR 58 Cal 1222
1270. Rameshwar Rai v Hanakhlal, AIR 1942 Pat 226 : (1941) ILR 20 Pat 841; Durga Prasad v Ghasi Ram, AIR 1950 All 314. See note to O XXXIV, rule 1, "Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption".
1271. Raman Nair v Lakshmi Amma, AIR 1952 TC 96 : (1951) ILR T C 554.
1272. Mathura Rai v Ramakrishna, AIR 1961 Bom 97; Subbaiah v Champaka, AIR 1961 Mad 413.

The decisions bearing on this branch of the subject are numerous. An examination of these decisions leads to the following four rules:

Rule I : Where right claimed in both the suits same

Where the right claimed in both suits is the same, the subsequent suit will be barred as res judicata, though the right in the subsequent suit is sought to be established by a title different from that in the first suit. That would also be so where there is identity of title though the property in the subsequent proceeding is different.[1273] The dismissal of a plaintiff's suit for the recovery of land based on an alleged lease is no bar to a subsequent suit for the recovery of the same land on the strength of his general title, the reason given being that the legal relation put forth in the subsequent suit is different from that in the former suit (see illustration 6).

In the following illustrations it is assumed that the other conditions of res judicata are fulfilled.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) Illustrations (i), (iii) and (iv) above, are cases under this rule.[1274]

(ii) A Hindu, H dies leaving a widow W, and a son-in-law S, the husband of a predeceased daughter D. W sues S, as the heir of her husband H, to recover certain property, alleged that it forms part of the estate of H. The defence is that H had made a gift of the property to his daughter D, and that on D's death, S as D's husband, became entitled to the property as D's heir. W alleges that the deed of gift relied upon by S is a forgery. The court finds that the deed of gift is genuine, and the suit is dismissed. W then sues S to recover the same property, alleging that as it has been found that the property belonged to D, she is entitled to the property as the heir of her daughter D. The suit is barred as res judicata. Here, the right claimed in both the suits is the same, namely, the right to the property in question. In the first suit, it was claimed by W as her husband's heir. In the second suit it is sought to be established by her by a different title, namely, as her daughter's heir. W "might and ought" to have claimed in the alternative as her daughter's heir in the former suit. Having failed to do so, her title, as her daughter's heir, will be deemed to have been "directly and substantially" in issue in the former suit, and it will also be deemed to have been heard and finally decided against her in that suit,[1275] but the Madras case falls within the exception rather than the rule.[1276]

(iii) A lends Rs 50,000 to a Hindu widow on a mortgage to her husband's property. The widow then surrenders the property to B, the reversionary heir of her husband, on B agreeing to pay all her debts. A sues B and the widow to recover Rs 50,000 by sale of the mortgaged property. A also asks for a personal decree against the widow, but he does not ask for a personal decree against B. B is joined as a defendant on the ground that the mortgaged property formed part of the property transferred by the widow to him. The court finds that the mortgage is not binding upon the husband's estate and the suit against B is accordingly dismissed. As against the widow, a personal decree is passed for the amount of the loan. A realises Rs 5,000 only from the widow, and after her death he sues B for the balance of the money due under the decree (that is to say A asks for a personal decree against B for the balance), alleging that B was personally liable under the agreement with the widow to pay her debts. The suit is barred as res judicata, for A "might and ought" to have alleged in the former suit that if the mortgage was not binding on the estate B was at all events personally liable to pay the debt in consequence of the agreement which he (B) had entered into with the widow.[1277]

1273. Ghanshiam Singh v Har Piarey, AIR 1974 All 229.
1274. Guddappa v Tirkappa, (1912) ILR 25 Bom 189; Masilamania v Thiruvengadam, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 385; Fateh Singh v Jagannath Baksh Singh, AIR 1925 PC 55 : (1925) ILR 47 All 158 : 52 IA 100.
1275. Denobundhoo v Krishtomonee Dossee, (1877) ILR 2 Cal 152; dissented from Ummatha v Cheria (1882) ILR 4 Mad 308, 1276. See Illustration (vi) below.
1277. Kameshwar Pershad v Rajkumari, (1893) ILR 20 Cal 79 : 19 IA 234.

Note—Suppose that in the above illustration, A had applied in the first suit for amendment of the plaint by adding a claim for relief against B personally, but the application was refused; in such a case, it has been held that the subsequent suit would not be barred.[1278] But these decisions, it is submitted, are not correct.[1279]

(iv) A in 1896 makes a gift of her property to B who mortgages it to C. C sues for sale on his mortgage and purchases the property himself in 1918. A who is still in possession sues C in August 1918 for a declaration of her title on the ground that the deed of gift was null and void. In the course of the suit, A applies for leave to amend her plaint and to plead an alternative case that even if the deed of gift is valid, C's title is extinguished by her adverse possession for 12 years. The application is refused and the suit dismissed. A continues in possession and in August 1930, C files a suit to recover possession from A. A again pleads adverse possession. A's plea is a valid defence, for although she is debarred from pleading that she had acquired a title by adverse possession in August 1918, it is still open to her to prove that she has acquired title by adverse possession in August 1930.[1280]

(v) A, alleging that he is the kitlima adopted son of B, claims the whole estate of B, and sues for the administration of B's estate. A fails to prove the adoption and the suit is dismissed. A afterwards sues for administration of the same estate claiming one-half of the estate as the apatitha adopted son of B. The suit is barred as res judicata.[1281]

(vi) A sues B to recover certain lands from him, alleging that B held the lands under a lease and that the lease had expired. The lease is not proved, and the suit is dismissed. Subsequently, A sues B to recover the same land on the strength of his general title. The suit is not barred as res judicata.[1282]

(vii) A filed a suit for a declaration that he was entitled to certain lands as heir to X. The suit was dismissed. Then he sued for an injunction alleging that he had been in possession for over the statutory period and had thereby acquired title by adverse possession. This title was available to him even at the time of the previous suit. The later suit is barred by res judicata.[1283] For other cases under this Rule.[1284]

Rule II : Where ground of attack in a subsequent suit could be a ground for defence in the former suit

If a matter which forms a ground of attack in the subsequent suit could have been alleged as a ground of defence in the former suit, but was omitted to be so alleged in that suit, it will be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in that suit within the meaning of Explanation IV.

This rule contemplates cases in which the plaintiff in the subsequent suit was defendant in the former suit. Thus, a claim which might have been pleaded by way of set-off[1285] or counter-claim[1286] to a previous suit, will not be barred.

1278. Alagirisami v Sundareswara, (1898) 21 ILR Mad 278; Thakore v Thakore, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 31.
1279. Fateh Singh v Jagannath Bakhsh, AIR 1925 PC 55 : 51 IA 100 : (1925) ILR 47 All 158.
1280. Kiranshashi v Official Assignee, AIR 1933 Cal 246 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 8 : 143 IC 381 (facts simplified).
1281. Maung Ba Thein v Ma Jhan Myint, AIR 1928 Rang 9 : (1927) ILR 5 Rang 565 : 105 IC 586.
1282. Kandunni v Katiamma, (1899) ILR 9 Mad 251; Ummatha v Cheria, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 308; Girdhar v Dayabhai, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 174.
1283. Dhaniram v Ruttan Das, AIR 1961 P&H 563.
1284. Nirman v Phulman, (1881) ILR 4 All 65; Hargovan v Mulji, (1909) 11 Bom LR 921; Akayi v Ayissa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 645; Imam Khan v Ayub Khan, (1897) ILR 19 All 517; Haji Hasam v Manchavam, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 137; Woomatara v Unnopoorna, (1873) 11 Bom LR 158 (PC); Kesar Singh v Asa Singh, (1913) PR 86, 305; Muhammad v Abdul, AIR 1923 Mad 257 : (1923) ILR 46 Mad 135; Govind v Veeri, (1919) Mad WN 677; Kuppuswami v Subba, (1921) 62 IC 501; Mallaya v Punnammamal, AIR 1924 Mad 608 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 476; Hara Chandra v Bhagabat, AIR 1930 Cal 690 : (1930) 24 Cal WN 442; Dattatraya v Matha, AIR 1934 Bom 36 : (1933) ILR 59 Bom 119 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 1131.
1285. Amritsar National Banking Co v Fazal Ilahi, (1919) PR 74.
1286. Pich v Subbarayyar, (1915) 28 Mad LJ 153.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) Illustration (ii) and (v)[1287] under the heading "Matter constructively in issue: Explanation IV", above, belongs to this class.

(ii) A and B, two Hindu brothers, divide the whole of the joint family property except a garden. A dies leaving a widow who sells A's half share in the garden to C. After the death of the widow, C sues B for partition of the garden, and an ex parte decree is passed under which C enters into possession of a moiety of the garden. B then sues C to recover possession of the moiety sold by A's widow to C, alleging that the sale was made by the widow without legal necessity, and that on the death of the widow, he became entitled to the moiety as the reversionary heir of A. The suit is barred as res judicata, because B "might and ought" to have raised the question of the validity of the sale as a ground of defence in the former suit.[1288]

(iii) A mortgagee, who holds the mortgaged property also as lessee from the mortgagor, sues the mortgagor to recover Rs 3,000 being the amount of the mortgage-debt. At the date of the suit the mortgagee owes Rs 4,000 to the mortgagor for rent under the lease, and this sum the mortgagor claims to set-off against the mortgage-debt under an express agreement in that behalf. The agreement is not proved, and a decree is passed against the mortgagor for Rs 3,000. The property is sold in execution of the decree, and it is purchased by the mortgagee with the leave of the court. The mortgagor then sues the mortgagee to have sale set aside, and for a declaration that the mortgage-debt is extinguished, now claiming that a general account may be taken as between him and the mortgagee, and that in taking such account the rent due to him may be set-off against the mortgage-debt. The suit is barred, for the mortgagor "might and ought" to have set up that claim in the alternative in the former suit.[1289]

(iv) A, who owns a share in a village, mortgages it to B, and sells it subsequently to C. C sues B for redemption of the mortgage, and obtains a decree. Subsequently, B sues C for pre-emption of the share sold by A to C, alleging that he is a co-sharer in the village and entitled as such to pre-emption. The suit is not barred. The right of pre-emption not being a "vested and ascertained" right when B has an answer to the claim for redemption in that suit.[1290] For other cases under this rule, see foot-note.[1291]

Rule III : Where the right claimed in a subsequent suit is different and based on a different title.—

Where the right claimed in the subsequent suit is different form that in the former suit, and it is claimed under a different form than in the former suit, and it is claimed under a different title, the subsequent suit is not barred as res judicata.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A sues B for possession of certain lands alleged to have come to his share on a partition of joint family property with B. The defence is that the family property has not yet been divided, and the suit is dismissed on a finding to that effect. A subsequent suit by A against B for partition of the family property is not barred.[1292]

1287. Srimut Rajah v Katama Natchiar, (1866) 11 MIA 50; Doorga Persad v Konwari, (1879) ILR 4 Cal 190 : 5 IA 149; Sarojini v Lakhi Priya, AIR 1925 Cal 427 : (1925) 29 Cal WN 253 : 85 IC 123.
1288. Shyama v Mrinmayi Debi, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 79.
1289. Mahabir Pershad v Macnaghten, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 682 : 16 IA 107.
1290. Ram Chand v Durga Prasad, (1904) ILR 26 All 61.
1291. Maktum v Imam, (1873) 10 BHC 293; Dost Muhammad v Said Begam, (1898) ILR 20 All 81; Hari v Ganpatrav, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 272; Jagan Nath v Balkisan, (1907) All WN 275; Maung No v Maung Po, AIR 1923 Rang 239 : (1923) ILR 1 Rang 363; CJ Pillips v AE Mitchell, AIR 1932 Cal 889 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 985; Kedar Nath v Kshiroda, AIR 1933 Cal 680 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 832; Babu Rajnarain v Ganesh Bind, AIR 1978 All 30. (Sale of joint family property wherein minors were interested.)
1292. Shivram v Narayan, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 27; Konerrav v Gurraw, (1881) 5 ILR Bom 589; Nilo v Govind, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 24; contra Bheeka v Bhuggo, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 23; dissented from in Ummatha v Cheria, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 308.

(ii) A, alleging that B held certain lands from him under a lease and that the lease had expired, sues B to recover Rs 500 for use and occupation of the land by B after expiration of the lease. The defence is that the lease is a subsisting lease, and the suit is dismissed on a finding to that effect. A subsequent suit by A to recover Rs 500 as rent payable under the lease is not barred.[1293]

[Note the peculiar character of the cases cited above—In Illustration (i), A suing on the basis of a partition, the court finding that there was no partition, and A subsequently suing for a partition; in Illustration (ii), A suing on the basis that the lease has expired, the court finding that the lease has not expired, and A subsequently suing on the basis that the lease is a subsisting lease. (For other cases of this class, see foot-note.][1294]

(iii) A sues B in 1869 to recover a talukdari estate from him. The suit is dismissed on a finding that the estate had become the absolute property of B under a conditional sale made by A to B in 1853. A then sues B in 1875 for redemption of the same property, alleging that he had mortgaged the property as absolute owner thereof to B in 1854. The suit is not barred. It was held:

> It may be difficult to reconcile the position of [B] as mortgagee in 1854 with his position as absolute owner in 1853... But if it be established that [A] was mortgagor in 1854, why should he be barred of his right [of redemption] merely because at an earlier date [i.e. in 1853] he may have had no right to the property at all?[1295]

(iv) A sues B for redemption of a mortgage alleged to have been executed in 1856 of 50 cawnies of land. B denies the genuineness of the mortgage, and alleges that 14 out of the 50 cawnies were mortgaged to him in 1853, and that the 14 and the remaining 36 cawnies were sold to him by A in 1855. The mortgage is not proved, and the suit is dismissed. A then sues B to redeem the 14 cawnies on the footing of the mortgage of 1853. The suit is not barred.[1296]

(v) A, alleging that he mortgaged certain lands to B with possession, sues B for redemption, the suit being brought by him as mortgagor. The mortgage is not proved, and the suit is dismissed. A then sues B for possession of the same lands claiming them as absolute owner thereof. The suit is not barred.[1297]

No question of res judicata can also arise where the issue in the former suit was that the plaintiff had withdrawn the licence and was therefore, entitled to possession and the issue in the subsequent suit was whether the defendant was a licencee or a sub-tenant.[1298] In order to attract the bar under section 11 of the code not only the parties in both suits must be the same, or the parties under whom they or any of them claim must be the same, but also they must litigate under the same title and the matter in issue in both the suits must be directly and substantially the same. Thus, where the issue decided in the former suit was different and the property involved in both the suits are different, it was held by the Patna High Court that of the latter suit is not barred by res judicata.[1299]

Four suits were filed by plaintiffs who were common in all the suits, but the defendants were not common. The properties in the four suits were also situated in different villages. The decision in one of the suits attained finality. Thus, it was held by the Supreme Court that the 1293. Watson v Dhonendra, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 6.

---

1294. Shridhar v Narayan, (1874) 11 BHC 224; Varathayyangar v Krishnaswami, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 102; Amer v Nathu, (1888) ILR 8 All 306; Zamit-un-Nissa v Rajan, (1905) ILR 27 All 142.
1295. Amanat Bibi v Imdad Husain, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 800 : 15 IA 106, p 111; Balbhaddar v Ram Lal, (1904) ILR 26 All 501.
1296. Ramaswami v Vythinatha, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 760; Veerana v Muthukumara, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 102; Parambath v Puthengattil, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 406; Thrikaikat v Thiruthiyal, (1906) ILR 26 Mad 153; Mahabir v Purbhoo Nath, (1907) 12 Cal WN 292; Ram Sahai v Ahmadi Begam, (1911) ILR 33 All 302 : 9 IC 53.
1297. Mahomed Ibrahim v Sheik Hamja, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 507 : 12 IC 387; distinguished in Rajaram v Jagannath, AIR 1949 Pat 274 : (1927) 51 Bom LR 234.
1298. Ram Chandra v Janardan, AIR 1969 Bom 111 : (1969) ILR Bom 766 : (1968) 70 Bom LR 376.
1299. Harendra Rai v Chandrawati Devi, AIR 2007 Pat 120 : 2007 (1) Pat LJR 539.

decision in the appeals relating to other two suits would not affect the decision in the relevant suit and would not operate as res judicata.[1300] For other cases under this rule, see foot-note.[1301]

Rule IV : Where the right claimed in a subsequent suit would, if included in the prior suit, render it multifarious.—It cannot be said of a relief which if claimed in the first suit would have made that suit bad for multifariousness that it ought to have been made a ground of attack in that suit.[1302]

(c) Suits on Mortgage.—If a mortgagee, in a suit for redemption against him by the mortgagor, omits to obtain an order for sale of the mortgaged property on failure of payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage-debt within the time allowed for redemption, he will be precluded from bringing a separate suit for sale in default of payment by the mortgagor within that time. The mortgagee "might and ought" to have claimed the right of sale in the suit for redemption brought against him.[1303] So also, if the mortgagee omits to ask for a personal decree against the mortgagor, he cannot do so in a subsequent suit on the same mortgage;[1304] but if he applies for a personal remedy and his claim is not adjudicated upon, he may renew the claim at a later stage of the same proceeding.[1305]

In a case from Oudh[1306] a puisne mortgagee sued to redeem a prior mortgagee and made the prior mortgagee's sub-mortgagee a party. The prior mortgagee pleaded that the sub-mortgage was fictitious, and a decree for redemption was passed on payment of the amount due on the mortgage to the mortgagee alone. The sub-mortgagee then sued the prior mortgagee for a personal decree under section 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The court held that the issue as to the genuineness of the sub-mortgage was not res judicata as the sub-mortgagee's presence in the prior suit was not compulsory and there was no necessity for the sub-mortgagee as a person interested in the mortgage security under O XXXIV, rule 1 and in Narayan v Ganoji,[1307] it was said that in a redemption suit of land which has been sub-mortgaged the judgment directs an account of what is due to the original mortgagee and then of what is due to the sub-mortgagee. Where a sub-mortgagee was impleaded as defendant in a suit on the mortgage and his claim adjudicated embodied in the decree, a subsequent suit by a transferee from him to enforce the sub-mortgage was held to be barred.[1308]

In a rent note between mortgagor and mortgagee, it was agreed that the mortgagor would occupy the mortgaged house on rent of Rs 200/- per month. The mortgagee's suit for eviction was decided on the above basis. Later, when the mortgagor sued for redemption, the question arose whether the mortgagee's claim for interest at Rs 200/- per month was legally enforceable.

1300. Brij Narain Singh v Adya Prasad, AIR 2008 SC 1553 : (2008) 11 SCC 558.
1301. Thandavan v Valliamma, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 336; Sarkun v Rahaman, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 83; Nathu v Budhu, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 537; Narao v Ramchandra, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 326; Sheo Ratan v Sheo Sahai, (1884) ILR 6 All 358; Bai Diwali v Umedbhai, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 614; Nisha Singh v Hira, (1913) PR 87, 208; Aishan v Muhammad Din, (1916) PR 94; Dhanapalu v Anantha, (1913) 24 Mad LJ 418; Dola v Balya, AIR 1922 Bom 29 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 803; Chotey Lal v Chandra Bhan, AIR 1923 All 176 : (1923) ILR 45 All 59; Parshotam v Balwant, AIR 1929 Lah 872 : (1930) ILR 11 Lah 99; Ningaya v Madivalava, AIR 1931 Bom 187 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 204; Ram Udit v Ram Samuj, AIR 1931 Oudh 263 : (1931) ILR 7 Luck 73; Gurusami v Sowminarayana, AIR 1954 Mad 477.
1302. Kura v Madho, (1915) PR 68, p 292.
1303. Maloji v Sagaji, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 567.
1304. Sourendra v Hari Prasad, AIR 1925 PC 280 : (1925) ILR 5 Pat 135 : 52 IA 418.
1305. Adinarayana v Appan, AIR 1941 Mad 217; Raghukul v Pitam, AIR 1931 All 99 : (1930) ILR 52 All 901.
1306. Jagannath v Sheo Shankar, AIR 1929 Oudh 455 : (1930) ILR 5 Luck 369.
1307. Narayan v Ganoji, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 692.
1308. Erikam v Mahabalaram, AIR 1951 TC 92.

It was held that the matter was not res judicata. The only matter directly in issue in the earlier suit was the quantum of rent. Interest and its legality were not the issue.[1309] If a puisne mortgagee sues for sale on his mortgage and makes the prior mortgagee a party without claiming any relief against him, the prior mortgagee is in the position of a holder by title paramount outside the controversy.[1310] He need not appear in the suit and his rights under the prior mortgage are not affected; but, if the puisne mortgagee suing on his mortgage raises any controversy as to the prior mortgagee and seeks to sell the property unencumbered, the prior mortgage, if he omits to plead his prior mortgage, will be debarred from doing so in a subsequent suit.[1311] On the same principle, it was held that if a person is joined in a redemption suit as an heir and legal representative of a deceased mortgagee, he need not claim part of the property by title independent of and paramount to the mortgagee.[1312]

The Madras High Court also has held that a person claiming title to the mortgaged property independently of the mortgage has been joined as a party, he is not bound to set up in such a suit his permanent title, since although to join him as a party is not obnoxious to the rule as to joinder of parties, he is not a necessary party.[1313] If a puisne mortgagee sues to redeem a mesne mortgagee and the latter omits to set up a prior mortgage which he has redeemed and to which he is subrogated, the rights of subrogation will be lost by res judicata; and if the mesne subsequently sues the puisne mortgagee claiming to be sub-mortgagee of the prior mortgagee, his suit will be barred.[1314] Where in a suit by a previous mortgagee, a subsequent mortgagee was impleaded as a defendant and the decree declared the amount due on his mortgage and directed sale in default of payment, it was held that a suit by him to enforce that mortgage was not barred.[1315]

If a mortgagee has successive mortgages of the same property from the same person, there is a conflict of decisions whether he can obtain an order for sale on one alone. The Bombay High Court has held that if a mortgagee sues on a subsequent mortgage without reference to prior mortgage he is barred by Explanation IV as he might and ought to have included the prior mortgage in his suit.[1316] Similarly, the Madras High Court has held that a suit on a prior mortgage bars a suit on a subsequent mortgage of the same property;[1317] but, it was held that a mortgagee might sue on a later mortgage reserving his rights on a prior mortgage.[1318] In

---

1309. Bharosilal v Shiladevi, AIR 1989 MP 122.
1310. Radha Kishun v Khurshed Hossein, (1943) ILR 47 Cal 662 : 47 IA 11 (prior mortgage not attacked): Ajudhia v Inayat Ullah, (1913) ILR 35 All 111 (prior mortgage admitted); Koi v Atul, (1930) AIR 1929 Pat 333 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 118; dissenting from Krishna v Amirul, (1914) 19 Cal WN 942 (prior mortgage not attacked); Abdul Wahid v Sheikh Ali, AIR 1929 Oudh 463 : (1929) ILR 4 Luck 250 (prior mortgage not attacked); Official Assignee, Calcutta v Jagabandhu, AIR 1934 Cal 552 : (1934) ILR 61 Cal 294.
1311. Rameshwar v Harakhlal, AIR 1942 Pat 226 : (1941) ILR 20 Pat 841; Gopal v Benarsi, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 428; Gajadhar v Bhagwanta, (1912) ILR 34 All 599.
1312. Mehdi Ali v Saiyed Wilayer, AIR 1930 Oudh 97 : (1930) ILR 5 Luck 658.
1313. Neelamma v K Velayutham, AIR 1967 Mad 453.
1314. Sri Gopal v Pirthi Singh, (1902) ILR 24 All 429 : 29 IA 118; Mahomed Ibrahim v Ambika Pershad, 39 IA 68; Kanhaiya Lal v Ikram Fatima, AIR 1932 Oudh 268 : (1933) ILR 8 Luck 130.
1315. Ammeenamma v Beeviamma, AIR 1953 Mad 32 : (1952) 2 Mad LJ 421 : (1952) Mad WN 634 : (1952) 65 Mad LW 959.
1316. Dhondo v Bhikaji, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 138; Dalachand v Khema, AIR 1921 Bom 282 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 55.
1317. Nattu v Annangara, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 353; dissenting from Sundar Singh v Bholu, (1898) ILR 20 All 322.
1318. Subramania v Balsubramania, (1915) ILR 39 Mad 927; Dhondo v Bhikan, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 138, 145; Jagannath v Mohra Kuar, (1916) 2 Pat LJ 118; Rangasami Nadan v Subbaraya, (1970) ILR 50 Mad 408; Radha Krishnier v Muthusami, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 530; Shankar Sarup v Moje Mal, (1901) ILR 23 All 313 : 28 IA 203.

Madras, there was a conflict of decisions at one time which was set at rest by a decision of the Full Bench in Subramania v Balasubramania[1319] which adopted the above view. In doing so, the Full Bench followed the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Sundar Singh v Bholu[1320] which held that the two mortgagees constituted different causes of action. This view is correct and has been generally followed;[1321] but, as it is a hardship on the mortgagor that his property should be sold twice, it is now provided by section 32 of the Transfer of Property Amendment Act 20 of 1929, that a mortgagee having several mortgages of the same property from the same person must sell all or none.[1322]

In suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale, there ought to be a complete and final settlement of all accounts between the mortgagor and the mortgagee right up to the time of actual redemption, foreclosure or sale, as the case may be.[1323] A mortgagor, therefore, who has obtained a decree for redemption against a mortgagee in possession and paid what was due according to the decree, and obtained possession, cannot afterwards sue for profits realised by the mortgagee for a period prior to the delivery of possession. Such profits "might and ought" to have been taken into account at the time of passing the decree.[1324] Similarly, where a mortgagor deposits the mortgage money in Court under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and obtains a decree for possession from a usufructuary mortgagee under section 62, he cannot subsequently sue for profits realized by the mortgagee from the date of the deposit to the date of the delivery of possession.[1325] Where A, a zuri peshdar, was dispossessed in execution of a decree obtained by B representing the mortgagor, and on appeal by A, the decree was reversed and thereafter, B sued A for redemption of the zuri pesh and obtained a decree, it was held that a suit by A for mesne profits for the period during which he had been kept out of possession before redemption was not barred.[1326] Unless it is established that the mortgagee's right to redeem is extinguished, it cannot operate as a res judicata so as to prevent the court under section 11 of the Code from trying the second redemption suit.[1327] Successive suit for redemption of mortgage can be filed till the right of redemption is not extinguished. If the mortgage fails to establish that the old decree extinguished the right to redeem, there is no ground for saying that the old decree operates as res judicata and the courts are prevented from trying the second suit.[1328] In a proceedings for pre-emption, a finding was made by the court that a subsequent sale of land was a sham transaction. No appeal was preferred by the purchaser under the subsequent transaction. Appeal was made against the suit finding by the first purchaser.

1319. Subramania v Balasubramania, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 927.
1320. Sundar Singh v Bholu, (1898) ILR 20 All 322; Raghunath Prasad v Jamna Prasad, (1907) ILR 29 All 233; Nazirunnissa v Asifa, AIR 1927 All 341.
1321. Lakshmanan v Muthaya, (1921) 40 Mad LJ 126; Parmeshwar v Raj Kishore, AIR 1925 Pat 59 : (1924) ILR 3 Pat 829; Udhai Chand v Nagin Singh, 50 IC 40; Govind v Harihar, (1910) ILR 38 Cal 60; Nilo v Asirbad, (1920) 25 Cal WN 129.
1322. See section 67A of the Transfer of Property Act.
1323. Lakshmanan v Muthaya, (1921) 40 Mad LJ 126; Parmeshwar v Raj Kishore, AIR 1925 Pat 59 : (1924) ILR 3 Pat 829; Udhai Chand v Nagin Singh, 50 IC 40; Govind v Harihar, (1910) ILR 38 Cal 60; Nilo v Asirbad, (1920) 25 Cal WN 129.
1324. Kashi v Bajrang Prasad, (1908) ILR 30 All 36.
1325. Rukhminibai v Venkatesh, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 527; Satyabadi v Harobati, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 223; Ma Nyo v Maung Hla Bu, AIR 1925 Rang 13 : (1924) 2 Rang 382.
1326. Jitan Pandey v Hari Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 459 : (1928) 32 Cal WN 1023; Malhari v Vinayak, AIR 1929 Bom 323 : (1929) 31 Bom LR 640.
1327. Ismile Nathabhai Khatri v Muljibhai Shankar Bhai Braham Bhatt, AIR 1994 Guj 8.
1328. Vora Amin Bai Ibrahim v Vohra Taheral Mohammed, AIR 1998 Guj 31.

The appeal was allowed and held that the suit finding did not operate as res judicata in a writ petition by a subsequent purchaser.[1329]

In a case from Chhotanagpur region of Bihar (now Jharkhand) a suit, for declaration of title and restoration of possession was filed by the recorded tenant. The said suit ultimately ended in dismissal by the high court on the ground oral usufructuary mortgage was invalid under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and it was held that the defendants are not holding under mortgage. It was held by the Supreme Court that since the plaintiff did not raise the plea of the mortgage being barred by section 46 of the Chhotanagpur Tenancy Act, 1908, the said plea cannot be raised in a subsequent application for restoration of possession under section 71A of the Act.[1330] PP Naolekar J speaking for the Bench in the above case observed as follows:

> The suit of the appellant's predecessors for possession on the basis of oral mortgage was culminated into a decision by the High Court in second appeal (AFAD No. 1909/1948) where a clear-cut finding was recorded that there could not have been an oral usufructuary mortgage of immovable property for value of more than Rs. 100/- under section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, the same being bad in law. Thus, the predecessors of the respondents could not be treated to be in possession under the mortgage. Under the CNT Act as it stood in the year 1922, the transfer could have been challenged as it contravenes section 46 of the CNT Act, being a contract or agreement of transfer. That plea having not been taken by the appellant's predecessors, the appellants and his predecessors were not entitled to raise the question of transfer being invalid under section 46 of the CNT Act as it stood in 1922 on the principle of constructive res judicata.[1331]

(d) Suits for Partition.—If in a previous suit for partition some of the properties are left out by mistake or with the consent of the parties, a subsequent suit for partition of those properties is not barred; but it will be barred if they were excluded by the court from partition after a contest between the parties on the ground that they are incapable of partition.[1332] It will also be barred if they are included in the suit but the decree failed to grant any relief with respect to them;[1333] but, where the decree in the partition suit had declared that the plaintiff was entitled to a share in the family properties but one of the items was, by mistake, omitted in the schedule of properties to be divided, it was held that a second suit for partition thereof was not barred by res judicata.[1334] Plaintiff sued for partition of certain properties. It was objected that the matter had been in issue in an earlier suit; but it was found that the earlier suit was based on a deed said to have been executed regarding the property and did not cover all the properties. Coparcenary was not an issue in that suit. It was held that the earlier decision could not be res judicata; the issues not being identical.[1335] Where in a suit for partition, some of the members of the family elect to continue as joint, a subsequent suit for partition by them is not barred.[1336] Likewise, if a decree for partition is not followed by actual division and separate possession of properties and the parties continue in joint possession as co-sharers as before, a fresh suit for partition is not barred as that is a recurring right incidental to co-ownership.[1337] The position

---

1329. Rambriksh Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 Pat 156. See notes, "Finality of decree in redemption suits", below.
1330. Fulchand Munda v State of Bihar, AIR 2008 SC 1139 : (2008) 14 SCC 774.
1331. Fulchand Munda v State of Bihar, AIR 2008 SC 1139, para 5 at p 1141 : (2008) 14 SCC 774.
1332. Sasimohan v Hari Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 459 : (1928) 32 Cal WN 1023; Malhari v Vinayak, AIR 1929 Bom 323 : (1929) 31 Bom LR 640.
1333. Nageswar Tuvari v Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1953 All 541.
1334. Veeriah v Venkatasubbiah, (1955) ILR Andh 215.
1335. Shankarrao Bapusaheb Shinde v Vithalrao Ganpatrao Shinde, AIR 1989 SC 879 : (1989) Supp 2 SCC 162.
1336. Mallayya v Thanlari Thipparnna, (1955) ILR Andh 81.
1337. Santhana Narain v Saran Narain, AIR 1959 Pat 331 : (1959) ILR 38 Pat 737; Abdul Kareem v Silar Sahib, AIR 1957 AP 40; Tharakishore v Beharu, AIR 1958 Assam 67 : (1956) ILR Assam 77; Shyam Sundar v M Chand Bai, (1962) ILR 12 Raj 96.

would be the same when a suit for partition is dismissed for default under O IX, rule 8.[1338] The plaintiff in a subsequent suit for partition of certain property had an opportunity to press that property in question as joint family property. A plea was certainly taken that the suit was not maintainable on account of non-exclusion of property in question, the plea was however, not pressed. It was held that the possession in the earlier suit operates as res judicata and the second suit is not maintainable.[1339]

When the question regarding oral partition was directly and substantially in issue in both suits, it would operate as res judicata in subsequent suit for partition.[1340]

Where a suit for partition was filed by the plaintiffs claiming assignment in their favour by one of the executants of verumpattam (tenancy) chit in favour of jenmies of lands, however, in an earlier suit for partition filed by one of the executants of chit, it was held that the applicant executant (who was not assignor of plaintiffs in instant case), was the only tenant and not the other two executants and that order was set aside in first appeal where the plaintiffs were parties, however, the high court in second appeal wherein the plaintiffs in instant case were not parties again restored judgment of trial court holding that applicant was the only tenant, such judgment would operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit against the plaintiff when there was order of land tribunal passed in favour of jenmies of land in the application filed by them for resumption of land which had become final and there was no claim by said executant there were two other tenants with him and also when there was oral and documentary evidence not proving the said tenancy chit though executed by three executants and therefore could be challenged under section 92(6) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Moreover, the suit was collusive because the defendant, who was the only tenant, was found by the courts as being plaintiff's father. It was more so when no challenge was set forth by the plaintiffs and therefore he was estopped from questioning that proceeding before land tribunal. It could not be said in such a case, that jenmies were estopped from contending that there was only one tenant and not three tenants as alleged, on basis of judgment in earlier case for recovery of rent filed by jenmies against three persons when the three persons nowhere in the proceedings claimed that they were tenants and on the other hand, they took the plea that they did not cultivate the land along with the said tenant.[1341]

Where the defendant co-sharer has given consent only insofar as his shares are concerned and not for the mode of division, it would not in any way affect his rights to claim fair and equal division in respect of the shares allotted in his favour by means of the preliminary decree. Therefore, no question of res judicata would arise in this context and the defendant co-sharer is entitled to be heard regarding the claim of fair and equitable division of his shares and therefore the consent given for partition of properties would not in any way prevent him nor would he in any manner become disentitled to claim proper and equitable division by metes and bounds.[1342]

Where, in the earlier suit for partition of joint family properties there was compromise between the parties and the properties were divided by metes and bounds in family settlement, thereafter, there was alienation by one of the members of the family of his share to the plaintiffs father by registered sale deed, as the validity of sale deed and transfer thereunder were not in issue in the earlier suit for partition. The subsequent suit filed by the plaintiff for declaration

---

1338. Manoharlal v Onkar Das, AIR 1959 P&H 252 : (1961) 63 Punj LR 264.
1339. Krishna Prasad Misra v Panchanan Misra, AIR 1997 Ori 120.
1340. Muthakke v Devanna Rai, AIR 2002 Ker 301 (DB).
1341. Balachandran v Gopalan, AIR 2001 Ker 337.
1342. VS Mani v K Rajendran, AIR 2003 Mad 432.

of right, title, and interest for permanent injunction, on the basis of said sale deed, was not barred by res judicata.[1343]

Where a member of a joint family sued to set aside an alienation by the manager as not binding on the family and obtained a decree for partition of his share in the property alienated, a subsequent suit by the alienee for a general partition praying that the property alienated might in equity be allotted to the share of his alienor, is not barred by res judicata.[1344] The validity or the binding nature of an alienation by the manager of a joint Hindu family does not depend on a partition effected after such alienation. If the partition was not directly and substantially in issue in the suit against such alienation a finding that the partition was sham does not operate as res judicata.[1345] A suit for partition for common tarwad properties was instituted. One of the defendants had the lease deed in respect of certain property in his favour, the said defendant died during the pendency of the case. The brother of the deceased defendant was appointed as a guardian of the sons of the deceased defendant in the partition suit. A preliminary decree of partition was passed; however, before the final decree could be passed, the sons of the deceased defendant attained majority and moved application seeking liberty to file separate written statements on the ground that they were not properly represented by the brother of the deceased defendant. The application was dismissed. A separate suit thereafter was filed by the sons of the deceased defendant seeking a declaration that the brother of the deceased had an interest adverse to them and he did not plead that the leasehold right in the property in question was the individual right of the deceased defendant. The suit was dismissed; however, an appeal was allowed and it was held that the decision of the high court would not operate as res judicata in respect of the questions involved in a subsequent suit as to whether the lease hold title in the property in question belonged to the deceased defendant or to both the branches of the deceased defendant and his brothers, who acted as guardians.[1346] One M had two sons B and P. A suit for partition by meets and bounds to extend of their 1/3 share in a house alleged to be belonging to a joint family of M, B and P were filed by the respondent who were descendants through P. It was held that M was exclusive owner and it was not a joint family property and the respondent had no right to partition. M during his lifetime executed a registered will on 28 March 1964, bequeathing the properties to the appellant who were descendants through B. M died on 12 December 1968. The appellant filed a suit on 14 November 1997, for declaration of title and for possession. The suit was decreed and the decree was affirmed in appeal. The high court in second appeal referred that finding on the ground that the respondent remained in possession for more than 12 years and thereby, they perfected their title by adverse possession. It was held that since there was no plea that the respondents had claimed any hostile title against M, the owner of the property, the earlier decree operated as res judicata. Moreover, against M, the predecessors in title of the appellant, the earlier decree operated as constructive res judicata on the principle of "might and ought".[1347] It has been held by the High Court of Orissa that in a suit for partition accounts of profits received from the lands should be taken down to the date of the final decree and that a subsequent suit for profits of this period is barred;[1348] but, this decision has been dissented from by the Madras High Court which has held that while the co-sharer has a right to call for accounts for the period subsequent to the institution of the suit in the suit itself, he is not

---

1343. Ganesh Patra v Banabihari Patra, AIR 2004 Ori 23.
1344. Narasimhiah v Chicka Thimmayya, AIR 1954 Mys 115 : (1953) ILR Mys 655.
1345. Ganga Bai v Vijay Kumar, AIR 1974 SC 1126 : (1974) 2 SCC 393 : (1974) Mah LJ 602.
1346. VB Arun Kumar v Jaya Singh, (1993) Supp 2 SCC 141.
1347. Madhav Krishan v Chandana Bhaga, (1997) 2 SCC 203.
1348. Udekar v Chandrasekhar, AIR 1961 Ori 111.

obliged to do so and a subsequent suit therefore, is not barred.[1349] This, it is submitted, is the better view.

(e) Suit for Declaratory Decree.—Failure to sue for a declaratory decree in no way bars a claim for substantive relief when it arises.[1350] A decree is not null and void, merely because it was passed in disregard of the prohibition contained in section 34, Specific Relief Act, 1963. Res judicata would still apply to such a decree. The criteria for applying section 11 are not the relief prayed for in the suit, or the structure and texture of the decree or maintainability of the suit. Non-maintainability of the suit is not to be confused with want of competence of the court.[1351] In pursuance of judgment passed by the Supreme Court, the Government of Gujarat passed the following order on 4 August 1969, the relevant operation of which reads as under:

> Shri TS Mankad should be deemed to have remained in service as executive engineer upto the date that he had attained the age of 55 years i.e. upto 14 January 1964.
>
> The order in the Government Order Public Works Department No DPA–1861–E, dated 12 October 1961, should be treated to have been closed.

The aforesaid order was challenged by the appellant before the Gujarat High Court with a prayer to declare this order dated 4 August 1969, as illegal, void, ultra vires, bad in law and inoperative and the same was not binding on the appellant. This special application was rejected holding that the right of appellant to continue in service and was judicially determined by the Supreme Court and that judicial determination was given effect to by the state government by its order dated 4 August 1969. The special leave petition against this judgment was dismissed on 21 January 1979. Thus the controversy was put to an end and the result was that the appellant was not entitled to continue in service beyond 55 years of age.[1352]

(f) Subject Matter may be Different.—It is not necessary, for Explanation IV to be applicable, that both the issue and the subject matter of the two suits should be the same. It is enough if the matters in issue are the same, otherwise in suits for arrears of rent there could be no res judicata at all, for the subject matters of successive suits for arrears of rent are necessarily different.[1353] The argument that the principle of res judicata cannot apply because in the previous suit only a part of the property was involved, when in the subsequent suit the whole property is the subject-matter, cannot be accepted. The principle of res judicata under section 11 of the CPC is attracted where issues directly and substantially involved between the same parties, in the previous and subsequent suit are the same, may be, in the previous suit, only a part of the property was involved when in the subsequent suit, the whole property is the subject-matter.[1354] In absence of the pleadings of the earlier suit being filed, it cannot be said with certainty that the subject-matter of the suit is same as that of the former suit. Hence, the dispute does not attract the principle of "Res Judicata".[1355]

In a case the Supreme Court was considering the provisions of Pondicherry Assistant Engineers (including Deputy Director of Public Works Department) Group B (Technical) Recruitment Rules (1965) in the matter of appointment by promotion to the post of Assistant Engineer. The issue in the case was inter se seniority between degree holder Section Officers and

---

1349. Rasammal v Subbaraya Gouden, (1963) 1 Mad LJ 148.
1350. Charu Chandra v Kamakhya Narain, AIR 1931 PC 5 : (1931) ILR 10 Pat 284 : 58 IA 17.
1351. Governor, State of Orissa v Taldu Ram Rao, AIR 1983 AP 214.
1352. Takhatray Shivadataray Mankad v State of Gujarat, (1989) Supp 2 SCC 110.
1353. Jamadar Singh v Serazuddin, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 979; Sarojini v Lakhi Priya, AIR 1925 Cal 427 : (1925) 29 Cal WN 253, p 259; Pasupathinath v Sankari Prasad, AIR 1957 Cal 128.
1354. K Ethirajan v Lakshmi, AIR 2003 SC 4295 : AIR 2003 SCW 4951. See note under the same heading.
1355. Bechan Singh v Mansarovar, Second Appeal No. 238 of 2008 decided by the Chattisgarh High Court on 28 August 2020.

diploma holder Section Officer who acquired degree during service to qualify for promotion. In the course of hearing a point was raised that consideration of the issue is barred by res judicata as also the rule laid down in Article 141 of the Constitution as the issue had been decided by an earlier decision of the Supreme Court in N Suresh Nathan v UOI (AIR 1992 SC 564). It was held by the Supreme Court that is the earlier case the court had only considered the question of eligibility of diploma holder Section Officers acquiring degree during service for promotion in the quota of degree holders and inter se seniority between the two groups of Section Officer was not decided. As such, neither Article 141 nor the principles of res judicata bar consideration of the question in issue.[1356]

In Krishna Hare Gaur v Vinod Kumar Tyagi,[1357] in response to the advertisement issued inviting applications from the eligible candidates for appointment to the post of headmaster, several persons made their applications. The first respondent was selected and appointed. The appellant made a representation alleging that first respondent had obtained appointment by using forged experience certificates along with his application. Since no action was taken by any of the authorities, the appellant filed the writ petition in the high court challenging the appointment. The high court, after hearing the parties, directed the District Basic Shiksha Adhikari to pass a reasoned order. The District Basic Shiksha Adhikari rejected the representation of the appellant. Aggrieved by the said order, the appellant preferred writ appeal. The high court dismissed the same holding that the District Basic Shiksha Adhikari has recorded a categorical finding that he inspected the original records and found that the first respondent has requisite five years' teaching experience. In the meantime, the district magistrate took cognizance of the appellant's representations made earlier and directed the additional district magistrate to conduct an inquiry and submit a report. The additional district magistrate submitted his report stating that the experience certificates filed by first respondent were bogus and obtained with the collusion of the heads of the respective institutions. The district magistrate forwarded the report to the Basic Shiksha Adhikari directing him to take appropriate action in the matter and report at the earliest. Pursuant to the finding and the report, the appointment of first respondent was cancelled. Aggrieved by the same, the first respondent filed a writ petition impleading the appellant as one of the respondents. The high court dismissed the same stating that his appointment was made contrary to the statutory provisions as he did not possess the requisite experience. Against the said order, he preferred a special appeal before the high court, which was allowed by the division bench by applying the principles of res judicata.

The Apex Court, relying on Meghmala v G Narasimha Reddy,[1358] held that the high court was wrong in applying the principles of res judicata in the instant case. It opined that, "[W]hen the appointment is made dehors the rules, the same is a nullity. In such an eventuality, the statutory bar like doctrine of res judicata is not attracted."

(g) Issue of Law.—The principle of res judicata would apply only when the lis was inter partes and had attained finality in respect of the issues involved. The said principle will, however, have no application inter alia, in a case where the judgment and/or order had been passed by a court having no jurisdiction therefore, and/or in a case involving pure question of law. It will also have no application in a case where the judgment is not a speaking one.[1359]

1356. N Suresh Nathan v UOI, AIR 2010 SC 2171 : (2010) 5 SCC 692, decided on 22 April 2010.
1357. Krishna Hare Gaur v Vinod Kumar Tyagi, AIR 2015 SC 1248 : (2015) 11 SCC 355.
1358. Meghmala v G Narasimha Reddy, (2010) 8 SCC 383 : (2010) 10 SCR 47 : 2010 (8) JT 658.
1359. UOI v Pramod Gupta, AIR 2005 SCW 4645 : (2005) 8 JT 203 : (2005) 12 SCC 1.

The question of determination being a pure question of law, the principles of res judicata shall have no application.[1360]

This section provides that no court shall try any suit of "issue" etc. Issues are of three kinds: (1) issues of fact; (2) issues of law; and (3) mixed issues of law and fact. An issue of fact may be res judicata; but, this is not so where in the subsequent suit altered circumstances are pleaded.[1361] A mixed issue of law and fact may also be res judicata.[1362] There is no degree of importance between issues.[1363] An issue of law, it has been held, may or may not be res judicata. The law on the subject may be summarized as follows:

(i) A decision on an issue of law operates as res judicata if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is the same as that in the first suit.[1364] In Bindeshwari v Bageshwari,[1365] where the question of the validity of a grant, in view of section 12A of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1876 was directly and substantially in issue in a former suit, it was held by the Privy Council that the determination of the question in that suit operated as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties and relating to the same transaction. It would seem, therefore, that a decision on a question whether a section of a statute applied or not to a particular transaction would be res judicata if the same question arose again. Lord Thankerton observed; "the question whether it (section 12A) applied to a particular transaction entitles the court to consider the construction of the section and the determination of its applicability rests with the court." It is immaterial that the decision was erroneous in law.[1366] Where the court had jurisdiction to deal with a certain application, but the decision arrived at by the exercise of such jurisdiction was not accepted subsequently by a Division Bench in a case having different parties, the former decision would still operate as res judicata inter parte, as regards the subject matter in that decision. It cannot be said that an erroneous decision was arrived at by former decision by an assumption of jurisdiction which the court did not have.[1367] The correctness or otherwise of a decision, viewed in the light of a subsequent decision, has really no bearing upon the question whether it would operate as res judicata or not. All that is necessary to be established is, that the matter was substantially in issue in the former proceeding and that it had also been heard and finally decided.[1368] Affirming this principle, it has been held by the Supreme Court that a decision of a question of law

---

1360. Bishwanath Prasad Singh v Rajendra Prasad, AIR 2006 SC 2965 : 2006 AIR SCW 1235 : (2006) 4 SCC 432.
1361. Mangharan Chuharmel v BC Patel, AIR 1972 Bom 46 : (1972) ILR Bom 30 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 140.
1362. Raja Syed Ahmad Ali v Hinga Lal, AIR 1947 Oudh 74 : (1946) ILR 21 Luck 586; Bishun Priya v Bhaba Sundari, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 318; Koyyana v Doosy, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 225.
1363. Prem Das v Joti Pershad, AIR 1971 Del 282.
1364. Gowri Koer v Audh Koer, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1087; Phundo v Jangi Nath, (1893) ILR 15 All 37; Kaveri Ammall v Sastri Ramier, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 104; Waman v Hari, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 128; Annada Prosad v Gopal Chandra, AIR 1935 Cal 725; Ram Kumar v Baldeo Prasad, AIR 1965 All 752; Bhau Martand v Hajabai Bala, AIR 1975 Bom 233 : (1975) 77 Bom LR 141; D Ghosh v Taswar Hussain, AIR 1977 Pat 110.
1365. Bindeshwari v Bageshwari, AIR 1936 PC 46 : (1936) ILR 15 Pat 203 : 63 IA 53.
1366. Gowri Koer v Audh Koer, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1087; approved in Tarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 734; Raj Mohan v Sarada Charan, AIR 1936 Cal 200 : (1936) 40 Cal WN 627; Revti Devi v Khilali Ram, AIR 1967 Del 119.
1367. NY Panchapagasan v K Swaminathan, AIR 1985 Mad 154.
1368. NY Panchapagasan v K Swaminathan, AIR 1985 Mad 154.

given in a previous execution case between the parties would be binding on them even if it was erroneous.[1369]

In execution of a decree for eviction against a tenant in a proceeding under O XXI, rule 97, the executing court held that the sub-tenant had become direct tenant under the landlord, in view of section 20, Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act, 1952. Though the executing court had wrongly relied on section 20 (because it had been repealed), the decision was not challenged by the tenant. The tenant subsequently sued for eviction of the sub-tenant. It was held that the earlier judgment had become final against the tenant and was binding on him and could not be re-agitated. The suit was barred. It was immaterial that the executing court had committed an error of law. It had jurisdiction to decide the question and its order was not a nullity.[1370] A decree for possession was passed against the President of a society. It was wrongly held that it could not be executed against the society or its trustees. A second suit against the trustees is not barred by res judicata.[1371] Landlord sued for eviction of the tenant on the ground inter alia of personal necessity—a ground for eviction under the Bihar Rent Control Act. The suit was dismissed for want of notice under section 106, Transfer of Property Act. At that time, the law on the need for such notice was in a fluid condition. Later, the landlord sued again for eviction on the ground of default in rent after the first decree and also personal necessity. The defendant pleaded, in defence, the objection of want of notice. In the meantime, judicial decisions (Supreme Court and High Court of Patna) had held that notice was not required. It was held that the first decision on this point was not res judicata.[1372]

(ii) There is a conflict of decisions whether an erroneous decision on a question of law operates as res judicata, if the cause of action in the two suits are different, an erroneous decision on a question of law operates as res judicata. It has been held in some cases that it does not[1373] (Illustration 2), and in some that it does[1374] [Illustration (iii)]. The latter view was adopted by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Rarini Charan v Kedar Nath.[1375] The judgment proceeded on the broad ground that the correctness or otherwise of a judicial decision had no bearing upon the question, whether it does or does not operate as res judicata. It was also pointed out that it was the identity of the matter directly and substantially in issue that was the test of res judicata and not the identity of the cause of action.

1369. Mohanlal v Benoy Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 : (1953) SCR 377. See Illustration (i) below.
1370. Gopal Krishan v Ram Lal, AIR 1989 Raj 24.
1371. Bhil Seva Mandal v Naik Shang Daboda, AIR 1980 Guj 163.
1372. Sugan Chand Agarwal v Jivt Shah, AIR 1984 Pat 184 (DB).
1373. Alimunnisa v Shama Charan, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 749; Baij Nath v Padamanand, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 848; Chamanlal v Bapubhai, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 669; Vishnu v Ramling, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 25; Parthasaradi v Chinna, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 304; Venku v Mahalinga, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 393; Gopu v Sami, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 517; Mangalathammal v Narayanswami, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 461; Aitamma v Narain, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 504; Kuppana v Kumara, (1911) ILR 34 Mad 450; Aghore v Kamini, (1909) 11 Cal LJ 461; Purna v Rasik, (1911) 13 Cal LJ 119; Taliamand v Muhammad, AIR 1930 Lah 907 : (1931) 12 Lah 52.
1374. Venkata v Andavolu, (1917) 32 Mad LJ 63; Sitaram v Laxman, AIR 1921 Bom 87 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 1260; Ramlal v Deodhari Rai, AIR 1924 Pat 265 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 771; Hub Lal v Gulzari Lal, AIR 1927 All 297 : (1927) ILR 49 All 543; Rajaram v Central Bank of India, AIR 1926 Bom 481 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 879; Ayetonnessa Bibi v Amjad Ali, AIR 1928 Cal 717 : (1928) 32 Cal WN 828; Tarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 (FB) : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 723); Sanichar v Raja Dhakeshwar, AIR 1930 Pat 585 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 674.
1375. Rarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 723.

It was contended in that case that the law had been altered by judicial decisions since the judgment in the first suit, and reliance was placed upon the judgment of Maclean CJ in Alimunnissa v Sharma Charan,[1376] where it was said:

> Cases must be decided upon the law as it stands when judgment is pronounced, and not upon what it was at the date of a previous suit, the law having been altered in the meantime. It has been conceded that, if the law had been altered meanwhile by statute, the objection [of res judicata] could not prevail: it is difficult to see why it should prevail, because the law has been since determined to be otherwise by judicial decisions.

Referring to this passage, Rankin CJ observed in the Full Bench case that the reasoning in Alimunnissa's case was erroneous. The learned judge said:

> The legislature, by statute, may alter the rights of parties and when it does so, it makes such provision as it thinks proper to prevent injustice. Courts of law are in no way authorized to alter the rights of parties. They propose, at all events, to ascertain the law, and if the binding character of a decision upon a concrete question as to the terms of a particular holding is to fluctuate with every alteration in the current of authority, the courts will become an instrument for the unsettlement of rights rather than for the ascertainment thereof. The principle relied upon is abhorrent to section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code and to the general intention of the doctrine of res judicata.

At the same time, the learned judge observed that when a plea of res judicata is raised with reference to a point of law which concerns questions of jurisdiction,[1377] or procedure,[1378] or limitation,[1379] and in which besides the parties the courts and the public have an interest, it was at least a question whether special considerations should not apply. In a Bombay case[1380] Baker J after an exhaustive review of the case law expressed entire agreement with the judgment of Rankin CJ. In the Bombay case, however, the decision was not on a pure point of law. The holder of a saranjam sought to execute an award decree of 1855 under which he was entitled to a share of the collections made by a junior branch of his family. The defence was that the award had been superseded by a resumption and re-grant of the saranjam by the Government in 1900. The same defence had been made to an execution application for a share of the collections of previous years and had been disallowed and the court had then held that the re-grant and resumption of the saranjam had not the effect of nullifying the award. This construction of the re-grant was held to be a mixed question of fact and law which operated as res judicata. Again, when a deed of partition was construed to be an award, the construction was held to be a mixed question of law and fact and to operate as res judicata.[1381] A decision on an abstract question of law unrelated to the facts when gives rise to a right, cannot operate as res judicata. Nor can a decision on the question of jurisdiction be res judicata in a subsequent suit; but, if the question of law is related to the fact in issue, an erroneous decision on such a question of law may operate as res judicata between the parties in a subsequent suit or proceeding, atleast if the cause of action is the same.[1382] Tarini Charan's case has been followed by the Madras High

---

1376. Alimunnissa v Sharma Charan, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 749.
1377. Rajaram v Central Bank, AIR 1926 Bom 481 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 879; Chinnappa Reddi v Srinivasa Rao, AIR 1935 Mad 835 : (1935) ILR 59 Mad 62; District Board, Dabhanga v Suraj Narain, AIR 1936 Pat 198 : (1936) ILR 14 Pat 633. Bhau Martand v Hajabai Bala, AIR 1975 Bom 233.
1378. Kuppana v Kumara, (1911) ILR 34 Mad 450.
1379. Aitamma v Naraina, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 504.
1380. Keshav v Gangadhar, AIR 1931 Bom 570 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 1443; Savitri v Holebasappa, AIR 1932 Bom 257 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 198.
1381. Raja Syed Ahmad Ali v Hinga Lal, AIR 1947 Oudh 74; Abdul Rahim v Fateh Ullah, AIR 1933 Lah 274 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 31.
1382. Supreme Court Employees, Welfare Association v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 334 : (1989) 4 SCC 187.

Court;[1383] but the Gujarat High Court has held that if the effect of the law has been differently interpreted by judicial decisions the previous decision cannot have the binding effect for all time and cannot operate as res judicata.[1384] It is submitted that this is not correct in view of the decisions of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts referred to above, particularly the Bombay decisions being binding on the Gujarat High Court, as they have been made before 1960.

(iii) There is no doubt, as observed by Rankin CJ, that if the law is altered by the passing of a new Act after a decision in a case, the decision cannot operate as res judicata. Thus, in Lakshmi v Atal[1385] after a preliminary decree for sale had been passed on a mortgage and before a final decree was made, Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, 1908, was extended to the district in which the property was situated. That Act provided that no decree "shall" be passed for the sale of the right of a raiyat in his holding and that such right, "shall" not be sold in execution of a decree. It was held that the preliminary decree did not operate as res judicata and that the court had no power to pass a final decree for sale. This rule, as stated above, does not apply to a case where the law has been altered by subsequent judicial decisions.[1386] In a suit for eviction, decree was passed on the ground that sub-tenants had been illegally inducted. Subsequently, the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act was passed. It was held that in a subsequent suit filed after the passing of the Act the earlier decisions was not res judicata where the parties were not the same and violation of tenancy legislation was not in issue in the earlier suit.[1387] Change of law after the pronouncement of a judicial decision where the amendment provides for the re-determination of matters decided, takes away the effect of res judicata.[1388]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) Same cause of action: decisions though erroneous held to operate as res judicata:

X sells certain property to A. At the time of sale the property was in the possession of B who claimed it adversely to X. A sues B in the High Court of Calcutta to recover possession of the property as purchased from X. An issue is raised in the suit, and it is an issue of law, namely, whether a person who is not in possession of property at the time of sale is competent to convey it. The issue is found in the negative and A's suit is dismissed. Afterwards, it is decided by a Full Bench of the same high court in another case between different parties altogether that although a person may not be in possession of a property, he is competent to convey it. After the decision of the Full Bench, A again sues B to recover possession of the same property under the same deed of sale, and asks for a decision in his favour on the strength of the Full Bench ruling on the point of law which was decided against him in the former suit. Here, the cause of action in the subsequent suit is the same as that in the former suit. The court is, therefore, precluded from re-trying the same question of law in the subsequent suit. In other words, the issue of law is res judicata. It is immaterial that the decision on the question of law in the first suit was erroneous.[1389]

(ii) Different causes of action: decision held not to operate as res judicata: A sues B in 1874 to recover 12 years' arrears of his share of a certain government allowance received by B. B contends that A is not entitled to recover more than 3 year's allowance, A's claim beyond that period being barred by the law of limitation. The court allows A's claim in its entirety. In 1894, A sues B for

---

1383. Ramchandra Deo v Ramamurthy, AIR 1933 Mad 925 : (1933) 65 Mad LJ 684; dissenting from Mangalathammal v Narayanaswami, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 461.
1384. Alimiya v Sayed Mohomed, AIR 1968 Guj 257 : (1968) 9 Guj LR 1002.
1385. Lakshmi v Atal, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 534.
1386. Rajaram v Central Bank, AIR 1926 Bom 481 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 879.
1387. Shantilal Rampuria v Vega Trading Corp., AIR 1989 SC 1819.
1388. Chanderjot Kaur v State, AIR 1983 Pat 220 (DB).
1389. Gowri Koer v Audh Koer, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1087; Ramlal v Deodhari Rai, AIR 1924 Pat 265 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 771 : 74 IC 781; Doorvas v Govindaswami, AIR 1921 Ngp 315 : 67 IC 189 : (1921) 40 Mad LJ 556.

further arrears for 11 years from 1882–1893. B raises the same point of law that was raised by him in the former suit. Held that the decision in the former suit does not operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. Here, the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the former suit, for the claim in the subsequent suit is for arrears which had accrued due after the institution of the former suit. The court, therefore, is not precluded from re-trying the same question of law, and if it finds that the question of law was wrongly decided in the former suit, it may decide the suit on what it considers is the correct interpretation of law. The court said: "It appears to us that a point of law can never be res judicata." The judgment also proceeded on the ground that the first suit was decided under the Indian Limitation Act, 1871, and that the law had been altered by the Act of 1871.[1390]

(iii) Different causes of action: decision though erroneous, held to operate as res judicata: A executes a kabuliat in 1880 in favour of B. The kabuliat contains a stipulation for payment of interest on arrears of rent at the rate of 75 per cent per annum. In 1898, the holding is sold in execution of a decree for rent obtained by A against B and it is purchased by C. In 1915, A sues C for arrears of rent and interest on arrears at 75 per cent per annum. The defence is that C being an auction purchaser, is not bound to pay interest at the rate stipulated in the kabuliat and that it is in the nature of a penalty. This contention is not upheld and a decree is passed in favour of A with interest at 75 per cent per annum. In 1924, A brings another suit against C for arrears for a subsequent period and interest at 75 per cent per annum. C raises the same defence and also contends that the decision in the previous suit was erroneous. Held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta high court that the decision in the previous suit, even if erroneous operated as res judicata.[1391] The principle is that an erroneous decision by a court having jurisdiction is as much binding between the parties as a right one and can be superseded only by an appeal to the higher court or through other procedure, like review which the law provides.[1392]

In the cases in which it was held that an erroneous decision on a point of law where the causes of action were different, does not operate as res judicata, the courts were influenced by the consideration that they would be perpetuating an injustice for all time, if they were to hold that an erroneous decision on a point of law in a former suit was binding upon the parties in a subsequent suit instituted upon a new cause of action. It must, however, be recognized as stated by Mookerjee J in Aghore Nath v Kamini Debi,[1393] that the effect of this is to substitute in the present section the expression "cause of action" for "the matter in issue". In Venkata v Andavolu,[1394] Napier J took the extreme view that where a decision on a point of law, whether it be on the construction of a document or of a statute or on common law or on customary law, once settles a question that arises directly out of conflicting views as to the rights of the parties, it is res judicata. A similar opinion was expressed by Shah J and Fawcett J in Sitaram v Laxman[1395] and by Das J in Ramlal v Deodhari Rai.[1396] To get over the difficulties which might arise from this extreme view, some judges have suggested a distinction between a decision on an abstract question of law, such as a question of limitation, and a decision on a concrete question, such as the construction of a document entered into between the parties to a suit, the latter question being treated as one to which the rule of res judicata applies, and the former as one to which the principle of stare decisis applies.[1397] It is difficult to see what the 1390. Chamanlal v Bapubhai, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 669.

---

1391. Tarini Charan v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 723; Chandi Prasad v Maharaja Mahendra, (1901) ILR 23 All 5.
1392. West Bengal v Hemant Kumar, AIR 1966 SC 1061.
1393. Aghore Nath v Kamini Debi, (1910) 11 Cal LJ 461, p 471.
1394. Venkata v Andavolu, (1917) 32 Mad LJ 63.
1395. Sitaram v Laxman, AIR 1921 Bom 87 : (1921) 45 ILR Bom 1260.
1396. Ramlal v Deodhari Rai, AIR 1924 Pat 265 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 771, p 773.
1397. Sitaram Sakharam Mangle v Laxman Vishnu Ketkar, AIR 1921 Bom 87 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 1260, per Macleod CJ.

principle of stare decisis has to do with the rule of res judicata.[1398] In Tarini Chandran v Kedar Nath,[1399] Rankin CJ said that whether a decision was correct or erroneous it had no bearing on the question of res judicata, and that what was res judicata between the parties to a suit was not the reasoning or any principle of law, but the actual decision declaring the rights of the parties.[1400] An issue of law decided by turning a blind eye to the relevant statutory provision cannot be held to be conclusive and binding on the parties litigating subsequently on a different cause of action. Such a decision on a question of law is clearly "per incuriam" and cannot acquire the status of a binding decision even in between the parties "Per incuriam" are those decisions given in forgetfulness of some inconsistent statutory provisions or of some authority binding on the court concerned, so that in such case some part of the decision or some step in the reasoning on which it is based, is found on that account, to be demonstrably wrong.[1401] The decision on pure question of law rendered per incuriam by overlooking the statutory provision in the earlier suit will not operate as res judicata in this subsequent suit.[1402]

In this connection, it is interesting to note the decision of the Privy Council in Broken Hill Proprietary Co v Broken Hill Municipal Council.[1403] The appeal was from a judgment of the Supreme Court of New South Wales. The question for determination was as to the correct method of ascertaining the annual value of a mine for rating purposes for the year 1919–21. That question turned upon the construction of section 153(3) of the Local Government Act, 1919, of New South Wales. The company was assessed for the years 1917–19 by the Council on a particular construction of the section and that construction was upheld by the High Court of Australia. The council adopted the same method for assessment for the years 1919–21 and it was upheld by the Supreme Court. The company appealed to the Privy Council. It was contended on behalf of the council that the question as to the matter of valuation was res judicata, but this contention was overruled and the appeal was allowed. As to the plea of res judicata, their Lordships said:

> There is, however, no substance in this contention. The decision of the High Court related to a valuation and a liability to a tax in a previous year, and no doubt as regards that year the decision could not be disputed. The present case relates to a new question—namely, the valuation for a different year and the liability for that year. It is not eadem questio, and therefore the principles of res judicata cannot apply.

This case shows that according to the English law an erroneous decision on a question atleast of the interpretation of a statute, does not operate as res judicata. If a decision of every question of law were res judicata, a decision that one of the several co-sharers may alone maintain a suit for rent of the entire holding, though contravention of the express provisions of section 194 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, would operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties so as to preclude the tenant from raising the same defence in that suit, but it has been rightly decided that such a decision has not the effect of res judicata.[1404] A view has also been expressed in some cases that a decision on a question of jurisdiction, would

---

1398. As to stare decisis, see Tricomdas v Gopinath, (1917) ILR 44 Cal 759 : (1917) 44 IA 65, p 70; Pate v Pate, AIR 1915 Cal 1100.
1399. Tarini Chandran v Kedar Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 777 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 723; Narayana v Subramanian, AIR 1937 Mad 254 : (1937) 1 Mad LJ 233.
1400. Jeychand v Dolegobinda, AIR 1944 Cal 272 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 454; Panchanon v Ranbir, AIR 1948 All 336.
1401. N Sreekanthaiah v MN Mallikarjunaiah, AIR 1996 Kant 93.
1402. UOI v Indian Railways, SAS Staff Association, (1995) Supp 3 SCC 600.
1403. Broken Hill Proprietary Co v Broken Hill Municipal Council, AIR 1942 Bom 322 : (1942) 44 Bom LR 710.
1404. Manohar Lal v Baldeo Singh, AIR 1927 All 505 : (1927) ILR 49 All 918.

not be res judicata.[1405] A previous decision that the defendant were entitled to take advantage of section 7 of the Bihar Money Lenders Act of 1937, does not operate as res judicata as to the interpretation of the section in a subsequent litigation between the parties.[1406] A decision in an earlier suit that the municipality was not liable to pay non-agricultural assessment on a portion of the public street on which it had put up a market did not bar the collector from claiming in a subsequent suit that the municipality was liable to pay non-agricultural assessment on another portion of the public street at which it had constructed shops, as a decision on a question of law could be res judicata only if the right in dispute was the same.[1407] The doctrine of res judicata is a universal doctrine laying down the finality of litigation between the parties. When a particular decision has become final and binding between the parties, it cannot be set at naught on the ground that such a decision is violative of Article 14. So far as the parties are concerned, they will always be bound by the said decision. In other words, neither party will be permitted to reopen the issue decided by such decision on the ground that such decision violates the equality clause under the Constitution.[1408]

An interesting question as to whether the parties can be allowed to re-agitate issues which have been decided by a court of competent jurisdiction on a subsequent change in the interpretation of the relevant provision of law arose for consideration in Kalinga Mining Corp v UOI.[1409] The issue involved was whether the application for grant of mining lease would abate on the death of the applicant or can the legal heirs of the deceased applicant be allowed to pursue the application? While the controversy about the abatement of the application was pending, Mineral Concession Rules, 1960 were amended and rule 25-A was inserted which permitted the legal representatives to continue pressing an application for grant of mining lease after the death of the applicant. The high court held that rule 25-A is only clarificatory in nature and thus, had retrospective effect. Accordingly, it allowed the legal representatives to pursue the application. The appellant, another applicant for mining lease, challenged the decision of the high court by filing a SLP before the Supreme Court, which came to be dismissed in limine. Thereafter, the Central Government approved the recommendation of the State Government to grant mining leases in favour of the legal representatives of the deceased applicant. After the grant of lease, the appellant filed another writ petition before the high court challenging the same on the basis that the said grant constituted a new cause of action. In the meantime, the interpretation placed on rule 25-A by the high court to the effect that it was clarificatory in nature was reversed by the Supreme Court in Saligram Khirwal v UOI.[1410] It was held that rule 25A was only prospective. It was further observed that the legal heirs shall be at liberty to make a fresh application in their own right. The writ petition filed in the high court was allowed to be amended in view of this judgment. The appellant raised a preliminary objection relating to the maintainability of the application for the grant of mining lease by the legal representatives of the deceased applicant. While rejecting the preliminary objection, the high court held that the controversy regarding allowing the legal representatives to be substituted for the deceased applicant stood concluded between the parties and attained finality by the rejection of the SLP by the Supreme Court and the subsequent decision in 1405. Meghraj Golab Chand Firm v Chandra Kamal Bhuiyan, AIR 1941 Cal 493 : (1941) 73 Cal LJ 410 and the cases noticed therein.

---

1406. Narayan Singh v Kapil Deo, AIR 1951 SC 155 : (1951) SCR 138 : 1951 SCJ 199.
1407. Province of Bombay v Municipal Corp. Ahmedabad, AIR 1954 Bom 1 : (1953) ILR Bom 1081; Goripalayam Darga v Narayana, AIR 1951 Mad 630.
1408. Supreme Court Employees Welfare Assn v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 334.
1409. Kalinga Mining Corp v UOI, 2013 AIR SCW 1427 : (2013) 5 SCC 252 : (2013) 1 SCR 814 : JT 2013 (2) SC 597.
1410. Saligram Khirwal v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 805 : (2003) 7 SCC 689.

Saligram Khirwal is of no consequence. While upholding the order of the high court, the Supreme Court observed:

> The subsequent interpretation of rule 25A by this Court, that it would have only prospective operation, in the case of Saligram (supra), would not have the effect of reopening the matter which was concluded between the parties. In our opinion, if the parties are allowed to re-agitate issues which have been decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction on a subsequent change in the law, then all earlier litigation relevant thereto would always remain in a state of flux. In such circumstances, every time either a statute or a provision thereof is declared ultra vires, it would have the result of reopening of the decided matters within the period of limitation following the date of such decision. In this case not only the High Court had rejected the objection of the appellant to the substitution of the legal heirs of Dr. Sarojini Pradhan in her place, but the SLP from the said judgment has also been dismissed. Even though, strictly speaking, the dismissal of the SLP would not result in the merger of the judgment of the High Court in the order of this Court, the same cannot be said to be wholly irrelevant. The High Court, in our opinion, committed no error in taking the same into consideration in the peculiar facts of this case. Ultimately, the decision of the High Court was clearly based on the facts and circumstances of this case.

The Supreme Court thus reaffirmed the position that "a wrong decision by a court having jurisdiction is as much binding between the parties as a right one and may be superseded only by appeals to higher tribunals or other procedure like review which the law provides."

(h) Estoppel Against a Statute.—Whether or not a finding on a point of law can be res judicata, it is a settled principle that there can be no estoppel against a statute, for estoppel cannot supersede the law of the land.[1411] Thus, in Woomesh v Barada[1412] where a previous rent suit had been decreed at a rate which included illegal cess, the defendant was not precluded from questioning the legality of the claim; but, the applicability of a section to a particular transaction may be res judicata.[1413] The Bombay High Court has allowed the plea of res judicata to sanction what is prohibited by law. This was in case[1414] where a mortgagor lessee of a portion of a bhag which was inalienable under the Bombay Bhagdari Act 5 of 1862, when sued for rent, was not allowed to plead that the bhag was inalienable because he had omitted to do so in a previous ex parte rent suit. In a later case,[1415] the Allahabad High Court dismissed a suit by a single co-sharer for rent because that form of suit was forbidden by section 194 of the Agra Tenancy Act. It was objected that the defendants had not raised this plea in previous rent suits and as to this, the court said that "where the law forbids a certain thing being done in a suit, no amount of failure by a defendant in previous suits to plead the positive bar created by legislature will prevent its being taken up in a subsequent suit."

(i) Modification of Statute.—Unless it is expressly so provided, modification of statute cannot deprive a litigant of a substantive right which he had acquired before the modification came in force. The test in such cases seems to be whether a right claimed is a substantive right or a mere procedural right. An order of the execution court holding that the property in dispute was not rateable under section 16, Bundelkhund Land Alienation Act, 1908, is

---

1411. Muhammad Maqsood v Hoshiar Singh, AIR 1945 All 377 : (1945) ILR All 394; Hunt v Wimbledon Local Board, (1878) 4 CPD 48; Shridhar v Babaji, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 709.
1412. Woomesh v Barada, (1900) ILR 28 Cal 17.
1413. Bindeshwari v Bhageshwari, AIR 1936 PC 46 : (1936) ILR 15 Pat 203 : 63 IA 53.
1414. Chhaganlal v Bai Harkha, (1909) ILR 33 Bom 479.
1415. Manohar v Baldeo, AIR 1927 All 505 : (1927) ILR 49 All 918, p 923; Rup Nath v Jagannath, AIR 1928 Pat 227 : (1928) ILR 7 Pat 178; Thakur Bhageshwari v Bindeswari, AIR 1932 Pat 337 : (1933) ILR 12 Pat 147; Batul Begum v Hemchand, AIR 1960 All 519.

a substantive right.[1416] In Colonial Sugar Refining Co Ltd v Irving,[1417] a right of appeal to a particular forum was considered by their Lordships to be substantive right and was held, not to have been lost as a result of the change in enactment. In Ram Karan v Ram Das[1418] a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that if a tenant had been dispossessed before a new Tenancy Act and the cause of action had accrued before that Act came into force, then he was entitled to institute a suit in the civil court within 12 years of his dispossession, notwithstanding the provisions of the new Act that the forum should be the revenue court, and that the suit for possession should lie within six months only. Where as a result of change in law, new rights are conferred on parties, such rights are not barred as res judicata by decisions given before the new law came into force.[1419] In Board of Commr v Rutnaswamy[1420] it was held that a decision that a temple was an excepted one as defined in the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1927, did not operate as res judicata on the question whether it was an excepted temple within that Act as amended in 1930. This decision was followed by the Andhra Pradesh High Court in Raghavendraswamy v Board of Commrs[1421] wherein it was observed that the principle laid down therein was also applicable to a case where there was a change of circumstances and that it was not confined to changes in law. In NGDM Trust v RT Ramji, the legislature immediately on realising the adverse effect of section 121 of the Gujarat Town Planning and Urban Development Act, on operation of Bombay Tenancy Act to which the provisions of the Tenancy Act either apply or are realised, it would result into depriving the tenants of the status of deemed purchaser which was conferred on them; therefore, the state legislature enacted Gujarat Town Planning and Urban Development (Amendment) Act, 1986, which was brought into force wef 12 June 1985, by section 5 of the Amendment Act. It is provided that in the principle Act section 121 of the Transfer of Property Act shall be deleted wef 12 June 1985. In the opinion of the Gujarat High Court, the amendment was not applicable to a case where the statutory purchase had already taken place on 18 April 1957, when the tenant had become a deemed purchaser. Therefore, since the proceedings had already commenced on 18 April 1957, and since the tenant had already become a deemed purchaser, the fixation of the purchase price was a step in aid of the statutory obligation of the mamlatdar and ALT to fix the purchase price of the parcel of land of a deemed purchaser had taken place on 1 April 1957. Such a decision where taken by the statutory authority as it is or as the instance of the deemed purchaser, would not render the decision of the authority nonest.[1422] The Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1927, was repealed by the new Act of 1959. A decision on the question under the repealed Act can be taken as res judicata for purpose of Act of 1927 and not for the Act of 1959.[1423] Where a previous decision holds a decree to be a nullity because it was made under an Act which had no application to the territory in question, but the Act is later retrospectively extended by legislation to the territory and the decree is validated it was held that the decision holding the decree as a nullity cannot operate as res judicata.[1424]

1416. Sundar v Sheo Dat Singh, AIR 1937 All 48 : (1936) All LJ 1363.
1417. Colonial Sugar Refining Co Ltd v Irving, AIR 1905 Cal 369.
1418. Ram Karan v Ram Das, AIR 1931 All 635 : (1931) ILR 54 All 299.
1419. Ram Deo v Board of Revenue, AIR 1961 All 278.
1420. Board of Commr v Rutnaswamy, AIR 1937 Mad 232 : (1937) ILR Mad 504 : (1937) 45 Mad LW 57; Amritsar Municipality v State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 1100 : (1969) 1 SCC 475.
1421. Raghavendraswamy v Board of Commrs, AIR 1957 AP 150 : (1957) 1 Andh WR 152; Official Receiver v UOI, AIR 1961 Cal 432.
1422. Navrangpura Gam Dharmada Milkat Trust v Ram Tuji Ramaji, AIR 1994 Guj 75.
1423. MVPB Nammalwar v Commr Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowments Dept, Madras, AIR 1997 Mad 287.
1424. Jai Singh Jai Ram Tyagi v Mamanchand Rati Lal Aggarwal, (1980) 3 SCC 162.

[s 11.26.2.2] Condition II: The Same Parties or Parties under Whom any of Them Claim

This condition is the principle that judgments and decrees bind only parties and privies.[1425] A privy is a convenient term of English law to describe a person who claims under a party. Latham J in a Bombay case[1426] classified persons other than parties as: (1) privies; (2) persons not claiming under parties but represented by them; and (3) strangers.

The ground of a privy is property and not personal relation. To make a person a privy, he must have acquired an interest in the subject matter of action by inheritance, succession or purchase subsequently to the action, or he must hold the property subordinately, eg, as a sub-lessee. In the case of subordinate holder, however, the acquisition of the subordinate interest prior to the action would make the subordinate holder a privy to the judgment passed therein against the superior holder if the subordinate interest is of such a character that it is entirely dependent on that of the superior holder and automatically comes to an end as soon as the superior interest is extinguished.[1427] A privy who claims under a party is bound, for, he who takes the advantage must bear the burden—qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus. Persons represented are in fact parties through their representatives—Explanation IV. In the absence of fraud, an adjudication is binding on the first two classes, for as to strangers the maxim applies that res inter alios acta noceri non debet.

(a) Same Parties.—Parties are persons whose names are on the record at the time of the decision, and a party may be a person who has intervened in the suit.[1428] A party who withdraws or whose name is struck off, ceases to be a party.[1429] A person whose name has been inserted as a party through fraud without knowledge, or if he is a minor on record unrepresented by a guardian, cannot be said to be a party. A person who has unsuccessfully applied to be added as a party is also not a party.[1430] Delay in filing suit was condoned by invoking section 5 of the Limitation Act. The third party was impleaded after that order was passed. That party disputed legality of the order condoning delay in appeal. Plea cannot be disallowed on principle of res judicata, as the issue decided was not "between the same parties". Proposition that res judicata applies at two stages of the same litigation could not be invoked on the basis that an appeal is a continuation of the suit.[1431] Even though a real owner has not been shown in the record as a party, a decree against his benamidar binds him; but this is not an absolute rule. If it is shown that the benamidar was not authorised to conduct the litigation and had therefore no right to represent the real owner, the decision against the benamidar does not bind the real owner.[1432] A party who dies during the pendency of the suit but whose name erroneously remains on the record is not a party.[1433] If the parties are different, there is no res judicata.[1434] A former suit by the plaintiff alone and in his own right does not bar a subsequent suit filed in the name of a deity.[1435] Thus, A sues B for rent. The defence is that C, and not A, is the landlord. A fails to

---

1425. Mohunt Das v Nil Komul, (1899) 4 Cal WN 283. See also Vaishnava Dass v Faqirchand. AIR 1968 Del 6.
1426. Ahmedbhoy v Vulleebhoy, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 703, p 709.
1427. Sailendra v Bijanlal, AIR 1945 Cal 283 : (1946) 49 Cal WN 133.
1428. Gobind v Taruck, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 145; Basivi Reddy v Janardan Rao, AIR 1968 AP 306.
1429. Kalee Coomar v Pran Kishoree, (1872) 18 WR 29.
1430. J Kotamma v P Simhachalam, AIR 1969 AP 76.
1431. Sk Md Ismail v Sk Anwar Ali, AIR 1991 Cal 391.
1432. Chandran v Subramanya, AIR 1977 Mad 292 : (1977) ILR 3 Mad 173.
1433. Bepin Behary v Brojo Nath, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 357.
1434. Radha Binode v Sri Sri Gopal, AIR 1927 PC 128 : (1927) ILR 54 Cal 770 : 54 IA 238. See also KB Ramachandra Raja v State of Karnataka, AIR 2001 Kant 512.
1435. Sri Ramjee v BP Shah, AIR 1978 Pat 129.

prove his title, and the suit is dismissed. A then sues B and C for a declaration of his title to the property. The suit is not barred, for the parties to the two suits are not the same, C not having been a party to the former suit.[1436] Earlier suit was for eviction, on the ground that sub-tenants had been illegally inducted. Sub-tenants were inducted prior to the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, and before expiry of lease period. Suit was dismissed. Subsequent suit was filed after commencement of the West Bengal Act. Sub-tenants inducted before and after the commencement of the Act were joined as parties. Eviction on the ground of violation of section 13(1)(a) of the West Bengal Act, inter alia, was pleaded. It was held that earlier suit would not operate as res judicata, since the parties were not the same and the question of violation of provisions of the West Bengal Act was not involved in the earlier suit.[1437] A suit was filed to challenge the resolution of a municipality enhancing the fee for market stalls. In an earlier suit, the same resolution had been challenged by the members of another market through a representative suit. It was held that the finding given in the earlier suit did not operate res judicata as the present plaintiff was not a member of that market.[1438] Where the parties to the suit are not the same, res judicata does not apply even if the issues (existence of relationship of partnership or employment, are the same;[1439] but, where the parties in the suit are the same as in the former suit and the judgment in the former suit has not been appealed from and allowed to be final, it is binding on the parties and they cannot be allowed to go behind it in the subsequent suit.[1440] It has been doubted if the secretary of state can be said to be a party to Land Acquisition proceedings taken by the collector.[1441] A bank which held goods pledged by a firm against cash credit facility, wished to adjust the amount recovered from the pledged goods for wiping out separate dues of the partners. The goods had not been pledged for individual debts of partners. It was held that this could not be done. Finding inter partes becomes res judicata.[1442] Petition of Union of India about the competent authority appointed under Act 50 of 1962, was dismissed. It was held that special leave petition against such removal can be filed by Hindustan Petroleum Corporation as the grievance was independent of that of the government.[1443] A judgment in a suit for injunction is not judgment in rem and binds only the parties to the suit. It may be true that a decree for injunction compels personal obedience and in a proper case would not be forced against the legal representatives. However, this proposition must have a qualification and that qualification is that when the injunction relates to doing something or not doing something in a property that was the subject matter of the earlier suit and the act was on the basis of ownership of an adjacent property or a right claimed in the property of the other side, then such a decree for injunction would be binding not only against the judgement-debtor personally but all those who claim through him.[1444] When once a decree is passed, it is obvious that the defendant in the suit, i.e., the judgement-debtor, would be precluded from carrying on blasting operations in his property. To say that he is succeeded by others, they would not be bound by the restraint relating to the enjoyment of the particular property to derogate from the principle of the public policy that there shall be no second litigation in respect of same right and the same property.

1436. Dwarkanath v Ramchand, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 428.
1437. Shantilal Rampuria v Vega Trading Corp, AIR 1989 SC 1819.
1438. Coimbatore Municipality v CG Subbiah, AIR 1980 Mad 130.
1439. Munish Kumar Agnihotri v Lalit Prasad Gupta, AIR 1989 All 202.
1440. MK Rapai v John, AIR 1965 Ker 203.
1441. Secretary of State v Tatya Saheb, AIR 1932 Bom 386 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 501.
1442. Gurbax Rai v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1984 SC 1012 : (1984) 3 SCC 96.
1443. Hindustan Petroleum Corp Ltd v Yashwant Gajanan Joshi, AIR 1991 SC 933.
1444. Rajappan v Sankaran Sudhakaran, AIR 1997 Ker 315.

It cannot be a policy of law that every time an assignment of the decree in the scheduled property takes place, the decree-holder should institute a fresh suit against the assignees so as to prevent him from disobeying the decree obtained by the decree-holder against the original owner of the property.[1445] A decree for permanent injunction does not prohibit the defendant from instituting a suit for declaration of his title and for recovery of possession from the very decree-holder. On legal principles that distinguish between ownership and possession, it is difficult to hold that the transferee is a "privy" in estate and the decree made against his transferor operates as res judicata against him.[1446] A decree passed ex parte against one guarantor on the basis of certain documents cannot bind other guarantors who had no opportunity to put forth their case.[1447]

Direction in preliminary decree about inquiry into mesne profits does not adjudicate the controversy and is not res judicata.[1448] Suit was filed for specific performance of an agreement of sale of undivided one-third share of the defendant. During its pendency, the share of the defendant was determined to be less than one-third, in partition. It was held that the partition decree passed during the pendency of the suit between the defendant and her co-owner could not operate as res judicata. Even if it be held that plaintiffs' suit for specific performance was premature, that could only disentitle them to costs.[1449] As an illustration of parties litigating under the same title see Radha Mohan v Eliza Jane Hilt.[1450]

Merely because the petitioner was not a party to the petition, which were filed for objecting the refinery project, it could not be said that the same has no bearing on the present proceedings. Those proceedings were also filed by the petitioners in the public interest for the protection of environment and ecology. Thus, all these proceedings were filed for the same "interest and claim". Therefore, when the subject matter of the earlier proceedings and the present proceedings is one and when the petitioners in both proceedings were having the same status, then the earlier decision will create the general principle of constructive res judicata.[1451] A suit was filed by the respondent against the Board or university for alteration of her date of birth in the matriculation certificate. The respondent did not make the state government a party to the suit. It was held that the decree against the Board or university which issued the matriculation certificate was not binding on the government. At best it can only be treated as a piece of evidence.[1452] The order of the high court directing the receiver appointed by the Supreme Court to make demarcation in the disputed fisheries and thereafter, carry out the directions of Supreme Court in respect thereof. The state was neither made a party to the proceeding nor noticed by the high court before passing the high court. The order passed by the high court was also not challenged by the state. It was held that the said order does not operate as res judicata taking away the rights of the parties in respect of the said fisheries.[1453]

Dealing with the question of relevancy of former judgments under section 40 of the Indian Evidence Act, the Bombay High Court held in a case that where the defendant of the instant suit was not a party to the earlier suit, the earlier judgment would neither fall within the scope

---

1445. Clothy Theyyathan v John Thomas, AIR 1997 Ker 249.
1446. Shankaralingappa v Nanja Gowda, AIR 1981 Kant 78.
1447. Eastern Bank v Ports Services of India Ltd, AIR 1986 Cal 61.
1448. Gokul Chandra v Atlas & Union Jute Press Co Ltd, AIR 1986 Cal 392 (DB).
1449. Ram Niwas v Omkari, AIR 1983 All 310 (DB).
1450. Radha Mohan v Eliza Jane Hilt, AIR 1947 All 147 : (1947) ILR All 186.
1451. Gujarat Navodaya Mandal v State of Gujarat, AIR 1998 Guj 141.
1452. Director of Education v K Sita Devi, (1991) Supp 2 SCC 387.
1453. Bansi Lal Farms v Uma Rani Bose, (1997) 9 SCC 191.

of section 40 of the Indian Evidence Act nor the provisions of section 11 of the CPC would be applicable.[1454]

For application of the rule of res judicata it is necessary that parties to the two suits or proceedings must also be same and they must be litigating under the same title. Where plaintiff in the subsequent suit was not a party in the earlier suit, the plea of the defendant that the plaintiff was aware of the suit and he should have got himself impleaded in that would not be tenable. There is no compulsion on a person to get himself impleaded in any court proceeding. If the defendant desired that the decision in the earlier suit would be binding on the plaintiff, he ought to have impleaded the plaintiff as a party in the earlier suit. Thus, the plaintiff being not a party in the earlier suit, the provisions of section 11 of CPC was held to be not attracted.[1455]

(b) Res Judicata Between Co-Defendants.—As a matter may be res judicata between a plaintiff and a defendant, so it may be res judicata as between co-plaintiffs or between co-defendants. First, as to res judicata between co-defendants: if in a suit by A against B and C, there is a matter directly and substantially in issue between B and C, and an adjudication upon that matter is necessary to the determination of the suit, the adjudication may operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between B and C in which either of them is plaintiff and the other defendant.[1456] In other words, "if a plaintiff cannot get at his right without trying and deciding a case between co-defendants, the court will try and decide the case, and the co-defendants will be bound; but if the relief given to the plaintiff does not require or involve a decision of any case between co-defendants, the co-defendants will not be bound as between each other by any proceeding which may be necessary only to the decree the plaintiff obtains".[1457] These are the limits within which the doctrine of res judicata should be applied as between co-defendants[1458]

It is well settled that in certain cases principles of res judicata may be invoked to prevent a co-defendant(s) in a previous suit from filing fresh suit against other codefendant(s) if certain conditions are satisfied. In Govindammal v Vaidiyanathan,[1459] the Supreme Court reiterated the requisite conditions for applying the principle of res judicata between the co-defendants.

1454. Smt Shamlata v Vishweshwara Tukaram Giripunje, AIR 2008 Bom 155 : (2008) 2 All MR 743.
1455. Narendra Akash Maharaj Patkar v Shahji Babu rao Patkar, AIR 2009 Bom 165 : (2009) 5 All MR 173 (DB).
1456. Radha Rani v Binoda Moyee, AIR 1942 Cal 92 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 169; Ramchandra v Narayan, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 216; Magniram v Mehdi Hoossein, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 95; Chajju v Umrao, (1900) ILR 22 All 386; Balambhat v Narayanbhat, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 74; Bapu v Bhawani, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 245; Muhammad v Visvanath, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 337; Kandiyi v Zamorin of Calicut, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 515; Yusuf v Durji, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 447; Gurdeo Singh v Chandrikah Singh, (1909) ILR 36 Cal 193; Hari Annaji v Vasudev, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 438; Gangaram v Vasudeo, AIR 1923 Bom 203 : (1923) ILR 47 Bom 534; Rajendra v Biswarup, AIR 1921 Cal 255 : (1922) 35 Cal LJ 173; Venkobacharlu v Radhabayamma, AIR 1924 Mad 858 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 612; Muhammad Ahmad v Zahur, AIR 1922 All 19 : (1922) ILR 44 All 334, p 338; Mehra v Devi Ditta Mal, AIR 1921 Lah 47 : (1921) 2 Lah 88; Maung Thwe v Ma Shwe, AIR 1924 Rang 279; Ram Prasad v Mahabir, AIR 1924 All 310 : (1924) ILR 46 All 220; Mahip Narain v Mannu Singh, AIR 1925 All 546 : (1925) ILR 47 All 778; Dewan Singh v Gokul, AIR 1921 Lah 25 : (1921) 3 Lah LJ 295; Pratapa v Simji, AIR 1927 Mad 50 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 652; Ma Pun Nyun v Maung Sit Phaung, AIR 1928 Rang 315 : (1928) 6 Rang 575; Barkat Ali v Karim Baksh, AIR 1932 Lah 325 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 442; Dwaraka Das v UOI, AIR 1953 P&H 120 : (1953) ILR Punj 521; Ram Sagar v Yogendra Narain, AIR 1975 Pat 239.
1457. Cottingham v Earl of Shrewsbury, (1843) 3 Hare 627, p 628; Tamwangince Debi v Abhaya Charan, AIR 1930 Cal 169 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 480; Janki v Dharamraj, AIR 1974 Pat 254.
1458. Fakirchand v Naginchand, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 210, p 216.
1459. Govindammal v Vaidiyanathan, 2018 SCC OnLine SC 2117.

For application of doctrine of res judicata between co-defendants, four conditions must be satisfied namely:

(i) There must be a conflict of interest between the defendants concerned;

(ii) it must be necessary to decide the conflict in order to give the relief which the plaintiff claims;

(iii) the question between the defendant must have been finally decided;

(iv) the co-defendants were the necessary or proper party in the former suit.

The court made it clear that if these conditions are not fulfilled, the principles of res judicata cannot be made applicable between the co-defendants in a subsequent suit.

If the plaintiff cannot get at his right without trying and deciding the case between co-defendants, the court will try and discharge the case, and the co-defendants will be bound by the decree; but, if the relief given to the plaintiff does not require or involve a question of any case between co-defendants, the co-defendants will not be bound as between each other.

Where the above four conditions did not exist, the decree does not operate as res judicata. It must, therefore, be that all the persons who have right, title and interest are made parties to the suit and that have should have knowledge that the right, title and interest would be in adjudication and the finding or the decree there in would operate as res judicata to their right, title and interest in the subject matter of the former suit. Even in their absence, a decree could be passed and it may be used as an evidence of the plaintiff's title either accepted or negatived therein. The doctrine of res judicata would apply even though the party against whom it is sought to be enforced was not eo-nomine made a party nor entered appearance, nor did he contest the question.

The doctrine of res judicata must be applied to co-defendants with great care and caution. The reason is that fraud is the extrinsic collateral act which vitiates solemn proceedings of courts of justice. If a party obtains a decree from the court by practicing fraud or collusion, he cannot be allowed to say that the matter is res judicata and cannot be reopened. There can also be no question of res judicata in a case where signs of fraud or collusion are transparently pregnant from the facts on record. Therefore, in applying the doctrine of res judicata between co-defendants or co-plaintiff care must, of necessity be taken by the court to see that there must infact be a conflict of interest between the co-defendants or the co-plaintiffs concerned and it is necessary to decide the conflict as in order to give relief which the plaintiff in the suit claimed and the question must have been directly and substantially in issue and was finally decide therein.[1460] Three conditions to be fulfilled are:

(i) a conflict of interest between the co-defendants;

(ii) the necessity to decide that conflict in order to give the plaintiff appropriate relief: and

(iii) a decision of the question between the co-defendants.[1461]

1460. Mahboob Sahab v Syyad Ismail, (1995) 3 SCC 693.

1461. Syed Mohammud Sadat Ali Khan v Mirza Wiquar Ali, AIR 1943 PC 115 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 66; Chandu Lal v Khalilur Rahaman, AIR 1943 Cal 76 : (1942) ILR 2 Cal 229; Chunibhai v Nathabhai, AIR 1944 Pat 185 : (1943) ILR 22 Pat 655; Bhupindera v Tarupriya, AIR 1950 Assam 119 : (1950) 2 Assam 225; KP Rau Kuppan Chettiar v BM Ramaswami Chettiar, AIR 1946 Mad 472 : (1947) ILR Mad 58; Munni Bibi v Tirloki Nath, AIR 1931 PC 114 : (1931) 58 IA 158; Kishan Prasad v Durga Prasad, AIR 1931 PC 231 : (1931) 35 Cal WN 1217; Jadav v Kailash, (1916) 25 Cal LJ 322; Sukh Dial v Bhopi, AIR 1923 Lah 186; Ma Tok v Ma Yin, AIR 1925 Rang 228, (1925) 3 Rang 77, p 79; Ma

[Footnote No. 1461 contd.]

In Municipal Corp of Greater Mumbai v Pankaj Arora[1462], the Supreme Court took into account the cautions issued by this book against misapplication of res judicata. The court quoted him with approval to hold –

> It is not to be assumed that matters in respect of which issues have been framed are all of them directly and substantially in issue. Nor is there any special significance to be attached to the fact that a particular issue is the first in the list of issues. Which of the matters are directly in issue and which collaterally or incidentally, must be determined on the facts of each case. A material test to be applied is whether the court considers the adjudication of the issue material and essential for its decision.

Where the four conditions specified here for the purpose are satisfied an issue between co-defendants may become res judicata.[1463] If those conditions are present then the doctrine of res judicata would apply to the co-defendant even if he did not appear in the earlier suit and contest the question but subject to the qualification that in such a case it must be proved that he had or must be deemed to have had notice that the relevant question was in issue and would have to be decided.[1464] It may be added here that where by the existence of these conditions the decision operates as res judicata between the co-defendants in a subsequent suit by one of them, a co-defendant has a right of appeal against the decision even if the suit by that decision has been dismissed against them.[1465] Even where their condition above set out did not exist and the judgment therefore does not operate as res judicata between the co-defendants, if the judgment has disposed off the question of the plaintiff's title, it can be taken into consideration as evidence of an instance where the plaintiff's title was negatived.[1466] Landlord sued for ejection of joint tenants. Their defences were not conflicting in that suit. Subsequently, one joint tenant sues for ejectment of the other tenant. It was held that the finding in the previous suit could not operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit between the joint tenants.[1467]

In Maung Sein Done v Pan Nyun[1468] the intestate had left two daughters S and P and two sons. The sons took possession of his estate. Thereupon, S filed a suit against her two brothers and her sister P for administration of the estate and to recover her one-fourth share under Burmese Buddhist law. P filed no written statement but gave evidence for her sister, the plaintiff. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the succession was governed by Chinese

---

[Footnote No. 1461 contd.]
Shin v Maung Han, AIR 1929 Rang 163 : (1929) ILR 7 Rang 80, p 83; Chidambargauda v Channappa, AIR 1934 Bom 329 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 694; Rami Reddi v Tugram Bichalu, AIR 1952 Mad 837; Ram Karan Singh v Parbati, AIR 1954 Pat 443; Eapen Mathai v Abdul Khader, AIR 1958 MP 261 : (1958) ILR Ker 1034; Ram Swarup v Futtu, AIR 1960 All 367; Koodi v Baboo, AIR 1959 Raj 127 : (1959) ILR Raj 632; SP Misra v Babuaji, AIR 1970 SC 809 : [1969] 2 SCR 971; Dhan Singh v Jt Director, Consolidation, AIR 1973 All 283; Iftikhar Ahmed v Syed Meharban, AIR 1974 SC 749 : (1974) 2 SCC 151; Muna Kuar v Lala Prasad, AIR 1970 Pat 219.

1462. Municipal Corp of Greater Mumbai v Pankaj Arora, (2018) 3 SCC 699. Also see, M Siddiq (D) Thr Lrs v Mahant Suresh Das, 2018 SCC Online SC 1677. In this case, the apex court examined whether the issues raised in the instant case were directly and substantially in issue in M Ismail Faruqui v UOI, [(1994) 6 SCC 360]? The court answered the question in the negative and held that the present petition was not barred by res judicata.

1463. Debabrata Mukherjee v Ralyan Kumar, AIR 1983 Cal 241 (DB); Munni Bibi v Triloki Nath, AIR 1931 PC 114.

1464. Chandu Lal v Khalilur Rahaman, AIR 1950 PC 17 : 77 IA 27 : (1950) 54 Cal WN 211; Bhoom Reddi v State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 Hyd 440 : (1955) ILR Hyd 599.

1465. Kesavan v Lekshmy Amma, AIR 1968 Ker 154.

1466. A Venkateshwarlu v MM Mosque, AIR 1972 AP 132.

1467. Sher Singh v Mohd Ismail, AIR 1981 All 114.

1468. Maung Sein Done v Ma Pan Nyun, AIR 1932 PC 161 : (1932) ILR 10 Rang 322 : 59 IA 247; Kedar Nath v Munshi Ram, AIR 1935 PC 139 : 62 IA 224 : (1935) 14 Pat 611; Jeshwant Ramchandra v Govind, AIR 1934 Bom 313 : (1934) ILR 58 Bom 544 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 612.

customary law under which the sons succeed to the exclusion of the daughters. Subsequently, P filed a suit for administration and to recover her one-fourth share. The Privy Council held that the suit was barred by res judicata as there was a conflict of interest between P and her brother, that conflict would necessarily have had to be decided to give S the relief she claimed and the question between P and her brother was finally decided. In Munni Bibi v Triloki Nath,[1469] M and K were rival claimants to a house. M alleged that the house belonged to her deceased father Amernath and claimed as his daughter. K alleged that the house belonged to her mother and that she had inherited it as stridhan property. A creditor of Amernath sued M and K to establish his right to sell the house as the property of Amernath. The court found that the house belonged to Amarnath and decreed the creditor's suit. K's son paid off the creditors and took possession of the house. M sued to recover the house from K's son who claimed title under K. M urged that the question of title as between her and K was res judicata by reason of the decision in the creditor's suit. The Privy Council held that the conditions of res judicata were established because there was a conflict of interest between M and K for it was only if the house belonged to Amernath that the plaintiff's case could succeed and this question was decided in the plaintiff's favour. Their Lordships observed that it was immaterial that K had not entered appearance or contested the suit for she was a proper party and had a right to be heard if she so desired. In a case, however, where one defendant actually gave evidence and supported the case of the other defendant, it was held that there was no conflict of interest and no res judicata between the defendants.[1470]

A Hindu H dies leaving two daughters D1 and D2 and a nephew N. D1 sues D2 and N to recover certain property under an oral will of H. D2 claims the property under a will in writing executed by H. N claims the property as undivided nephew of H. The court finds that H and N were divided, that the will in writing is a valid will, and dismisses D1's suit. Subsequently, D2 sues N to recover the property under the written will. N contends that he and H were joint, and that he became entitled to the property by right of survivorship. The question whether H and N were joint is res judicata. That question was directly and substantially in issue in the first suit and it was necessary to decide it in that suit to adjudicate upon D1's claim, and it was decided against N.[1471] Another type of case in which a question between co-defendants may become res judicata is where a suit is brought against two or more defendants, and a will has to be construed by the court to adjudicate upon the plaintiff's claim which is founded on the will. In such cases the decision with regard to the construction of the will on the rival contentions of the defendants may be res judicata in a subsequent suit by some or one of them against the rest,[1472] but not if no rival contentions were raised at all.[1473] A decree for partition is in favour of each party to whom a share is awarded and is res judicata not only as against the plaintiff,[1474] but as between the co-defendants.[1475] A decision in a partition suit as to the outstanding due to the family and the debts binding on its members is binding on the parties and a second suit with respect to them is barred by res judicata. The rule followed in partition suits was extended where the validity of a will was in question in a suit in which the different

---

1469. Munni Bibi v Triloki Nath, AIR 1931 PC 114 : (1930) ILR 52 All 103 : 58 IA 158.
1470. Lal Mohan v Ram Lakshmi, AIR 1932 Cal 271 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 636.
1471. Venkayya v Narasamma, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 204.
1472. Ram Prasad v Mahabir, AIR 1924 All 310 : (1924) ILR 46 All 220.
1473. Gangaprasad v Kuladananda, AIR 1926 Cal 568 : (1925) 30 Cal WN 415.
1474. Sheikh Khoorshed v Nubee, (1887) ILR 13 Cal 551.
1475. Harihar Prasad Singh v Narsingh Prasad Singh, AIR 1941 Pat 83 : (1940) ILR 19 Pat 669; Gandharp v Nirmal 54 IC 325; Ejat Ahmed v Szaghir, AIR 1921 All 287 : (1929) ILR 51 All 850.

defendants who were beneficiaries under it took up attitudes which they considered to be most beneficial to them.[1476]

(c) Res Judicata Between Co-plaintiffs.—Next, as to res judicata between co-plaintiffs. As a matter may be res judicata between co-plaintiffs, subject to the same conditions which apply to the case of co-defendants.[1477]

(d) Res Judicata between Co-respondents.—The principle of res judicata has been held to bind co-defendants if the relief given or refused by the earlier decision involved a determination of an issue between co-defendants (or co-respondents as the case may be). This statement of the law has been approved as far back as in 1939 in Munni Bibi v Trilokinath, [1478] where it has been said that to apply the rule of res judicata as between co-defendants three conditions are requisite.

Where there was a conflict of interest between the two co-respondents, in appeal against award of tender, to highest bidder, and for the purpose of deciding the relief, if any, to be granted to appellant, it was necessary for the appellate court to decide whether one of co-respondents, i.e., highest bidder, was entitled to participate in the tender process and judgment of appellate court though is cryptic shows application of judicial mind to merits of the case, it can be said that all the three pre-requisite conditions to apply principle of res judicata between co-defendants are present and, therefore, judgment of appellate court disposing appellant's appeal would operate as res judicata to bind not only appellant but also co-respondents.[1479]

(e) Pro forma Defendant.—A party may be joined as a defendant in a suit merely because his presence is necessary in order to enable the court to effectually and completely adjudicate upon the question involved.[1480] In such a case, no relief is sought against him and the matter in issue in the suit is not in issue between him and any other party, and cannot, therefore, be res judicata against him. For instance, A, claiming to be entitled to possession of a tank as tenant of X, sues B for possession. X is joined as pro forma defendant and no relief is claimed against him. The suit is dismissed on a finding that B is the owner. X then sues B for possession and B contends that the issue of ownership is res judicata. This contention must fail for the issue was decided in the former suit between A and B, and not between X and B, for X was only a pro forma defendant.[1481] Again, A sues B for possession of a house and joins C as a party alleging that part of the house had been let to him. The suit is decreed but the decree was not executed and became time-barred and subsequently, B sues C for possession. The decree in the first case does not operate as res judicata between B and C and indeed it in no way affects the legal relations between them.[1482] Another instance is the case of Radha Kishun v Khurshed Hossein[1483] where a prior mortgage, who was a pro forma defendant in a puisne mortgagee's suit

---

1476. Muhammad Hasan v Mehdi Hasan, AIR 1946 All 399 : (1946) ILR All 325.
1477. Krishnan v Kannan, (1898) ILR 21 Mad 8; Rukhmini v Dhondo, (1912) 36 ILR Bom 207; Fakirgowda v Dyamaya, AIR 1933 Bom 287 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 488; Parduman Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1958 P&H 63 : (1957) ILR Punj 1629; Devaki v Raghavan, AIR 1961 Ker 224.
1478. Munni Bibi v Trilokinath, AIR 1931 PC 114 : 58 IA 158, p 165.
1479. Makhija C&E Pvt Ltd v Indore Development Authority, AIR 2005 SC 2499.
1480. See O I, rule 10(2) and section 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.
1481. Joy Chand v Dolegobinda, AIR 1944 Cal 272 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 454; Official Assignee v Madholal, AIR 1947 Bom 217 : (1946) 48 Bom LR 828; Brojo Behari v Kedar Nath, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 580; Ramdas v Vazirsaheb, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 589; Malhi v Iman-ud-din, (1905) ILR 27 All 59; Kumarappa v Adaikkalam, AIR 1932 Mad 207 : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 483; Nibaran v Motilal, (1935) ILR 62 Cal 642; PN Rao v K Radhakrishnamacharyulu, AIR 1978 AP 319.
1482. Krishna v Mungara, AIR 1932 Mad 298 : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 601.
1483. Radha Kishun v Khurshed Hossein, (1920) ILR 47 Cal 662 : 47 IA 11; Prithvi Singh v Jith Ram, AIR 1951 P&H 363.

for sale, was not barred from subsequently enforcing his own security.[1484] The fact that a party is described as pro forma or that no relief is claimed against him is not sufficient to avoid the bar of res judicata if the other conditions laid down in the sections are satisfied.[1485] Where in a suit for rent by A claiming as sole shebait, a contention was raised that B who was a pro forma defendant was also a co-shebait and that accordingly, a suit by A alone was not maintainable, a decision on the issue in favour of A would be res judicata in a subsequent suit between A and B on the question of co-shebaitship as the decision thereon in the previous suit was necessary for granting relief to the plaintiff.[1486]

(f) Parties in Subsequent Suit Claiming under Parties in Former Suit.—Res judicata not only affects parties but their privies, i.e., persons claiming under them and each privy stands in the shoes of the party under whom he claims. If the decree in the first suit is between A and B, then the finding is res judicata in the subsequent suit if the plaintiff claims under A and the defendant under B, or vice versa, or if the plaintiff is A and the defendant claims under B, or vice versa. If, however, the second suit is between parties claiming under A alone or under B alone there is, of course, no bar.[1487] A decision in a suit under O XXI, rule 63, in which a claimant, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor are all parties, would be res judicata on the question of title in a subsequent suit between them.[1488] This observation will henceforth not be relevant on account of the deletion of O XXI, rule 63 by the Amendment Act, 1976.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A sues B for a declaration of title to land and obtains a decree. A then sues C for possession. C contends that B is owner and that he is in possession as B's tenant. The defence is barred.

(ii) A sues B for a declaration of his right to a share in the rents of a bazaar and obtains a decree. C, a tenant of A, then sues D, another tenant of A, for a stall in A's part of the bazaar. No finding in the first suit is res judicata.[1489]

Whether one person is bound because he claims under another is a question of substantive law. The following are some instances of cases decided on this point with reference to the rule of res judicata:

(i) A lessee claims under his lessor, but a lessor does not claim under his lessee and so the dismissal of the lessee's ejectment suit against a trespasser does not bar a similar suit by the lessor.[1490]

(ii) A purchaser at an execution sale acquires the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor in the land sold and is bound by a decision between his landlord the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor as to its area;[1491] but, where mortgaged property is sold in execution of a mortgage decree and it is purchased by the mortgagee, a decision between the landlord and the mortgagor as to the rate of rent is not binding on the purchaser.[1492]

1484. See the note on this case under O XXXIV, rule 1.
1485. Moniur v Ahmed, AIR 1953 Cal 155 : (1952) 56 Cal WN 506; Hirendra v Chandra Singh, AIR 1958 Assam 179 : (1956) ILR Assam 496; Gitaram v Prithvi Singh, AIR 1956 P&H 129 (FB).
1486. Kshiroda v Debendranath, AIR 1957 Cal 200.
1487. Asghar v Mahomed, (1903) ILR 30 Cal 565; Vythilinga v Vijayathammal, (1882) ILR 6 Mad 43.
1488. Ramireddi v Bichalu, AIR 1952 Mad 837 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 475; Venkiah v Kanthamani, (1955) Mad WN 690; Ahmad Ali v B Veeralla, AIR 1959 AP 280 : (1959) 1 AWR 72.
1489. Asghar v Mahomed, (1903) ILR 30 Cal 565.
1490. Rambrahma v Bunsi, (1882) 11 Cal LR 122; Sher Bahadur v Madho Prasad, AIR 1935 Oudh 394, (1936) ILR 11 Luck 209.
1491. Kali Dayal v Umesh Prasad, AIR 1922 Pat 63 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 174.
1492. Mahammad v Raghunath, AIR 1926 Oudh 1 : (1926) ILR 1 Luck 25.

(iii) A purchaser at a revenue sale does not claim under the defaulting proprietor and is not bound by a decree against him.[1493]

(iv) A son in a joint and undivided Hindu family does not claim under his father;[1494] but a son claiming under a custom of primogeniture claims under his father.[1495] It is submitted that the decision in Kali Charan's case is good law, despite the decision of the Privy Council that succession to an impartable estate of a mitakshara family is to the next holder by the rule of survivorship,[1496] for the ratio decidendi is not affected by the abovementioned decisions of the Privy Council.

(v) A remainderman does not claim under the life-tenant and a remainderman under a will is not bound by a decree against a widow who has a life estate under the will.[1497]

The title by which the parties in the subsequent suit claim must have arisen "subsequently" to the commencement of the former suit—

In order that a decision in a suit between A and B may operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between A and C, it is necessary to show that C claims under B by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the first suit. Thus, a purchaser, mortgagee, lessee or donee of a property is not estopped by a decree obtained in a suit against the vendor, mortgagor, lessor or donor commenced after the date of the purchase, mortgage, lease or gift;[1498] but, if the decree has been passed against the mortgagor before the mortgage, that decree would bind the mortgagee, he being a transferee from the mortgagor of an interest in the mortgaged property.[1499]

(g) Representative Suit : Explanation VI.—This section deals with representative suits, that is, suits instituted by or against a person in his representative, as distinguished from individual character. Suits brought or defended by one or more persons on behalf of themselves and others with the leave of the court under O I, rule 8, are common instances of this class. Explanation VI provides that where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to "claim under" the persons so litigating. It refers to cases in which a decision in a suit may operate as res judicata against persons not

---

1493. Gadahar v Radhacharan, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 868.
1494. Sunder v Chhitar, (1906) ILR 29 All 1; Ram Narain v Bisheshar, (1888) ILR 10 All 411.
1495. Kali Charan v Sheo Buksh, (1912) 16 Cal WN 783.
1496. Shiva Prasad Singh v Rani Prayag Kumari, (1932) ILR 59 Cal 1399 : 59 IA 331 : (1932) 36 Cal WN 1049; Konamal v Annadana, (1928) ILR 51 Mad 189 : 55 IA 114; Pratap Chandra Deo v Jagadish Chandra Deo, (1927) ILR 54 Cal 995 : 54 IA 289 : (1927) 31 Cal WN 942.
1497. Achhaibar v Hargobind, 52 IC 845; Puttuswamiah v Ramachandriah, AIR 1953 Mys 72 : (1953) ILR Mys 169.
1498. Kasa Krishna Ghorpade v Vinayak Gangadhar, AIR 1948 Bom 193 : (1947) ILR Bom 770 : (1947) 49 Bom LR 858; Beli Ram v Chaudri Md Afzal, AIR 1948 PC 168 : (1948) 50 Bom LR 674; Sailendra v Bijanlal, AIR 1945 Cal 283 : (1946) 49 Cal WN 133; Ramlakhan v Tribuni, AIR 1942 Pat 234; Sita Ram v Amir, (1886) ILR 8 All 324; Joy Chandra v Sreenath, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 357 (vendor and purchaser); Mussan v Thawara, AIR 1921 Mad 708 : (1921) 41 Mad LJ 392 (lessor and lessee); Brojo v Kedar, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 580 (FB); Shripadbhat v Rama, AIR 1927 Bom 270 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 274 (lessor and lessee); Naizullah v Nazir, (1893) ILR 15 All 108; Abdul Alli v Miakhan, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 297 (donor and donee); Ramchandra v Malkapa, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 679; Duraichami v Adimuthu, AIR 1925 Mad 358 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 728 (vendor and purchaser); Kandaveloo v Kumaran, AIR 1953 TC 529; Dodda Rangappa v Kenche Gowda, AIR 1953 Mys 111 : (1953) ILR Mys 98; Rajubai v Nandram, (1954) ILR Raj 417; Vibhuti Singh v Damari Lal, AIR 1978 All 370.
1499. Narain Das v Banarsi Lal, AIR 1970 Pat 50. See notes below under the head "Condition III: Litigation under the same title".

expressly named as parties to the suit as where a suit is instituted by A and B on behalf of themselves and others, or where it is instituted against A and B on behalf of themselves and others. The conditions under which the decision in such a suit may constitute res judicata are:

(i) That there must be a right claimed by one or more persons in common for themselves and others not expressly named in the suit;

(ii) that the parties not expressly named in the suit must be interested in such right;

(iii) that the litigation must have been conducted bona fide on behalf of all parties interested;[1500] and

(iv) that if the suit is one under O I, rule 8, all the conditions of that section have been strictly complied with.[1501]

The Supreme Court, on being satisfied that the issues which the petition now wishes to raise, had been agitated directly and substantially, not only by the petitioner which was espousing the cause in the earlier litigation but also by the Union of India, it was held that judgment had settled the controversy and become final and binding in respect of the questions debated therein and the issues settled thereby. Since the issues now raised have been agitated twice over, it is not permissible for the petitioners to once again re-agitate the matter by coming now under the "cloak" of a form.[1502] Explanation VI to section 11 is subject to the essential condition that the interest of a person concerned has really been represented by the other; in other words, his interest has been protected after in a bona fide capacity. If there be any clash of interest between the persons concerned and is assumed representative, or if the latter deemed to collusion or for any other reason mala fidely neglects to defend the case, it cannot considered to be a representative interest.[1503]

Shebait, Karnavan, Trustee, Administrator etc.—If the parties in the subsequent suit can be said to have been represented by the parties in the former suit, the decision of the former suit will bind the parties in the subsequent suit.

ILLUSTRATIONS

Nine Akali Sikhs sue for the removal of the mahant of a religious institution. The suit is dismissed on the ground that the institution is a Hindu Dera and not a Sikh Gurudwara. Subsequently, and after the passing of the Sikh Gurudwara Act, 1925, 64 Sikhs sue for a declaration that the institution is a Sikh Gurudwara. The suit is not barred by res judicata as in the former suit, the plaintiffs were a sect of religious reformers and were not litigating on behalf of the general body of Sikhs.[1504]

Government land was transferred in 1888 in trust and vested in the Municipal Committee of Lahore. Thereafter, the defendants encroached upon the land, and no action was taken by the committee till 1925, when a notice was served upon the defendant asking him to remove the encroachment. Defendant No. 1 thereupon, brought a suit for a declaration that he and his brothers were owners of the land, and had in any case acquired an indefeasible title by

---

1500. B Mohan Kishan Seth v Ram Prasad, AIR 1949 All 761; Somasundara v Kulandavelu, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 457 (FB); Surender Nath v Brojo Nath, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 352; Jaimangal Deo v Bed Saran, (1911) ILR 33 All 493; Ramchand v Maula Baksh, AIR 1924 All 178 : (1924) ILR 46 All 110; Sonachalam v Kumaravelu, AIR 1928 Mad 77 (FB) : (1928) ILR 51 Mad 128; Chuhar Singh v Raghubir Singh, AIR 1956 P&H 241.
1501. Kumaravelu v Ramaswami, AIR 1933 PC 183 : 60 IA 278 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 657; B Mohan Kishan Seth v Ram Prasad, AIR 1949 All 761; Jackiria Sakib v Official Receiver, AIR 1962 Mad 189.
1502. Junior Telecom Officers Forum v UOI, (1993) Supp 4 SCC 693.
1503. Suraiya Begam v Mohd Usman, 1991 (3) SCC 114.
1504. Ram Prasad v Shiromani, AIR 1931 Lah 161 : (1931) ILR 12 Lah 497 : 135 IC 657.

adverse possession. The defendant succeeded on the latter plea. In 1933, the Secretary of State for India, who was not a party to the earlier litigation, sued for possession of the land. It was held that the Municipal Committee being constituted the trustee for the land represented the title for the time being, and the decree obtained against it operated as res judicata in the suit by government.[1505]

The plaintiffs, claiming to be trustees of the Malankara Jacobite Syrian Church, sued for possession of properties belonging to the church claiming that they were the lawful trustees and alleging that the defendants who had ceased to belong to that church were not its lawful trustees. There was a previous suit which was commenced as an inter-pleader suit but was converted into a representative action on behalf of the Syrian Christians of Malabar and the decision thereon affirmed the rights of the defendants. It was held by the Supreme Court that this decision was binding on all Jacobite Syrian Christians and the subsequent suit was accordingly, barred as res judicata.[1506]

In Purshottam Das Tandon v Military Estate Officer, the issue of title was kept open in the second appeal and the subject matter of the inter-pleader suit and the proceedings arising therefrom pertained to the entitlement of the contesting parties to receive rent in respect of the property in question. On the other hand, in the writ petitions, the appellant, claiming ownership, had sought mutation, as an owner, in the cantonment records and also the permission to raise construction, a right flowing from the incidence of ownership of the land. The subject matter of the two proceedings, i.e., inter-pleader suit and the appeals arising therefrom and the writ petitions filed by the appellant, it was held, therefore, cannot be termed to be directly and substantially the same so as to attract the principle of res judicata.[1507]

However, a shebait, a trustee of a devarstham, a mutavali, a karnum, a holder of vatan or saranjam lands, an administrator of the estate of a deceased person, a holder of an inam grant, represents each his successor; therefore, a decree against him will bind his successor.[1508] If, however, the trustee of a temple, instead of representing the interest of the idol, allows a decree to be passed ex parte, the decree will not operate as res judicata in a suit by the succeeding trustee.[1509] Though a decree passed in a scheme suit under section 92 will be binding as res judicata on all the members of the public under Explanation VI, that does not bar a suit for modification of the same.[1510] A decree against the karnavan of a tarwad in his representative capacity binds the members of the tarwad.[1511] There are certain purposes for which the official

---

1505. Sultan Asad v Secretary of State, AIR 1936 Lah 998.
1506. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v Paulo Avira, AIR 1959 SC 31 : (1958) ILR Ker 1340 : 1958 Ker LJ 874.
1507. Purshottam Das Tandon v Military Estate Officer, AIR 2014 SC 3555 : (2014) 9 SCC 344; see also Purshottam Das Tandon v Military Estate Officer, 1986 Supp SCC 720.
1508. Sadhu Charan v Krishnamani, AIR 1942 Pat 181; Madhavan v Keshavan, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 191 (trustee); Venkayya v Suramma, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 235 (karnum); Radhabhai v Anantrav, (1855) ILR 9 Bom 198 (vatan lands); Bai Merherbai v Maganchand, (1905) ILR 29 Bom 96 (administrator); Raja Ranjit v Basunta, (1908) 12 Cal WN 739; Jharula Das v Jalandhar, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 887 (shebait); Thakur v Jaishth, AIR 1924 All 504 : (1924) ILR 46 All 651; Prosunno Kumari v Golab Chand, 2 IA 145 : (1875) 14 Beng LR 450, p 459 (shebait); Upendranath v Kusum, (1915) ILR 42 Cal 440; Subban Ali v Imami Begum, AIR 1925 PC 184 : (1925) ILR 52 Cal 971 : 52 IA 294 (inam lands); Madhavrao v Anusuyabai, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 606 (saranjam lands).
1509. Subramania v Vaithilinga, AIR 1931 Mad 641 : (1931) 60 Mad LJ 590; Dasia Pillai v Pattamuthu, AIR 1953 Mad 624 : (1952) 2 Mad LJ 871.
1510. Srinivas v Purushotham, AIR 1953 Bom 393.
1511. Komappan v Ukkaran, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 214; Marivittil v Patham, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 215; Pare Lal v Sher Gir, AIR 1938 Lah 499; Raman v Raman, AIR 1959 Ker 169 : (1958) ILR Ker 1064.

assignee represents the insolvent.[1512] When, however, the official assignee brings the insolvent's property to sale for the benefit of the creditors, he represents the whole body of creditors. When a claim to an attached house was dismissed, and on the insolvency of the judgment-debtor, the claimant filed a suit to establish his title to the house as against the official assignee, the suit was not barred by res judicata as the official assignee represented not the judgment-debtor but the whole body of creditors.[1513] A benamidar represents the real owner, and a decree against the benamindar binds the owner.[1514] So also, a decree obtained against the benamindar's heir.[1515] A decree passed in a suit against a farzidar is binding on the real owner in the absence of fraud of collusion.[1516] It has been held by the Patna High Court[1517] that the rule that the benamidar represents the real owner has application only when there is a real transfer by A to B, but the deed is taken in the name of X for the benefit of B, but that when there is no real transfer and A puts the deed in the name of B without intending to vest any title in him, B does not represent A and a decree against him is not binding on A. Though there is a well-recognised distinction between the two classes of transactions,[1518] it is submitted that for the purpose of section 11, they stand on the same footing.

Joint Hindu family.—The question whether the manager of a joint Hindu family represents the other members in a suit affecting the family depends very largely upon the facts of the case. If he was acting in the suit in the interests of the minor members and with the consent of the adult members, they are all bound.[1519] The Kerala High Court has held that in the case of a manager of a joint Hindu family who under the Hindu law is entitled to represent the members of the family, the requirement of identity of parties with regard to the members of the family claiming as such in a subsequent suit, is satisfied.[1520] In such a case, it is not necessary that the plaint or the written statement should state in express terms that the manager was suing or was being sued as the manager. It is sufficient if he was suing or was being sued as representing the family.[1521] If the cause of action is a wrongful act of the father, the son who is not a party is not bound.[1522] (For mortgage suits, see note under O XXXIV, rule 1.)

A Hindu father suing or being used in a representative capacity can bind his minor as well as his major sons by special oath.[1523] When the question is whether a debt incurred by the father is binding on the sons on the basis of the doctrine of pious obligation, it is open to the latter to raise the same in proceedings for the execution of the decree obtained against the father on the debt, provided they were not parties to the suit. Also, where a suit against the sons was

---

1512. Miller v Lakhimani Debi, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 419.
1513. Official Assignee v Anju, AIR 1925 Mad 688 : (1925) 48 Mad LJ 530.
1514. Gur Narayan v Sheo Lal Singh, (1919) ILR 46 Cal 566 : 46 IA 1; Nand Kishore v Ahmed, (1896) ILR 18 All 69; Nikunja Behari v Jathindranath, AIR 1956 Cal 613.
1515. Raja of Deo v Abdulla, 45 IA 97 : (1918) 22 Cal WN 891; Prakash Chandra v Mahima Ranjan, AIR 1947 Cal 320 : (1947) 51 Cal WN 273.
1516. Raj Kishore v Subak Narain, AIR 1959 Pat 89 : (1957) ILR 36 Pat 1027.
1517. Bhrigurashram v Surendranath, AIR 1962 Pat 204.
1518. Meenakshi Mills v CIT, AIR 1957 SC 49 : (1956) SCR 691 : (1957) SCJ 1, (1956) SCA 1139.
1519. Schuebo v Subbiah, AIR 1944 Mad 381 : (1945) ILR Mad 138; Lingangowda v Basangowda, AIR 1927 PC 56 : (1927) ILR 51 Bom 450 : 54 IA 122; Kunj Man v Jaganath, (1920) ILR 42 All 359; Thakur Din v Sitaram, AIR 1939 All 399 (FB) : (1939) ILR All 602; Kothandarama v Sellammal, AIR 1959 Mad 524; Venkatappa v Hanumanthappa, AIR 1953 Mys 152 : (1953) ILR Mys 295.
1520. K Pillai v Karthiyani, AIR 1969 Ker 26.
1521. Amrit v Sudesh, AIR 1970 SC 5 : [1969] 3 SCR 1002 : (1969) 71 Punj LR 371.
1522. Shankar Rao v Kampta Prasad, AIR 1947 Ngp 129 : (1946) ILR Nag 844; Varadayya v Sankara, (1907) 17 Mad LJ 197.
1523. Lakhanlal Jha v Jwach Jha, AIR 1948 Pat 388; Tukaram v Tottaram, AIR 1938 Bom 465 : (1938) 40 Bom LR 1005; Gur Basappa v Vankat, AIR 1956 Hyd 146 : (1956) ILR Hyd 535; Soorya v Kathiza Begam, AIR 1957 AP 688.

withdrawn by the plaintiff and dismissed without any decision on the merits, the question of the liability of the sons is not res judicata and can be gone into in execution.[1524] A decree against a Hindu father passed by consent will be as much binding on the sons as the one passed after contest.[1525] Any member of a joint family is entitled to file a suit to eject a trespasser from the family properties and the decision in such a suit would be binding on all the members of the family under Explanation VI.[1526]

Co-owners.—A co-owner of the equity of redemption who obtains possession of the property on redemption of the mortgage, should hold the same for the benefit also of the other co-owners, vide section 90, of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882. If the suit for redemption, prosecuted bona fide, ends in failure, there is no reason why the decree will not be binding on the other co-owners. Section 11 Explanation VI, provides for such a contingency, if it is shown that the plaintiff was bona fide litigating in respect of a right common to himself and to the other co-owners. Thus, where the suit for redemption, filed by some of the heirs to the mortgagor, was dismissed, the subsequent suit for redemption filed by an heir who was not a party to the earlier suit, would be barred by res judicata when the plaintiff in the second suit has no case of any fraud or collusion in the conduct of the earlier suit, nor does he have a special case apart from the case for redemption pleaded in the prior suit.[1527]

Suit was filed for permanent injunction against the karta of a joint Hindu family only (and not in his representative capacity) to restrain him from obstructing the free flow of water from a newly constructed drain. It was held that members of the family were not precluded from challenging the permanent injunction granted against the karta. Suit was not filed under O I, rule 8 of the CPC. The judgment rendered in the suit for permanent injunction against the karta was only a judgment in personam. An injunction acts or operates in personam and not in rem, and was therefore, not binding on the other members of the family. An injunction is a personal remedy and does not run with the land. A decree for an injunction is to be executed against the persons against whom the injunction is issued and cannot be executed against any other person in the absence of a statutory provision to that effect.[1528]

Hindu Widow and Reversioners.—A decree passed against a Hindu widow as representing the state of her husband in respect of a debt or other transaction binding on the estate, is binding upon the reversioners,[1529] unless, as was observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the Shivagunga case:

> it could be shown that there had not been a fair trial of the right in that suit—or, in other words, unless that decree could have been successfully impeached on some special ground.[1530]

The reason of this qualification is that though a Hindu widow represents the estate, to protect it;[1531] but the judgment operates as res judicata only in respect of questions tried in

---

1524. Indar Gopal v Bhim Raj, AIR 1959 All 530.
1525. Basanta v Rameshwar, AIR 1957 All 287.
1526. Rama Rao v Fattechand, AIR 1956 Ngp 241 : (1956) ILR Nag 256.
1527. Velayudha Pillai Raman Nair v Krishnan Asarimane, AIR 1989 Ker 263 (DB).
1528. Ummedibai v Bhikam Singh, AIR 1981 MP 53.
1529. Katama Natchair v Rajah of Shivagunga, (1863) 9 MIA 539; Pertab Narain v Triloki, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 186 : 11 IA 197; Hari Nath v Mothur Mohun, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 8 : 20 IA 183; Prem Jagat Kuer v Harihar Bakash Singh, AIR 1946 Oudh 163 : (1945) ILR 21 Luck 1.
1530. Katama Natchair v Rajah of Shivagunga, (1863) 9 MIA 539; Chaudhari Risal Singh v Balwant Singh, (1918) ILR 40 All 593 : (1913) 45 IA 168.
1531. Nagender Chander v Sreemutty Kaminee Dosee, (1867) 11 MIA 241, p 267.

the suit.[1532] The observations of their Lordships in the Shivgunga case, were construed in many cases to mean, that a decree passed against a Hindu widow or other limited heir did not bind the reversioners, unless the decree was passed in a suit contested to the end, and that neither a consent decree nor a decree on an award, however bona fide the compromise or reference might be, bound the reversioners; but, this view has now been definitely rejected by the Privy Council as it involves very extreme consequences, one of them being that a Hindu widow must fight the case up to the Privy Council, and another, that her opponent can never suggest a compromise because he would know that any compromise would be upset. The rule of law as now established is that a widow has power to compromise a suit, and a decree passed against her, though on a compromise or on an award, binds the reversioners as much as a decree in a suit contested to the end, provided the compromise was entered into by her bona fide for the benefit of the estate which she represents and not for her personal advantage.[1533] A decree, however, against a Hindu widow not in her representative but personal character, does not bind the reversioners or a son subsequently adopted by her.[1534] A decree passed against the legal personal representative of a Hindu widow in respect of her husband's estate does not bind the reversioners, for the representative of a widow does not represent the estate of the husband.[1535]

There is no authority for the proposition that a Hindu widow, otherwise qualified to represent an estate in litigation, ceases to be so qualified merely owing to a personal disability or disadvantage as a litigant, although the merits of a suit by or against her are tried and the trial is fair and honest. The mere fact, therefore, that she is personally estopped from denying the material facts of a case is no ground for withholding the application of the rule enunciated at the commencement of this paragraph, namely that where the estate of a deceased Hindu was vested in his widow or other limited heirs, a decree fairly and properly obtained against her is binding on the reversionary heirs. Thus, where a Hindu widow instituted a suit for declaration that an adoption made by her to her deceased husband was invalid, and the suit was dismissed on the ground that the widow was estopped by her conduct for denying the validity of the adoption, and it was further found upon the facts that the adoption was valid, it was held, in a suit brought by the reversionary heir after the widow's death for a declaration that the adoption was invalid, that the reversionary heir was bound by the decision in the first suit as res judicata.[1536] The dismissal of a suit, brought by a widow on the ground that it was barred by the provisions of section 47 below, does not operate as res judicata so as to bar a subsequent suit by the reversioners.[1537]

1532. Roy Radha Kisen v Nauratan Lal, (1907) 6 Cal LJ 490, p 525.
1533. Ramsumran Prasad v Shyam Kumari, AIR 1922 PC 356 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 741 : 49 IA 342; Mohendra Nath v Shamsunnessa, (1915) 21 Cal LJ 157; Himan Bibi v Sohan Bibi, (1914) 18 Cal WN 929 (PC); Behari v Daud, (1913) ILR 35 All 240 (settlement of family disputes); Subbammal v Arudaiyammal, (1906) ILR 30 Mad 3 (decree on admission); Bhogaraju v Addepalli, (1912) ILR 35 Mad 560, pp 564, 565; Gurunanak v Jainarain, (1912) ILR 34 All 385 (withdrawal of appeal by widow); Shib Deo v Ram Prasad, AIR 1925 All 79 : (1924) ILR 46 All 637 (decree of award); Baldeo Singh v Achal Singh, AIR 1948 Oudh 165 : (1947) ILR 23 Luck 150; Bishen Dayal v Lakshmi Narain, AIR 1967 All 370.
1534. Babanna v Channappa, AIR 1947 Bom 140 : (1946) ILR 48 Bom LR 788; Subbi v Ramkrishna, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 69; Bai Kanku v Bai Jadav, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 869; Bayava v Parvatava, AIR 1933 Bom 126 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 118; Kullu v Faiyaz, (1909) ILR 30 All 394; Sashi v Chandra, AIR 1923 Cal 204 : (1923) 35 Cal LJ 348.
1535. Kailash v Girija, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 925.
1536. Chaudhari Risam Singh v Balwant Singh, (1918) ILR 40 All 593 : 45 IA 168; Narbheram v Jayaram, AIR 1922 Mad 233 : (1922) 43 Mad LJ 95.
1537. Ganesh v Lakshmibai, AIR 1922 Bom 96 : (1921) ILR 46 Bom 726.

A suit by the next reversioner for a declaration that an alienation made by a Hindu widow is not binding on the reversioner is a representative suit on behalf of all the reversioners.[1538] A decree, however, against a Hindu widow not in her representative but personal character, does not bind the reversioners or a son subsequently adopted by her.[1539] A decree passed against the legal personal representative of a Hindu widow in respect of her husband's estate does not bind the reversioners, for the representative of a widow does not represent the estate of the husband.[1540]

There is no authority for the proposition that a Hindu widow, otherwise qualified to represent an estate in litigation, ceases to be so qualified merely owing to a personal disability or disadvantage as a litigant, although the merits of a suit by or against her are tried and the trial is fair and honest. The mere fact, therefore, that she is personally estopped from denying the material facts of a case is no ground for withholding the application of the rule enunciated at the commencement of this paragraph, namely that where the estate of a deceased Hindu was vested in his widow or other limited heirs, a decree fairly and properly obtained against her is binding on the reversionary heirs. Thus, where a Hindu widow instituted a suit for declaration that an adoption made by her to her deceased husband was invalid, and the suit was dismissed on the ground that the widow was estopped by her conduct for denying the validity of the adoption, and it was further found upon the facts that the adoption was valid, it was held, in a suit brought by the reversionary heir after the widow's death for a declaration that the adoption was invalid, that the reversionary heir was bound by the decision in the first suit as res judicata.[1541] The dismissal of a suit, brought by a widow on the ground that it was barred by the provisions of section 47 below, does not operate as res judicata so as to bar a subsequent suit by the reversioners.[1542]

A suit by the next reversioner for a declaration that an alienation made by a Hindu widow is not binding on the reversioner is a representative suit on behalf of all the reversioners.[1543] A decree fairly and properly obtained against the reversioner in such a suit is binding not only upon him, but the whole body of reversioners presumptive and contingent on the one hand and the alienee or his representative on the other;[1544] even gross negligence of the guardian of a minor reversioner would not avoid the plea of res judicata.[1545]

(h) Explanation VI not Confined to O I, Rule 8.—Explanation VI is not confined to cases covered by O I, rule 8, but would include any litigation in which, apart from the rule altogether,

---

1538. Jitendra Singh v Alliance Bank, AIR 1942 Oudh 199; Venkatanarayana v Subbammal, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 406 : 42 IA 125; Lalmohan v Ramlakshmi, AIR 1932 Cal 271 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 636.
1539. Babanna v Channappa, AIR 1947 Bom 140 : (1924) 48 Bom LR 788; Subbi v Ramkrishna, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 69; Bai Kanku v Bai Jadav, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 869; Bayava v Parvateva, AIR 1933 Bom 126 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 118; Kullu v Faiyaz, (1909) ILR 30 All 394; Soshi v Chandra, AIR 1923 Cal 204 : (1923) 35 Cal LJ 348.
1540. Kailash v Girija, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 925.
1541. Chaudhari Risam Singh v Balwant Singh, (1918) ILR 40 All 593 : 45 IA 168; Nachikalai v Aiyakannu, AIR 1922 Mad 233 : (1922) 43 Mad LJ 95.
1542. Ganesh v Lakshmibai, AIR 1922 Bom 96 : (1921) ILR 46 Bom 726.
1543. Jitendra Singh v Alliance Bank, AIR 1942 Oudh 199; Venkatanarayana v Subbammal, (1915) 38 ILR Mad 406 : 42 IA 125; Lalmohan v Ramlakshmi, AIR 1932 Cal 271 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 636.
1544. Addanki v Ryali Venkataramanayya, AIR 1944 Mad 326 : (1944) ILR Mad 775; Kesho Prasad v Sheo Pargash, AIR 1922 All 302 (FB) : (1922) ILR 44 All 19; Varamma v Gopaladasaya, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 659 (FB); Kahir Muhammad v Umar Din, AIR 1925 Lah 89 : (1924) ILR 5 Lah 421; Prannatha Nath v Bhuban Mohan, AIR 1922 Cal 321 : (1922) ILR 49 Cal 45; Mata Prasad v Nageshar, AIR 1925 PC 272 : (1925) ILR 47 All 883 : 52 IA 398; Thakar Singh v Mst Uttam Kaur, AIR 1929 Lah 295 : (1929) ILR 10 Lah 613; Jagdamba v Badri Prasad, AIR 1932 Oudh 322 : (1933) ILR 8 Luck 586.
1545. Valliammai v Shankara Ayyar, AIR 1950 Mad 562.

parties are entitled to represent interested persons other than themselves;[1546] as for instance, where each party in a partition suit claiming that the property, the subject matter of the suit, is joint, asserts a right or title common to others who make identical claims. If that very issue is litigated in another suit and decided, the others making the same claim are claiming a right "in common for themselves and others". Each of them in such a case must be deemed to represent all those, the nature of whose claims and interest are common or identical.[1547]

(i) Exception to Ordinary Rule.—Explanation VI to section 11 is an exception to the ordinary rule of res judicata, even as persons who are not parties to the earlier proceedings in certain contingencies. However, in order to attract that provision, if there are any rules prescribed, which regulate the proceedings, they must be strictly complied with. If the procedural provisions are not strictly complied with, Explanation VI to section 11 can have no application.[1548]

(j) Suit under Section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—It cannot be said that the persons whose names are in the suit title are the only parties to the suit. The named plaintiffs being the representatives of the public at large which is interested in the trust, all such interested persons would be considered in the eyes of law to be parties to the suit. A suit under section 92 of the CPC is thus a representative suit and as such binds not only the parties named in the suit title but all those who share common interest and are interested in the trust. It is for that reason that Explanation VI to section 11 of the CPC constructively bars by res judicata the entire body of interested persons from re-agitating the matters directly and substantially in issue in an earlier suit under section 92 of the CPC.[1549]

(k) Legal Representative.—L, a Karta of a joint family, endowed part of a property in trust and gifted the other part of the property to his daughter. The daughter, in turn, conveyed it to the trust; and the defendants were inducted as licencees, in the said house. A suit was filed by the sons of L (Karta) for the recovery of possession and mesne profits, on the ground that as per the trust deed executed by the daughter of L, the trust was entitled to the property, and that the defendant (inducted as licencees), had no right, title or interest in the property. During the pendency of this suit, the appellants (grandsons of L) filed a suit, claiming the said properties, on the ground that it was joint family property and they were entitled to one-tenth share in the same. It was held that the conclusive decision reached in the earlier suit, that the suit property was self-acquired property of L and that the settlement deed in favour of his daughter and settlement executed by her were true and valid, would operate as res judicata in the suit filed by the grandsons. Earlier suit against son of L shall be deemed to be one brought against him as representing the family, and not in his individual capacity.[1550]

Decision in respect of legal representation of deceased referred to under O XXII, rule 5 or Under O XXII, rule 10 of the CPC is not a decision on merits and as such it will not operate as res judicata when two categories of legal representative claim to be substituted or impleaded.[1551]

1546. Narayanswami v Parvati Bai, AIR 1949 Mad 379; Gurushiddappa v Gurushiddappa, AIR 1937 Bom 238 : (1937) ILR Bom 326 : (1937) 39 Bom LR 130; Babu Khan v Hukum Singh, AIR 1947 All 88; Sudehaiya v Ramdas, AIR 1957 All 270.
1547. Venkateshwara Prabhu v Krishna Prabhu, AIR 1977 SC 1268 : (1977) 2 SCC 181 : [1977] 2 SCR 636.
1548. United India Insurance Ltd v Sharda Adyanathaya, AIR 1998 Ker 141.
1549. R Venugopala Naidu v Venkatarayulu Naidu Charities, AIR 1990 SC 444 : (1989) Supp 2 SCC 356 : 1989 (Supp 1) SCR 760 : 1989 4 JT 262; See also Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee v Mahant Harnam Singh, AIR 2003 SC 3349 : 2003 AIR SCW 4757 : (2003) 11 SCC 377 : 2003 SCR 805.
1550. MH Ravindranath v ML Hanumantharao, AIR 1988 Mad 177.
1551. Rakesh Kumar Gupta v Ravindra Kumar Gupta, AIR 2009 (NOC) 2262 (All) : 2009 (4) AL J 618 (DB) (Lucknow Bench).

The Supreme Court held that as a legal position, it cannot be disputed that normally, an enquiry under O XXII, rule 5, CPC as to whether a person is legal representative of deceased party is of a summary nature and findings therein cannot amount to res judicata, however, that legal position is true only in respect of those parties who set up a rival claim against the legatee. But such finding would be final and operate as res judicata as regards that suit and cannot be re-agitated.[1552]

(l) Every Suit not a Representative Suit.—Earlier suit under sections 49 and 59, Uttar Pradesh Tenancy Act was filed by certain parties claiming tenancy rights for themselves. A was not a party herein. It was held that the decision in the earlier suit did not operate as res judicata against it.[1553]

If a creditor sues merely the person who executes the instrument, he must satisfy himself by proceeding against the executant. The fact that the instrument (a pronote), was executed by two members of a joint family, is not a legal basis for treating it as binding on another member of the joint family who neither signed the note nor was a party to the suit.[1554]

A co-owner of the equity of redemption obtaining possession of the property on redemption of the mortgage should hold the same for the benefit of the other co-owners also, vide section 90 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1982, Explanation VI to section 11 of the CPC provides for such a contingency, if it is shown that the plaintiff was bona fide litigating in respect of a right common to himself and to the other co-owners. Thus, where the suit for redemption filed by some of the heirs of the mortgagor was dismissed, the subsequent suit for redemption filed by an heir who was not a party to the earlier suit would be barred by res judicata, when the plaintiff in the second suit has no case of any fraud or collusion in the conduct of the earlier suit, nor does he have a special case apart from the case for redemption pleaded in the prior suit.[1555]

Where a person claims a right for himself which happens to be common to him and others, he cannot be said to be litigating on behalf of the others, and the explanation does not apply.[1556] So also, where a judgment against a defendant sued in his personal capacity as a trespasser, whose plea was that the property in question was reserved under a trust for sadhus, saints and for determining whether the property was the property of a public trust for charitable and religious purposes.[1557] A decision in an application by one of several judgment-debtors for scaling down a decree under the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1938, does not bar the rights of the other judgment-debtors to apply for relief under the Act.[1558] The condition that the litigation was conducted bona fide is necessary for the application of the section; but the court cannot, in the absence of fraud or collusion, treat negligence or gross negligence as want of bona fide,[1559] or equivalent to fraud.[1560]

1552. Dashrath Rao Kate v Brij Mohan Srivastava, AIR 2010 SC 897: (2010) 1 SCC 277.
1553. Suraj Pal v Deputy Director of Consolidation, AIR 1981 All 265.
1554. C Lakshminarayan v KC Subba Rao, AIR 1990 AP 164 (DB).
1555. Velayudha Pillai Raman Nair v Krishnan Asari Mani, AIR 1989 Ker 263 (DB).
1556. Jitendra v Alliance Bank, AIR 1942 Oudh 199; Kumarandy v Venkatasubramania, AIR 1927 Mad 645 : (1927) 52 Mad LJ 641; Madhuanand v Suresanand, AIR 1953 All 547 : (1952) ILR 1 All 148.
1557. Taloda Municipality v Charity Commr, AIR 1968 SC 418 : (1968) 70 Bom LR 332 : (1968) Mah LJ 435.
1558. Krishnamurthy v Satyanarayanamurthy, AIR 1958 AP 231.
1559. Laxmi Narain v Mohd Shafi Bosi, AIR 1949 EP 141; Venkata Seshayya v Koteswara, AIR 1937 PC 1 : (1937) ILR Mad 263 : 64 IA 17.
1560. Nagamma v Korthi Hengsu, AIR 1950 Mad 546 : (1950) ILR Mad 326.

Where certain parties filed the earlier suit to claim tenancy rights for themselves, A, who was not a party to that suit, is not bound by the decision therein.[1561]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A decree in a suit against certain members of a sect alleged to be wrongdoers in their individual capacity cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit against the other members of the sect.[1562]

The wrong complained of in the former suit was that the defendants carried an idol in procession through certain streets and that such processions were in violation of plaintiff's rights. The suit was against the defendants in their individual capacity, and not as representing the sect to which they belonged.

(ii) A, alleging that he is the proprietor of a village, sues B, C and D for ejectment. The defence is that A is not the proprietor and that part of the village belongs to B, C and D, and the rest to X, Y and Z. The court finds that A is not the proprietor, and A's suit is dismissed. A then sues X, Y and Z and also B, C and D for declaration that he is the proprietor of the village and for possession. The question of A's title to the village is res judicata so as to bar the suit against B, C and D, who were parties to the former suit, but it is not res judicata so as to bar the suit against X, Y and Z who were not parties to the former suit. It cannot be said that B, C and D litigated in the former suit in respect of a private right claimed in common for themselves and X, Y and Z. They set up only their own right to a part of the property and as to the rest they alleged that it belonged to X, Y and Z.[1563]

(iii) A files a suit on behalf of himself and other members of his community to establish a right to worship in a temple, but through oversight omits to give notice under O I, rule 8 to the other members of the community. The suit is dismissed but the judgment will not operate as res judicata to bar a subsequent suit by another member of the community to establish the same right.[1564]

The right referred to in this explanation may either be a public right or a private right. The words "public right" have been added into this explanation in view of the provisions of section 91 below. The right to have a public nuisance abated is a public right. The right of pasturage claimed by custom by the inhabitants of a village over a tract of land or to take water from a spring or a well is a private right.[1565]

In some of the cases, that arose under the Code of 1882, the opinion was expressed that the present explanation, so far as it relates to private right, must be confined to the cases where leave to sue has been obtained under section 30 of that Code [now O I, rule 8(1)];[1566] but the explanation is not confined to suits under O I, rule 8, but extends to include any litigation in which apart from the rule altogether, parties are entitled to represent interested persons other than themselves;[1567] but, if the suit is one under O I, rule 8, the Privy Council has held that the provisions of the rule must be strictly complied with, otherwise the explanation will not apply, even though the omission is due to inadvertence and has caused no injury.[1568] It had previously

---

1561. Suraj Pal v Deputy Director of Consolidation Allahabad, AIR 1981 All 265.
1562. Sadagopa Chariar v Krishnamoorthy Rao, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 185 : 34 IA 93.
1563. Jaimngal Deo v Bed Saran, (1911) ILR 33 All 493 : 9 IC 819.
1564. Kumaravelu v Ramaswami, AIR 1933 PC 183 : (1933) 56 Mad 657 : 143 IC 665 : (1933) 60 IA 278.
1565. Kalishankar v Gopal Chunder, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 49.
1566. Thanakoti v Muniappa, (1885) ILR 8 Mad 496; Srinivasa v Raghava, (1900) ILR 23 Mad 28; Baiju Lal v Bulak Lal, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 385; Somasundara v Kulandaivelu, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 457, p 463.
1567. Kumaravelu v Ramaswami, AIR 1933 PC 183 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 657 : 60 IA 278.
1568. Kumaravelu v Ramaswami, AIR 1933 PC 183 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 657 : 60 IA 278; approving on this point Thanakoti v Muniappa, (1885) ILR 8 Mad 496; Baiju Lal v Bulak Lal, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 385; Srinivasa v Raghava, 28; disapproving Gopalacharyulu v Subbamma, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 487.

been held that it was sufficient if the litigation was carried on bona fide on behalf of all others interested. (See the under-noted cases[1569] which are no longer law.)

Suits by a Hindu widow or by a manager of a joint Hindu family or by a reversioner in her or his representative character are instances of this class.

(m) Public Interest Litigation.—Explanation VI to section 11 of the CPC applies to public interest litigation as well, but it must be proved that the previous litigation was a public interest litigation not by way of a private grievance.[1570] The writ petition before the Supreme Court was not inter partes dispute and was raised by way of public interest litigation. The Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that it may not be taken to have said that for public interest litigation, procedural law do not apply. However, at the same time, it has to be remembered that every technicality in the procedural law is not available as a defence when a matter of grave public importance is for consideration before the court. Even if it is said that there is a final order in a dispute of this type, it would be difficult to entertain the plea of res judicata.[1571]

The petitioner filed repeated writ petitions claiming compensation for victims of Railway accident. Although it was claimed to be in the public interest, the petitioner filed the writs in this own capacity without consent or authority from the injured persons. The petitioner also withheld the fact of dismissal of his earlier petition claiming the same relief. It was held by a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court that the record reflected the personal interest of the petitioner. Thus, the petition is hit by the principles of constructive res judicata.[1572]

The question of applicability of the principles of res judicata to Public Interest Litigations has taxed the mind of Judges and jurists alike. While some courts have found the principles to be applicable to PIL, some others rule out its applicability. Even the pronouncements of the Apex Court have not been consistent on this issue. While some decisions hold the rule not applicable to PIL,[1573] some others hold the rule applicable.[1574] But an overall view that emerges from a catena of pronouncements of the Supreme Court is a balanced approach, neither ruling out the application of res judicata in PIL altogether not holding it applicable in all cases genuinely affecting interest of the public.

In V Purushotham Rao v UOI,[1575] GB Pattanaik J (as he then was), speaking for the Bench of Supreme Court, observed as follows:

> 19. Coming to the second question, Explanation IV to Section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code postulate that any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in the former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit. Order 2 Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action and if he omits to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquishes, any portion of his claim, then he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion, so omitted or relinquished. By virtue of Explanation to Section 141 of the Code of Civil Procedure, since proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution are excluded from the expression "proceedings", therefore, the Civil Procedure Code is not required to be followed in a proceeding under Article 226 unless the High Court itself has made the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to a proceeding under Article 226. Then again, the principles of Section 11 as well as Order 2 Rule 2, undoubtedly contemplate

---

1569. Gopalacharyulu v Subbamma, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 487; Muhammad v Sumitra, (1914) ILR 36 All 424.
1570. Forward Construction Co v Prabhat Mandal, (1986) 1 SCC 100.
1571. Rural Litigation and Entitlement Kendra v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1989) Supp 1 SCC 504.
1572. RS Keluskar v UOI, 2008 (3) Mah LJ 13 : 2007 (6) All MR 304 (DB).
1573. MC Mehta v UOI, AIR 2000 SC 2701 : (2000) 5 SCC 525.
1574. State of Karnataka v All India Manufacturers Organisation, AIR 2006 SC 1846 : (2006) 4 SCC 683.
1575. V Purushotham Rao v UOI, (2001) 10 SCC 305.

> an adversarial system of litigation, where the court adjudicate the rights of the parties and determines the issues arising in a given case. The public interest litigation or a petition filed for public interest cannot be held to be an adversarial system of adjudication and the petitioner in such case, merely brings it to the notice of the court, as the how and in what manner the public interest is being jeopardised by arbitrary and capricious action of the authorities.

The Supreme Court quoted with approval the observation in its earlier judgment in Rural Litigation and Entitlement Kendra v State of Uttar Pradesh,[1576] wherein the court had repelled the plea of application of res judicata by observing that "the writ petitions are not inter partes disputes and have been raised by way of public interest litigation and the controversy before the court is as to whether for social safety and for creating a hazardous environment for the people to live in, mining in the area should be permitted or stopped." It was further observed in the case as follows:

> We may not be taken to have said that for public interest litigations, procedural laws do not apply. At the same time it has to be remembered that every technicality in the procedural law is not available as a defence when a matter of grave public importance is for consideration before the court. Even if it is said that there was a final order, in a dispute of this type it would be difficult to entertain the plea of res judicata.

Finally, the Supreme Court Bench in the case of V Purushotham Rao (supra) cause to the conclusion that "the principle of constructive res judicata cannot be made applicable in each and every public interest litigation, irrespective of the nature of litigation itself and its impact on the society and larger public interest which is being served. There cannot be any dispute that in competing rights between the public interest and individual interest, the public interest would override".

In another case, Explanation VI to section 11 came up for consideration before the Supreme Court is Forward Construction Co v Prabhat Mandal,[1577] wherein it was held that in view of Explanation VI, it could not be disputed that section 11 applies to Public Interest Litigation, as long as it is shown that the previous litigation was in public interest and not by way of private grievance. Further, the previous litigation has to be bona fide litigation in respect of a right which is common and is agitated in common with others.

In Karnataka, the State Government had external into a Framework Agreement (FWA) with a private party for execution of a Project. The FWA was challenged in a Public Interest Litigation before the high court in HT Somashekar Reddy v Govt of Karnataka,[1578] wherein all the objections were decided against the petitioner and the PIL was dismissed. The Supreme Court confirmed the dismissal and the matter reached finality. In the second round of litigation, when the matter reached the Supreme Court, the findings of the high court in the earlier PIL stood in the way of maintainability of the petition. In State of Karnataka v All India Manufacturers Organisation,[1579] BN Srikrishna J speaking for the three-Judge Supreme Court Bench, dismissed the PIL with the following observation:

> 47. In the face of such a finding by the High Court, Explanation IV to Section 11 squarely applies as, admittedly by, the litigation in Somashekar Reddy (supra) exhausted all possible challenges to the validity of the FWA, including the issue of excess land. Merely because the present petitioners draw semantic distinctions and claim that the excess land not having been identified at the stage of the litigation in Somashekar Reddy (supra), the project should be reviewed, the issue does not cease to be res judicata or covered by the

---

1576. Rural Litigation and Entitlement Kendra v State of Uttar Pradesh, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 504.
1577. Forward Construction Co v Prabhat Mandal, AIR 1986 SC 398 : (1986) 1 SCC 100.
1578. HT Somashekar Reddy v Govt of Karnataka, 1999 (1) Kar LD 500 (DB).
1579. State of Karnataka v All India Manufacturers Organisation, AIR 2006 SC 1846 : (2006) 4 SCC 683.

> principles analogous there to. If we were to re-examine the issues that had been raised/ ought to have been raised in Somashekar Reddy (supra) it would simply be an abuse of the process of the court, which we cannot allow.

In a case from Goa, the State Government issued two notifications granting rebate of 25% in Electricity Tariff in respect of power supply to Industrial Consumers. The decision to grant rebate was finalised by the Power Minister with placing the proposal before the Chief Minister or the Council of Ministers in violation of the Conduct of Business Rules. The notifications were quashed by the high court as being void ab initio and the dismissal was confirmed by the Supreme Court. In the second round of litigation in respect of notifications issued in 1996, it was urged that the State at no point of time before any Court raised the issue of the two notifications being void ab initio cannot be raised at this point of time in view of the principles of res judicata and doctrine of estoppel. Repelling the above contention, it was held by the Supreme Court that not raising object by the State does not disentitle it or prevents it from raising objections based on legal provisions.[1580]

In a case from West Bengal a large number of plots had been allotted from the discretionary quota by the Chief Minister. In a PIL filed against these allotments, a three-Judge Bench of the Supreme Court presided over by SH Kapadia CJI observed as follows:

> In other words, the allotment of large number of plots in Salt Lake City, Kolkata had been the subject-matter of different writ petitions and/or appeal before the Calcutta High Court as well as this court and for one reason or the other the allotments in favour of the private parties had not been set aside, though there were doubts raised by the Calcutta High Court as well as this court regarding allotments under the discretionary quota of Chief Minister and the manner in which they were made. However, as all these judgments have attained finality, they cannot be permitted to be agitated over and over again including in the present writ petition. The principle of finality as well as fairness demand that there should be an end to the litigation and it is in the interest of public that issues settled by the judgments of courts, including this court, which have attained finality should not be permitted to be re-agitated all over again, interest rei publicae ut sit finis litium.[1581]

(n) Consent Decree in a Representative Suit on Behalf of the Public.—In the undermentioned case,[1582] the Privy Council left it an open question whether in India, persons instituting a suit on behalf of the public can bind the public by a compromise decree. The Bombay High Court has held that a consent decree made in a representative suit could be res judicata on the ground of estoppel whether the suit was under O I, rule 8 or under section 92.[1583]

(o) Judgment in Rem.—As already explained, a judgment in a suit is binding only upon the parties to the suit and their privies. As a general principle, a transaction between two parties in judicial proceedings, ought not to be binding upon a third, for it would be unjust to bind any person who could not be admitted to make a defence, or to examine witness, or to appeal from a judgment he might think erroneous.[1584] There are, however, certain judgments which bind all the world and not only the parties to the proceeding in which they were passed and their privies. A judgment that is binding upon the parties and their privies only is called a judgment in personam. A judgment which binds all the world is called a judgment in rem. Judgments in 1580. M/s MRF Ltd v Manohar Prikar, (2010) 11 SCC 374 : (2010) 4 Scale 577.

1581. Joydeep Mukharjee v State of West Bengal, AIR 2011 SC 1169 : (2011) 2 SCC 706 : (2011) 2 Scale 172.
1582. Abdur Rahim v Mahomed Barkut Ali, AIR 1928 PC 16 : (1928) ILR 55 Cal 519 : 55 IA 96.
1583. Chiranji Lal v Life Insurance Corp, AIR 1952 Bom 396 : (1959) ILR Bom 1402; Chandiram v Rajaram, AIR 1951 Cal 456.
1584. Duchess of Kingstone's case 2 Smith's LC, 13th Edn, p 644; Secretary of State v Syed Ahmad Badsha, AIR 1921 Mad 248 (FB) : (1921) ILR 44 Mad 778.

rem are outside the scope of the present section. They are dealt with in the Indian Evidence Act, section 41.

(p) Decree against Minor.—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him to the same extent as a decree passed against an adult. A minor, however, is entitled to impeach a decree passed against him if the next friend or guardian for the suit is guilty of fraud or gross negligence in allowing the decree to be passed.[1585] It has been said in one case that any act or omission on the part of the guardian ad litem which in the result has brought prejudice to the minor's interest is gross negligence;[1586] but, in another case,[1587] the court said:

> It is not every kind of negligence that would be a sufficient ground for setting aside a decree, or for declaring that the proceedings in court are null and void, but where the guardian omits to do his plain duty and where by reason of such negligence a suit is decided against a minor, which would not have been otherwise decreed against him, it must be held that the guardian's negligence contributed to the court proceeding in the manner it did.

An omission on the part of a guardian ad litem to bring to the notice of the court a previous judgment between the parties for the purpose of raising the plea of res judicata has been held not to constitute negligence.[1588]

A decree passed against a minor not properly represented is a nullity and cannot operate as res judicata;[1589] but, it has been held that if a suit is brought on the minor's behalf to set aside a sale in execution of such decree, but the plea that the minor was not properly represented in the suit in which the decree was passed is not then taken, it cannot be taken in a subsequent suit to set aside the decree and sale by reason of the rule contained in Explanation IV to the section.[1590] Orders in execution made against a judgment-debtor who is a minor duly represented by a guardian would be res judicata in subsequent execution proceedings and cannot be reopened by the minor after he comes of age.[1591]

[s 11.26.2.3] Condition III: Litigating Under the Same Title

The third condition of res judicata is that the parties in the subsequent suit must have litigated under the same title in the former suit. The expression "same title" means the same capacity. Thus, where an heir of a deceased mortgagor sues for redemption of the mortgage on the footing that he represents the estate of the deceased mortgagor and obtains a decree on the finding that the mortgagee has been over-paid, a subsequent suit by the mortgagee against him, an executor of the deceased mortgagor for sale of the mortgage property, on the basis that the money was still due to him, is barred by res judicata.[1592] Where in a suit between the mother-in-law on the one hand and her daughter-in-law and her adopted son on the other, it was held that the daughter-in-law had lost her right to adopt and that the adoption was invalid and thereafter, the daughter-in-law again adopted the same boy on the strength of a decision

---

1585. Cursandas v Ladka Vahu, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 571; Lalla v Ramnandan, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 8; Ismail v Sultan Bibi, (1917) PR 103, 390; Gotepati v Gotepati, (1914) 27 Mad LJ 486; Sundra v Sakhavam, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 29; Damu v Vakrya, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 767. See notes to O IX, rule 9.
1586. Brij Raj v Ram Sarup, AIR 1926 All 36 : (1926) ILR 48 All 44.
1587. Dada Sahib v Gajraj, AIR 1925 Mad 204 : (1925) 47 Mad LJ 928; Punnayyah v Viswanna, AIR 1922 Mad 273, (1922) ILR 45 Mad 425.
1588. Ananda Rao v Appa Rao, AIR 1925 Mad 258 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 700.
1589. Rattan Chand v Ram Kishan, AIR 1928 All 447 : (1928) 26 All LJ 777; Ibrahim v Cherian, AIR 1956 TC 70.
1590. Mallayya v Punamma, AIR 1924 Mad 608 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 476.
1591. Rayulu Ayyar v Chocka Narayan, AIR 1954 Mad 237; Raman v Narayana, AIR 1952 TC 478.
1592. Radha Mohan v Eliza Jane Hilt, AIR 1947 All 147 : (1947) ILR All 186.

of the Privy Council subsequently pronounced, it was held that a fresh suit by her to establish the adoption was barred as she was litigating in both the suits on the same title.[1593] A verdict against a man suing in one capacity will not stop him when he sues in another distinct capacity, and, in fact, is a different person in law[1594] Thus, where a suit is brought by a person to recover possession from a stranger to a math property claiming it as the heir of a deceased mohunt, but the suit is dismissed on his failure to produce a certificate of succession to establish his heirship, the dismissal is no bar to a suit by him as manager of the math on behalf of the math.[1595] Where the trustees of a public charity fail in a suit to eject a trespasser, they are not barred from suing again as members of the public with the consent of the Advocate-General.[1596] A decree against the trustee of a temple that certain property attached to the temple belonged to A and not the temple operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the worshippers of the temple against the heirs of A for a similar relief, as the title litigated is the same.[1597] The dismissal of a suit by A against B, C and D in their individual capacity on a finding that a temple is public property does not operate as res judicata against A in a subsequent suit brought by B, C, D and others in their representative capacity against A for a declaration that the same temple is public property.[1598] A decree passed in a suit against certain persons sued as shebait of a temple is not res judicata in a suit in which they are sued as executors under a will.[1599] A decision given by a court in Chandernagore after its merger in the Indian Union in accordance with French law which had ceased to operate after merger is without jurisdiction and cannot operate as res judicata.[1600] Similarly, the dismissal of a suit brought by a son against his father for maintenance claimed under an agreement is no bar to a suit by him against his eldest brother for a declaration that he is entitled to maintenance out of certain lands in his hands held under a sanad from government whereby, it was alleged, the lands were charged at the time of grant with the maintenance of the junior members of the family.[1601] Where in a suit by A against B for the recovery of a property, B sets up a jus tertii in C, and the court finds that C has no title to property, and allows A's claim, the finding does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by B after C's death against A, claiming the same property as the heir of C, as it could not have operated as such against C himself.[1602] A judgment against a party will not operate as res judicata when he subsequently acquires a fresh title under section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act.[1603]

The principles of res judicata are not applicable to cases where the earlier order has been passed without jurisdiction. Such an order passed without jurisdiction would not be binding

---

1593. Sundar Bai v Devaji, AIR 1954 SC 82 : (1953) SCJ 693.
1594. Mahadwappa v Dharmappa, AIR 1942 Bom 332 : (1942) ILR 44 Bom LR 710; Shrivallabh Badrinath v Laxman Vinayak, AIR 1947 Ngp 39, (1946) ILR Nag 630; Rajah Chattar Singh v Diwan Roshan Singh, AIR 1946 Ngp 277 : (1946) ILR Nag 159; Cheria Veetil v Chattu Nambiar, AIR 1951 Mad 285; Dutchess of Kingstone's case, 2 Smith's LC, 13th Edn, pp 644, 675; Afzalunnissa v Fayazuddin, AIR 1931 Lah 610 : (1932) ILR 13 Lah 195; Kisandas v Godavari Bai, AIR 1937 Bom 334 : (1937) ILR Bom 636 : (1937) 39 Bom LR 351; Ali Moidin v Kombi, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 239 p 241.
1595. Babajirao v Laxmandas, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 215 (distinguished); Hargovan v Mulji, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 416; Ghelabhai v Udderam, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 29; Dattatraya v Matha Bala, AIR 1934 Bom 36 : (1934) ILR 58 Bom 119 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 1131.
1596. Lakshman Das v Jagat Kishore, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 216.
1597. Piare Lal v Sher Gir, AIR 1938 Lah 499.
1598. Hari Kishen v Raghubar, AIR 1926 Oudh 578 : (1926) ILR 1 Luck 489.
1599. Administrator General v Sulajini, AIR 1962 Cal 616.
1600. UOI v Manmul Jain, AIR 1962 Cal 635.
1601. Ahmad v Nihal-ud-din, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 945 : 10 IA 45.
1602. Jaganandham v Venkatasubba Rao, AIR 1927 Mad 844 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 877.
1603. Deb Nath v Sashi Bhusan, AIR 1934 Cal 82 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 1144.

on the other party even if no appeal is filed against it. The law on this point has been explained by AK Patnaik J in following words:[1604]

> 59. Thus, the Tribunal in its order dated 7-7-2006 has not just decided a dispute on the interpretation of adjusted gross revenue in the licence agreement, but has decided on the validity of the definition of adjusted gross revenue in the licence agreement. As we have already held, the Tribunal had no jurisdiction to decide on the validity of the terms and conditions of the licence including the definition of adjusted gross revenue incorporated in the licence agreement. Hence, the order dated 7-7-2006 of the Tribunal insofar as it decides that revenue realised by the licensee from activities beyond the licence will be excluded from adjusted gross revenue dehors the definition of adjusted gross revenue in the licence agreement is without jurisdiction and is a nullity and the principle of res judicata will not apply.

A mortgagee in a possession does not lose the character of a mortgagee and become a trespasser because he refuses to deliver possession of the mortgaged property to the mortgagor on deposit being made in court of the amount payable on the mortgage. A executes a usufructuary mortgage of his property to B, and places B in possession thereof. At the proper time, A tenders the mortgage-debt, Rs 500 to B and asks to be restored to possession. B refuses to accept the tender on the ground that more is due to him and to deliver possession of the property to A. A sues B for redemption, and deposits Rs 500 in court. The court finds that the tender was proper and directs B to deliver possession to A. After entering into possession, A sues B to recover mesne profits from B from the date of the deposit in court to the date of the recovery of possession. The suit is barred for A "might and ought" to have claimed the mesne profits in the first suit. The suit is between the same parties litigating "under the same title," that is, as mortgagor and mortgagee. The mortgage is not extinguished after the tender and deposit, and B does not become a trespasser after that date. It cannot, therefore, be said that the suit against B for mesne profits is against him as a trespasser, and not as a mortgagee.[1605]

The words "between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title" cover a case where the later litigant occupies by succession, the same position as the former litigant. There may be a succession by the ordinary rules of inheritance or succession by some very special rules as in the case of saranjam or vatan estates. The words of the section do not make any distinction between different forms of succession. A decree, therefore, against a saranjamdar may operate as res judicata against his heir and successor;[1606] so also a decree against a vatandar.[1607]

[s 11.26.2.4] Condition IV: Court Competent to Try Such Subsequent Suit or the Suit in Which Such Issue has been Subsequently Raised

The operative part of the section requires that in order that a decision made in a former suit operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit, it is necessary that the court which made such decision, must at the time of making it, be competent to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which the issue has been subsequently raised. Technical aspects of section 11, as for instance, technical or subjective competence of the earlier forum to adjudicate the said matter or grant leaves sought in the substantial litigation would be immaterial when the general doctrine of 1604. UOI v Assn of Unified Telecom Service Providers of India, (2011) 10 SCC 543.

---

1605. Rukhminibhai v Venkatesh, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 527; Satyabadi v Havaban, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 223; Ram din v Bhoop Singh, (1908) ILR 30 All 225.
1606. Madhavrao v Anusuyabai, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 606.
1607. Radhabai v Anantrao, (1885) ILR 9 Bom 198. See notes above, "Shebait, karnavan, trustee, administrator, etc."

res judicata is to be invoked.[1608] The fact that that court was competent to try the issue raised in the subsequent suit, is not enough. The new Explanation VIII inserted in the section by the Amendment Act, 1976, extends the applicability of the section by providing that an issue heard and finally decided by a court of limited jurisdiction competent to try such an issue, shall also operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, although the court of limited jurisdiction was not competent to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised. This would be so, however, provided the other conditions of the section are satisfied.

(a) Court of Competent Jurisdiction.—In order that a decision in a former suit may operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, it is necessary that the court which tried the former suit must have been a court competent to try the subsequent suit. The words "competent to try such subsequent suit" must refer to the jurisdiction of the court to try the subsequent suit at the time when the first suit was brought.[1609] Mere competency to try the issue raised in the subsequent suit, is not enough. As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Gokul Mandar v Pudmanund:[1610]

> A decree in a previous suit cannot be pleaded as res judicata in a subsequent suit unless the judge by whom it was made had jurisdiction to try and decide, not only the particular matter in issue, but also the subsequent suit itself in which the issue is subsequently raised. The law is well-settled that even if erroneous, an inter-party judgement binds the party if the court of competent jurisdiction has decided the lis.[1611] In this respect the enactment goes beyond s 13 of the previous Act 10 of 1877, and also, as appears to their Lordships, beyond the law laid down by the judges in the Duchess of Kingstone's case.[1612]

In Maqsood Ali v Hunter,[1613] the majority of the judges of the Oudh chief court however, held (Madeley J dissenting) after noticing the aforesaid observations of the Privy Council in Gokul Mander's case and considering the cases decided by the high courts of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Lahore and the earlier decisions of the chief court of Oudh given after the decision of Gokul Mander's case, that the section should be liberally construed and the word "suit" in the expression "such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue is subsequently raised" should be construed to mean a part of a suit. Thus, where the entire cause of action upon which the subsequent suit is founded can be treated as divisible and if in the earlier suit one of the component parts of that cause of action was relied on, then the previous suit will stand as a bar to the extent of the matter involved in the earlier suit, though the second suit as a whole could not be tried by the court which tried the earlier suit. In the case which was before the Full Bench, the facts were as follows. A sued B in a munsiff's court for a declaration that he was entitled to annual maintenance allowance as the rate of Rs 200 which was charged on property purchased by B and for recovery of the sum due to him for one year. The suit was valued at less than Rs 2000 which was the pecuniary limit of the munsiff's jurisdiction. B pleaded that there was no charge on the property and that in any event he was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the charge. His defence was overruled by the munsiff who gave a declaration

---

1608. Gulam Abbas v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1982) 1 SCC 71.
1609. Gopi Nath v Bagwat Prasad, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 697; Gokaran Prasad Singh v Chotty Narain Singh, AIR 1951 Pat 595; Abinsh v Madusudhan, AIR 1952 Cal 673; Ram Karan v Parbati, AIR 1954 Pat 443; Kali Charan v Dy Director of Consolidation, AIR 1977 All 56.
1610. Gokul Mandar v Pudmanund, ILR 29 Cal 707 : 29 IA 196, p 202; Shibo Rout v Baban Rout, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 353, p 359; Fazal Hussain v Jiwan Shah, AIR 1933 Lah 551 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 369 dissenting; Sahebzadi v Muhammad Umar, AIR 1926 Lah 603 : (1927) ILR 8 Lah 15; Sri Raja Kotagiri v Vutukuru Papayya Rao, AIR 1946 Mad 431 : (1946) ILR Mad 760; Prosanna Kumar v Adya Sakti Dasi, (1943) ILR 1 Cal 128 : (1942) 46 Cal WN 1022.
1611. Gorie Gouri Naidu v Thandrothu Bodemma, (1997) 2 SCC 552.
1612. Rukmini Devi v Rambilas Singh, AIR 1951 Pat 361.
1613. Maqsood Ali v Hunter, AIR 1943 Oudh 338 : 210 IC 163 (FB).

that the allowance was validly charged on the property that B had purchased with notice of the charge. A then sues B in a subordinate judge's court for maintenance allowance for the subsequent years with a prayer that in default of payment, the charged properties be sold. As the claim was for six years with interest, the suit was valued at over Rs 2,000. Justice Bennet with whom the majority agreed, held that the cause of action on which the second suit was founded can be treated as divisible into two parts, namely: (i) a claim to annual maintenance allowance; and (ii) a claim to the arrears then due, and as the munsiff had given a declaration that A was entitled to annual maintenance that question could not be re-agitated in the second suit. This view that the word "suit" in the phrase "such subsequent suit" should be taken to mean "a part of the suit" is in clear conflict with the observations of the Privy Council in Gokul Prasad v Nageshar Sahai.[1614] The point is now concluded by the decision of the Supreme Court in Gulab Bai v Manphool Bai in which it has been held that the word "suit" in the expression "such subsequent suit" should be construed literally and that it meant the whole suit and not merely a part of it or any issue.[1615] This is no longer correct, for, under Explanation VIII, an issue finally decided by a court of limited jurisdiction operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit even though the court deciding that issue was not competent at the time it decided that issue to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised. To that extent, the legislature can be said to have reversed the "literal" construction placed by the Supreme Court in Gulab Bai v Manphool Bai and accepted the "liberal" construction advocated by the majority opinion in Maqsood Ali v Hunter.

The court which decided the former suit may be a court of "exclusive" jurisdiction, or a court of "concurrent" jurisdiction, or a court of "limited" jurisdiction. As to superior court, nothing is presumed to be out of jurisdiction except what is expressed to be so; but with inferior courts, the presumption is to the contrary, that nothing is within jurisdiction, except what is expressed to be so.[1616]

(i) Where the court deciding the former suit is a civil court and the court dealing with the subsequent suit is of a limited jurisdiction.—In one case adjudication was made by a competent civil court and a finding had been arrived at holding that the petitioner was in exclusive possession of the case land since 1929. The said finding was confirmed not only by the lower appellate court, but also by the high court in second appeal. It is no more res integra that the authority having limited jurisdiction is bound by the decision arrived at by the competent civil court relating to title. Thus, for all acts and purposes, the finding that the petitioner was in possession of the case land since 1929 is also binding upon the Orissa Prevention of Land Encroachment Authorities having limited jurisdiction under Orissa Prevention of Land Encroachment Act (6 of 1972).[1617]

The finding of the civil court in the earlier suit between the same parties that the defendant was in possession of land as trespasser and, not as a tenant, would operate as res judicata in subsequent suit for possession. Mere casual reference made by revenue courts, about relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties would not have any effect on civil court while adjudicating dispute between the parties.[1618]

(ii) Where the court which decided the former suit is one of "exclusive" jurisdiction.—If a matter directly and substantially in issue in a former suit has been adjudicated upon by court of

---

1614. Gokul Prasad v Nageshar Sahai, 52 IA 398.
1615. Gulab Bai v Manphool Bai, AIR 1962 SC 214; PM Kavale v AB Bokil, AIR 1971 SC 2228.
1616. R v Nabadwip, (1868) 15 WR Cr 71.
1617. Labangalata Panda v State of Orissa, AIR 2002 Ori 147.
1618. Saroop Singh v Surjan Singh, AIR 2003 P&H 70.

exclusive jurisdiction, the adjudication will bar the trial of the same matter in a subsequent suit. Thus, courts of revenue have jurisdiction in respect of certain matters to the entire exclusion of a civil court;[1619] but, it is open to a minor to impeach in a civil suit a decree of a revenue court if his guardian has been guilty of fraud or gross negligence in allowing the decree to be passed against him.[1620] The Deccan Agriculturalist's Relief Act, 1879 gives exclusive jurisdiction to the court under that Act over a particular class of suits, and a decision in a previous suit tried by the court will be res judicata if the suit falls within the class to which the Act applies.[1621]

(iii) Where the court which decided the former suit was not a court of jurisdiction concurrent with that of the court in which the subsequent suit is brought.—In such a case, the court which decided the former suit cannot be a court "competent to try the subsequent suit" within the meaning of this section.[1622]

(iv) Where the court which decided the former suit was a court of concurrent jurisdiction.—In such a case, the court which decided the former suit might or might not have been "competent to try the subsequent suit." If it was, the decision would operate as res judicata, but not otherwise.

(v) Where the court which decided the matter in issue was a court of limited jurisdiction.—In such a case, an issue decided by such a court operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit, provided that issue was within the competence of that court. It is no longer necessary that such a court was competent, at the time it decided that issue, to try the subsequent suit in which the same issue has been raised.

Summarising the above, we may say that in order that a decision in a former suit may operate as res judicata, the court which decided that suit must have been either—

- a civil court of competent jurisdiction;
- a court of exclusive jurisdiction; or
- a court of concurrent jurisdiction "competent to try the subsequent suit;" or
- court of limited jurisdiction competent to try the issue raised in the subsequent suit.

In a decision, the Calcutta High Court had to interpret the expression "court of limited jurisdiction" used in Explanation VIII. In rejecting the contention that a court of the munsiff by reason of its limited pecuniary jurisdiction is a court of limited jurisdiction, the court observed:

> If we are to interpret explanation VIII without referring to s 11, it may be said that a court of limited pecuniary jurisdiction is a court of limited jurisdiction. An explanation to a section is primarily meant for explaining the section itself. In our view, in order to ascertain the true meaning of the explanation VIII, it has to be read along with the provision of the section and not de hors it. It has already been stated that one of the conditions of the applicability of s 11 is that the court in which the former suit was instituted must be competent to try the subsequent suit. If the former court is unable to try the subsequent suit as it is beyond its pecuniary jurisdiction the decision of the former court will not be res judicata in the subsequent suit. If the legislature had really intended to remove the 1619. Kisore Singh v Bahadur Singh, (1919) ILR 41 All 97; Baljit v Mahipat, (1919) ILR 41 All 203; Ram Das v Dubri Koeri, AIR 1922 All 336 : (1922) ILR 44 All 724; Balwant Singh v Sarabjit, AIR 1927 All 70 (FB) : (1926) ILR 48 All 774; Mool Chand v S. Iltifat, AIR 1929 Oudh 362, (1929) ILR 4 Luck 220; Ubaid Ullah v Abdul Jalil, AIR 1937 All 481 : (1937) ILR All 628; Chandra Singh v Prithi Singh, AIR 1937 Lah 19 : (1936) 17 Lah 787.

---

1620. Mst Siraj Fatima v Mahomed Ali, (1932) AIR 1932 All 293 (FB) : ILR 54 All 646.
1621. Vithal v Sitabai, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 548.
1622. Edun v Bechun, (1868) 8 WR 175; Missir v Sheo Baksh, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 439 : 9 IA 197.

condition relating to the competency of the former court, in that case, it would have removed the same from the section itself. In the face of the provision of s 11 retaining the said condition for the applicability of res judicata, that the former court must be competent to try the subsequent suit, it is difficult for us to accept the interpretation of explanation VIII as suggested on behalf of the applicant... In our view, courts of limited jurisdiction are courts other than the ordinary civil courts, insolvency courts, guardianship courts, probate courts etc. These courts are to try certain specific matters and in that sense they may be said to be courts of limited jurisdiction. These courts are also courts of exclusive jurisdiction in respect of the matters they are to try. The decisions of such courts operated as res judicata in subsequent suits not by virtue of s 11 but on the general principles of res judicata. By enacting explanation VIII, the legislature brought the decisions of such court within the purview of s 11... Under explanation VIII, the provisions of s 11 will apply to the subsequent suit when an issue has been heard and finally decided by a court of limited jurisdiction in a former proceeding. There is a clear indication in that regard in explanation VIII, for it does not say that the decision of an issue by a court of limited jurisdiction has to be made in a former suit. This is also an indication that explanation VIII does not contemplate that the two proceedings must be suits...so where both the former and subsequent proceedings are suits, to invoke the bar of res judicata the condition as to the competency of the former court to try the subsequent suit for want of pecuniary jurisdiction, s 11 will not apply.[1623]

In order to attract Explanation VIII, the decision in the former proceeding must be final and not subject to the concurrent jurisdiction of a civil court.[1624]

(b) Rules Governing Res Judicata.—The following are the principal rules as to concurrent jurisdiction:

1. Concurrent as to pecuniary limit and the subject matter—The jurisdiction of the two courts must be concurrent as regards the pecuniary limit as well as the subject matter. The rule was laid down by Sir Barnes Peacock in Edun v Bechun[1625] and it was approved by the Privy Council in Misir v Sheo Baksh.[1626] The learned Chief Justice said that there were in India many grades of courts with different pecuniary limits of jurisdiction presided over by judges whose qualification differed widely; that it would be improper that a finding as to the validity of an adoption or of a will in a petty suit in a munsiff's Court should be conclusive in a suit for a property of a large amount in a high court, and that by taking concurrent jurisdiction to mean concurrent as regards the pecuniary limit as well as the subject matter, this evil or inconvenience is avoided. In Run Bahadoor v Lucho Koer,[1627] the Privy Council said that:

> if this construction of the law were not adopted, the lowest court in India might determine finally and without appeal to the High Court, the title to the greatest estate in the Indian empire.

It is essential therefore, that the first court was a court competent to try and decide not only the particular matter in issue but also the subsequent suit in which the issue is subsequently raised.[1628]

1623. Nabin Majhi v Tela Majhi, AIR 1978 Cal 440.
1624. Kanta Devi v Surinder Kumar, AIR 1978 Del 318.
1625. Edun v Bechun, (1868) 8 WR 175.
1626. Misir v Sheo Baksh, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 439 : 9 IA 197.
1627. Run Bahadoor v Lucho Koer, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 301 : 12 IA 23, p 38.
1628. Misir v Sheo Baksh, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 439 : 9 IA 197; Gokul Mandar v Pudmanund, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 707 : (1902) 29 IA 196, p 202; Ramdayal v Jankidas, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 456; Gurpa v Subrayadu, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 65; Sheikh Hassu v Ram Kumar Singh, (1894) ILR 16 All 183; Venkat v Orsha, AIR 1921 Bom 434 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 805; Shibo Rout v Baban Rout, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 353; Hub Lal v Gulzari Lal, AIR 1927 All 297 : (1927) ILR 49 All 543, p 545; Venkatasubba Rao v Vigneswara, AIR 1928 Mad 840 : (1929) 56 Mad LJ 52; Kesharbai v Amarchand, AIR 1933 Bom 328 : (1938) ILR 57 Bom 456.

First, as to pecuniary limit—The jurisdiction of the court which decided the former suit, and that of the court in which the subsequent suit is brought, must be concurrent as regards the pecuniary limit.

A sues B in court X to recover interest due on a bond for Rs 12,000. For the defence it is alleged that the amount actually lent by A was Rs 4000, and that A was not entitled to interest on more than Rs 4000. The court finds that the amount actually lent was Rs 4000 and awards A interest on that sum only. court X is a court of which the jurisdiction is limited to suits of which the value does not exceed Rs 5000. A then sues B in a High court to recover the principal sum of Rs 12,000, alleging that that was the actual amount lent by him to B. B contends that the actual amount advanced was Rs 4,000, and that the question as to whether Rs 12,000 was lent or Rs 4,000 is res judicata. Section 11 (excluding Explanation VIII) envisages that the judgement in a former suit would operate as a res judicata if the court which decided the said suit was competent to try the same by virtue of its pecuniary jurisdiction and the subject matter to try the subsequent suit and that it is not necessary that the said court should have had territorial jurisdiction to decide the subsequent suit.[1629]

The question is not res judicata, for the jurisdiction of court X being limited to Rs 5,000, it was not a court competent to try the subsequent suit in which the amount claimed is Rs 12,000. Pecuniary jurisdiction is determined by the plaintiff's estimate of the value of his claim and if the court awards less, that does not show that the suit was brought in the wrong court.[1630] A decision given in an earlier suit which had pecuniary jurisdiction over it at the then valuation is res judicata in a later suit instituted in a court of higher jurisdiction owing to the rise in the valuation of properties.[1631]

The plaintiff however, cannot prevent a decision in a previous suit from operating as res judicata by overvaluing the second suit.[1632] Res judicata cannot be evaded if the former suit is brought in a court of inferior jurisdiction by artificially splitting up the cause of action.[1633] Where A brought two suits in a provincial small cause court for compensation in each suit for loss of one parcel and the suits were dismissed, and he subsequently brought a suit in the munsiff's court, joining together the claims in respect of both the parcels so as to bring the valuation above the Rs 500 limit, it was held that the suit was barred on the principle of res judicata.[1634] If a suit as to one parcel is dismissed in a munsiff's court, and then a suit is subsequently brought between the same parties on the same cause of action as to that parcel and several other parcels in the court of the subordinate judge, the second suit as to that one parcel will be barred by res judicata.[1635] The same principle would apply where the first suit instituted in the munsiff's court was in respect of a parcel of land and the subsequent suit brought in the subordinate judge's court related to the whole parcel, the basis of the claim in

---

1629. Church of South India Trust Assn v Telugu Church Council, AIR 1996 SC 987 : (1996) 2 SCC 520.
1630. Jay Chand v Dole Gobinda, AIR 1944 Cal 272 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 454; Lakshman v Babaji, (1883) ILR 8 Bom 31; Mahabir Singh v Behari Lal, (1891) ILR 13 All 320.
1631. Jeevantha v Hanumanthayya, AIR 1954 SC 9; Harihar Bhagat v Mossfir Pathal, AIR 1966 Pat 268; Nand Kishore v Prabhu Narain, AIR 1976 Raj 20.
1632. Teckchand v Birjabai, AIR 1942 Ngp 119 : (1942) ILR Nag 721; Tamizunnissa v Syed Mahammad, AIR 1928 All 127 : (1928) 25 All LJ 1035; Chhote Lal v Chandrabhan, AIR 1923 All 176 : (1923) ILR 45 All 59; Anthony v Vedamanickam, (1959) 1 Mad LJ 346.
1633. Yeshwant Bala Powar v Babai, AIR 1945 Bom 67 : (1945) ILR Bom 38 : (1944) 46 Bom LR 728.
1634. Mangan Lal v GIP Rly Co, AIR 1924 All 849 : (1924) 22 All LJ 745; Bhugwanbutti v Forbes, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 78; as explained in Shiba Rout v Baban Rout, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 353.
1635. Priyanath v Kali Charan, AIR 1932 Cal 162 (1932) 35 Cal WN 773; Shanker Sitaram v Balkrishna, AIR 1954 SC 352 : [1955] 1 SCR 99 : (1954) SCJ 552; Sarangapani v Venkata, AIR 1952 Mad 384 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 464.

both the suits being the same. The issue raised in the former suit would not, however, be res judicata so as to affect the portion which was not the subject matter of the first suit.[1636]

Secondly, as to subject matter—The jurisdiction of the two courts must be concurrent as regards subject matter. Thus, certain courts have no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon questions of title, though that question may be gone into incidentally in order to decide the principal question. A finding on a question of title by such courts cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit on title. This generally happens in the three following cases:

(i) Where the first court is a civil court of limited jurisdiction.—A decision of a district munsiff's court in Madras in a suit for possession will not operate as res judicata in a suit for redemption of a mortgage, for a district munsiff's Court is not competent to try a mortgage suit.[1637] An order passed by the City Civil Court, Madras under section 69A of the Transfer of Property Act is no bar to a subsequent proceeding involving the question of title since the City Civil Court has limited jurisdiction under that section.[1638]

(ii) Where the first court is a Provincial Small Cause Court.—A decision in a suit for damages instituted in a provincial small cause court (a court not competent to try a suit on title) does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit for establishment of title[1639] and this is also the case when the small cause court decree is based on an arbitrator's award.[1640] A decision in a suit for rent in a provincial small cause court (a court not competent to try a suit for possession) does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit for possession.[1641]

(iii) Where the first court is a "revenue court" and the second court is a "civil court".—A decision of a revenue court on a question of title is no bar to the trial of the same question by the ordinary civil courts, unless the revenue court is empowered by the legislature to determine questions of title so as to constitute it protanto, a civil court.[1642] The reason is that courts of revenue are generally courts of jurisdiction limited to adjudicate upon questions of rent, tenure etc.[1643] There are, however, some matters of which, the decision by a revenue court is expressly declared by the Act constituting the court to have the force of decree in a civil suit,[1644] and some as to which it is declared that the decision shall be final.[1645] In such cases, the decision of a revenue court will operate as res judicata so as to bar the trial of the same matter in a civil

---

1636. Drupad v Bindu Mowi, (1926) 43 Cal LJ 606.
1637. Subba Rao v Bhimalingam, AIR 1933 Mad 913 : (1933) 65 Mad LJ 761.
1638. Venkatasubbiah v Thirupurasundari, AIR 1965 Mad 185 : (1965) ILR 1 Mad 624.
1639. Dulare Lal v Hazari Lal, (1914) 12 All LJ 853. It is otherwise, where the first suit is tried as a regular suit: Ram Faqir v Bindeshri Singh, (1919) ILR 41 All 54.
1640. Sreemati Purnima v Nana Lal, AIR 1932 Pat 105 : (1932) ILR 11 Pat 50.
1641. Rukmini v Rayaji, AIR 1924 Bom 454 : (1924) ILR 48 Bom 541. See also the following decisions: Ramkishen v Murlidhar, AIR 1960 Pat 484; Pateshwari Parshad v Gilani, AIR 1959 P&H 420 : (1960) ILR Punj 1503.
1642. Bed Saran v Bhagat Deo, (1911) ILR 33 All 453; Bihari v Sheobalak, (1907) ILR 29 All 601; Appa Rao v Gurraju, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 859; Thakur Hammat v Mt Jhamola, AIR 1922 All 95 : (1922) 20 All LJ 340; Baru Mal v Sunder Lal, AIR 1924 All 10 : (1923) 21 All LJ 330; Sarju Prasad v Mahadeo, AIR 1932 All 483 : (1932) ILR 54 All 786; Ramamurthi v Gajapathiraju, AIR 1933 Mad 279 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 366.
1643. Khugowlee Singh v Hussein Bunkhan, (1871) 7 Bom LR 673 : 15 WR (PC) 30; Hurri Sunker v Mudeswar, (1875) 15 Bom LR 238; Rani Kishori v Raja Ram, (1904) ILR 26 All 468; Ashra v Ali Ahmad, (1904) ILR 26 All 601; Mahesh v Ranjor, (1905) ILR 27 All 163; Inayat Ali v Murad Ali, (1905) ILR 27 All 569; Dharani v Gaber, (1903) ILR 30 Cal 339; Rangayya v Ratnam, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 392; Padmalav v Lukmi Rani, (1907) 12 Cal WN 8; Asrafannessa Hemchandra, AIR 1927 Cal 216 : (1927) ILR 54 Cal 114; Mehnga Singh v Gurdial Singh, AIR 2004 P&H 93.
1644. Durga Churn v Hatem, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 252; Sheo Narain v Parmeshar, (1896) ILR 18 All 270; Kalka Prasad v Manmohan Lal, (1916) 38 ILR All 302.
1645. Mahendra v Girish Chandra, (1918) 3 Pat LJ 379.

court. When the Revenue Act bars suits claiming an alteration of shares made on a partition by a revenue court, a party to such a partition cannot sue in a civil court for an enhanced share;[1646] but, if on a revenue partition one mahal has been allotted to several co-sharers jointly, a suit to declare the rights of such co-sharers inter se is not barred, for, it in no way interferes with the revenue petition;[1647] but, when a partition made by a Revenue Court has assigned to the plaintiff lands as under proprietor, a suit for a declaration that he is a superior proprietor, is barred.[1648] A decision of a revenue court in proceedings under section 3(4) of the Madras Cultivating Tenants Protection Act, 1955, that the tenant is not in arrears of rent is not res judicata in a suit in the civil court for recovery of rent, as the revenue court is not competent to try such a suit.[1649] The Supreme Court has held in Bhagwan Dayal v Reoti Devi[1650] that the decision on a question of title by a revenue court under the Agra Tenancy Act did not operate as res judicata in a suit in a civil court which was not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the revenue court. In a case under the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901,[1651] an occupancy tenant sued in a revenue court to evict the defendant alleging that he was a sub-tenant. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendant was not a sub-tenant but probably a sharer in the occupancy. The plaintiff then sued in the civil court to eject the defendant as a trespasser, but the suit was dismissed on the ground that its object was to reverse the decision of the revenue court. This decision, it is submitted, is incorrect. The finding of the revenue court that the defendant was not a sub-tenant was final; but, it had no such jurisdiction to declare who were sharers in the occupancy, and in any event, its finding on that point was only incidental. The decision of a revenue court would not bar a subsequent proceeding though it seeks the same relief if it is under a different Act;[1652] but, it would bar a subsequent proceeding in a civil court so far as the issue decided by the revenue court is concerned,[1653] provided of course that the issue was within the competence of the revenue court. See note "Where the Court which decided the former suit is a court of exclusive jurisdiction" above. For the other cases, see footnote.[1654]

In an application made before the tenancy authorities, for possession of land, was dismissed on the ground of want of jurisdiction, subsequent civil suit against the tenant for recovery of possession of land was filed. The case was remanded by the high court, for hearing by the trial court, with a direction to refer the issue regarding tenancy to tenancy authorities. Section 11 would not be a bar to the trial court in referring issues which were to be exclusively determined by a competent authority under the Act, to that authority. Nor should there arise any such question of res judicata in the competent authority deciding those issues, when referred to by the trial court. Earlier, the mamlatdar had declined to exercise jurisdiction, holding that the Act did not apply. If an issue was referred to it by the trial court under the Act, the question of 1646. Ram Rekha v Lallu, AIR 1931 All 462 : (1931) ILR 53 All 568; Muhammad Saduq v Laute Ram, (1901) ILR 23 All 291.

---

1647. Chandra Bali v Drigpal, AIR 1931 Oudh 21 : (1931) 6 ILR Luck 419; Lal Bihari v Parkali, (1920) ILR 42 All 309.
1648. Bajrang Bahadur v Beni Madho, AIR 1932 Oudh 199 (FB) : (1932) ILR 7 Luck 716.
1649. Venkatachala v Ramachandra, AIR 1961 Mad 423; overruling Narasimha v Muthuswamy, (1958) 2 Mad LJ 216 : (1958) 71 Mad LW 521; Venkataraya v Louis, AIR 1960 Mys 209.
1650. Bhagwan Dayal v Reoti Devi, AIR 1962 SC 287 : (1962) 3 SCR 440 : (1962) 1 SCJ 343; approving Venkatarama v Venkiah, AIR 1954 Mad 788 (FB) : (1954) ILR Mad 715.
1651. Balwant Singh v Sarabjit, AIR 1927 All 70 (FB) : (1926) ILR 48 All 774.
1652. Bhartiya Hotel v UOI, AIR 1968 Pat 476.
1653. Ram Sarup v Ram Chandar, AIR 1976 P&H 246.
1654. Kedambi v Lakshmi, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 62; Balijepalli v Balijepalli, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 320; Kanhai v Durga, (1915) ILR 37 All 223; Sundar v Dinanath, (1915) ILR 37 All 280; Mulo v Ram Lal, (1920) ILR 43 All 191.

jurisdiction would not arise and there could be no question of res judicata as to jurisdiction of the mamlatdar on such reference.[1655]

Land tribunal decided the question of tenancy. Where the plea of fixity of tenure under the Kerala Land Reforms Act was taken against decision of the land tribunal, an appeal was pending. It was held that the decision had not become final because the pendency of an appeal against the same and the principles of res judicata and estoppel did not apply.[1656]

The law relating to impact of decisions of revenue authorities on the question of title and ownership of land stands settled by various authorities including the Apex Court. It has been held that entries in the revenue records do not confer title on a person whose name appears in the record of rights. The creation of Jamabandi neither created any right and title is favour of one or the other nor cancellation of Jamabandi extinguishes right and title of actual owner. The entries in the revenue records or Jamabandi have only "fiscal purpose" and no ownership is conferred by such entries.

It has been held by the Jharkhand High Court that such Revenue Authorities while deciding a mutation proceeding have been held to be not a court of law and the mutation proceeding before them are not judicial proceeding, an order passed therein are not order passed by a court of law. Therefore, provisions of section 11 of the code would not apply to such proceedings.[1657]

(iv) Where the first court is a "criminal court" and the second court is a "civil court".—Criminal proceedings are not a "suit"; hence, no finding of a Criminal Court can be res judicata in a subsequent suit. It has thus, been held, that a conviction or an acquittal in a criminal case is not conclusive in a civil suit for damages in respect of the act charged against the accused.[1658]

The principle that a decision in a criminal proceeding does not operate as res judicata in civil proceeding, or vice versa; cannot be made ipso facto and applicable to a decision under section 35 of the Advocates Act, 1961, because the nature of proceedings has been termed as quasi-judicial. The basic distinction between criminal proceedings and the proceedings under section 35 of the Act, which comes into existence as a result of a complaint is to be borne in mind. The proceedings against an accused for committing a crime is one in the name of the State in exercise of its sovereign power and in respect of breach of a public right and furthermore, duties which affect the whole community.[1659] On this principle, the finding of a criminal court that A assaulted or abducted B is not res judicata in a suit for damages against A for assault or abduction;[1660] nor is an acquittal a bar to a civil suit against the accused.[1661] A conviction by a criminal court does not bar an advocate from challenging the order in disciplinary proceedings before the civil court under the Advocates Act.[1662]

An application was filed by an accused that the complaint petition filed against her without obtaining requisite sanction under section 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was bad in law as the offence was committed outside India and she was not a citizen of India. The application of the accused was dismissed. Thereafter, she filed another petition raising the

---

1655. Pandurang Ramchandra Mandlik v Shantabai Ramchandra Ghatge, AIR 1989 SC 2240 : (1989) 2 SCC 627.
1656. Upperi Janki v Balakrishnan Nambiyar, AIR 1981 Ker 52.
1657. Jagdeo Mahto v Commr North Chotanagpur Division, AIR 2009 Jhar 152 (DB).
1658. Bishonath v Huro, (1886) 5 WR 27; Doorga v Doorga, (1866) 6 WR Civ Ref 26.
1659. Magraj Kala v Kjadimal, AIR 1994 Raj 11.
1660. Ali Buksh v Shaikh, (1869) 12 WR 477; Ram Lal v Tula Ram, (1882) ILR 4 All 97. See also section 43 of the Evidence Act, 1872.
1661. Keshab v Manirudin, (1908) 1 Cal WN 501.
1662. Adi Pherozshah v HM Seervai, AIR 1971 SC 385 : (1971) 1 SCR 863 : (1970) 2 SCC 484.

contention that the order taking cognizance was bad in law. The Supreme Court held in the case that the second petition filed by her against the order taking cognizance cannot be dismissed on the ground of res judicata. The principles analogous to res judicata. The principles analogous to res judicata have no application with regard to criminal cases. It was observed that where jurisdictional issue is raised, save and except for certain categories of cases, the same may be permitted to be raised at any stage of the proceedings.[1663]

The High Court of Bombay has held that the judgment of a civil court may in a proper case be admissible in evidence in a criminal proceeding between the same parties. Thus, where A charged B with criminal breach of trust in respect of certain items, and it appeared that all those items had been dealt with by the civil court and the contention of the accused with reference to all of them had been found to be correct by that court, it was held that the judgment of the civil court was admissible in evidence in the criminal proceedings.[1664]

2. Competency of the former court to be determined as on the date of the "former suit" and not as on the date of the "subsequent suit"[1665]—The words "court competent to try such subsequent suit" refer to the jurisdiction of the court at the time when the first suit was brought. If at that time such court would have been competent to try the subsequent suit had it been then brought, the decision of such court would operate as res judicata, although on a subsequent date, by a rise in the value of the property, that court had ceased to be a proper court, so far as regards its pecuniary jurisdiction, to take cognizance of a suit relating to that very property. The leading case on the subject is Gopi Nath v Bhugwat.[1666] In that case, a suit was brought in the year 1860 to recover certain property of which the value at that time was less than Rs 1,000; therefore, the proper court to try it was that of the munsiff. A second suit was afterwards brought in the year 1880 between the same parties in the court of the subordinate judge to recover the same property which had then risen in value and became worth more than Rs 1,000. The matter directly and substantially in issue in both the suits was the same, and the question arose whether the decision of the munsiff in the first suit operated as res judicata in the second suit. It was contended that as the munsiff could not have tried the second suit in consequence of the value of the property being more than Rs 1,000, his decision could not have the effect of res judicata; but, it was held that the decision operated as res judicata, for if the second suit was instituted in the year 1860, that is, at the time when the first suit was brought, the munsiff's court would have been competent to try it. Mitter J ruled:

> The reasonable construction of the words "in a court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit," seems to us to be that it must refer to the jurisdiction of the court at the time when the first suit was brought, that is to say, if the court which tried the first suit was competent to try the subsequent suit if then brought, the decision of such court would be conclusive under s 13 [of the Code of 1882], although on a subsequent date, by a rise in the value of such property or from any other cause the said court ceased to be the proper court, so far as pecuniary jurisdiction is concerned, to take cognizance of a suit relating to that property.

1663. Fatma Bibi Ahmad Patel v State of Gujarat, AIR 2008 SC 2392 : (2008) 6 SCC 789.
1664. Re Markur, (1914) ILR 41 Bom 1.
1665. Tekchand Kapurchand v Birzabai, AIR 1942 Ngp 119 : (1942) ILR Nag 721; Gopi Nath v Bhugwan, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 697; Raghunath v Issur Chunder, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 153; Kunj v Raman, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 494; Mohendra Nath v Shamsinnessa, (1915) 19 Cal WN 1280.
1666. Gopi Nath v Bhugwat, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 697; Nasib Khan v Kutubiunissa, AIR 1941 All 18, (1940) ILR All 691; Sarupa v Khem Lal, AIR 1928 Lah 929 : (1929) ILR 10 Lah 528; Lalmohan v Ramlakshmi, AIR 1932 Cal 271 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 636; Debendra v Pramada, AIR 1933 Cal 879 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 810.

The same view has been taken by the High Court of Madras.[1667] It has, however, been held by the court that the augmentation of a pecuniary claim by accrual of interest is not similar to a rise in the market-value of a property, and that though in the latter case the decision in the prior suit may operate as res judicata, it cannot in the former case;[1668] but, it will operate as res judicata, if the claim for interest is not bona fide and is clearly untenable.[1669]

In deciding the competency of the court (which had decided the former suit) to try the subsequent suit, regard must be had to the jurisdiction of the court on the date of the former suit. Suit property was valued in 1973 at Rs 60,000. No evidence was produced to show as to what was the value in 1960. Having regard to the steady rise of prices of property, it could not be assumed that the property would be more than Rs 50,000 in value in 1960. In the circumstances, the decision in the earlier suit was held to have been given by a court of competent jurisdiction.[1670]

3. Competency of the trial court determination, not of the appellate or execution court.—It is the competency of the trial court which determined the former "suit" that must be looked to, and not that of the appellate court in which that suit was ultimately decided on appeal[1671] or of the executing court[1672] A suit is instituted in a munsiff's court. An appeal from the decree in that suit is preferred to a district court. A subsequent suit relating to the same matter in issue is brought into in a district court. The decision in the first suit cannot operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit, for though the district court that heard the appeal may have jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit, the munsiff's court, that is the court which decided the former suit, is not a court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit.

Though an appeal lies from a decision of a Talukdari Settlement Officer to the district court, yet the decision does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in the district court, for a settlement officer is not a court competent to try a civil suit; he is merely an administrative officer.[1673]

4. Competence of court when there is a court with preferential jurisdiction.—A court does not cease to be a "court of competent jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit," if its inability to entertain it arises not from incompetence, but from the existence of another court with a preferential jurisdiction.[1674] Thus, a finding by a munsiff in a suit for possession under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877 (Now Act 47 to 1963), instituted in his court that the plaintiff was wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant, in res judicata on the issue as to wrongful dispossession in a subsequent suit brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant for damages for wrongful dispossession in a court of small causes. When a suit under section 9

1667. Venkatachalam v Aiyamperumal, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 702.
1668. Giriya v Sabapathy, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 65.
1669. Velayuda v Sundara, AIR 1926 Mad 829 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 630.
1670. MH Ravindranath v MI Hanumantha Rao, AIR 1968 Mad 177.
1671. Iopomidhee v Sreeputty, (1880) ILR 5 Cal 832; Bharasi v Sarat Chunder, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 415; Shibo Rout v Baban Rout, (1908) ILR 85 Cal 353; Malubhai v Sarangji, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 220; Valeswara Muthukrishna, (1911) ILR 21 Mad 57; Amarsangji v Deepsangji, AIR 1925 Bom 241 : (1925) 49 ILR Bom 442; Kammu v Musummat Rahiman, AIR 1922 All 445 : (1922) ILR 44 All 712; Kapuria v Ganga Devi, AIR 1933 Lah 646 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 437; dissenting from Sahibzadi v Mahammad, AIR 1926 Lah 603 : (1927) ILR 8 Lah 15; Kochukutty v Bhavani, AIR 1954 TC 169 : (1953) ILR TC 943.
1672. Official Assignee of Madras v Arya Dikshithar, AIR 1925 Mad 688 : (1925) 48 Mad LJ 530.
1673. Malubhai v Sursangi, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 220; Amarsangji v Deepsangji, AIR 1925 Bom 241 : (1925) ILR 49 Bom 442.
1674. Ghulappa v Raghavendra, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 38; Raj Simhadri v Ramchandrudu, (1902) ILR 27 Mad 63; Bodku v Mohan Singh, (1917) ILR 39 All 717; Hinga v Ali Sher, AIR 1952 All 628 : (1952) ILR 1 All 620.

of the Specific Relief Act, 1877 (Now Act 47 to 1963) is dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession within six months of the institution of the suit, the finding operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit on title on the question whether the suit is barred by the special limitation under Article 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.[1675]

5. Both the suits are in revenue court, but appeals lie to different authorities.—A decision on a matter directly and substantially in issue in a suit tried by a revenue court may operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit brought in the same court though the character of the suits may be such that in one case an appeal lies to the commissioner, and in the other, to a district court. The fact that in the two suits appeals lie to different courts does not affect the application of the rule of res judicata.[1676]

(i) Explanation II.—Under the Code of 1882, the high courts of Bombay[1677] and Madras[1678] held that a decision in a suit in which no second appeal was allowed by law, such as suits of a nature cognizable by court of small causes when the amount or value of the subject matter does not exceed Rs 500, could not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in which appeal was allowed. The High Court of Calcutta dissented, holding that a decision in a suit could operate as res judicata, notwithstanding that no second appeal was allowed by law in that suit.[1679] Explanation II affirms the view taken by the High Court of Calcutta that the competence of a court does not depend on the right of appeal from the decision of such court.[1680]

(ii) Judgment of court not competent to deliver it.—A judgment delivered by a court not competent to deliver it cannot operate as res judicata,[1681] since such a judgment is not of any effect.[1682] It is a well-settled position in law that if a decision has been rendered between the same parties by a court, which had no jurisdiction to entertain and decide the suit, does not operate as res judicata between the same parties in subsequent proceedings.[1683] The context, scheme and terms of the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960, show that the rent controller's decision on questions of title, is not final. Hence, that decision cannot be res judicata;[1684] and it has accordingly been held that a decree passed by a court in the mofussil with respect to lands situated within the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court is not res judicata in a suit in the High Court of Calcutta.[1685] In the absence of a certificate from the collector, a civil court has no jurisdiction to try a suit relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue made by the government, and a judgment of a civil court in such a suit without a certificate under section 6 of the Pensions Act cannot operate as res judicata.[1686] When a suit was brought in a court in district X on a mortgage of property situated in district Y and a decree was passed without any adjudication

---

1675. Hridoy Nath v Probodhchandra, AIR 1933 Cal 923 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 1171.
1676. Beni Madho v Indar Sahai, (1910) ILR 32 All 67.
1677. Govind v Dhonbarav, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 104.
1678. Avanasi v Nachammal, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 195.
1679. Rai Charan Ghose v Kumud Mohan, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 571; Bhuqwanbutti v Forbes, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 78.
1680. Ram Faqir v Bindeshri Singh, (1919) ILR 41 All 54.
1681. Neelkanta v Kesavan, AIR 1956 TC 161 (FB) : (1956) ILR TC 87); Bhai Shakri v Babu Singhji, AIR 1958 Bom 30 : (1957) ILR Bom 786; Suraj Bai v Sadashiv, AIR 1958 MP 100; Rabi Ram v Dalip Singh, AIR 1972 P&H 390; UOI v Pramod Gupta (D) by LRs, AIR 2005 SCW 4645 : (2005) (8) JT 203.
1682. Tara Chand v Misrimal, AIR 1970 Raj 53 : (1969) ILR 19 Raj 412.
1683. Himatrao Ukha Mali v Popat Devram Patil, AIR 1999 Bom 10; Tulajappa v Subhas, AIR 2003 Kant 118.
1684. LIC v India Automobiles, AIR 1991 SC 884 : (1990) 4 SCC 286.
1685. Administrator General v Sulajini Debi, AIR 1962 Cal 616.
1686. Oudh Narain v Sukh Dulari, AIR 1950 All 402; Lakmi Chand v Madho Rao, AIR 1930 All 681 : (1930) ILR 52 All 868.

a the question of jurisdiction, the decree did not operate as res judicata so as to bar a suit to set aside the decree for want of jurisdiction.[1687] (See in this connection, section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872). For this purpose, there is no distinction, so far as chartered high courts are concerned, between cases where a court has no jurisdiction at all to try a suit and cases where it cannot exercise jurisdiction unless leave to sue has been obtained under clause 12 of the charter. Therefore, a judgment delivered by a chartered high court in a suit which it has no jurisdiction to try unless leave to sue has been obtained, cannot operate as res judicata, if leave to sue was not obtained.[1688] A question of law which does not require a fresh investigation into facts may be allowed to be raised at a later stage of a proceeding, but that is subject to the qualification that the question is not concluded by a decision between the same parties.[1689] The observations or conclusions, however, it may be called, contained in a proceeding, if directly opposed to the mandatory provisions contained in Sick Textiles Undertaking Act, cannot be accorded in sanctity or finality, or given any binding force so as to constitute either estoppel or constructive res judicata. Such illegal directions directly opposed to the statute, will be void ab initio.[1690]

The Supreme Court has held that an order passed by a court without jurisdiction would be a nullity. It will be coram non judice. It is non est in the eye of law. Principles of res judicata would not apply in such cases.[1691]

Where a court assumes jurisdiction erroneously and in disregard of statutory provisions, the decision will still be res judicata if the party affected does not raise any objection.[1692]

The rule embodied in section 11 applies to declaratory suits also and therefore, a decision in a prior suit instituted in court A cannot bar a subsequent suit for declaration in court B if court A was not competent to try it. Hence, section 43 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877 (Now Act 47 to 1963), which is general in its terms must be read subject to the conditions enumerated in section 11.[1693] Where a contract provided for suits thereon being instituted in a specified court and contrary to its terms, a suit was instituted by a party in a different court and that resulted in a decree, it was held that it would not operate as res judicata in a suit subsequently filed in the court specified in the agreement.[1694] It is submitted that this decision is erroneous. When a suit is instituted in a court different from that specified in the agreement, that would be a ground for taking action under section 10 of the CPC; but, where that is not done and the suit is decreed, the decree is valid and will operate as res judicata as the court derives its jurisdiction from the CPC, and not from an agreement of parties.[1695]

(iii) Decision on a question of jurisdiction.—The principle of res judicata is a procedural provision. A jurisdictional question if wrongly decided would not attract the principle of res judicata. When an order is passed without jurisdiction, the same becomes a nullity. When an

---

1687. Raghubir v Hiralal, AIR 1931 All 454 : (1931) ILR 53 All 560.
1688. Abdul Kadir v Dolanbibi, (1913) ILR 37 Bom 563.
1689. Rajendra Jha v Presiding Officer, (1984) Supp SCC 520.
1690. National Textiles Corp v Bank of Madurai Ltd, AIR 1998 Mad 113.
1691. Chandrabhai K Bhoir v Krishna Arjun Bhoir, AIR 2009 SC 1645 : (2009) 2 SCC 315 : (2009) 1 Civil Court C 295 (SC); Raju Ramsing Vasave v Mahesh Deorao Bhivapurkar, (2009) 1 Civil CC 561 (SC).
1692. Sivanathanu Pillai v Lakshmi Rajamma, AIR 1981 Ker 214.
1693. Veeranna v Sayamma, AIR 1958 AP 363 : (1958) ILR AP 281.
1694. Gulab Chand v Anandan, AIR 1954 Mad 11.
1695. See notes under heading "Contract providing for place of suing," under section 10 and "agreement as to choice of court," under section 20.

order is a nullity, it cannot be supported by invoking the procedural principles like estoppel, waiver or res judicata.[1696]

The law is well-settled that a court which has no jurisdiction to try a cause cannot by its own erroneous decision confer on itself competence to decide it, and its decision on the question of jurisdiction cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.[1697] The court which has no jurisdiction in law cannot be conferred with the jurisdiction by applying principles of res judicata. It is well-settled that there can be no estoppel on a pure question of law.[1698]

Decision of rent controller under Andhra Pradesh Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act (15 of 1960), section 8(5) and 20 (iv) in a petition under section 8(5) of the Act, on jurisdictional facts, is not conclusive and final and does not operate as res judicata.[1699] "In respect of reliefs that can be granted by the Tribunals under the Rent Act, their decisions are final. But in respect of a relief which cannot be granted under the provisions of the Rent Act and where questions are decided incidentally, they cannot be considered as final so as to oust the jurisdiction of civil court nor do such findings operate as res judicata as the decisions are not final."[1700] Conversely, the decision relating to jurisdiction cannot be said to constitute the bar of res judicata where the court by an erroneous interpretation of a statute holds that it has no jurisdiction.[1701] It is submitted that the decision of the High Court of Madhya Pradesh[1702] to the contrary requires reconsideration; but, where a court would have jurisdiction over the subject matter if certain facts existed, a decision given in a previous litigation between the parties as to the existence of those facts would be binding on them in a subsequent suit.[1703] The position is the same when a party alleges facts when if true, would give jurisdiction to the court, and they are not denied by the opposite party and a decree is passed. In that case, the question of jurisdiction must be held to have been decided by implication and the decree would be constructively res judicata;[1704] and so, where two suits in ejectment were filed in the small cause court, Calcutta, with reference to two different portions of a house and that court would have paid pecuniary jurisdiction to try them only if the two portions were demised under distinct leases and both the suits were decree, a plea by the tenant in a subsequent suit that both the portions were demised under one lease was held to be barred as res judicata.[1705]

In applying the principles of constructive res judicata, a distinction should be made between the decisions given by ordinary courts and those given by tribunals with limited jurisdiction.

1696. Ashok Leyland Ltd v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2004 SC 2836 : AIR 2004 SCW 1001 : (2004) 3 SCC 1. See also Management of Sonepat Co-op Sugar Mills Ltd v Ajit Singh, AIR 2005 SC 1050 : AIR 2005 SCW 1005 : (2005) 3 SCC 232; Dwarka Prasad Agarwal (D) by LRs v BD Agarwal, AIR 2003 SC 2686 : AIR 2003 SCW 3346 : (2003) 6 SCC 230; Sri Ramnik Vallabhdas Madhvani v Taraben Pravinlal Madhvani, AIR 2004 SC 1084 : AIR 2003 SCW 6839 : (2003) 9 Scale 412 : (2004) 1 SCC 497; Chief Justice of AP v LVA Dikshitulu, AIR 1979 SC 193 : (1979) 2 SCC 34 : (1978) LIC 1672.
1697. Krishna v Ramachandra, AIR 1956 Bom 268; Panduranga v MRT Nagpur, AIR 1974 Bom 20 : (1974) ILR Bom 816; Rajendra Kumar v District Judge, Jaunpur, AIR 1996 All 78.
1698. Isabella Johnson v MA Susai, (1991) 1 SCC 494.
1699. Jeeth Kaur v P Kondalamma, AIR 1983 AP 219 (DB). [See also C Raghunandan v K Nageshwar Rao, AIR 2009 AP 205 : (2009) 6 Andh LD 257 : (2009) 5 All LT 584].
1700. Jeeth Kaur v P Kondalamma, AIR 1983 AP 219 (DB).
1701. Mathura Prasad v Dossibai, AIR 1971 SC 2355 : (1970) 1 SCC 613 : (1970) 3 SCR 830 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 492; Vrajlal v Jadavji, AIR 1972 Guj 148 : (1972) 13 Guj LR 597.
1702. Piarelal v Bhagwati Prasad, AIR 1969 MP 35.
1703. Murarilal v Madanlal, AIR 1952 P&H 265.
1704. Jnanchand v Jugal Kishore, AIR 1960 Cal 331; UOI v Siddique Ahmed, AIR 1961 Cal 92 (FB); Benares Ice Factory v Sukulal, AIR 1961 Cal 422.
1705. Newton v Official Trustee, AIR 1954 Cal 506.

While ordinary courts would have jurisdiction to decide whether they have jurisdiction to try a cause, even if in the result they should come to the conclusion that they have not, tribunals are competent to decide the question of their jurisdiction only if they are authorised.[1706] If a tribunal for the purpose of deciding the question relating to its jurisdiction finds it necessary to decide another matter that matter, does not become a matter of its exclusive jurisdiction nor does it operate as res judicata.[1707] Where there is inherent lack of jurisdiction in the tribunal, even a failure to raise the objection before such tribunal is by itself no bar against raising it in a subsequent writ petition.[1708]

(iv) Judgment obtained by fraud or collusion.—A judgment obtained by fraud or collusion[1709] cannot operate as res judicata (Evidence Act, 1872, section 44). Fraud is an extrinsic collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of courts of justice. Lord Coke says, > it avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal.[1710]

Where a decree is impeached on the ground of fraud, the fraud alleged must be actual positive fraud, a meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the court in ignorance of the real facts of the case, and the obtaining of the decree by that contrivance. The mere fact that a decree has been obtained by perjured and false evidence is no ground for setting it aside on the ground of fraud.[1711] Mere negligence on the part of the manager of a joint Hindu family in conducting the suit would not ordinarily be a ground for excluding the operation of res judicata; but gross negligence may in such a case be evidence of fraud or collusion.[1712] It seems to us that when a finding as to title to immovable property is rendered by a court of small causes res judicata cannot be pleaded as a bar in a subsequent regular civil suit for the determination or enforcement of any right or interest in an immovable property. In order to operate as res judicata, the finding must be one disposing off a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and the issue should have been heard and finally decided by the court trying such suit. A matter which is collaterally or incidentally in issue for the purpose of deciding the matter which is directly in issue in the case cannot be made the basis of a plea of res judicata. It has long been held that a question of title in a small cause suit can be regarded as incidental only to the substantial issue in the suit and cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in which the question of title is directly raised.[1713] The doctrine of res judicata must however be applied to co-defendants with great care and caution. The reason is that fraud is the extrinsic collateral act, which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of courts of justice. If a party obtains a decree from the court by practicing fraud or collusion he cannot be allowed to say that the matter is res judicata and cannot be reopened. There can 1706. Venkatachala v Ramachandra, AIR 1961 Mad 423.

---

1707. Sanyasi Prasad Rao v Lakshmayya, AIR 1967 AP 143.
1708. Balbir Singh v Sikh Gurdwaras, Judicial Commr, AIR 1967 P&H 272 : (1967) ILR 2 Punj 494. See notes on "Decisions of tribunals on question of jurisdiction" under section 9.
1709. Banzilal v Dhapo, (1902) ILR 24 All 242; Kunheema Umma v P Balakrishnan, AIR 1967 Ker 97.
1710. Duchess of Kingstone's, case 2 Smith's LC 7, 13th Edn, pp 641, 651; Nistarini Dassi v Nundo Lal, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 891, p 908; Fattma Bai v Dy Custodian General, AIR 1970 Del 160 : (1970) 72 Punj LR 113.
1711. Janki Kuar v Lachmi, (1915) ILR 37 All 535; Mahomed Golab v Mahomed Sulliman, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 612, p 619; Nand Kumar v Ramjiban, (1914) ILR 41 Cal 990; Chattu Singh v Rai Radha, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 187; Ram Ratan v Bhuri, (1916) ILR 38 All 7; Re Goculdas Odharji, AIR 1924 Bom 100 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 893; Muktamal v Ramachandra, AIR 1927 Cal 84 : (1926) 31 Cal WN 258; Kunja Bihari v Krishnadhan, (1940) ILR 2 Cal 477 : (1940) 44 Cal WN 912; Hasim Ali v Hamidi Begum, AIR 1942 Cal 180 : (1941) 46 Cal WN 561, p 590 : (1941) 74 Cal LJ 261, p 303; Besdwanand Gir v Shatanand, AIR 1942 All 302.
1712. PR Nallathambi v Raghavan, AIR 1973 Mad 25 : (1972) 2 Mad LJ 535.
1713. Gangabai v Chhabubai, (1982) 1 SCC 494.

also be no question of res judicata in a case where signs of fraud or collusion are transparently pregnant from the facts on record. Therefore, in applying the doctrine of res judicata between co-defendants or co-plaintiffs care must, of necessity, be taken by the court to see that there must in fact be a conflict of interests between the co-defendants or the co-plaintiffs concerned and it is necessary to decide the conflict as in order to give relief which the plaintiff in the suit, claimed and, the question must have been directly and substantially in issue and was finally decided therein.[1714]

It has been held regularly by the Supreme Court that the correctness of a judicial decision has no bearing upon the question whether or not it operates as res judicata. This position was reiterated in R Unnikrishnan v VK Mahanudevan[1715] as well. In this case the Supreme Court further clarified that the matter in issue of fact decided in an earlier proceeding by a competent court must in any subsequent litigation between the same parties be recorded as finally decided and cannot be reopened. That principle extends also to mixed questions of law and fact determined in earlier proceedings between the same parties which cannot be reopened in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties. It was also held that the only exception to res judicata is "fraud" that vitiates the decision and renders it a nullity in the eye of the law.

(v) Court of limited jurisdiction: Explanation VIII.—Courts such as the small cause courts and courts with limited pecuniary jurisdiction are courts of limited jurisdiction. Before Explanation VIII was added in the section by the Amendment Act, 1976, the section required that the court which decided the former suit or the suit in which a particular issue has been subsequently raised must have been a court competent to try the subsequent suit or the suit in which the issue in question has been subsequently raised. The view till now held was that the word "suit" in the expression "such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised" must be whole of the suit and not a part of it or any issue.[1716] If a suit was filed before a court of limited pecuniary jurisdiction and was decided by that court, Explanation VIII to section 11 of the CPC would be attracted.[1717] Explanation VIII now provides that if an issue has been heard and finally decided by a court of limited jurisdiction having jurisdiction to try such an issue, the finding on such issue will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit although such court of limited jurisdiction was not competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has subsequently been raised. The legislature has thus stepped in to extend the applicability of the section and to prefer the "liberal" instead of the "literal" interpretation of the word "suit".

Section 11 is not exhaustive of res judicata. The application of the doctrine is not restricted to the CPC but extends to all litigation including industrial cases. The main provision of section 11 is to be read in conjunction with Explanation VIII.

In the case of misconduct of a workman, the Management sought permission under section 33(2)(b) of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 for his dismissal. However, the domestic enquiry against the workman was set aside by the Industrial Tribunal. Thus, in the said proceeding the Tribunal decided the issue of misconduct of the workman on merit. Subsequently, the dismissal was challenged by the workman under section 10 of the Act. It was held by the Karnataka High Court that the issue of misconduct as decided earlier was substantive and cannot be treated as incidental. The findings of the proceeding under section 33 having not been challenged, attained finality and as such the same cannot be raised

---

1714. Mahboob Sahab v Syyad Ismail, (1995) 3 SCC 693.
1715. R Unnikrishnan v VK Mahanudevan, AIR 2014 SC 1201 : (2014) 4 SCC 434 : (2014) 1 SCR 350.
1716. Gulab Bai v Manphool Bai, AIR 1962 SC 214.
1717. Sulochana Amma v Narayanan Nair, AIR 1993 SCW 3792 : (1994) 2 SCC 14.

and the same issue cannot be tried in a subsequent proceeding. The principle of res judicata is attracted.[1718]

The expression "courts of limited jurisdiction" occurring in Explanation VIII to section 11 means courts other than ordinary civil courts. Such Courts are also courts of exclusive jurisdiction in respect of matters they are to try. But all findings of such courts of limited jurisdiction will not operate as res judicata. Only those findings which that court had exclusive jurisdiction to render would operate as res judicata. Thus, it was held that Motor Accident claims Tribunal in a claim petition filed under section 166 of the M.V. Act did not have jurisdiction to decide the dispute regarding succession certificate. In that view of the matter such decision would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit.[1719]

[s 11.26.2.5] Condition V : Matter Must have been Heard and Finally Decided in "Former" Suit

(a) Decision May be Actual or Implict.—"Res judicata" by its very words means a matter on which the court has exercised its judicial mind and has after argument and consideration come to a decision on a contested matter.[1720] The section requires that there should be a final decision.[1721] The expression "heard and finally decided" in section 11 means a matter on which the court had exercised its judicial mind and has after argument and consideration came to a decision on a contested matter. It is essential that it should have been heard and finally decided. What operates as res judicata is the product of what is fundamental to the decision but it cannot be ramified or expended by logical extension.[1722] If a dismissal of a prior suit was on the ground affecting the maintainability of the suit, any finding in the judgement adverse to the defendant would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit; but, if dismissal of the suit was on account of extinguishment of the cause of action or any other similar cause, a decision made in the suit on a vital issue involved therein would operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties.[1723] Thus, where in the judgment and decree in the former suit, it is stated that it is to be subject to a decision of a higher court, the decision is not final one;[1724] or when the former suit is dismissed on the grounds of limitation, the question of title raised therein cannot be said to have been finally decided.[1725] Where the question in issue was whether the suit properties were ancestral, a decision in the negative in an earlier suit was held to be not res judicata as the court expressly stated that the result would be the same even if that issue were to be answered in the affirmative.[1726] The decision may not be res judicata, if what was decided was "incidentally" and "substantially" in issue, even if some sort of identity exists between the controversies raised at two different stages. Decision in an ejectment suit would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit for the redemption of a mortgage. In the earlier suit, where the claim for ejectment was based on rent note, the only "matter" which

---

1718. Management of Indian Aluminium Co Ltd v S Nagaiah, AIR 2009 (NOC) 2004 (KAR) : 2009 (3) AIR Kar R 147 (DB) : ILR 2009 Kar 1902.
1719. Bhagwandas Yadav v Rohit Tiwari, AIR 2010 (NOC) 589 (MP).
1720. Gur Prasad v Gur Prasad, AIR 1944 Oudh 321; Jenkins v Robertson, (1867) 1 HL SC App 147; STR Pillai v Dhanalakshmi, AIR 1972 Mad 190.
1721. Parsotam Gir v Narabada Gir, (1899) ILR 21 All 505 : 26 IA 175.
1722. Pandurang Ram Chandra Mandlik v Shanti Bai Ram Chandra Ghatge, (1989) Supp 2 SCC 627.
1723. Pawan Kumar Gupta v Rochi Ram Nagdeo, (1999) 2 LRI 598.
1724. Chandra Singh v Midnapore Zemindary Co, AIR 1942 PC 8 : (1942) ILR 2 Cal 1.
1725. Har Swarup v Anand Swarup, AIR 1942 All 410 : (1942) ILR All 624. See also Ajai Verma v Ram Bharosa, AIR 1951 All 794 (FB).
1726. Durga Das v Rodi, AIR 1953 P&H 103 : (1954) ILR Punj 26; Muhabanoo v Thoma, (1955) ILR TC 1071.

could be said to be "directly and substantially in issue" was non-payment of rent. Merely because in the earlier suit, it was held that the present defendant mortgagee was entitled to legally claim payment of rent from the present plaintiff mortgagors and the suit was decreed for non-payment of rent, it cannot be said that the legality or validity of the claim to interest was in issue, or that the question was "decided".[1727] The revenue court, exercising authority under the relevant Act, can be said to be a court of limited jurisdiction within the meaning of section 11, Explanation VIII. The revenue court is vested with the jurisdiction over question relating to the existence or otherwise of the relationship of landlord and tenant, as to the status, as to the terms on which he held the tenancy and similar questions. The revenue court must be held to be competent to decide such issues. A decision by the revenue court on these issues, which is within its competence, will certainly operate as res judicata in view of Explanation VIII to section 11 of the CPC.[1728] The expression "Court of limited jurisdiction" covers civil courts also.[1729]

Plea of res judicata should not be allowed for the first time in first appeal. It is not pure law.[1730]

A question of fairness of price of a property arose in a case arising out of an agreement for sale of property. The Division Bench of the high court concluded the findings, which were confirmed by the Supreme Court, wherein it was held that this question cannot be raised again in subsequent proceedings.[1731] Property in the former suit for redemption was a part of the property in a subsequent suit for partition. The findings in the previous suit was to the effect that the plaintiff, who claimed by virtue of sale in his favour, had acquired no right to property in as much as the sale was not supported by legal necessity. This finding, though given by a court not competent to try the subsequent suit (for want of pecuniary jurisdiction) operates as res judicata.[1732] In a Patna case, the trial court had no pecuniary jurisdiction; but, the final decree was passed on second appeal and, throughout (up to second appeal) the losing party never raised any objection with regard to pecuniary jurisdiction of the trial court. It was held that the decree was res judicata and it was not non-permissible for the party who had lost in all the courts to argue that the trial court had no jurisdiction.[1733] One of the tests is to ascertain if the party aggrieved by the findings could challenge it. Observation made by the court, when there was no pleading nor evidence, could not operate as res judicata.[1734] Where the issue of res judicata was neither raised by the parties nor framed by the trial court, when the appellate court suo motu invoked and applied the principles of res judicata, it was held as not proper and the court was found to have no jurisdiction to answer the issue of res judicata, if it was not raised by the parties.[1735] The mere fact that a matter directly and substantially in issue in a suit was directly and substantially in issue in a former suit, is not sufficient to constitute the matter res judicata; it is also essential that it should have been heard and finally decided. This does not mean that there should be an actual finding on the issue in question; it is sufficient if the decree

---

1727. Bharosilal v Shiladevi, AIR 1989 MP 122.
1728. Saraswathi v Muthu Kumaraswamy, AIR 1990 NOC 66 (Mad).
1729. PVN Devki Amma v PK Kunti Raman Nair, AIR 1980 Ker 230.
1730. Ram Nagendra Tiwary v Jagadamba Vinal, AIR 1984 Pat 316.
1731. KM Madavkrishanan v SR Swami, AIR 1995 Mad 318.
1732. Kumarmoni Sa v Himachal Sahu, AIR 1981 Ori 177.
1733. Ram Swarath Singh v Mithila Sharan Singh, AIR 1983 Pat 110 (DB).
1734. Ramesh Chandra v Shri Charan Dass, AIR 1991 SC 264 : 1990 Supp SCC 633.
1735. Kalawati Kotla v Shokilal, AIR 2013 Chh 12.

necessarily involves a finding of the issue.[1736] Unless there is such a finding, the question of res judicata does not arise. An assumption or inference that a finding is involved in the judgment or decree, is not permissible.[1737] In other words, what operates as res judicata is the ratio or what is fundamental to the decision.[1738] It has thus been held that an issue may be res judicata if the judgment of the appellate court shows that the issue was treated as material and was decided, although the decree passed merely affirms the decree of the lower court which did not deal with the issue;[1739] and the bar has been held to operate even with respect to a finding on an issue on which the parties had gone to trial without protest.[1740]

Where a court records findings on several issues, all of them will be res judicata if the judgment is based on all of them, but it must appear from the judgment that the findings are necessary for the decision.[1741] In Vithal Yaswant v Shikandar Khan Mutumukhtan,[1742] it has been held by the Supreme Court that when a court bases its decision, the decision on each one of those points would be sufficient for the ultimate decision, the decision on each one of those points would be res judicata. Where the decision of a court rests on alternative findings, all of them would be res judicata.[1743] It has been held that the findings given by a court on the merits after it holds that it has no jurisdiction over the cause cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.[1744] Likewise, where a former suit has been dismissed without contest but on a compromise and that compromise expressly states that the dismissal was without adjudication of the issues involved in the suit, the dismissal does not bar a subsequent suit on the ground of res judicata.[1745] On the same reasoning, where a writ application under Article 226 is rejected on the ground that the matter is one which should be tried in a suit, any expression of opinion on the merits of the case thereafter would be obiter and not res judicata.[1746] The finality spoken of in this section has nothing to do with the finality contemplated by Article 133 of the Constitution because although an order may not be a final order for the purposes of Article 133, it may still operate as res judicata on the ground that questions sought to be agitated in a later proceeding had either been decided or ought to have been decided in the earlier proceeding.[1747]

In dealing with questions under the present head it is important to note:

(i) that if a decree is specific, and is at variance with a statement in the judgment, regard must be had to the decree, in the judgment;[1748]

1736. Guduru Ramarayudu v Mallela Makikya Rao, AIR 1946 Mad 372; Sitla Sahai v Gouri Nath, AIR 1942 Pat 477; Raja Chattar Singh v Diwan Roshan Singh, AIR 1946 Ngp 277 : (1946) ILR Nag 159; Soorjomonee Dasee v Suddanund, (1874) 12 Bom LR 304 : IA Sup Vol 212; Ram Krishna v Vithal, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 89; Apurba v Shyama, (1919) 24 Cal WN 223; Nikunja Bihari v Jathindranath, AIR 1956 Cal 613; Jiut Ram v Jagarnath Ram, AIR 1956 Pat 489.
1737. Hayatuddin v Abdul Gani, AIR 1976 Bom 23.
1738. Laxmichand v Ramkumar, AIR 1967 Raj 272.
1739. Midnapur Zamindary Co Ltd v Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1924 PC 144 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 631 : 51 IA 293.
1740. Madhavan v Kumaran, AIR 1952 TC 383 : (1952) ILR TC 175.
1741. Laxman v Saraswathi, AIR 1961 Bom 218.
1742. Vithal Yaswant v Shikandar Khan Mutumukhtan, AIR 1963 SC 385.
1743. Lakshman Prakash v CIT, AIR 1963 All 172 (FB) : (1962) ILR 2 All 790 : (1962) All LJ 938.
1744. Chandra Singh v Executive Engineer, AIR 1961 Assam 148; Damodhar Rao v Bhima Rao, AIR 1965 Mys 290.
1745. Girjanand v Bhagwan, AIR 1967 Pat 101.
1746. State of Madhya Pradesh v Ladli Saran, AIR 1958 MP 326.
1747. H Investment Trust v Haridas Mundhra, AIR 1971 Cal 182 : (1971) 75 Cal WN 517.
1748. Indarjit v Richha, (1893) ILR 15 All 3, p 5.

(ii) that neither an obiter dictum nor a mere expression of opinion in a judgment has the effect of res judicata;[1749]

(iii) that when a court merely for the purpose of preventing a remand records its finding on an issue not necessary for the decision of the case, it does not operate as res judicata;[1750]

(iv) it is the decision that operates as res judicata and not the reasoning in support of it.[1751]

(b) Finality of Decisions.—It is well settled that a decision pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction is binding between the parties unless it is modified or reversed by adopting a procedure prescribed by law. It is in the interest of public at large that finality should attach to the binding decisions pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction and it is also in the public interest that individuals should not be vexed twice over with the same kind of litigation.[1752] The principle of res judicata would apply only when the lis was inter-parties and had attained finality in respect of the issues involved. The said principle will, however, have no application inter alia in a case where the judgment and/or order had been passed by a court having no jurisdiction therefor and/or in a case involving pure question of law. It will also have no application in a case where the judgment is not a speaking one.[1753] Effect of non-filling of appeal against a judgment or decree is that it becomes final. This finality can be taken away only in accordance with law. Same consequences follow when a judgment or decree in a connected suit is not appealed from.[1754]

A matter will be said to have been "heard and finally decided" notwithstanding that the former suit was disposed off in any of the following ways:

(i) ex parte;[1755] or

(ii) by dismissal under O XVII, rule 3;[1756] but not when the dismissal is under O XVI, rule 1 for failure to pay adjournment cost;[1757] or

(iii) by a decree on an award;[1758] or

(iv) by oath tendered under section 8 of the Indian Oaths Act, 1873;[1759] or

---

1749. Devarakonda v Devarakonda, (1881) ILR 4 Mad 134; Jamaitunnissa v Lutfunnissa, (1885) ILR 7 All 606; Avala v Kuppu, (1885) ILR 8 Mad 77; Mohun v Ram Dial, (1880) ILR 2 All 843; Ramaswami v Alamelu, AIR 1924 Mad 604 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 298; Rekhab Das v Mt Sheobai, AIR 1923 All 495 : (1923) ILR 45 All 466, p 467.
1750. Pitchi v Bharata, AIR 1924 Mad 893 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 532.
1751. Province of Bombay v Municipal Corp, Ahmedabad, AIR 1954 Bom 1 : (1953) ILR Bom 1081; Jai Prakash v Bishambar Das, AIR 1954 All 215; Patna Zilla Track Owners' Assn v State of Bihar, AIR 1963 Pat 16. See notes "Examination of Pleadings and Judgment," above.
1752. TP Moideen Koya v Govt of Kerala, AIR 2004 SC 4733 : (2004) 8 SCC 106.
1753. UOI v Pramod Gupta, AIR 2005 SC 3708 : (2005) 12 SCC 1.
1754. Premier Tyres Ltd v Kerala State Road Transport Corp, AIR 1993 SC 1202 : AIR 1992 SCW 3365 : (1993) Supp 2 SCC 146. See also UOI v V Pundarikakshudu & Sons, AIR 2003 SC 3209 : AIR 2003 SCW 4578 : (2003) 8 SCC 168.
1755. Baldevdas v Mohanlal, AIR 1948 Bom 232 : (1947) 49 Bom LR 902; Radha Mohan v Eliza Jane Hilt, AIR 1947 All 147 : (1947) ILR All 186; Modhusudan v Brae, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 300; Bisheshar v Jafri Begum, AIR 1937 All 251 : (1937) All LJ 536.
1756. Venkatachalam v Mahalakshmamma, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 272; Shaik Saheb v Mahomed, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 510; Hingo v Jhuri, (1918) ILR 40 All 590.
1757. Gauhati Bank v Baliram Dutta, AIR 1950 Ass 169.
1758. Vyankatesh v Sakharam, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 465.
1759. Ahmed v Moidin, (1901) ILR 24 Mad 444; Sanyasi v Artaswaro, (1913) ILR 36 Mad 287.

(v) by dismissal owing to plaintiff's failure to adduce evidence at the hearing.[1760]

It is true that an ex parte decree operates to render the matter decided res judicata, and the defendant's failure to appear will not deprive the plaintiff of the benefit of his decree; but, in the case of a suit in which a decree is passed ex parte, the only matter that can be "directly and substantially in issue" is the matter in respect of which relief has been claimed by the plaintiff in the plaint. A matter in respect of which no relief is claimed cannot be "directly and substantially in issue" in a suit in which a decree is passed ex parte, though the court may have gone out of its way and declared the plaintiff to be entitled to relief in respect of such matter.[1761]

When an ex parte decree is passed, the defendant (apart from filing a review petition and a suit for setting aside the ex parte decree on the ground of fraud) has two clear options, one, to file an appeal and another to file an application for setting aside the order in terms of O IX, rule 13 of the CPC. He can take recourse to both the proceedings simultaneously but in the event the appeal is dismissed as a result whereof the ex parte decree passed by the trial court merges with the order passed by the appellate court, having regard to explanation appended to O IX, rule 13 of the CPC a petition under O IX, rule 13 would not be maintainable. However, the Explanation 1 appended to said provision does not suggest that the converse is also true.[1762]

A preliminary decree in the suit for partition is not a tentative decree. In so far as the matters decided by it are concerned, it has to be regarded as conclusive and final. If a matter has not been finally decided, there is no point in allowing an appeal by the statutory provision. So, the decision of the court on disputed questions between the parties embodied in the judgment which is followed by a decree, is a "final" decision; in the sense, that it is no longer open to question by either party except in an appeal, review or revision as provided by law. Hence, the points decided in a preliminary judgment in a partition suit will estop the parties on the principles of res judicata from contesting the same point in a later suit.[1763] A writ petition was filed by a person claiming to have been selected as principal of a college, challenging the orders of the Vice-Chancellor and Chancellor of the University, refusing to accord approval to his selection. The petition was rejected in limine. Subsequent representation was made by the petitioner to the Vice-Chancellor and Chancellor. It was rejected. Subsequent writ petition challenging such rejection of representation on the same cause of action as in earlier writ petition is barred.[1764]

A Manager of a Co-operative Society was removed from service after departmental proceeding. Since the result of the departmental appeal was not communicated to him, he filed an application under section 55 of the Madhya Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 to the Joint Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Raipur. At that time District Bastar/Jagdalpur was within the territorial jurisdiction of Raipur. A Joint Registrar than came to be appointed for District Bastar for Jagdalpur Area. Thus, it was held by the Supreme Court that the earlier application by the employee preferred to the Joint Registrar, Raipur, in the circumstances became infructuous. Such decision would not operate as res judicata.[1765]

The principle of finality or res judicata is a matter of public policy and is one of the pillars on which a judicial system is founded. Once a judgment becomes conclusive, the matters in

---

1760. Watson v Collector of Rajshahye, (1869) 13 MIA 160; Kartick v Sridhar, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 563.
1761. Pandurang Ram Chandra Mandlik v Shanti Bai Ram Chandra Ghatge, (1989) Supp 2 SCC 627.
1762. Bhanu Kumar Jain v Archana Kumar, AIR 2005 SC 626 : AIR 2005 SCW 270 : (2005) 1 SCC 787.
1763. Laxmi v A Sankappa Alwa, AIR 1989 Ker 289.
1764. Ram Saran Tripathi v Chancellor, Gorakhpur University, AIR 1990 All 96.
1765. Nabarlal Verma v District Co-op Central Bank Ltd Jagdalpur, AIR 2009 SC 664 : (2008) 14 SCC 445.

issue covered thereby cannot be reopened unless fraud or mistake or lack of jurisdiction is cited to challenge it directly at a later stage. The principle is rooted to the rationale that the issues decided may not be reopened and has little to do with the merit of the decision.[1766]

It has been further observed in the above decision by the Division Bench in the above case that a decision pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction is binding between the parties unless it is modified or reversed by adopting a procedure prescribed by law. It is in the interest of the public at large that finality should attach to the binding decision pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction and it is also in the public interest that individuals should not be vexed twice over in the assessment of the same matter in issue. Even in case of a judgment passed incurium which is unchallenged, the efficacy and binding nature of the operative order is conclusive inter partes. The principle applies both to an order from which an appeal lies and no appeal is preferred and to an order from which no appeal is provided.[1767]

(c) The Decision in the Former Suit must have been on the Merits.—In order that a matter may be said to have been heard and finally decided, the decision in the former suit must have been one on the merits.[1768] Merely because subsequent transferee pendent lite had filed objection under section 47, the binding effect of the earlier order which had attained finality would not stand obliterated. Hence, a fresh objection petition in an execution proceeding would be barred by the principles of res judicata.[1769] So far as the plea of res judicata is concerned, if both the landlord and the firm had filed cross circuits against each other and both the courts came to a common conclusion that the parties should litigate their rights in execution proceedings and nothing was decided on merits of rights and claims of the parties, such a plea is no longer available to the parties against each other in the execution proceedings.[1770] Hence, it could not be said of a matter that it was "heard and finally decided," if the former suit was dismissed:

(i) for want of jurisdiction;[1771] or

(ii) for default of plaintiff's appearance under O IX, rule 8.[1772] (But, a fresh suit on the same cause of action may be barred under O IX, rule 9); or

---

1766. Indu Bhushan Jana v UOI, AIR 2009 Cal 24 : (2009) 1 Cal LJ 786 (DB).
1767. Indu Bhushan Jana v UOI, AIR 2009 Cal 24, para 12 and 13 at pp 26-27 : (2009) 1 Cal LJ 786 (DB).
1768. Sheodan Singh v Daryao Kunwar, AIR 1966 SC 1332; Srikakulam Municipality v Ranganadhan, AIR 1970 AP 375; Ram Gobinda v Bhakta Bala, AIR 1971 SC 664 : (1971) 1 SCC 387; UOI v Pramod Gupta, AIR 2005 SC 3708 : (2005) 12 SCC 1.
1769. Yashodhara Ameta v Vishnu Shankar Paliwal, AIR 2011 Raj 43 : (2011) 1 Raj LW 379.
1770. Arm Group Enterprises Ltd v Waldorf Restaurant, AIR 2003 SC 4106 : 2003 AIR SCW 2088 : (2003) 6 SCC 423 : 2003 (3) JT 450.
1771. Lakshman v Ramchandra, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 48 : 7 IA 18; Putali v Tulja, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 223; Bhukhandas v Lalubhai, (1892) ILR 17 Bom 562; Ram Govindjha v Mungur Ram, (1883) 13 Cal LR 83; Abdul Kadir v Doolanbibi, (1913) ILR 37 Bom 563. See also section 44 of the Evidence Act 1872; Omkara Singh v State of Madhya Pradesh, (1957) Jab LJ 898; Phuluwa v Lakshmi Chand, AIR 1960 MP 138; Shivashankar v Baikunth, AIR 1969 SC 971 : (1969) 1 SCC 718.
1772. Kempegowda v Annagowda, AIR 1951 Mys 48; Radha Prashad v Lal Saheb, (1890) ILR 13 All 53 : 17 IA 150; Chand Kour v Pratab Singh, (1888) ILR 16 Cal 98 : 15 IA 156; Ramchandra v Narsinhacharya, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 251, p 254. As to suits for partition, see also Bisheshar Das v Ram Prasad, (1906) ILR 28 All 627; Madon Mohon v Baikanta Nath, (1906) 10 Cal WN 839; Radhe Lal v Mulchand, AIR 1924 All 905 : (1924) ILR 46 All 820, p 821; Samarendranath v Pyareecharan, AIR 1935 Cal 160 : (1934) ILR 61 Cal 1023; Mukha Singh v Ram Chariter, AIR 1956 Pat 143; Kesava v Venkataram, AIR 1957 AP 537; IC Co v UOI, AIR 1976 Pat 76; Gujarat Electricity Board v Saurashtra Chemicals, AIR 2001 Guj 83 (DB).

(iii) on the ground of non-joinder of parties,[1773] or misjoinder of parties,[1774] or multifariousness;[1775] or on the ground that the suit was badly framed;[1776] or on the ground of a technical mistake;[1777] or

(iv) for failure on the part of the plaintiff to produce probate or letters of administration or succession certificate when the same is required by law to entitle the plaintiff to a decree;[1778] or

(v) for failure to furnish security for costs under O XXV, rule 2;[1779] or

(vi) on the ground of improper valuation,[1780] or for failure to pay additional court-fee on a plaint which was undervalued;[1781] or

(vii) for want of a cause of action;[1782] or

(viii) for want of notice;[1783] or

(ix) on the ground that it is premature;[1784]

(x) as not pressed;[1785]

(xi) as having become infructuous.[1786]

(xii) as having been settled,[1787] or ended by virtue of compromise.[1788]

(xiii) on the ground that the plaintiff did not summon or produce witnesses.[1789]

(xiv) as withdrawn with leave of court for filing of fresh suit.[1790]

(xv) as withdrawn.[1791]

Where a petition under Article 32 filed before the Supreme Court was dismissed as withdrawn and the order permitting withdrawal made it clear that the withdrawal of the petition would not prevent the petitioner from seeking redress before the appropriate forum, it

---

1773. Sheosagar v Sitaram, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 616 : 14 IA 50; Shankara v Devaki, AIR 1922 Mad 259 : (1922) 43 Mad LJ 572; Jadu Nath v Amulya, AIR 1927 Cal 794 : (1927) 46 Cal LJ 118; State of Maharashtra v National Construction Co, AIR 1996 SC 2376 : (1996) 1 SCC 735 : JT 1996 (1) 156.
1774. Muhammad v Nabian, (1886) ILR 8 All 282.
1775. Fatte Singh v Lachmi, (1874) 13 Bom LR App 37.
1776. Deodhari v Lala Seosaran, (1878) 3 Cal LR 395.
1777. Janakadular v Ambika Prasad, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 313.
1778. Pethaperumal v Murugandi, (1895) ILR 18 Mad 466.
1779. Hariram v Lalbai, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 637.
1780. Dullabh v Narayan, (1868) 4 Bom HC AC 110.
1781. Venkata Narashiman Reddy v Konda Reddi, AIR 1951 Har 55; Irawa v Satyappa, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 38; Muhammad v Nabian, (1886) ILR 8 All 282.
1782. Harihar v Chandra Kumar, (1918) 23 Cal WN 91.
1783. Ramaswami v Muradai, AIR 1924 Mad 469 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 453; Gangappa v Rachawwa, AIR 1971 SC 442.
1784. Ramireddi v Subbareddi, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 500.
1785. MS Baliga v Mangalore City Corp, AIR 1998 AP 76.
1786. Seth Sranikbhai Kasturbhai v Seth Chandulal Kasturchand, AIR 1997 Pat 179.
1787. Shanmughasundaram v Janagarajan, AIR 1976 Mad 19.
1788. AA Associates v Prem Goel, AIR 2002 Del 142. See also Ganesh Patra v Banabihari Patra, AIR 2004 Ori 23.
1789. Selo v Munshi Ram, AIR 1985 HP 85.
1790. Kazhugumalai Raja v RPBISPN Fund, AIR 2004 Mod 267.
1791. Nahar Singh v Kaka Singh, (2000) 4 Civ LJ 155 (Pand H) : (2000) 3 Rec Civ R (Civil) 310; Bhaskar Parulkar v Mahesh Shivram Rege, 2007 (5) Mah LJ 663 : 2007 (4) All MR 446 (DB).

was held that the writ petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution would not be barred by res judicata.[1792]

A Division Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that where the earlier writ petition was dismissed in limine without any issue being heard and decided finally, bar of res judicata would not apply in determining subsequent writ petition raising the very same issues.[1793]

A claim raised before the court was later withdrawn by the petitioner. The court took note of the assurance made by the respondent and refused to adjudicate on the claim between the parties. It was held such a decision would not amount to the rejection of the claim and would not bar the raising of the claim in future.[1794] A decision of a suit under section 69 of the Partnership Act is not one on merits and therefore, cannot operate as res judicata.[1795] A direction in a preliminary decree under O XX, rule 12 (1)(c) does not operate either under this section or on general principle as res judicata as such a direction is not based on a decision of any matter in controversy between the parties.[1796] An order under O XXII, rule 5 involves only a summary inquiry and for that reason, does not constitute res judicata.[1797] In an earlier suit by the lessor, it was alleged by him that the lease had determined. He withdrew that suit. He then sued for recovery of khas possession of the premises, alleging (in the second suit) that the lease had determined by time. It was held that the first suit did not operate as res judicata, because, in the first suit: (i) there was no decision on merits; and (ii) the second suit was based on a new cause of action alleged to have arisen in the meantime.[1798] If a party having a contract with a firm fails to raise an objection that the firm has been reconstituted in two successive references to arbitration, he cannot raise that objection later. It is barred by constructive res judicata.[1799] In a Delhi case, the decree-holder took out execution for possession. One of the respondents (which was a firm), filed objections on the ground that the said firm had been a lawful tenant under the decree-holder for 15 years and its possession was not through the judgment-debtors. It was held that the objection filed by the objectors would be maintainable as the principle of res judicata would not apply to the facts of the case. In the earlier suit by the objectors for injunction, the disputes raised were never heard and decided by the court. On the contrary, the claim was given up against the decree-holder etc. Further, as the objections would require the taking of evidence, a warrant of possession would not be issued without deciding the objections.[1800] When there was nothing to show that the dismissal in revision was on any technical ground, the order in revision became final, and the appellant was estopped from raising that point on a second occasion on the same ground when it came up in appeal.[1801] Where the earlier award (on compromise) and decree in terms of the award, were based on surrender by the tenant himself, the person against whom the decree is passed (that is, the tenant), cannot plead in defence to execution of the decree, that it was an eviction decree.[1802] After a suit for partition of shops was decreed, the decree-holder applied for 1792. J&K National Panthers Party v UOI, AIR 2010 JK 47 (DB).

---

1793. Association of the Residents of Mhow v UOI, AIR 2010 MP 40 : (2010) 3 MPHT 493 (DB).
1794. Bharat Petroleum Corp Ltd Ex-employees Assn v Chairman and Managing Director, Bharat Petroleum Corp Ltd, (1993) Supp 4 SCC 37.
1795. Baba Commercial Syndicate v Channamasetti, AIR 1968 AP 378.
1796. Subbanna v Subbanna, AIR 1965 SC 1325.
1797. Suraj Mani v Kishori Lal, AIR 1976 HP 74.
1798. Thakuruddin Ramjash v Sourendra Nath, AIR 1982 Cal 133 (DB).
1799. UOI v Bilas Singh and Co, AIR 1984 Cal 261.
1800. Hardit Singh v Surinder Nath, AIR 1982 Del 588.
1801. Gurubachan Singh v Arya Dhanna Sewa Sangh, AIR 1981 Pat 318.
1802. Kamlabai v Mangilal, (1987) 4 SCC 585.

execution. Notice to the judgment-debtor was issued under O XXI, rule 22. The judgment-debtor initially appeared in execution, but later remained absent. The decree was held to be executable. It was held that in appeal, the judgment-debtor could not challenge the trial court's decision. Constructive res judicata applied.[1803] It was held that: (i) Finality of a judgment as res judicata; is not dependent on whether the suit was filed before or after the suit raising the same issue;[1804] (ii) even an ex parte decree becomes res judicata.[1805] The Municipal Corporation of Mysore enhanced the property tax, leading to filing of a writ petition by the group of citizens. The writ petition was dismissed on the ground that there was only revision and not enhancement of tax by the corporation, which was within the competence of the corporation. Issue of escalation was neither agitated nor decided by court. A subsequent suit challenging such escalation by another group of citizens was maintainable; more so, when there was a different line of challenge in the suit than in writ petition.[1806] In a proceeding for winding up, the court may order winding up once it is established that there is a "just and equitable ground"; however, in a petition under section 397 of the Indian Companies Act, 1956, one has to establish that there is oppression without which the question of grant of relief does not arise. The CLB held that the high court has decided against the petitioners on the ground that there was no deadlock in the management; hence, it would not be just and equitable to order winding up the company. The CLB observed that the high court did not examine whether the allegations of oppression had been established. It was held that the findings of the CLB cannot be overruled on the ground of res judicata.[1807]

Where the earlier suit was decreed ex parte but the ex parte decree was set aside and the suit was restored and later on the suit was dismissed under O IX, rule 8 of CPC, which was never challenged by anyone, it was held by the Patna High Court that suice the earlier suit was dismissed on technical grounds without going into the merits, it will not operate as res judicata.[1808]

The principle of res judicata applies as between the parties to a decision, so that parties bound by the decision cannot assail the same in any subsequent or collateral proceeding. Thus, where the high court did not finally decide the earlier writ petition but left it to the Election Commission to decide the matter and issue general directive, it was held by the Patna High Court that the same not being the subject matter on which any decision was given by the high court, the principle of res judicata would not apply to subsequent writ petition assailing the decision of the Election Commission.[1809]

For application of the rule of res judicata in case of dismissal of the earlier suit, the question has been fully explained in the case of Sheodan Singh v Daryao Kunwar.[1810] In this case the appeals were dismissed by the high court on the ground of limitation and for non-prosecution. The Supreme Court rejected the contention that the decision cannot operate as res judicata. The Supreme Court referred to instances where a former suit was dismissed by the trial court for want of jurisdiction or for default of the plaintiff; appearance etc. and it was pointed out that in respect of such class of cases, the decision, not being on merit, would not operate as res judicata. However, none of these considerations apply to a case where a decision is given

---

1803. Ummed Mal v Kundan Mal, AIR 1981 Raj 202.
1804. Isup Ali v Gour Chandra Deb, AIR 1923 Cal 496.
1805. Vishnu Sugar Mills v JSP Trading Co, AIR 1984 Cal 246.
1806. Corp of City of Mysore v Public Interest Litigation, AIR 1997 Kant 70.
1807. Shree Anupam Chemical (India) Pvt Ltd v Dipak G Mehta, AIR 1999 Bom 349.
1808. Niloufer Siddiqui v Indian Oil Corp Ltd, AIR 2008 Pat 5 : (2007) 3 Pat LJR 589.
1809. Meera Devi v Bihar State Election Commission, AIR 2008 Pat 83 : 2008 (2) AIR Jhar R 958.
1810. Sheodan Singh v Daryao Kunwar, AIR 1966 SC 1332 : (1966) 3 SCR 300.

on merits by the trial court and the matter is taken in appeal and the appeal is dismissed on some preliminary ground like limitation or default in printing. It was held by the Supreme Court that such dismissals have the effect of confirming the decision of the trial court and it "amounts to the appeal being heard and finally decided on merits whatever be the ground of dismissal of the appeal".

(d) The Decision in the Former Suit must have been Necessary to the Determination of the Suit.—A matter directly and substantially in issue cannot be said to have been "heard and finally decided," unless the finding on the issue was necessary to the determination of the suit. The matter cannot be said to be heard and finally decided within the meaning of section 11 of the CPC when the finding on it was not at all necessary for the decision of the case;[1811] also, it must be based upon that finding;[1812] and a decision cannot be said to have been based upon a finding unless an appeal can lie against that finding. The reason is that "everything that should have the authority of res judicata is, and ought to be, subject to appeal, and reciprocally, an appeal is not admissible on any point not having the authority of res judicata".[1813] It is not sufficient to attract the bar of res judicata that an issue has been framed on the question. It is further necessary that there must be a decision on the issue, express or implied which forms the basis of the decree.[1814] It was at one time thought that the test of res judicata was whether the finding was embodied in the decree. This, however, is not so, for res judicata is a matter of substance and not of form. It is the right of appeal which indicates whether a finding was incidental or necessary. This also is no longer universally so, firstly, because under section 2(2), as now amended, a decision in a proceeding under section 47 is not a decree; and secondly, because under the new Explanation VII, this section is extended to execution proceedings. In other words, a decision in a proceeding for execution, though not a decree, statutorily constitutes res judicata as regards the same question arising in a subsequent execution proceeding, although such decision is not a decree.

As regards suits, one of the tests to ascertain if the finding operates as res judicata is that the party aggrieved could challenge it.[1815] Section 11 of CPC operates against both the parties to a suit and not against the defendants alone. The principle of res judicata is an inhibition against the court.[1816] A finding given against a party in a litigation which terminates in his favour does not operate as a res judicata in a subsequent litigation in which a similar controversy arises.[1817] This is so because he had no opportunity to challenge the correctness of the finding in an appeal by reason of the litigation having ended in his favour. Hence, the following emerge:

Rule 1 : Findings on issues against defendant not res judicata where the suit is wholly dismissed.—If the plaintiff's suit is wholly dismissed, no issue decided against the defendant can operate as res judicata against him in a subsequent suit, for the defendant cannot appeal from a finding on any such issue, the decree being wholly in his favour;[1818] but, every issue decided against

---

1811. Askaran v Madan Lal, AIR 1995 Raj 130.
1812. Hafiz Mahammad Fateh Nasib v Swarup Chand, AIR 1942 Cal 1 : (1914) ILR 2 Cal 434; Hiralal Murarka v Mangtulal Bajoria, AIR 1947 Cal 221 : (1944) ILR 2 Cal 513; affirmed by Privy Council sub-nominee Shankarlal Patwari v Hiralal Murarka, AIR 1950 PC 80.
1813. Sav Syst 293; Narain Das v Faiz Shah, (1889) PR 157 (FB).
1814. Angayya v Vittal, (1958) 1 Andh WR 524; Mahalakshmi v Pammi Garamma, AIR 1958 Ori 139.
1815. Ramesh Chandra v Shiv Charan Dass, (1990) Supp SCC 633.
1816. R Govindasamy v Kasturi Ammal, AIR 1998 Mad 218.
1817. Sri Pal v Swami Nath, AIR 1968 All 282.
1818. Munsi Abdul Rahim v Fakir Mohammad, AIR 1946 Ngp 401 : (1946) ILR Nag 518; Run Bahadur v Lucho Koer, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 301, p 306 : 12 IA 23, p 34; Midnapur Zamindari Co Ltd v Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1922 PC 241 : (1921) ILR 48 Cal 460 : 48 IA 49; Ghela v Sankalchand, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 597, p 602; Shib Charan v Raghu, (1895) ILR 17 All 174; Nundo v Bidhoo, (1886) ILR 13 Cal

[Footnote No. 1818 contd.]

the plaintiff may operate as res judicata against him in a subsequent suit, for the plaintiff can appeal from a finding on such issue, the decree being against him.[1819] With reference to the first branch of this rule, it is well-settled that when a plaintiff's suit is dismissed despite a finding on an issue in his favour, that finding does not operate as res judicata against the defendant.[1820] When an issue in the suit was found against the defendant, but the suit itself was dismissed with half costs, it was held that the findings operated as res judicata against the defendant in a subsequent suit, as it was open to him to challenge the correctness of the same in an appeal against the refusal to award full costs.[1821] With reference to the second branch of this rule, the Allahabad High Court has expressed the opinion that it does not apply to a case where the court after finding against the plaintiff on an issue which should in logical sequence have been decided first, proceeds to record its findings against the plaintiff on other issues; in such a case, according to that court, the finding on the other issues do not operate as res judicata against the plaintiff in a subsequent suit.[1822] A decree against which an appeal is already preferred does not operate as res judicata[1823]. The judgment of the Privy Council in Annamalai Chetty v BA Therhill,[1824] was referred to. Where a suit is dismissed, but there is on some issue, an adverse finding against the defendant, the finding does not operate as res judicata as the defendant could not have appealed.[1825]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) In a suit by A against B for ejectment, B contends : (a) that no notice to quit was given; and (b) that the land being majhes land, he is not liable to be evicted at all. The suit is dismissed on a finding that no notice to quit was given. The court, however, also finds that the land is not majhes land. A afterwards sues B to evict him from the land after giving notice to B. B contends that the land is majhes land and that he is not liable to be evicted. The finding in the first suit was that the land was not majhes land and that he is not liable to be evicted. The finding in the first suit that the land was not majhes land does not operate as res judicata so as to preclude B from raising the same contention in the subsequent suit, the reason being that A's suit having been dismissed, B could not have appealed from the finding that the land was not majhes land. The court having found in the first suit that A had not given notice to quit, it was not necessary for the determination of the suit to decide whether the land was majhes land or not. The first suit was dismissed in spite of the finding in A's favour that the land was not majhes land.[1826]

Suppose that in the above illustration B had not raised the defence that the land was majhes land in the first suit. Would he be precluded from raising that defence in the second suit on the ground that he might and ought to have raised that defence in the first suit? No,

---

[Footnote No. 1818 contd.]
17; Thakur Magandeo v Thakur Mahadeo, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 647; Parbati v Mathura, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 29; Daudbhai v Dayaram, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 568; Bai Nathu v Narsi, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 321; Ramasami v Marudai, AIR 1924 Mad 469 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 453; Firm Kanhaiyalal v Paramsukh, AIR 1956 Ngp 273 : (1956) ILR Nag 539. See Illustrations (i) and (iii).

1819. Peary v Ambica, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 900; Venkataraju v Ramanamma, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 158; Babu Lal v Hari Baksh, (1918) PR 13, p 60; Dinkar v Anant, AIR 1928 Bom 349 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 902. See Illustration (iii).

1820. Nundo v Bidhoo, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 17; Thakur Magandeo v Thakur Mahadeo, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 647; Shib Charan v Raghunath, (1895) ILR 17 Cal 174; Rungo v Mudiyeppa, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 296; Parbatti v Mathura, (1912) ILR 40 Cal 29; Daudbhai v Dayaram, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 568, p 571; Waris Khan v Ahmadulla Khan, AIR 1952 Ngp 238.

1821. Mahadeva v Sriramamurthy, AIR 1955 AP 282.

1822. Shib Charan v Raghu, (1895) ILR 17 All 174, p 195; commented upon in Dinkar v Anant, AIR 1928 Bom 349 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 902, p 906.

1823. Nana Tukram v Sonabai, AIR 1982 Bom 437.

1824. Annamalai Chetty v BA Therhill, AIR 1931 PC 263.

1825. Nana Tukram v Sonabai, AIR 1982 Bom 437. See notes to section 96, "Who may appeal."

1826. Thakur Magandeo v Thakur Mahadeo, (1891) ILR 81 Cal 647; Nundo v Bidhoo, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 17; Ramasami Reddi v Thalawasal Marudai, (1924) ILR 47 Mad 453.

the reason being that when a point of defence that has been actually raised and disallowed cannot operate as res judicata against a defendant, it certainly cannot operate as such when it has not been raised at all though it might and ought to have been raised.[1827]

(ii) A sues B for possession of certain lands after the expiry of a lease granted by him to B. B pleads: (1) an occupancy right; and (2) that the suit is premature as he (B) had a right of renewal. The trial judge finds that there was no occupancy right, but that the suit was premature and the suit is dismissed. A files an appeal to the high court. B files a cross-objection to the finding against him, namely, that he had no occupancy. The high court affirms the decree on the ground that the suit was premature and upon the cross-objection affirms the finding that B had no occupancy right. After some years A, after giving notice to B, again sues B for possession. B again pleads an occupancy right. A contends that the finding of the high court in the previous suit that B had no occupancy right is res judicata. It was held by the judicial committee that the finding is not res judicata, the reason being that B having succeeded on the plea that the suit was premature, he had no occasion to go further as to the finding against him.[1828] The decision to the contrary in Mota v Vithal[1829] is not good law.

(iii) In a suit by A against B for damages for not removing filth from A's land, B contends: (a) that no notice was given as required by the Bengal Municipal Act; and (b) that he was not bound to remove the filth. The suit is dismissed upon two grounds, namely, that no notice was given as required by the Act, and that B was not bound to remove the filth. A then sues B for damages for not removing filth during a subsequent period after giving notice to B. B contends that he is not liable to remove the filth, and that the question of his liability is res judicata by reason of its having been decided against A in the first suit. A contends that the question is not res judicata by reason of its having been decided against A in the first suit. A also contends that the question is not res judicata for the court, having decided in the former suit that the suit must fail for want of notice, it was not necessary for the court to decide the issue as to B's liability to remove the filth. Held by the Calcutta High Court that the question is res judicata, and A cannot raise it again in the second suit.[1830] The Allahabad High Court would seem to take a different view.[1831]

(iv) A sues B, a manager appointed by the court in an administration suit, for a declaration, that he had validly surrendered his lease. B's defence is that the suit was not maintainable for want of notice under section 80 of the CPC and that the surrender was not valid. The court of first instance decided both the issues against A. B then sued A for royalty due under that lease. It was held that the finding in the former suit that the lease was not validly surrendered was not res judicata as that finding was not necessary, after the court had held that the suit was not maintainable for want of notice under section 80.[1832]

(v) A landlord sued to eject a tenant on the ground that he had failed to pay rent and that therefore, the lease had become forfeited as provided in the deed. The tenant pleaded that he was an agriculturist and further prayed to be relieved against forfeiture. The court granted the latter, relief and also recorded a finding that the lessee was a non-agriculturist tenant. It was held in a subsequent suit between the parties that the latter finding was not res judicata as the tenant could not on the previous litigation appeal against the finding that he was a non-agriculturist tenant by reason of relief having been granted against forfeiture.[1833]

Rule II : Findings on issues against plaintiff not res judicata where suit is decreed in its entirety.— If the plaintiff's suit is decreed in its entirety, no issue decided against the plaintiff can be res

1827. Abdullakhan v Khammia, (1908) ILR 32 Bom 315.
1828. Midnapur Zamindari Co Ltd v Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1922 PC 241 : (1921) ILR 48 Cal 460 : 48 IA 4964 IC 231.
1829. Mota v Vithal, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 662, 36 IC 74.
1830. Peary v Ambica, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 900; Mahomed Ismail v Sharfutullah, AIR 1930 Cal 810 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 872 : 129 IC 310.
1831. Shib Charan v Raghu, (1895) ILR 17 All 174, p 195.
1832. Hiralal Murarka v Mangtulal Bajoria, AIR 1947 Cal 221 : (1944) ILR 2 Cal 513; affirmed by the Privy Council sub-nominee Shankarlal Patwari v Hiralal Murarka, AIR 1950 PC 80.
1833. Raraknath v Kalisankar, AIR 1960 Cal 440.

judicata, for the plaintiff cannot appeal from a finding on any such issue, the decree being wholly in his favour;[1834] but, every issue decided against the defendant is res judicata, for the defendant can appeal from a finding on such issue, the decree being against him.[1835]

ILLUSTRATION

A, alleging that he is the adopted son of X, sues B to recover certain property granted to him by X under a deed and forming part of the estate of X. The court finds that A is not the adopted son of X, but that he is entitled to the property under the deed and a decree is passed for A. The finding that A is not the adopted son of X, will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between A and B in which the question of adoption is again put in issue; for the decree being in favour of A, A could not have appealed from that finding. The court having found that A was entitled to the property under the deed, the finding on the question of adoption was not necessary to the determination of the suit. The decree, far from being based on the finding as to adoption, was made in spite of it.[1836]

(e) "Finality" of Decrees in Redemption Suits.—If the mortgagor files a suit for redemption and no order for foreclosure extinguishing the right of redemption in default of payment is made, the preliminary decree for redemption does not have that effect. The right of redemption continues until a decree absolute for foreclosure, is passed,[1837] or the sale is confirmed.[1838] In such a case, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether the mortgagor can enforce his right of redemption by a second suit, after a preliminary decree on which no further proceedings have been taken. According to Allahabad, Bombay, Lahore, Patna and Rajasthan decisions, he can;[1839] on the other hand, according to Calcutta and Madras decisions, he cannot.[1840] The Chief Court of Oudh holds that the question is one of interpretation of the decree in the first redemption suit. If it provides for the extinction of the relation of mortgagee and mortgagor, the second suit is barred, but not otherwise,[1841] but though according to the Allahabad and Bombay high courts, a second suit for redemption is not barred, the same high courts have held that any matter decided in the earlier suit, eg, the amount of the mortgage-debt, cannot be re-opened in the subsequent suit.[1842] As an analogy, it may be added that a preliminary decree in a suit for accounts finally decides the issues which the court in such a suit is required to decide at the stage. If that decree is allowed to be final, it is no longer open to the defendants to raise at a later stage a plea such as non-maintainability under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act.[1843] In Raghunath Singh v Hansraj Kunwar, the judicial committee held

---

1834. LR Scott v Mahammad Din, AIR 1944 Ngp 154 : (1944) ILR Nag 465; Rango v Mudiyeppa, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 296; Abdul Rahim v Ojamshee, (1929) ILR 56 Cal 639.
1835. Barjorji v Shripatprasadji, AIR 1927 Bom 145 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 215; Bai Sada v Gangaram, AIR 1932 Bom 484 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 936.
1836. Rungo v Mudiyeppa, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 296.
1837. Somesh v Ramkrishna, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 705.
1838. Faiyaz v Prag Narain, (1907) ILR 29 All 339 : 34 IA 102.
1839. Sita Ram v Madho Lal, (1902) ILR 24 All 44 (FB); Hari Ram v Indraj, AIR 1922 All 377 : (1922) ILR 44 All 730; Mahamdi Begum v Tirfail Hasan, AIR 1926 All 20 : (1926) ILR 48 All 17; Raghunath Singh v Sheo Pratap Singh, AIR 1929 All 409 : (1929) 27 All LJ 761; Ramji v Pandharnath, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 334 (FB); Ramchandra v Balbhim, AIR 1923 Bom 217 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 211; Hanmanta v Shidu, AIR 1923 Bom 300 : (1923) ILR 47 Bom 692; Govind v Narayan, AIR 1931 Bom 480 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 844; Aruna v Bur Singh, AIR 1925 Lah 31, (1924) 5 Lah 371; Nahru Ram v Chiranji Lal, (1910) ILR 32 All 215; Joti Lal v Sheodhayan, AIR 1936 Pat 420 : (1936) ILR 15 Pat 607; Loknath Missir v Daulat Kuer, AIR 1953 All 503; Ambala v Amabala, AIR 1957 Raj 321; Ismail Nathabai Khartri v Muljibhai Shaukenbhai Brahambhatt, AIR 1994 Guj 8.
1840. Siva v Nundo, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 139; Vadapuratti v Vallabha, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 300.
1841. Irshad v Saidunnissa, AIR 1930 Oudh 465 : (1931) ILR 6 Luck 275.
1842. Ramji v Pandharnath, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 334 (FB); Raghunath Singh v Sheo Pratap Singh, AIR 1929 All 409 : (1929) 27 All LJ 761; Irshad v Saidunnissa, AIR 1930 Oudh 465 : (1931) ILR 6 Luck 275.
1843. Manickchand v Saleh Mohd, AIR 1969 SC 751 : (1969) 1 SCC 206.

that if the decree for redemption in the first suit did not extinguish the right of redemption, the second suit to redeem is not barred.[1844]

In the converse case of the mortgagee not taking further proceedings on his decree for sale, there is also a conflict of decisions as to whether the mortgagor, if he does not redeem under the decree, may file a redemption suit. The Bombay High Court says that he can,[1845] but the Madras High Court holds that he is barred by this section.[1846]

(f) Appellate Decree Operates as Res Judicata.—Where a decree is appealed from, it is the appellate decree that must be looked to, to determine the question of res judicata, and not the decree appealed from—A decision liable to appeal may be "final" within the meaning of this section until the appeal is preferred; but, once that appeal is filed, the decision loses its character of "finality", and what was once res judicata again becomes res sub judice, that is, matter under judicial inquiry. Where the entire matter was still in appeal and any part of the findings could be varied by the appellate court, it is idle to contend that the same had become final. So also, when the matter had not attained finality and was still in dispute, the principle of res judicata could not arise.[1847] With reference to section 207 of the Ceylon Civil Procedure Code which is in pari materia with this section, the Privy Council said:

> Where an appeal lies the finality of the decree, on such appeal being taken, is qualified by the appeal and the decree is not final in the sense that it will form res judicata as between the parties.

In this case,[1848] the effect of non-filing of appeal against a judgment or decree is that it becomes final. The finality can be taken away only in accordance with law. Same consequences follow when a judgement or decree in a connected suit is not appealed from. Thus, the finality of finding recorded in the connected suit, due to non-filing of appeal, precluded the court from proceeding with appeal in the other suit.[1849] A in 1924 sues B on an account and obtained a decree on 17 January 1927. B filed an appeal on 19 January 1927 and A to avoid a possible bar of limitation, filed a fresh suit on the same cause of action on 2 June 1927. The suit was dismissed as res judicata although B's appeal in the first suit was pending. The Privy Council reversed this decision and said that the proper course was to have stayed the second suit pending the decision of the appeal in the first suit. The appeal destroys the finality of the decision, the decree of the lower Court is superseded by the decree of the appellate Court, and it is the latter decree that should be looked into to determine the question of res judicata.[1850] In an Allahabad case,[1851] the court passed a decree for costs and in an application for execution this decree was construed as not making the defendant personally liable. Subsequently, the

---

1844. Raghunath Singh v Hansraj Kunwar, AIR 1934 PC 205 : (1934) ILR 56 All 561 : 61 IA 362; Thota China Subba Rao v Mattapali Raju, AIR 1950 FC 1 : (1949) FCR 484; Edumban Chettiar v Ramalakshmi, AIR 1965 Ker 153.
1845. Rama v Bhagchand, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 41; Badruddin v Sitaram, AIR 1930 Bom 401 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 933.
1846. Ranga v Narayana, (1935) ILR 39 Mad 896; Ellarayan v Rangaswami, AIR 1926 Mad 816 : (1926) ILR 49 Mad 691.
1847. K Muthuswami Gounder v N Palaniappa Gounder, (1998) 7 SCC 327.
1848. Annamalay v Thornhill, AIR 1931 PC 263 : (1932) 36 Cal WN 1 : (1931) 61 Mad LJ 420.
1849. Premier Tyres Ltd v Kerala State Road Transport Corp, (1993) Supp 2 SCC 146.
1850. Sheosagar v Sitaram, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 616 : 24 IA 50; Abdullah v Ganesh Das, (1918) ILR 45 Cal 442 : 44 IA 214; Nilvaru v Nilvaru, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 110; Chunder v Shibo, (1882) 11 Cal LR 22; Kailash v Girija, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 925; Balkishen v Kishan Lal, (1888) ILR 11 All 148; Chengalavala v Venkateshwar, (1916) 30 Mad LJ 379; Satyanarayana v Diana Engg Co, AIR 1952 Cal 124 : (1952) ILR 1 Cal 305; Venkateshwarlu v Venkatanarasimham, AIR 1957 AP 557; Parshotham v Bai Moti, AIR 1963 Guj 30; Bhavani v Narayana, AIR 1963 Mys 120.
1851. Lachman v Lakshmi, AIR 1932 All 288 : (1932) 54 ILR All 44.

decree was confirmed by the court of appeal. In a second execution application of the decree of the appellate court, the construction of the decree in the first application did not operate as res judicata. When an award was set aside by a court on the grounds of misconduct of the arbitrator and an appeal against that order was dismissed as settled out of court, it was held that its effect was to render operative the order which was appealed against, and, it operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.[1852]

A sues B for damages for cutting and removing trees from his land. The suit is dismissed on the grounds: (a) that the land did not belong to A; and (b) that B did not cut the trees. A appeals from the decree on both these grounds, but the appeal is dismissed on the ground that A had failed to prove that B had cut the trees. Note that the appellate court does not decide the question of A's title. A then sues B for possession of land, claiming that the land belongs to him. B contends that the suit is barred as res judicata as the first court had found in the former suit that the land did not belong to A. The suit is not barred, for the question of A's title became res sub judice when the appeal was preferred, and it did not become res judicata as the appellate court did not adjudicate upon the question;[1853] but, a judgement of an appellate court will operate as res judicata as regards all findings of the lower court which, though not referred to in it, are adopted by a decree which grants a relief that is possible only on such findings,[1854] as also, where the appeal is struck off as having abated.[1855] The doctrine that when there is an appeal, it is the judgement of the appellate court that must be looked into for determining the question of res judicata, has no application to judgements in writ proceedings preferred against orders of tribunals.[1856] An issue, again, is res judicata where the judgment of the appellate court shows that the issue was treated as material, and was decided, although the decree passed merely affirms the decree of the lower court which did not deal with the issue.[1857]

Where a plaintiff filed a suit for declaration of title, partition and recovery of possession of property and also filed a petition under section 373 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, for issue of succession certificate, there was a joint trial of both the proceedings and the court granted a decree, declaring that the plaintiff was the sole heir of the deceased and was entitled to the property. Relief of partition was also granted. The court also held that the plaintiff was entitled to a succession certificate. The defendant filed appeals; which were tried jointly and the matter was remanded. Defendant filed a second appeal against the decree in the suit, but did not file any proceeding against the decision on the petition under section 373 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, which therefore, became final. It was held that the decision in the petition would operate as res judicata and bar a fresh decision in second appeal.[1858]

The bar of res judicata is not created by a decree, but by decision or judgment. Where the suits or appeals raise common issues for decision and there has been one trial, one finding and one decision, or an appeal against the decree in one suit, the appeal will not be barred by res judicata, by not filing an appeal against the decree in the other suit or appeal. However, the position would be different if the subject matter in each suit or appeal is different.[1859]

1852. Annapurna Bai v Pyari Bai, AIR 1960 MP 222.
1853. Burdwan Electric Supply Co v Srimati Kumud Kumari Choudhary, AIR 1932 Cal 14.
1854. Narayanan v Kannammai, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 335; Gokul v Shrimal, (1904) 6 Bom LR 288; Muthammal v Secretary of State of India, (1916) ILR 21 Mad 1202.
1855. Raja Syed Ahmad Ali v Hingalal, AIR 1947 Oudh 74 : (1946) ILR 21 Luck 586.
1856. Burmah Shell Co v Labour Appellate Tribunal, AIR 1957 Mad 60.
1857. Midnapur Zamindary Co Ltd v Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1924 PC 144 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 631 : 51 IA 293; Nawab v Punjaba, AIR 1921 Lah 187 : (1922) 4 Lah LJ 442.
1858. Madhvi Amma Bhavani Amma v Velu Pillai, AIR 1990 Ker 144.
1859. Karunaker Panda v Dureabati Bewa, AIR 1981 Ori 23.

Suits by plaintiff and defendants were filed in the same court. Issues involved in both the suits were substantially the same. Suits were disposed of, by a common judgment. Appeal was filed by the plaintiff against the judgment in his case. Judgment in the suit by the defendant was held to operate as res judicata.[1860]

Certain estates were taken over by the State Government, which then applied to the tribunal (constituted under the relevant Act) for the recovery of endowed amounts and interest at 6% till the date of payment. The tribunal gave a finding that the state government was entitled to the entire amount claimed which would mean the principal as well as interest. It was held that the mere fact that the tribunal had not used the word "interest" did not mean that it had rejected the claim for interest.[1861]

Finality does not depend on executability. A court may declare the rights of the parties without an executable mandate. Matters decided in a preliminary decree should be regarded as embodying the final decision on the matters decided by the court. This much is indicated by section 97 of the Code. The Code provides for an appeal against a preliminary decree. If a matter has not been finally decided, there is no point in allowing an appeal by statute. Hence, points directed in a preliminary decree in a partition suit will estop the parties by res judicata from contracting the same point in a later suit.[1862]

Where the question of title, as maurasidar of land in the defendant's possession could not have been raised in the earlier suit, then the earlier decision cannot operate as res judicata against the defendant on that point.[1863]

A suit was filed for specific performance of an agreement of sale of undivided one-third share of defendant. During its pendency, share of the defendant was determined to be less than one-third. It was held that the partition decree (passed during the pendency of the suit for specific performance), could not operate as res judicata. Even if it be held that the plaintiff's suit was premature, that could only disentitle him to costs.[1864]

The Rangoon High Court has held that a decree may be final as regards a party A who has not appealed, although another party B has appealed, if A has not been made party by B in his appeal. The mere possibility that the appellate court might make A, a party and proceed under O XLI, rule 33, does not make it less final.[1865]

In a Gauhati case in an appeal, the Deputy Commissioner, by his order dated 14 November 1955, directed that the disputed land should be divided equally between the parties and the sub-divisional officer was directed to demarcate the land within a month. As there was no appeal against the order by any of the parties, it became final. The land was never demarcated by the sub-divisional officer. Constant disputes arose, and when one of the parties petitioned to the Deputy Commissioner to execute the order, he (instead of demarcating the land) treated it as a new dispute and decided the claim of the parties afresh, by the impugned order. It was held that though the code as such, was not applicable in Nagaland, the spirit of sections 11 and 12 of the Code was applicable. The Deputy Commissioner is barred by the principles of res judicata from trying the dispute afresh. The impugned order was set aside.[1866]

1860. Aneappa Gounder v Rajavelu Gounder, AIR 1981 Mad 282.
1861. PVG Raja Garu v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1990 SC 650 : (1990) SCR 1 134.
1862. Laxmi v A Sankappa Alivee, AIR 1989 Ker 289.
1863. Nagta Singh v Shiv Singh, AIR 1981 All 75.
1864. Ram Niwas v Omkari, AIR 1983 All 310 (DB).
1865. Chokkalingam v Maung Tha O, AIR 1926 Rang 122 : (1926) ILR 4 Rang 8.
1866. Humtse Village v Yikhuman Village, AIR 1983 Gau 19 (DB).

If only a part of a decree is appended from, the rest of the decree may become final and operate as res judicata.—The defendant had obtained a decree on a mortgage. The plaintiff who had paid off a prior mortgage filed a suit claiming to be subrogated to the prior mortgagee and to recover the amount he had paid, from the defendant. The original court found that the plaintiff was subrogated and awarded him the principal sum he had paid with interest. The defendant on appeal claimed that the plaintiff was not entitled to interest. The defendant could not on second appeal dispute plaintiff's right of subrogation which was res judicata by reason of the decree of the original court, that part which had not been appealed against.[1867]

(g) Consent Decree and Estoppel.—The present section does not apply in terms to consent decrees; for it cannot be said in the case of such decrees that the matters in issue between the parties "have been heard and finally decided" within the meaning of this section.[1868] A compromise decree or order does not operate as res judicata, because the compromise decree or order is merely the record of a contract between the parties to a suit, to which is superadded the seal of the court and the court does not decide anything.[1869] A consent decree, however, has to all intents and purposes the same effect as res judicata, as a decree passed in invitum.[1870] It raises an estoppel as much as a decree passed in invitum.[1871] The words "in writing and signed by the parties", inserted in O XXIII, rule 3 of the CPC by the Civil Procedure Code (Amendment) Act, 1976, necessarily mean and include only authorised representative and counsel. Thus, a compromise in writing and signed by counsel representing the parties, but not signed by the parties in person, is valid and binding on the parties and is executable, even if the compromise relates to matters concerning the parties, but extending beyond the subject matter of the suit. A judgment by consent is intended to stop litigation between the parties just as much as a judgment resulting from a decision of the court at the end of a long drawn out fight. A compromise decree creates an estoppel by judgment.[1872] Therefore, so long as a consent decree stands, it is not open to either party thereto to give it the go by, even if it

---

1867. Narendra v Mahosay Ganesh Prasad, AIR 1946 Pat 408; Pichai Konar v Narasimha, AIR 1930 Mad 471 : (1930) 58 Mad LJ 343; Kandasami v Annamalai, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 67.

1868. Baldevdas v Filmistan Distributors, AIR 1970 SC 406 : (1969) 2 SCC 201 : (1970) 1 SCR 435 : (1970) 11 Guj LR 158; Bhanwarlal v Raja Babu, AIR 1970 Raj 104 : (1969) ILR 19 Raj 393; Bhaishanker v Morarji, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 283, where it is said that in the case even of a consent-decree, the matters in issue in the suit cannot but be said to have been "heard and finally decided". If so, why is it said in the judgment (p 286) that a consent decree has to all intents and purposes the same effect as Res Judicata?. See also Parasuram v Pandu, AIR 1956 Hyd 178 : (1956) ILR Hyd 29.

1869. Uphras Lapasam v Ka Esiboll Lyngdoh, AIR 1986 Gau 55.

1870. Thakur Durga Baksh Singh v Rama Umanath, AIR 1944 Oudh 94 : (1943) 19 Luck 428; Rama Rao Sham Rao v Dattadayal, AIR 1948 Ngp 304 : (1947) ILR Nag 889; Laxmi Nayain Gododia v Modh Shafi Bari, AIR 1949 EP 141 : (1948) ILR EP 113; Committee of Management of Bunga Sarkar v Sardar Raghubit Singh, AIR 1951 Sim 257; Bhaishanker v Morarji, (1912) ILR 36 Bom 283, p 286; Re South American and Mexican Co, (1895) 1 Ch 37; Bikram Prakash v Narendra, AIR 1961 All 266; Nader Mal v Ugar Sain, AIR 1966 P&H 509 : (1965) ILR 2 Supp (2) Punj 609.

1871. Nasib Khan v Kutubunissa, AIR 1941 Ngp 346 : (1940) ILR All 691; Nicholas v Asphur, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 216, p 237; Lakshmishankar v Vishnuram, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 77; Raj Kumara v Thatha, (1912) ILR 35 Mad 75; Tiruvambala v Manikkavachaka, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 177, p 189; Sivadas v Birendra, AIR 1926 Cal 672 : (1926) 43 Cal LJ 116; Durga Prasad v Narain, AIR 1929 Oudh 63 : (1929) ILR 4 Luck 181; Sunder Bai v Devaji, AIR 1954 SC 82 : (1953) SCJ 693, wherein the above statement of law was quoted and adopted. Sailendra Narain v State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 346 : (1956) SCR 72; Kailash Chandra v Kulamani, AIR 1956 Ori 210; Krishna Subala v Danapathi Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59; Chandi Charan v Naba Gopal, AIR 1957 Pat 365; Sadsukh v Jugal Kishore, (1957) 61 Cal WN 67; Kesavan v Padmanabhen, AIR 1971 Ker 234; Gajraj Narain v Babulal, AIR 1975 Pat 58 : (1974) ILR 53 Pat 543; Indira Bai v BA Patel, AIR 1974 AP 303; Mariam Bai v Modi IAR Sait, AIR 1978 Mad 191; Jagan Nath v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1973 Del 9.

1872. Byram Pestonji Gariwala v UOI, AIR 1991 SC 2234 : (1992) 1 SCC 31.

contains clauses that are bad in law.[1873] Where, however, the parties consent to divide pension in contravention of section 12 of the Pensions Act, 1873, a decree passed in terms thereof is void and cannot operate as res judicata.[1874] Also, where a new amending Act has conferred new rights including one of reopening of decrees where they have not been fully executed, a party to such a decree can take advantage of such an amendment.[1875] A consent decree, however, is a mere creature of the agreement on which it is founded, and it may be set aside on any ground which would invalidate an agreement between the parties;[1876] but, such a decree cannot be attacked collaterally on such grounds, but only by direct proceedings attacking it.[1877] A consent decree until set aside by a proper proceeding therefore is binding on the parties and cannot be ignored on the ground that it contains a term which is not lawful.[1878] Once the original tenant entered into compromise and admitted in the said compromise that he was never a protected tenant of the suit land and was not in possession of the suit land at any time as a protected tenant then, this admission and subsequent withdrawal of petition under section 98 by the original tenant operates as res judicata.[1879]

Unless all the parties agree, an application cannot be made to the court of first instance in the original suit to set aside the decree,[1880] though it may be done in the case of an interlocutory order.[1881] A decree by consent can be passed against a minor in accordance with the provisions of O XXXII, and such a decree will be res judicata unless it is set aside in appropriate proceedings.[1882] A decree passed on an award will operate as res judicata in the same manner as a decree passed by the court on contest.[1883] A compromise decree if not vitiated by fraud, misrepresentation, misunderstanding or mistake is binding and operates as res judicata as also estoppel between the parties.[1884]

(h) Explanation V: Relief Claimed but not Expressly Granted.—If a relief is claimed in a suit, but is not expressly granted in the decree, it will be deemed to have been refused, and the matter in respect of which the relief is claimed will be res judicata.[1885] Thus, where in a suit by a mortgagee: (i) for a money decree; and (ii) in default of payment for sale of the mortgaged property, the mortgagee was content to take a money-decree only, it was held that a subsequent suit by him, on failure of the mortgagor to satisfy the decree, to have the amount of the mortgage-debt paid to him by the sale of the property, was barred by res judicata. The relief as to sale having been claimed by the mortgagee. but not having been expressly granted in the former suit, must be deemed to have been refused so as to bar the subsequent suit.[1886]

1873. Ramrao Shamrao v Dattadayal, AIR 1948 Ngp 304 : (1947) ILR Nag 889; Cowasji v Kisandas, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 371; Basangouda v Basalingappa, AIR 1936 Bom 301 : (1936) 38 Bom LR 593; Budhumal v Ratialal, AIR 1952 Sau 110.
1874. Baldev Jha v Ganga Prasad, AIR 1959 Pat 17 : (1935) ILR 37 Pat 1391.
1875. Subba Rao v Jagannath Rao, AIR 1967 SC 591 : [1964] 2 SCR 310.
1876. Huddersfield Banking Co v Henry Lister and Son, [1895] 2 Ch 273; Kandarpa v Banvari, (1921) 33 Cal LJ 244; Nibaran v Motilal, (1935) 39 Cal WN 938; State of Punjab v Amar Singh, AIR 1974 SC 994 : (1974) 2 SCC 170.
1877. Wilding v Sanderson, [1897] 2 Ch 534, p 543; Nibaran Chandra v Motilal, (1935) 39 Cal WN 938.
1878. Bhima Rama v Abdul Rahid, AIR 1968 Mys 184.
1879. Dnyanoba Deorao Ugle v Shaikh Hussain, AIR 1999 Bom 5.
1880. Harrison v Rumsey, (1752) 2 Ves Sen 488; Stanard v Harrison, (1871) 19 WR 811; Ainsworth v Wilding, [1896] 1 Ch 673.
1881. Mullins v Howell, (1879) 11 Ch D 763.
1882. Nirmal Chand v Parameswari Devi, AIR 1958 MP 333.
1883. Mahindra v Commr of Chota Nagpur Division, AIR 1958 Pat 603 : (1958) ILR 37 Pat 699.
1884. See notes to section 96, "Procedure for setting aside consent decree". Byram Pestonji Gariwala v UOI, (1992) 1 SCC 31.
1885. Rock Tyres, Chandigarh v Ajit Jain, AIR 1998 P&H 202.
1886. Shibu v Chandra Mohan, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 849; Piari Lal v Nand Ram, (1909) ILR 31 All 19.

If a relief claimed in the plaint is not granted by the decree, the fact that it is not mentioned in the judgment would not bar the application of this explanation and it would be deemed to have been refused.[1887] In a case where the prayer is a combined one, and prayer for grant of certificate has not been considered specifically, the only conclusion possible is that the prayer has been rejected by application of the principles contained in section 11.[1888] Where the decree grants specific performance of an agreement to sell immovable property, it impliedly grants the relief of possession. Relief of possession cannot be said to have been refused.[1889] If a landlord sues for the eviction of joint tenants and the interests of joint tenants are not conflicting in that suit, then the decree does not become res judicata in a later suit between the joint tenants.[1890] Where in an application for fixation of fair rent, an issue was framed as to who was the tenant, i.e., tenant in his personal capacity or in capacity of a firm and there was no decision on the point, but it was impliedly held that the tenant in his personal capacity was a tenant and fair rent was fixed, the issue would be taken to have been decided against the tenant and subsequently, in the proceedings for eviction, the same issue cannot be raised by the tenant.[1891]

The Nagpur High Court has held that Explanation V would not apply where the omission to grant the particular relief is due to a misapprehension on the part of the court relating to the nature of relief claimed in the suit.[1892]

(i) Liberty to bring a Fresh Suit.—Where a former suit between the same parties in the same court and for the same relief results in a decree of dismissal, but the judgment leaves it open to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit and leaves "open, untouched and undecided all matters" affecting the rights of the parties, the decree does not constitute res judicata, as such matters cannot be said to have been "heard and finally decided" within the meaning of this section;[1893] but, if the court has in the particular circumstances of a case, no power to reserve liberty to a party to bring a fresh suit, the subsequent suit may be barred as res judicata, notwithstanding the liberty to bring a fresh suit. Thus, in Watson v Collector of Rajshahye[1894] the former suit was dismissed for the plaintiff's failure to produce evidence, but a direction was given that the plaintiff could institute a fresh proceeding as if no suit had been brought. Nevertheless, the Privy Council held that the subsequent suit was barred by res judicata for the reservation was of no effect. Again, Fateh Singh v Jagannath Baksh,[1895] is a case directly on this point. In that case, the plaintiffs brought a suit to set aside a gift made by a Hindu widow out of her husband's estate; they alleged that they were presumptive heirs. The widow died pending the suit. After her death the plaintiffs applied to amend the plaint by setting up a family custom of inheritance. Upon that application failing and the plaintiffs admitting that apart from the alleged custom, they could not succeed, the trial court dismissed the suit, but gave them liberty to file a fresh suit for possession. Subsequently, the plaintiffs brought another

---

1887. Venkatasubbiah v Veeriah, AIR 1957 AP 981.
1888. Gaya Prasad Bhoi v Lok Nath Budhi Bhoi, AIR 1996 Ori 444.
1889. Hemchand v Karelal, AIR 1987 Raj 117.
1890. Sher Singh v Mohd Ismaili, AIR 1981 All 114.
1891. M/s Globe Publications v Madan Gopal, AIR 1996 P&H 115.
1892. Abdeli Abdulhussain v Taiyabali, AIR 1951 Ngp 355.
1893. Parsotam Gir v Narabada Gir, (1899) ILR 21 All 505 : 26 IA 175; Babu Lal v Ishri Prasad, (1878) ILR 2 All 582, pp 586–88; Devaditta v Nathu, (1912) PR 16, p 209. The result is the same if the court has expressly excluded a matter from decision, though liberty to bring a fresh suit is not reserved. Ram Charan v Rezzuddin, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 856; Madan Mohan v Boroaah, (1918) PR 70, p 232; Bhimana Gouda v Sangappa, AIR 1960 Mys 178.
1894. Watson v Collector of Rajshahye, (1869) 13 MIA 160 : 12 WR 43 PC.
1895. Fateh Singh v Jagannath Baksh, AIR 1925 PC 55 : (1925) ILR 47 All 158 : 52 IA 100; Ramchandra v Krishna, AIR 1931 Bom 417 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 613; Sukh Lal v Bhikhi, (1889) ILR 11 All 187 (FB).

suit to recover from parties to the former suit a share in the property basing their claim upon family custom. It was held that the suit was barred by res judicata since the custom was a matter which might and ought to have been set up in the former suit, and, further, that the trial court having dismissed the suit, it had no power under O XXIII, rule 1(1), to give liberty to bring a fresh suit. A writ petition was withdrawn by the petitioner without taking a decision on its merits. Since, the legality or otherwise of the impugned decree of the court below having not been adjudicated upon in the said writ petition, its mere dismissal as not pressed cannot be treated operating as res judicata against the plaintiff, thereby precluding him from bringing a fresh suit against the defendant seeking restoration of possession of the suit property.[1896] Both the suits concededly, were dismissed as withdrawn with liberty to file fresh suit on the same cause of action. The third suit on the same cause of action could not have been barred by any principle, be it section 11 or O II, rule 2 or O XXIII of the CPC. Even though the cause of action might have been based on the title of the suit land but after the land was acquired under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, the plaintiff was left with no choice but to file a suit for recovery. Assuming, the cause of action in both the suits was based upon title in the suit land and was akin in all the cases, yet as referred to above, in as much as the earliest, two suits were dismissed as withdrawn with permission to file a fresh suit on the same cause of action, the third suit will not be barred by any principle of law.[1897]

The principle of these decisions has been extended to a plea set up in defence to a previous action and it has been held that where the court declines to decide it reserving at the same time the right of the defendant to put it forward in a separate suit, such a suit will be barred;[1898] But where in a suit under section 33 of the UP Agriculturists' Relief Act, the creditor-defendant was held not entitled to put forward a certain claim, a suit by him to enforce that claim is not barred as res judicata.[1899]

(j) When Explanation V Applies.—Explanation V does not apply, unless the "relief" claimed is : (i) substantial relief; and (ii) it is such as it is obligatory on a court to grant. We proceed to consider these conditions in order.

(i) The relief claimed must have been substantial and not merely auxiliary.—A sues B: (1) to recover her share in the estate of D, claiming the same as D's widow; and (2) for a declaration that she was lawfully married to D, a fact which B had denied. A decree is made by consent awarding Rs 55,000 to A in full satisfaction of her claim against the estate of D. The decree does not contain any declaration as to A's marriage with D. This circumstance will not bar a subsequent suit by A as D's widow, against B, to recover her share in the estate of a deceased relative; for the relief claimed in the former suit in respect of the legality of marriage was not claimed as a "specific" or "substantial" relief. It was "auxiliary" to the principal relief in respect of her share in the estate of D.[1900]

(ii) The relief claimed must be one which is obligatory and not merely discretionary for the court to grant.—Cases under this head relate principally to mesne profits. It was enacted by section 244 of the Code of 1882 that, "nothing in this section shall be deemed to bar a separate suit for mesne profits accruing between the institution of the first suit and the execution of the decree therein, where such profits are not dealt with by such decree." That clause has been

---

1896. MS Baliga v Bangalore City Corp, AIR 1998 Kant 76.
1897. Harbhagwan v Punni Devi, AIR 1999 P&H 223.
1898. Ganesh Jha v Baidyanath, AIR 1958 All 270 : (1958) ILR 37 Pat 201.
1899. Ram Kishan v Jagadeeswar, AIR 1956 Pat 13 : (1956) ILR 1 All 395.
1900. Fatmabai v Aishabai, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 242.

omitted in the present CPC, and under O XX, rule 12, mesne profits subsequent to the date of the suit are to be ascertained and provided for in the final decree.

A sues B for possession and for mesne profits both prior and subsequent to the suit. A decree is passed in A's favour for possession. The decree is silent as to mesne profits.

In the case put above, there is no doubt as to mesne profits prior to the date of the suit, that the plaintiff having claimed a relief in respect thereof and the relief not having been granted by the decree, the matter is res judicata and A cannot institute a fresh suit for such profits.[1901]

As to mesne profits subsequent to the date of the suit, it was held in cases under the Code of 1882, that it being discretionary with the court to grant such relief, the fact of the decree being silent as to such mesne profits did not operate as a bar to a fresh suit.[1902] In cases under the present Code, it has been held by the high courts of Madras,[1903] Calcutta,[1904] Allahabad,[1905] Bombay,[1906] Orissa[1907] and Patna,[1908] that where in a suit for possession and for past and future mesne profits, the court gives a decree for mesne profits up to the date of the suit and says nothing about subsequent mesne profits, a fresh suit to recover subsequent mesne profits is not barred under the present Code any more than under the Code of 1882. In the Madras case, Wallis CJ said:

> The word "relief" in the explanation means relief arising out of a cause of action which had accrued at the date of suit and on which the suit was brought and did not include relief such as mesne profits accruing after the date of suit as to which no cause of action had then arisen, but which the court was nevertheless expressly empowered to grant. The explanation having been reproduced in exactly the same words, the presumption is that it was intended to have precisely the same effect. I do not find any sufficient indication to rebut this presumption in the fact that sections 211 and 212 of the old Code were amalgamated to form O 20, r 12. The change introduced by the new rule is that the award of mesne profits in all cases is to be by preliminary decree, and that when ascertained they are to be embodied in a final decree, whereas under sections 211 and 212 they were to be ascertained in execution. This change does not appear to me to affect the construction of explanation V to s 11, nor do I think it is effected by the omission in s 47 of the new Code of the proviso to the corresponding s 244 of the old Code.

When a plaint in a mortgage suit contains a prayer for a personal decree, but the preliminary decree is silent about it, the plaintiff is not precluded from applying for a personal decree under O XXXIV, rule 6, for the balance of the mortgage claim after the sale of the mortgaged property, as such a decree could not properly be passed until after sale.[1909] A suit for specific performance of contract with an alternate relief of money decree was filed. The court granted a decree for money and rejected a decree for specific performance. The plaintiff not filing any

---

1901. Jiban v Durga, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 252; Kachu v Lakshmansingh, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 115.
1902. Mon Mohan v Secretary of State, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 968; Bhivrav v Sitaram, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 532; Ram Dayal v Madan, (1899) ILR 21 All 425; Hays v Padmanand, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 118; Kuppusamy v Venkataramier, (1905) 15 Mad LJ 462.
1903. Doraiswami v Subramania, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 188 (FB).
1904. Bipulbihari v Nikilchandra, AIR 1929 Cal 566 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 381; Kalidas v Keshablal, AIR 1931 Cal 788 : (1931) 58 ILR Cal 1040.
1905. Muhammad Ishaq v Muhammad Rustam, (1918) ILR 40 All 292.
1906. Gangadhar v Sripad, AIR 1938 Bom 231 (FB) : (1938) ILR Bom 655 : (1938) 40 Bom LR 324; overruling Atmaram v Parashram, AIR 1920 Bom 39 : (1920) ILR 44 Bom 954; Lakshmibai v Jagannath, AIR 1932 Bom 222 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 292; Rama v Saidappa, AIR 1935 Bom 306 : (1935) ILR 59 Bom 454.
1907. Mukunda Krupa Sindu, AIR 1954 Ori 202.
1908. Bansari Prasad v Awadh Bihari, AIR 1952 Pat 475 : (1952) ILR 31 Pat 731.
1909. Govindaswami v Kandaswami, AIR 1927 Mad 779 : (1927) 53 Mad LJ 489; Babu Ram v Imamullah, AIR 1935 All 411 : (1935) ILR 57 All 797.

appeal against the decree, but a subsequent suit involving the above issue was filed later. It was held it was not barred by the principle of res judicata.[1910]

[s 11.27] Section not Exhaustive—Principle of Res Judicata Applicable apart from Section

The section is not exhaustive of the circumstances in which an issue may be res judicata.[1911] In Kalipada v Dwijapada,[1912] the Privy Council quoted with approval a passage from the judgment of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Sheoparsan v Ramnandan[1913] where his Lordship said that "the application of the rule by the courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law." Again in Hook v Administrator-General,[1914] the judicial committee said that the plea of res judicata still remains apart from the limited provisions of the Code, and referred to the decision of the Board in Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari[1915] which held that the binding force of an interlocutory judgment even in execution proceedings depends not upon the section of the CPC but upon general principles of law. The Privy Council have also held that a decision on a dispute between rival claimants as to compensation deposited in a court under section 31(2) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties. Their Lordships said:

> It has been suggested that the decision was not in a former suit, but whether this were so or not makes no difference, for it has been recently pointed out by the Board in Hook v Administrator-General[1916] that the principle which prevents the same case being twice litigated is of general application, and is not limited by the specific words of the Code in this respect.[1917]

The Supreme Court has reaffirmed this view and observed that the principles underlying section 11 are that there should be finality in litigation and that a person should not be vexed twice over in respect of the same matter and that these principles are applicable even when the case does not fall within the strict terms of section 11.[1918] On this principle, it has been held that a decision given by a court at one stage is binding on it at later stages.[1919] The decision

---

1910. Kewal Singh v Gurjant Singh, AIR 2000 P&H 60.
1911. Mancharam v Kalidas, (1894) ILR 19 Bom 826.
1912. Kalipada v Dwijapada, AIR 1930 PC 22 : 57 IA 24 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 201.
1913. Sheoparsan v Ramnandan, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 694 : 43 IA 91.
1914. Hook v Administrator-General, AIR 1921 PC 11 : (1921) ILR 48 Cal 499 : 48 IA 187; Abdul Sobhan v Beni Madhab, AIR 1934 Cal 430 : (1934) ILR 61 Cal 1.
1915. Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269 : 11 IA 37.
1916. Hook v Administrator-General, AIR 1921 PC 11 : (1921) 48 Cal 499 : 48 IA 187.
1917. Apprnanath v Kanailal, AIR 1950 Cal 300; Ramchandra v Ramchandra, AIR 1922 PC 80 : (1922) ILR 45 Mad 320 : 49 IA 129, p 138; Maharajadhiraj Sir Rameshwar Singh v Hitendra Singh, (1925) 29 Cal WN 413 (PC); Bank of Baroda v Fischo, AIR 1975 Cal 225 : (1974) 78 Cal WN 535; Suryanarayanrao v Rajeshwari, AIR 1966 AP 269; Abdul Ghani v Mahant Ram Saran, AIR 1976 J&K 72.
1918. Rajalakshmi v Banamali, AIR 1953 SC 33 : (1953) SCR 154; Burn and Co v Employees, AIR 1957 SC 38 : (1956) SCR 781 : (1957) SCJ 28 : (1957) SCA 1175; MSM Sarma v Sir Krishna Sinha, AIR 1960 SC 1186 : (1961) 1 SCR 96 : (1961) 2 SCJ 73 : (1961) 2 SCA 582; Daryao v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1961 SC 1457 : (1962) 1 SCR 574 : (1962) 1 SCJ 702.
1919. Staya Dhyan v Deo Ranjini Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941 : (1960) 3 SCR 590 : (1961) 1 SCA 10; Abdul Shukur v Kotwaleshwar, AIR 1958 All 54; Corp of Calcutta v Sirajuddin and Co, AIR 1957 Cal 399 : (1957) 61 Cal WN 1009; Benode Behari v State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 Cal 400; Braj Bhushan v Nigendra Singh, AIR 1977 Pat 129; YB Patil v YL Patil, AIR 1977 SC 392 : (1977) 1 SCR 320.

given at the earlier stage must be final.[1920] Thus, if the name of a party is struck off under O I, rule 10(2) as having been improperly joined a second application to join him as a party would not be permissible; but, this would not be the case where thereis dismissal of the suit under O IX, rule (5) since there has been no adjudication.[1921] Authorities under the Consolidation of Holdings Acts perform judicial acts; hence their decisions at each stage bind the parties for the purpose of subsequent stages.[1922] On the same principle, a decision given on a part of the matter in controversy between the parties at an earlier stage of the litigation would bar its re-agitation at a later stage.[1923] An order of remand made by a court is binding on it and cannot be reopened when the matter comes before it after remand;[1924] and, so when an appeal was presented in forma pauperis beyond the prescribed period, and no objection was taken on the score of limitation when the appeal was admitted, it was held that this objection was not available to the respondent at the hearing of the appeal.[1925] The remedy of a party who is aggrieved by an order disallowing costs is to appeal against it; and where that has not been done and the order becomes final, a suit for costs is barred;[1926] but, an appeal to the Supreme Court makes the entire subject matter available for adjudication including interlocutory orders passed either by the trial court or the high court. Such orders have only a provisional finality.[1927]

Res judicata applies also between two stages in the same litigation. Where a court, (whether a trial court or a higher court) has, at an earlier stage, decided the matter in one way, the parties cannot re-agitate the matter at a subsequent stage of the same proceeding.[1928] However: (i) interlocutory orders which have the force of a decree and terminate the proceedings, are distinct from (ii) those which are a mere step towards the decision of the dispute between the parties, i.e., towards decision by way of a decree or a final report.[1929] An order substituting the transferee of a decree in place of the original decree-holder was passed on the plea of the judgment-debtor. It was held that the judgment-debtor could not later take the plea that the transferee could not execute the decree. Res judicata applied.[1930] Where it is the general doctrine of res judicata that is to be applied, then the technical aspects of section 11, do not apply. Customary rights of a community, established by a decree of a competent court operates as res judicata in subsequent proceedings.[1931] Application was made for framing additional issues. Question in issue had been already considered and decided when an amendment of the plaint was refused. Application for the additional issue was held to be barred by res judicata.[1932]

The principle of res judicata has been held applicable to decisions given under the UP Agriculturists' Relief Act,[1933] under the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act[1934] and under the East Punjab Urban Rent Restriction Act.[1935] Decisions given in suits or proceedings under

---

1920. Prabhu Halwai v Fulchand, AIR 1969 Pat 16.
1921. Setabai Dei v Ramdhani, AIR 1966 Cal 60.
1922. Sita v State, AIR 1969 All 342 : (1967) ILR 2 All 775; Kanizan v Ghulam Nabi, AIR 1965 All 296 : (1964) All LJ 112.
1923. Mohammad Khalid v Chief Commr, AIR 1968 Del 13 : (1967) 69 Punj LR 279.
1924. Lalbati v Satchitanand, AIR 1960 Pat 418.
1925. Jalkaur v Pala Singh, AIR 1961 P&H 391.
1926. Bhagavati v Md Ismail, AIR 1959 AP 601.
1927. Jasraj v Hemraj, AIR 1977 SC 1011 : (1977) 2 SCC 155.
1928. Puranmal Bajoria v Nagarmal, AIR 1980 Pat 143.
1929. Khurai Jam Ongbe Thoibisana Devi v Ambubi Singh, AIR 1982 Gau 100.
1930. Ramakanta Das v Gita Devi Choudhury, AIR 1991 Ori 279.
1931. Gulam Abbas v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1981 SC 2198 : (1982) 1 SCC 71.
1932. Ghanshyam Das Agarwal v Ram Chander, AIR 1988 All 303.
1933. Munshi v Chiranji Singh, AIR 1956 All 237.
1934. Seshamma v Gangaraju, AIR 1957 AP 841 : (1956) Andh LT 717.
1935. Krishna Bansi v Gopichand, AIR 1963 P&H 163.

the Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940, would likewise be res judicata.[1936] So also, the decisions determining liability to pay octroi under municipal rules.[1937]

The question in this case before the Supreme Court was, whether a decision rendered by an Assistant Settlement Officer in a previous proceedings, viz a suo motu inquiry under section 15 of Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, would operate as res judicata in a subsequent proceedings initiated by one of the rival claimant taking his claim as ryot under section 56 of the Act. In a proceedings under section 15, settlement officer can grant a patta if he is satisfied that the landholder is entitled to it. He cannot do more than this. If the settlement officer does so, he oversteps the outer limits of his jurisdiction and his decision is of no value because he does something beyond, outside or in excess of the authority conferred on him by section 15. Any decision or order beyond the scope of section 15 is totally without jurisdiction and cannot operate as res judicata.[1938] Under the scheme of Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, the tribunal was required to apportion the amount according to the priorities depending upon the amount of compensation at the time of giving of the direction in question. It was, therefore, only to be expected that the tribunal would first give directions with regard to the payment of the principal amount and defer the payment of interest to a future date to the claims. In these circumstances, the issue with regard for interest in the subsequent application were not barred by res judicata.[1939] A person who received compensation under the Land Acquisition Act, under protest and secured a reference but was unsuccessful or partially successful, does come within the embargo created by section 18(1) of the Act and the second provision to sub-section (2) of section 31 and the non-obstante clause in section 28(A)(1) does not relive him from it. The doctrine of res judicata under section 11 of the CPC operates against such person.[1940] The word "revised" under sub-section 1 of section 44 of the WB Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, indicates that the state government or its officers shall be entitled to revise from time to time, the record of rights and to make necessary entries or corrections in the relevant column of record of rights in its settlement operations or as per exigency envisaged under the Act and the rules made therein. The order under section 44(3) becomes final, so long as there is no revision affected, the question of res judicata, therefore, does not arise and the previous appellate order does not preclude the authorities from revising the record of rights.[1941] The failure of the first plaintiff to claim the benefit under the Cochin Proclamation or under section 5 of the Kerala Land Reforms Act before the second preliminary decree was passed, is fatal; and he is precluded from raising the same contention in the proceedings for passing a final decree. The plaintiff, having failed to raise a defence which was available to him at the time of passing a preliminary decree, is precluded by principles of constructive res judicata from raising the same defence in the final decree proceedings.[1942]

The principles of res judicata are also applicable to petitions under Article 32[1943] and under Article 226[1944] even when the prior decisions have been given in writ proceedings in other

---

1936. Nikunja Behari v Jithendranath, AIR 1956 Cal 613.
1937. K Manilal and Co v Belgaum Muni Borough, AIR 1968 Mys 323.
1938. Mangu Ram v M Venketaraman, (1987) 2 SCC 228.
1939. PVG Rajugaru v State of Andhra Pradesh, (1990) 2 SCC 61.
1940. Babua Ram v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1995) 2 SCC 689.
1941. State of West Bengal v Suburban Agriculture Diary and Fisheries Pvt Ltd, (1993) Supp 4 SCC 674.
1942. Madhavan Nair v Rama Kutty Menon, AIR 1994 Ker 75.
1943. Daryao v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1961 SC 1457 : (1962) 1 SCR 574; Raja Jagannath v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1962 SC 1563; Phool Chand v Chandra Sankar, AIR 1964 SC 782.
1944. Radha Shyam v Patna Municipal Corp, AIR 1956 Pat 182; Shamsul v Asst Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1958 MP 82; Maolraj v Bafindgan, AIR 1960 P&H 602; Manaben v UOI, AIR 1960 Bom 196; courts,[1945] provided they are on the merits.[1946] Dismissal of a writ petition under Article 32 by the Supreme Court even if in limine and without any speaking order where such dismissal is not on the ground of laches must be presumed to be on the ground that no fundamental right was violated and would bar a similar petition under Article 226.[1947] In Hindustan Twyfords Ltd v Daulat Ram,[1948] the Punjab High court held that a decision in an earlier writ petition under Article 226 could not bar a subsequent civil suit even though the question raised in the suit was based on the same right claimed in the writ petition. In another case, however, the same high court said that in view of Daryoo v State of Uttar Pradesh[1949] the general principle of res judicata would be attracted where a decision in a writ petition is pleaded as a bar against a subsequent suit if the other conditions are satisfied.[1950] The question before the Supreme Court was, whether the dispute relating to dismissal of an employee decided by the Deputy Registrar of Madhya Pradesh, Co-operative Societies Act, could be re-agitated before a labour court under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. It was held, that no doubt section 11 of the CPC does not in terms apply to Deputy Registrar of Madhya Pradesh, Co-operative Societies Act because it is not a court, but a tribunal constituted under the Societies Act is given special jurisdiction. So, the principles laid down thereunder mutatis mutandis squarely apply to the procedure provided under the Act, hence, operates as res judicata.[1951]

[Footnote No. 1944 contd.]

The decision in Hindustan Twyfords case must be considered as not correct in view of Gulab Chand v State of Gujarat[1952] where the Supreme Court observed that there was no good reason to preclude such decision on matters of controversy in writ proceedings under Articles 226 or 32 of the Constitution from operating as res judicata in subsequent regular suits on the same matters in controversy between the same parties.[1953] Where a writ petition has failed and the petitioner therein has not been given leave to appeal to the Supreme Court the dismissal of the writ petition by the high court would bar a subsequent writ petition on the same grounds.[1954] Where a writ petition was filed at an intermediate stage of administrative proceedings against the petitioner, but was dismissed, such dismissal was held not to be a bar against another writ petition filed after the termination of the proceedings.[1955] In this case, the Supreme Court had given permission to file the subsequent petition; but, such permission would not have been granted if the earlier dismissal was a bar against a subsequent petition. It is only the issue raised in a prior petition to which the principle of res judicata would apply if raised in the

---

[Footnote No. 1944 contd.]
Makhan Lal v State of West Bengal, AIR 1963 Cal 6; Nagabhushanam v Ankam Ankaiah, AIR 1968 AP 74; TV Setty v Bangalore Municipality, AIR 1968 Mys 251; Bansi v Addl Director, Consolidation of Holdings, AIR 1967 P&H 28 : (1966) ILR 2 Punj 824; HA Sarkies v Dist Magistrate, Meerut, AIR 1966 All 458; Mohd Fiazuddin v Custodian, EPAP, AIR 1969 AP 158; Padmanabhan v State, AIR 1966 Ker 110; A Subhan v UOI, AIR 1966 Cal 570.

1945. Daryao v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1961 SC 1457 : (1962) 1 SCR 574; Jyothi Prakash v Chief Justice, Calcutta High Court, (1963) 67 Cal WN 16.
1946. Piara Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1962 P&H 498; PD Sharma v State Bank of India, AIR 1968 SC 958; SR Mills, Virudhunagar v Government of Madras, AIR 1968 SC 1196; KVS Co Ltd v UOI, AIR 1976 Del 51; Super Surgical Co v Desikan, AIR 1969 Mad 406; R Pandhubai v Bombay Cycle Importing Co, AIR 1970 Mad 474; Bijay Cotton Mills v RMM Singh, AIR 1965 Raj 213 : (1965) ILR 15 Raj 756.
1947. Metal Corp of India v UOI, AIR 1970 Cal 15 : (1969) 73 Cal WN 676.
1948. Hindustan Twyfords Ltd v Daulat Ram, AIR 1965 P&H 50 : (1964) 66 Punj LR 759.
1949. Daryoo v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1961 SC 1457.
1950. B Dass v State of Punjab, AIR 1965 P&H 342.
1951. RC Tiwari v MP State Co-op Marketing Federation Ltd, (1997) 5 SCC 125.
1952. Gulab Chand v State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 SC 1153 : (1965) 67 Bom LR 673.
1953. UOI v Nanak Singh, AIR 1968 SC 1370.
1954. Har Swarup v General Manager, Central Railway, AIR 1975 SC 202 : (1975) 3 SCC 621.
1955. State v BN Singh, AIR 1971 All 359 : (1971) All LJ 90.

subsequent petition. Thus, where no plea was raised as regards the validity of dismissal from service on the ground of incompetence of the dismissing authority, it would be competent for the party to raise it in a subsequent suit.[1956] There is no bar of res judicata to a petition under Article 32 in a case where the high court has earlier dismissed a petition under Article 226.[1957] The general principle of res judicata has been applied to petitions for habeas corpus.[1958] (But see SP Sharma v UOI).[1959] The principle of res judicata has been applied to adjudications by industrial tribunals in a large number of decisions.[1960]

The Supreme Court in some if its recent decisions has expressed doubt about the extension of the sophisticated doctrine of constructive res judicata to industrial law which is governed by special methodology of conciliation, adjudication and considerations of peaceful industrial relations where collective bargaining and pragmatic justice claims precedence over formalised rules of decision based on individual contests, specific causes of action and findings on particular issues.[1961] In NR Co-op Society v Industrial Tribunal, Rajasthan,[1962] the Supreme Court has, however, held that the decision of the high court holding that the dispute in question was an industrial dispute would operate as res judicata in a subsequent proceeding. In Workmen v Straw Board Mfg Co,[1963] the Supreme Court assumed that the general principle of res judicata would apply to industrial adjudications. In Punjab Co-op Bank Ltd v RS Bhatia,[1964] the Supreme Court held that a finding by the labour court on the question whether the respondent was a workman or not would be a bar to the same issue raised in a subsequent proceeding under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. The recent trend in the decisions of the Supreme Court appears to be in favour of the view that the general principle of res judicata would apply to industrial adjudications. Where the question was as to whether a person is or is not a workman as defined in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, a decision therein by the tribunal is not res judicata in subsequent proceedings under Payment of Wages Act, 1936.[1965] The general principle of res judicata has been extended to proceedings under other statutes, such as Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation 3 of 1872 under section 11, of which a decision by the settlement officer has the force of a decree[1966] and operates as a decision of quasi-judicial authorities.[1967]

While thus, the law is settled that the principles of res judicata can be applied to cases which do not fall within the four corners of section 11, it is equally well-settled that where a case does fall within its scope, the conditions laid down therein must be strictly complied with and that, if they are not, it is not permissible to hold that the matter is res judicata on general principles, as that would render the section nugatory; but, in cases where neither of the two proceedings

---

1956. Nawab Hussain v State, AIR 1969 All 466.
1957. Niranjan Singh v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1972 SC 2215 : (1972) 2 SCC 542.
1958. PL Lakhanpal v UOI, AIR 1967 SC 908 : [1967] 1 SCR 433.
1959. SP Sharma v UOI, AIR 1968 Del 156.
1960. Burn and Co v Employees, AIR 1957 SC 38 : (1957) SCJ 28 : (1957) SCA 1175; Walford Transport Ltd v First Industrial Tribunal, AIR 1963 Cal 275; River Steam Navigation Co v Labour Court, AIR 1963 Ass 86.
1961. Mumbai Kamgar Sabha v Abdulbhai, AIR 1976 SC 1455 : (1976) 3 SCC 832 : (1976) SCR 3 591; SS Rly Co v Workers' Union, AIR 1969 SC 513 : (1969) 2 SCR 131 : (1969) 1 LLJ 734; Agra Electric Supply Co v Alladin, AIR 1970 SC 512 : (1970) 1 SCR 808 : (1969) 2 SCC 598; Workmen v Balmer Lawrie and Co, AIR 1964 SC 728 : (1964) 5 SCR 344; Sahadara Sahranpur Light Rly v Workers Union, AIR 1969 SC 513 : (1969) 2 SCR 131 : (1969) 1 LLJ 734.
1962. NR Co-op Society v Industrial Tribunal, Rajasthan, AIR 1967 SC 1182.
1963. Workmen v Straw Board Mfg Co, AIR 1974 SC 1132 : (1974) SCC 681.
1964. Punjab Co-op Bank Ltd v RS Bhatia, AIR 1975 SC 1898 : (1975) SCC 399.
1965. National Tobacco Co v Kalidas, AIR 1962 AP 160.
1966. Ram Kisto v Dhankristo, AIR 1969 SC 204.
1967. Lalchand v Radhakishan, AIR 1977 SC 789 : (1977) 2 SCR 522.

or only one of them is a suit, the general principle of res judicata shorn of the limitations of this section, is to be applied.[1968] Section 11 prescribes the conditions under which the decision in a suit can be res judicata and where it fails to satisfy those conditions, it cannot be held to be res judicata on general principles.[1969] So when the prior suit was tried by a court not competent to entertain it, its decision could not be held to be res judicata on general principles.[1970] The rule that a decision on jurisdiction in a suit does not operate as res judicata applies also to decisions by administrative tribunals.[1971] When findings of a rent controller are allowed to become final, tenant is barred by principal analogous to res judicata to take a contrary stand in subsequent proceedings.[1972] When the first respondent retired from government service, the state moved the prescribed authority under the Act for an order of eviction under section 5 of UP Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupant) Act, 1972. On 22 March 1978, the prescribed authority passed an order for eviction dismissing the application by observing that "it is not possible to hold that the house in question is public premises or that the opposite party is unauthorised occupant of it". After the said order, the appellant sent notice to the first respondent determining the lease, and on the expiry of the period specified in that notice, the appellant moved a fresh application under section 4 of the Act, before the prescribed authority, even this time the application dismissed on the principle of res judicata in that earlier order dated 22 March 1978, would operate as barred against the appellant from seeking eviction of the first respondent under the provisions of the said Act.

As per the order dated 22 March 1978, the prescribed authority found that the building belonged to the government estate and that there was no evidence that the tenancy was terminated before filing the application. In the present proceedings, there was no dispute that the notice was subsequently served on the first respondent determining the lease. If so, can the respondent be treated as an unauthorised occupant even if it is true that the building belongs to a government estate. It was held that there is no question of any bar of res judicata on the strength of the order dated 22 March 1978, particularly because there was a finding in that order that the building belonged to a government estate.[1973] Section 15 of Kerala Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act is a provision specifically incorporated to ensure finality of the decisions once rendered under the Act and to prohibit re-opening of such decisions which had become final. The object of this provision and that of section 11 of the CPC was more or less the same, namely that there should be end to litigation and no man should be vexed twice over for the same cause.[1974] Once the question of stay of the proceedings before the debt recovery tribunal having been agitated before the tribunal and having been already decided by the tribunal against the petitioner, it could not be re-agitated at the instance of the Petitioner by a separate application. A person cannot be allowed to agitate the same matter again before the same tribunal.[1975] The Gauhati High Court, relying upon Guda Vijayaluxmi v Guda Ramchandra Sekhara Sastry[1976] held that the principle of res judicata applies in certain cases also in a matter

---

1968. Jodhan v Board of Revenue, AIR 1967 All 442.
1969. Janakiramier v Neelakantier, AIR 1962 SC 633; Radhey Shyam v Beni Ram, AIR 1967 All 28.
1970. Sheik Md Ali v Hunter, AIR 1943 Oudh 338 (FB); Premchand v Dhanmal, AIR 1954 Mad 384 : (1953) ILR Raj 505; Neelkanta v Kesavan, AIR 1956 TC 161 (FB) : (1956) ILR TC 87; Vishu v Bhagadu, (1957) 99 Cal LJ 72; Rajalakshmi Dasi v Banamali, AIR 1953 SC 33 : (1953) SCR 154.
1971. Sushil Kumar Ghosh v Revenue Officer, AIR 1976 Cal 1.
1972. Prahba Mfg Industrial Co-op Society v Banwari Lal, (1989) 2 SCC 69.
1973. State of Uttar Pradesh v Roop Lal Sharma, (1997) 2 SCC 62.
1974. PN Govindan v Abdul Kri Subaida Beevi, AIR 1998 Ker 50.
1975. Tapan Kumar Mukhoty v Bank of Madura Ltd, AIR 1999 Cal 305.
1976. Guda Vijayaluxmi v Guda Ramchandra Sekhara Sastry, AIR 1981 SC 1143 : (1981) 2 SCC 646.

under the Hindu Marriage Act.[1977] When the only son of the first wife accepted for a long time two—fifth share as a rightful share in the land in one village, and the Deputy Director of Consolidation, ordered accordingly, that decision becomes res judicata, it has to be so for all intents and purposes in the second village as well.[1978] The question of maintainability of the eviction petition on the ground of non-compliance of the statutory provisions as aforesaid was not heard and decided by the court. It was rather ordered to be considered along with other issues. It was held that the principle of res judicata does not apply.[1979] Where the respondent—claimant was neither a party to previous proceedings under Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, and nor he was impleaded in the previous proceedings, and as there was non-compliance of specific provisions contained in the proviso to section 110A(I) to the effect that the person who has not joined the application in a claim for compensation, shall be impleaded as respondents, then the judgement in previous proceedings cannot operate as res judicata as against him.[1980] Where a complaint under the Advocates Act, 1961 filed by a client against his advocate alleging that the advocate was negligent in discharge of his duties qua the client and had failed to act with due diligence and promptitude, was dismissed by the State Bar Council and its decision was affirmed by the Bar Council of India by a speaking order on merits, the decision of the Bar Council of India would operate as res judicata in the subsequent civil suit filed by the client against the advocate claiming damages on ground that the advocate was negligent.[1981]

The expression "former suit" does not exclude the application of the rule when suits are tried together. (See note "Suits tried together : One judgment" above.)

The general principle of res judicata has been extended to proceedings in a probate court, interlocutory orders in the same suit, proceedings under the Madras Religious Endowments Act, applications under section 26F of the Bengal Tenancy Act,[1982] judgments under the Land Acquisition Act[1983] and to awards made under the Arbitration Act, 1940 provided the subject matter is the same in both the earlier and the later reference.[1984] An award by an arbitrator is valid and binding until it is set aside and will operate as res judicata in subsequent proceedings between the same parties either in court or in a later arbitration proceeding.[1985] The question whether the principle of constructive res judicata applies to arbitration proceedings, is not yet settled. However, if an arbitrator decides not to go into a dispute on the ground that he has no jurisdiction, a subsequent reference on that dispute is not barred;[1986] but, the principle, though widely extended, does not apply to Orders made in exercise of administrative power.[1987] Nor

---

1977. Basu Deb Nath v Diptikona Nath, AIR 1998 Gau 107.
1978. Hardan Singh v Deputy Director of Consolidation, (1993) Supp 1 SCC 457.
1979. Prafulla Chandra Chadhoi v Sarat Rout, AIR 1998 Ori 41.
1980. United India Insurance Ltd v Sharda Adyanathaya, AIR 1998 Kant 141 (FB).
1981. Maghraj Calla v Kajodimal, AIR 1994 Raj 11.
1982. Mangal Pershad Dichit v Girija, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 51; Akhoy Kumari v Nalini Ranjan, AIR 1950 Cal 493 : (1950) 54 Cal WN 815 (execution proceedings); Balai v Nibaram, AIR 1947 Cal 410 : (1947) 51 Cal WN 644. See also section 26F of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885. Ankapada v Yadlapalli, AIR 1946 Mad 509 : (1946) ILR Mad 566. See also Madras Religious Endowments Act, 1959. Krishnabai v Baburao, AIR 1978 Bom 290. See section 38, Order of the Bombay Tenancy Act 1885; A Thakurdas v A Venilal, AIR 1977 Kant 60 (Introductory Orders); Koran v Kamala Shetty, AIR 1978 Ker 172; Govindan v Raman, AIR 1978 Ker 217 (deserver of tribunals under Kerala Law Reforms Act, 1963).
1983. State of Jammu and Kashmir v Sanna Ullah, AIR 1966 J&K 45.
1984. Ashoka Construction Co v UOI, AIR 1969 Tri 19.
1985. PC Ray and Co v UOI, AIR 1971 Cal 512.
1986. Jiwnani Eng Works v UOI, AIR 1978 Cal 228; Talchar Coal Fields v Central Coal Fields, AIR 1978 Cal 449.
1987. Abhinav Vidyatrith v Charity Commr, AIR 1967 Bom 194 : (1964) ILR Bom 819 : (1963) 65 Bom LR 459; Rewa Coal Fields v Central Govt, AIR 1969 MP 174.

can it be invoked where a statutory provision such as section 64A of the Andhra Pradesh Estates Abolition Act lays down cases wherein it is to be applied.[1988] (For execution proceedings, see comments on "Orders in Execution Proceedings" below.)

[s 11.28] Probate proceedings

When a question of the relationship of parties has been decided in a probate proceeding, a subsequent suit between the same parties involving the same question is barred by the rule of res judicata, although the words of the section are not strictly applicable. This was decided by the Privy Council in the case of Kalipada v Dwijapada[1989] confirming a decision of the Calcutta High Court[1990] and approving that court's dissent from previous decisions to the contrary.[1991] The under-noted cases[1992] though not expressly mentioned, must be treated as overruled. Any order passed after contention in a probate proceeding is res judicata in any subsequent proceeding against the caveators who contested it.[1993] In a Bombay case,[1994] A, alleging himself to be the executor of B's Will applied for probate of the will, but C, B's widow, opposed the application and the probate was refused on the ground that the Will was not proved. C then sued A to recover her husband's property and A was precluded from contending that he was entitled to possession as B's executor. The court observed that though the judgment of the probate court refusing probate to A does not operate as a judgment in rem yet it operates as res judicata between A and C under section 83 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881 (now replaced by section 295, Indian Succession Act, 1925, read with section 11 of the Code).

A decision on a question of relationship in a proceeding on an application for letters of administration after trial of an issue is binding as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties.[1995] Conversely, the opinion expressed by the ordinary civil Courts on the question of genuineness of a Will is not res judicata in proceedings for probate or letters of administration-cum-testamento annexo in courts having exclusive jurisdiction to grant the same.[1996] It is not within the province of a probate court to decide questions of title to properties disposed off by the Will and consequently, where an application for letters of administration was dismissed under O XVII, rule 1 for non-appearance of the applicant, the expression of an opinion by the court on an issue as to estoppel with respect to the title to the properties would not be res judicata on the rights of the parties thereto.[1997]

[s 11.29] Succession Proceedings

Sections 372 to 384 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 deals with issuance of succession certificates and require that the question arising under these sections should be determined

---

1988. M Venkataratnam v M Ramdas, AIR 1971 AP 281.
1989. Kalipada v Dwijapada, AIR 1930 PC 22 : 57 IA 24 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 201.
1990. Dwijapada Das v Kalipada Das, AIR 1927 Cal 421 : (1926) 31 Cal WN 898.
1991. Arunmoyi v Mohendra Nath, (1893) ILR 20 Cal 888; Lalit Mohan v Radharaman, (1911) 15 Cal WN 1021.
1992. Chintaman v Ramchandra, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 589; Maqubal Shah v Muhammad, (1918) PR 49, p 167.
1993. Nazbatuddown v Mirza Kurratulain, (1903) ILR 31 Cal 186; Venkaturatnam v Yanamadra, AIR 1924 Mad 578 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 383; Babu Lal v Hari Baksh, (1918) PR 13, p 60.
1994. Kalyanchand v Sitabai, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 309. See also Brendon v Sundrabai, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 272.
1995. Maung Hmat v Ma Htay, AIR 1923 Rang 257 : (1923) 1 Rang 258.
1996. Rustomji v Manekba, AIR 1955 Bom 447 : (1955) ILR Bom 821; Avadh Narain v Sahi Dube, (1958) ILR 2 All 1; Chintamoni v Chari, AIR 1962 Ori 224.
1997. Hen Nolini v Isolye Saroj Bashini, AIR 1962 SC 1471.

by summary proceeding. By summary proceeding, it is meant that the court should decide the question by a short inquiry leading up to and resulting in a rapid decision. The nature of this inquiry must depend on circumstances of each case. Thus, where the court feels that the question involved is not capable of decision in summary proceeding under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, it can leave the parties to establish their rights in a regular suit. Section 387 of the Act also enables the unsuccessful party to file a suit. The proceeding for grant of succession certificate being summary in nature, the finding arrived at in the said proceeding cannot operate as res judicata in subsequent proceeding.[1998]

The findings recorded regarding will, in an application for grant of succession certificate, cannot operate res judicata in subsequent suit by the same applicant praying for mandatory injunction against the defendant, that the defendant be directed to supply him locker number obtained by the defendant on the basis of the alleged will as set up by the defendant, giving him the right to operate the locker. The fact that the issues were raised and evidence was recorded in the succession certificate proceedings is not relevant.[1999]

[s 11.30] Orders in Execution Proceedings and Explanation VII

Prior to the insertion of Explanation VII into the section by the Amendment Act, 1976, it was well-settled that though the section in terms did not apply to execution proceedings and the orders made therein the general principle of res judicata; which is apart from the provisions of the section, applied, and that therefore, an order made in an execution proceeding bound the parties and those claiming through them and operate, as res judicata in a subsequent execution proceeding or a subsequent suit between the same parties. The new Explanation VII does two things: (i) it applies in express terms the provisions of this section to execution proceedings; and (ii) provides an artificial construction by laying down that references in the section to any suit, issue or former suit shall be construed as references, respectively, to a proceeding for the execution of the decree, a question arising in such proceeding and the former proceeding for the execution of the decree. Two results would follow:

(i) that in view of the express extension of the section to execution proceedings, the general principle of res judicata which used to be invoked apart from the provisions of the section can no longer be invoked; and

(ii) that the conditions for the application of the section set out earlier, must be satisfied. Such a compliance was also held to be necessary in a number of decisions which applied the general principle of res judicata to execution proceedings.

The leading case on the application of the general principle of res judicata to execution proceedings and from which the later decisions stem is Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari,[2000] decided in 1883 by the Privy Council. The principle therein laid down was that this section was not exhaustive and that the principle of res judicata still remained distinct from the limited provisions of the section. Prior to that decision, the judicial opinion generally was that section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 (corresponding to the present section), was not applicable to execution proceedings, presumably because the application of the section was confined to suits. The Privy Council held that though the section in terms did not apply to execution proceedings, the principle of res judicata applied to such proceedings. The question 1998. Binod Sahu v Chandrama Sahu, AIR 2003 Ori 11. See Also Savitri Devi v Manorama Bai, AIR 1998 MP 114; VK Kamalam v Panchali Amma, AIR 1988 Ker 265.

---

1999. District Red Cross Society v Joginder Pal, AIR 2002 P&H 5.
2000. Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269 : (1983) 11 IA 37.

in that case was whether a decision in the course of execution proceedings, that the decree which according to its true construction awarded future mesne profits, operated as res judicata so as to preclude the court from trying the question over again at a subsequent stage of the proceedings. The High Court of Allahabad held that it did not. The Privy Council reversed that view and observed:

> The matter decided by Mr Probyn was not decided in a former suit, but in a proceeding of which the application in which the orders reversed by the High Court were made was merely a continuation. It was as binding between the parties and those claiming under them as an interlocutory judgment in a suit is binding upon the parties in every proceeding in that suit, or as a final judgment in a suit is binding upon them in carrying the judgment into execution. The binding force of such a judgment depends not upon s 13, Act 10 of 1877 (s 11 of the present Code), but upon general principles of law. If it were not binding, there would be no end to litigation. The parties were bound by the decision of Mr Probyn, who, whether right or wrong, had decided that it did (that is, that the decree awarded future mesne profits): a decision which, not having been appealed, was final and binding upon the parties and those claiming under them.

The ratio decidendi of Ram Kirpal's case is that if a particular construction is put on a decree in proceedings on a former application for execution, it is not competent to the court to treat that construction as erroneous and put another construction on it as a subsequent stage of the execution proceedings.[2001] Parties cannot raise a second time, in the same suit or execution proceedings an issue that has already been determined either expressly or by necessary implication.[2002] This is so even if the question is about jurisdiction of the court.[2003] The judicial committee held in Mungul Pershad v Girja Kant,[2004] that a decision on an application for execution after hearing both the parties that the application is not barred by the law of limitation, though erroneous, is binding on the parties in subsequent proceedings in execution. Their Lordships said:

> The order was made by a court having competent jurisdiction to try and determine whether the decree was barred by limitation. No appeal was preferred against it... Admitting for the sake of argument, but only for the sake of argument, that the decree was barred when the...application was made,...still his order, though erroneous, was valid, not having been reversed.

Similarly, a decision that an application for execution is barred by limitation, though erroneous, is conclusive between the parties and the question cannot be re-tried on a subsequent application for execution,[2005] but not the decision of the transferee court, after it had sent a return of non-satisfaction on the ground that it had been functus officio. Where the judgment-debtors did not raise any objection as to limitation against execution of the decree against them nor to the revival of the execution proceedings, they would be debarred at a subsequent stage to 2001. Beni Ram v Nandu Mal, (1885) ILR 7 All 102 : (1885) 11 IA 181; Venkatanarsimha v Papammah, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 54.

---

2002. Venkamamidi v Nannapaneni, AIR 1943 Mad 449 : (1943) ILR Mad 804; Sadashiv v Raja Kishtappa Naik, AIR 1950 Hyd 15; Behari Lal v Majid, (1901) II R 24 All 138; Bhawanishankar v Narainshankar, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 536; Doorvas v Govindaswamy, AIR 1921 Mad 315 : (1921) 40 Mad LJ 556.
2003. Prahlad Dora v State, AIR 1969 Ori 21; Gauranga Chandra v Naba Kumar Dey, AIR 1965 Tri 1.
2004. Akay Kumari v Nalini Ranjan, AIR 1950 Cal 493 : (1950) 54 Cal WN 815; Raja Ramand v Hussain Tewar, AIR 1921 PC 23 : (1917) 40 Mad LJ 197 : 48 IA 45; Sheoraj v Kameshar, (1902) ILR 24 All 282; Prokash Chandra v Baradakishore, AIR 1934 Cal 282 : (1934) 61 ILR Cal 234; Delhi and London Bank v Orchard, (1877) 3 Cal 47 : 4 IA 127, is not inconsistent with the later decisions. See also Mr Leith's reply as reported in (1877) ILR 3 Cal 47.
2005. Manjunath v Venkatesh, (1892) ILR 6 Bom 54; Bandey v Ramesh Chandra, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 65.

challenge the sale on the ground that the revival was bad.[2006] A decision by the execution court on the question of the liability of the property of a judgment-debtor for attachment and sale will be res judicata and binding on the parties.[2007]

The principle laid down in Ram Kirpal's case referred to above is that when a question has been raised in an execution proceeding and decided, the decision, even if erroneous, is binding on the parties, and the same question cannot be retried in subsequent proceeding in execution or in a subsequent suit between the same parties;[2008] in other words, that the principle of res judicata is applicable to proceedings in execution. This principle has been followed by the high courts of India.[2009] The question of constructive res judicata in execution proceedings came before the Supreme Court in Mohan Lal Goenka v Binoy Krishan Mukherjee[2010] wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court following the earlier decision of Privy Council held that the principles of constructive res judicata will be applicable even in execution proceedings;[2011] but, this principle does not apply, unless the parties to the subsequent proceeding were also parties to the former proceeding[2012] and had litigated under the same title.[2013] Nor does it apply, unless the former application was heard and decided. Hence, an order dismissing an application for execution for default of appearance,[2014] or allowing it to be struck off "for the present",[2015] or allowing it to be withdrawn with liberty to present a fresh application,[2016] is no bar to a fresh application for execution. Similarly, where an application for execution under O XXI, rule 32 is dismissed on the ground that the decree-holder had not given the judgment-debtor an opportunity of obeying it, a second application for execution after such opportunity had been given is not barred as res judicata;[2017] but, dismissal of an execution application for default of appearance by the decree-holder after a notice to the opposite party who appears in response

---

2006. Prem Lata v Lakshman Prasad, AIR 1970 SC 1525 : (1970) 3 SCC 440; Pushpa v Ganpat Singh, AIR 1977 Raj 216.
2007. Bhagwat Pershad v Abdul Basit, AIR 1962 P&H 379.
2008. Shyam Sunder v Mathura Prasad, AIR 1948 Pat 192; Benny Krishna v Mohanlal, AIR 1950 Cal 287; Bal Mukund v Firm Prithiraj, AIR 1951 Pat 333; Habibur Rahman v Vijaya Charan, AIR 1959 Pat 31.
2009. Shyam Sunder v Ramdas, (1946) ILR 25 Pat 297; Dunna Venkata Rao v Surya Rao, AIR 1950 Mad 2 : (1950) ILR Mad 39; Kapur Chand v Kanhaiya Lal, AIR 1924 All 34 : (1923) ILR 45 All 735; in appeal from AIR 1922 All 247 : (1922) ILR 44 All 130 (decision as to which persons are liable in execution and what property is liable to be taken in execution); Doorvas v Govindaswami, AIR 1921 Mad 315 : (1921) 40 Mad LJ 556 (erroneous finding of application to wrong court); Shamrao v Malkarajun, AIR 1931 Bom 451 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 797 (finding that a judgment-debtor is not an agriculturist); Mir Hassan Ali v Sanli Begum, AIR 1931 Bom 507 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 1139; Venkatachalapathi v Venkatapapayya, AIR 1932 Mad 86 : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 495; Rangappa v Rindawa, AIR 1954 Bom 139 : (1953) ILR Bom 993, where it was further observed that the word "suit" might in certain circumstances include 'execution proceedings'; Sadhucharan v Sudarashan, AIR 1965 Ori 2; Girdharan Prasad v State of Bihar, AIR 1968 Pat 77; Maqbool Alam v Khodaija, AIR 1966 SC 1194; Presidency Industrial Bank v LH Industries, AIR 1969 Bom 84 : (1968) 70 Bom LR 373; R Rajamma v A Saraswathamma, AIR 1973 AP 132; Jambu Anna v Shri Bapu, AIR 1972 Bom 141 : (1971) ILR Bom 772 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 606; Revati Devi v Khilali Ram, AIR 1967 Del 199.
2010. Mohan Lal Goenka v Binoy Krishan Mukherjee, AIR 1953 SC 65.
2011. Kamla Bai v Mangi Lal Dulli Chand, (1987) 4 SCC 585.
2012. Gnanambal v Parvathi, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 477; Harendra Lal v Sham Lal, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 210.
2013. Gourmoni v Jugat Chandra, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 57, p 63.
2014. Ram Nardin v Basudeo, AIR 1947 Pat 298 : (1946) ILR 25 Pat 595; Lakshmibai v Ravji, AIR 1929 Bom 217 : (1929) 31 Bom LR 400; Hazura Singh v Jewon Singh, AIR 1958 P&H 339; Jethmul v Sakina, AIR 1961 Raj 59.
2015. Thakur Persha v Sheikah Fakirullah, (1895) ILR 17 All 106 : 22 IA 44.
2016. Hari v Yamunabai, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 35.
2017. Kishore Bun Mohunt v Prosunno Coomar, (1894) 21 Cal 784 : 21 IA 89.

to it, would amount to abandonment and bar a subsequent application.[2018] On the other hand, where the judgment-debtor despite of notice under O XXI, rule 66 absents himself and this does not raise any objection to the sale, he would be barred at a subsequent stage to raise such objections against the sale which were available to him and which he might and ought to have raised.[2019]

There can be no doubt that when an application for setting aside the sale is made, the order passed by the executing court either allowing or dismissing the application, will be final and effective, subject to an appeal that may be made under the provisions of the CPC. It is inconceivable that even though no appeal has been filed against an order dismissing an application for setting aside the sale, another application for setting aside the sale can be made without first having the orders set aside. Such an application will be barred by the principle of res judicata.[2020] An order for arrest of the judgment-debtor made after notice to him and inquiry has been held to mean a finding that he has had since the date of the decree means to pay. That finding is binding in a subsequent proceeding.[2021] Further, the decision in the former application must have been necessary for the determination of the application. Thus, if A applies for execution, and B pleads limitation, and neither party appears on the date fixed for the hearing of the objection, and or, A's application is dismissed and B's objection is disallowed, B is not precluded from raising the plea of limitation on a fresh application for execution made by A, the reason being that A's application being dismissed for default, it was not necessary for the court to decide the question of limitation.[2022] Where the execution case is dismissed for default after the failure of the judgment-debtor to show cause after a notice under O XXI, rule 22 had been served on him and an order is passed which had the effect that the decree was now capable for execution.[2023] Where without adopting the special procedure prescribed in O XXI, rule 53, a money decree was sold in execution and the auction-purchaser applied to execute the decree, and his application was ordered after hearing the judgment-debtor, it is not open to the latter at a later stage to raise the objection as to the validity of the sale as the same must be deemed to be constructively res judicata.[2024] Where a judgment-debtor filed a petition objecting to execution on the ground that it was barred by limitation and that was dismissed for default and an application to restore the same was also dismissed, he is barred by principles of res judicata from raising the question of limitation in a fresh objection petition.[2025] But, where, in the execution proceedings, an application for reviewing of shares of parties in the property as determined in preliminary decree for partition of suit property is rejected by the executing court on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to modify the decree, the subsequent fresh application by the parties for modification of judgment and decree filed before the court which passed the judgment is not barred by res judicata.[2026]

2018. Ram Chandra Nahaka v Bharat Ram, AIR 1967 Ori 38 : (1964) ILR Cut 494.
2019. Ghanshyamdas v Ghambir Mal, AIR 1965 Raj 155 : (1964) ILR 14 Raj 431.
2020. Ganpat Singh v Kailash Shanker, (1987) 3 SCC 146.
2021. Ulahannan Job v The Prudential Trust, AIR 1965 Ker 16 : (1964) ILR 2 Ker 200.
2022. Bholanath v Prafulla, (1901) ILR 10 Cal 122; Kashinath v Ramchandra, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 408; Nageshwar v Jai Bahadur, AIR 1932 Pat 357 : (1932) ILR 11 Pat 607.
2023. Aswini Kumar v Karamat Ali, AIR 1948 Cal 165 : (1948) 82 Cal LJ 278.
2024. Shanmugavelu v Karuppanna Swami, AIR 1954 Mad 1071.
2025. Soni Dibya v Kanhucharan, AIR 1961 Ori 86; Ram Narain v Basudev, AIR 1947 Pat 298 : (1946) ILR 25 Pat 595. See also Bhagwati v Radhakishan, AIR 1950 Pat 354; Biswanath v Subala Dasi, AIR 1962 Cal 272.
2026. Jagdish Chand Gupta v Rajinder Parshad, AIR 2002 P&H 251.

[s 11.30.1] Constructive Res Judicata in Execution Proceedings

Where an assignee of a decree applied for execution under O XXI, rule 16, and the judgment-debtor took no objection to the validity of the decree, it was held that he was not debarred on the principle of Explanation IV from impeaching the validity of the decree in a subsequent suit;[2027] but, the principle of Explanation IV has been applied to a subsequent stage of the execution proceeding. Thus, if the judgment-debtor, being entitled and having an opportunity to raise a plea in bar of execution, eg, a plea of limitation, fails to do so and execution is ordered, he will be precluded from raising the same plea at a subsequent stage of the execution proceedings[2028] unless the case falls within the rule that there cannot be an estoppel against statute.[2029] Where a plea of limitation was raised and subsequently given up, the judgment-debtor was held to be precluded from raising the same at a later stage.[2030] The same rule would apply to the case where the decree-holder fails to raise a question which would have sustained his attachment but which he did not raise in the former execution proceedings where objection to the attachment was taken by the judgment-debtor.[2031] His legal representative who did not have proper notice of the execution proceedings would not be so precluded on the ground that he had no opportunity to raise the plea.[2032] Also, where A applies for execution of a decree against B, and an order is made directing execution to issue, B cannot in a subsequent application for execution raise the plea that the first application for execution was barred by limitation.[2033] Where the heirs of a deceased judgment-debtor were brought on record and orders passed directing execution and transferring the proceedings to another court, it was held that it was not open to the legal representative to challenge the correctness of those orders at a later stage of the execution.[2034] Again, when a judgment-debtor objected in 2027. Ram Charan v Salik Ram, AIR 1930 All 628 : (1930) ILR 52 All 217; Mangat Rai v Duli Chand, AIR 1933 All 57 : (1933) ILR 55 All 735.

---

2028. Sankar Ramkrishna v Daga Tanaji, AIR 1949 Bom 79 : (1948) ILR Bom 517 : (1948) 50 Bom LR 610; Sham Sundar v Dhiruendra, AIR 1950 Pat 465 : (1950) ILR 29 Pat 732; Promotha v Babu, AIR 1945 Cal 335 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 260; Harishchandra v Dinesh, AIR 1946 Cal 375 : (1946) 50 Cal WN 667; Venkoteranga v Sithama, AIR 1941 Mad 440; Nanda Rai v Raghunandan, (1885) ILR 7 All 282 (limitation); Desaiappa v Dundappa, (1920) ILR Bom 44 227 (limitation); Gadigappa v Shidappa, AIR 1924 Bom 495 : (1924) ILR 48 Bom 638 (limitation); Prabhulingappa v Gurunath, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1389 (limitation); Raghubar v Gokaran, AIR 1926 Oudh 291 : (1926) 1 Luck 171; Rajitagiripathy v Bhanani, AIR 1924 Mad 673 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 641 (transfer of decree, limitation); Sher Singh v Daya Ram, (1891) ILR 13 All 564 (execution barred under O XXIII, rule 1); Dambar Singh v Kaliansingh, AIR 1922 All 27 : (1922) ILR 44 All 350 (decree not capable of execution); Brajlal v Atkinson, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 639 (non-service of notice on transfer or under O XXI, rule 16); Taj Singh v Jagan Lal, (1916) ILR 38 All 289 (validity of transfer of decree); Govinda v Krishna, AIR 1923 Mad 649 : (1923) 45 Mad LJ 71 (whether decree capable of execution); Makund v Saraswati, (1919) 29 Cal LJ 245 (claim for mesne profits); Madilidi v Satti, (1918) 35 Mad LJ 312 (propriety of order of attachment). See also Ramchandra v Shrinivas, AIR 1922 Bom 238 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 467; Mahadeo v Trimbakbhat, (1919) 21 Bom LR 344; Dip Prakash v Bohra Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1926 All 71 : (1926) ILR 48 All 201 (disobedience to decree for injunction); Daw Ohn Bwin v U Ba, AIR 1930 Rang 213 : (1930) ILR 8 Rang 302; Lalit Mohan v Sarat Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 855 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 752; Venkappa v Lakshmi Kant, AIR 1956 Hyd 7 (FB) : (1955) ILR Hyd 797; Abdul Aziz v Official Receiver, (1958) 2 Mad LJ 526; Karana Kodan Gowda v Manika Pai, AIR 1959 Ker 384 : (1958) ILR Ker 314.
2029. Sham Sundar v Dhirendra, AIR 1950 Pat 465 : (1950) ILR 29 Pat 465; Kameshwar v Krishnanand, AIR 1955 Pat 423.
2030. Lakkarji v Bhagavati Deem, (1957) ILR 2 All 118.
2031. Sha Shivara v Edappakath Ayissa Bi, AIR 1949 PC 302 : (1949) 54 Cal WN 55 (PC).
2032. Adisesha Ayyar v Pappammal, AIR 1950 Mad 341.
2033. Drigbijay v Bhagwan, AIR 1930 Oudh 65 : (1885) ILR 7 All 282 : (1930) 5 Luck 458; Rama Adhar v Nemkumar, AIR 1953 All 139.
2034. Akshoy Kumari v Nalini Rajan, AIR 1950 Cal 493 : (1951) ILR 2 Cal 240.

an execution proceeding that an attachment was not legal and proper, only because the decree was declaratory, it was not open to him to object to the sale on the ground that the property was not liable under section 60 to attachment and sale.[2035] An order for sale after service of notice to the judgment-debtor implies the finding that the property was saleable. It is not then open to the judgment-debtor, whether before or after the sale, to object that the property is not saleable by reason of section 49(M) of the Bihar Tenancy Act.[2036] If the decree has been executed on previous applications, the judgment-debtor cannot in a subsequent application object that the decree is merely declaratory.[2037] An objection to execution on the ground that the decree sought to be executed is a nullity is one which the court executing it can decide and if such an objection is not taken and there is an order directing execution, the question is res judicata and it is not open to the judgment-debtor to raise the objection at a later stage.[2038] When properties are sold in execution of a decree in contravention of some provisions of law, the question has been raised whether the judgment-debtor is barred by principles of res judicata from raising the question of the validity of the sale subsequently. The preponderance of judicial opinion is in favour of the view that he is barred.[2039]

The principle of res judicata including constructive res judicata operates in execution proceedings and the order made under rule 22, clauses (1) and (2) of O XXI, CPC, which results in closure of preliminary stage and commencement of next stage operates as res judicata, and precludes the judgment-debtor from raising objections to continuance of proceeding thereafter unless such order is appealed against as a decree. O XXI, rule 22 culminates in end of one stage before attachment of the property can take place in furtherance of execution of decree. The proceedings under O XXI, rule 23 can only be taken if the executing court either finds that after issuing notice under O XXI, rule 21 the judgment-debtor has not raised any objection or if such objection has been raised, the same has been decided by the executing court. The sub-rule (1) as well as sub-rule (2) under O XXI, rule 22 operates simultaneously on the same field. Sub-rule (1) operates when no objection is filed, and then the court proceeds and clears the way for going to the next stage of the proceedings, namely, attachment of the property and if the court finds objections on record then it decides the objections in the first instance and thereafter clears the way for taking up the matter for attachment of the property if the objections have been overruled. Whether the order is made under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2), it has the effect of determining the preliminary stage before the attachment process is set in motion. In this background, the order of the court to proceed with attachment on finding that no objection has been raised also operates as an order deciding the preliminary stage of the execution proceedings and operates as if the judgment-debtor has no objection to file. If thereafter, the judgment-debtor wants to raise an objection in the same proceedings in the absence of any modification of order passed under O XXI, rule 22, sub-rule (1) or (2) he has to take recourse to get rid of the order by way of appeal. If it has not been agitated and since the order for proceeding by the judgment under O XXI, rule 22 amounts to a decree under section 47 of the CPC and is appealable as a decree, i.e., to say it is not an appeal against the interim order but an appeal against the decree which is provided against the final order only

---

2035. Birju Safdar Ali v The Ideal Bank, AIR 1949 EP 94 (FB); Alagappa Chettiar Muthukaruppa Chettiar, AIR 1947 Mad 305; but see Sham Sundar v Dhirendra, AIR 1950 Pat 465 : (1950) ILR 29 Pat 465; Gangadhar v Jagmohan, AIR 1931 Bom 446 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 781.
2036. Jayanand v Dukhia, AIR 1965 Pat 86.
2037. Bibi Ved v Balkrishna, AIR 1933 Lah 594 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 409.
2038. Dadu Raghu Patil v Tukaram, AIR 1959 Bom 221 : (1958) ILR Bom 592.
2039. Venkateshaiah v Veeraiah, AIR 1958 AP 1 (FB) : AIR 1957 AP 326; Raman Lal v Shanti Lal, AIR 1961 All 178; Baijnath Prasad v Ram Phal, AIR 1962 Pat 72 (FB). See also contra Gowri v Ude, AIR 1942 Lah 153 : (1942) ILR Lah 559; Mohanram v Sundararamier, AIR 1960 Mad 377 : (1960) ILR Mad 747.

means that at the different stages of the execution orders passed by the executing court have been attached finality, unless they are set aside by way of appeal before the higher forum, else, they bind the parties at the subsequent stage of the execution proceedings so that the smooth progress of execution is not jeopardised and the stage which reached the finality by dint of various orders of O XXI operates as res judicata for the subsequent stage of the proceedings. Since the order passed at different stage itself operates as decree and appealable as such, the same cannot be challenged in appeal against subsequent orders also, because appeal against an order passed under O XXI, rule 22 does not fall as appeal against order at initial stage but amounts to a decree finally determining the question. That is why no appeal against orders made under O XXI have been provided under O XLIII. In this background where a judgment-debtor has an opportunity to raise objection which he could have raised but failed to take and allowed the preliminary stage to come to an end for taking up the matter to the next stage for attachment of property and sale of the property under O XXI, rule 23 which fell within the above principle, the judgment-debtor thereafter cannot raise such objections subsequently and revert back to earlier stage of proceedings unless the order resulting in termination of preliminary stage which amounts to a decree is appealed against and order is set aside or modified.[2040]

In execution of a decree for eviction against a tenant, in a proceeding under O XXI, rule 27, the executing court held that the sub-tenant had become direct tenant under the landlord, in view of section 20 of the Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act, 1952. The said order was neither challenged in appeal or revision, nor any suit was filed for setting aside the order. It was held that the order had become final and was binding on the tenant. In a subsequent suit filed by the tenant for eviction of the sub-tenant, it could not be contended that the order was a nullity and should, therefore, be ignored. Merely because the executing court had wrongly applied the provisions of section 20 of the Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act (which stood repealed), it did not mean that the order passed by the executing court was a nullity. The executing court had the jurisdiction to decide the application submitted by the decree-holder under O XXI, rule 97of the CPC. The mere fact that while deciding the said application the executing court acted wrongly, did not mean that the said order of the executing court was without jurisdiction and a nullity.[2041] If an application under O XXI, rule 97 has been decided on the merits after adjudication and determination of the questions involved in O XXI, rule 101 of O XXI, CPC as also other grounds raised in the application, then of course, that would furnish a ground for the application of the principle of constructive res judicata, but if it is not adjudicated and determined after due application of mind, the order passed on such an application does not acquire the character of a decree. The dismissal of the application under O XXI, rule 97 of the CPC passed on the request for withdrawal of the application, cannot acquire the character of a decree and, therefore, the principle of constructive res judicata cannot be made applicable to such proceedings.[2042]

Where a transferee court had returned the execution papers to the court which passed the decree with a certificate of non-satisfaction and thereafter the decree-holder filed a fresh application for execution in the transferee court itself and no objection was taken by the judgment-debtor on the ground that there had been no fresh order transferring the decree for execution, it was held that such an objection could not be taken at a later stage of the

---

2040. Barkat Ali v Badrinarain, AIR 2001 Raj 51 (DB).
2041. Gopal Krishan v Ram Lal, AIR 1989 Raj 24.
2042. Jaiprakash v Khimaraj, AIR 1991 Raj 136.

execution.[2043] Similarly, a decree-holder would be precluded from raising an objection that a non-satisfaction, certificate was not sent to the transferor court even though infact such certificate had not been sent.[2044] The principle of constructive res judicata will apply even when a question of jurisdiction is involved and a contention therefore that the executing court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree will, if not taken at earlier stages, not be open to the judgment-debtor later.[2045] Where the judgment-debtor resisted execution on the ground that he was entitled to protection under a Rent Act and that was overruled, it is not open to him in a subsequent execution application to raise the plea that civil courts had, under the provisions of the said Act, no jurisdiction over the matter.[2046] A decision that the decree is executable not only against the property charged, but also against other properties will be res judicata at later stages of execution.[2047]

Where the amount claimed by the decree-holder in his execution petition is more than what is due to him on the terms of the decree, the judgment-debtor is not barred by principles of constructive res judicata from raising the question of the correct amount due by reason of his failure to object to the amounts claimed at the earlier stages.[2048] To hold otherwise would be to recognise a power in the execution court to supersede the decree by its own orders.[2049] It is really a case for the court to correct what is clearly a clerical mistake. Where the point is something more than a mere calculation of interest in terms of a decree and involves judicial determination of the rights of the parties as for example liability for mesne profits, interest and the like, different considerations might arise and where a decree-holder had not claimed interest in his execution application and it was dismissed, part-satisfaction being recorded, it was held that he was barred from claiming interest in a subsequent application;[2050] but, a judgment-debtor himself has been held not to be precluded by principles of constructive res judicata from disputing his liability to pay interest on the ground of his failure to object to it at earlier stages when the principal amount still remained payable.[2051] After a decree was scaled down under the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1933, it is not open to the judgment-debtor in answer to an application for execution subsequently filed by the decree-holder to plead payments alleged to have been made prior to the scaling.[2052] The under-mentioned cases[2053] contain observations to the effect that Explanation IV should not be extended to execution proceedings and that an order made in execution proceedings should not have the force of res judicata unless the point raised in a subsequent proceedings

---

2043. Mohanlal v Binoi Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 : [1953] SCR 377 : (1953) SCJ 130.
2044. Pannalal v Appalabhuktala, AIR 1969 Ori 147 : (1968) ILR Cut 899.
2045. Direndranath v Satishchandra, AIR 1956 Pat 4 : (1955) ILR 34 Pat 746; Jagannath Ramasami v Lakshmi Narain, AIR 1960 Ori 197 (FB) : (1961) ILR Cut 9; Sathappa Siddappa v Heerachand Atmaram, AIR 1961 Mys 54; Raman v Ambujakshi Amma, AIR 1962 Ker 15.
2046. Usha Devi v Devidas, AIR 1955 Bom 239 : (1955) ILR Bom 546.
2047. Lakshmi Narayana v Lakshmi Venkiamma, AIR 1957 AP 207.
2048. Kalyan Singh v Jagan Prasad, (1951) ILR 37 All 589; Sheo Mangal v Hulsa, AIR 1922 All 413 : (1921) ILR 44 All 159; Phul Chand v Kanhaiya Lal, AIR 1922 All 247 : (1922) ILR 44 All 130; Ulaganath v Alagappa, AIR 1929 Mad 903; Alagappa v Ramanatha, AIR 1933 Mad 466; Kailash Tevar v Ramaswami, AIR 1949 Mad 238; Bapanna v Vengiah, AIR 1937 Mad 511; Subbarao v Satyanarayana, AIR 1953 Mad 948; Rajababu v Syed Muhammad, AIR 1961 Raj 227.
2049. Ulaganatha v Alagappa, AIR 1929 Mad 903.
2050. Haranath v Hirdai Narain, AIR 1953 Pat 242.
2051. Prakashmal v Thikana Khatu, AIR 1954 Raj 54 : (1952) ILR Raj 224.
2052. Nunna Seshamma v Kalla Gangaraju, AIR 1957 AP 841.
2053. Prithi v Jamshad, AIR 1922 Pat 289 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 593; Gourmoni v Jughat Chandra, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 57, p 63; Somasundaram v Chokkalingam, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 780; Subramania v Rajeswara, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 1016; dissented from in Raghubar v Gokaran, AIR 1926 Oudh 291 : (1926) 1 Luck 171.

was actually raised in the former proceedings and decided. The Allahabad High Court has held that the principle of constructive res judicata is not applicable in execution proceedings unless the prior execution application has been infructuous, i.e., unless the decree holder by that application has obtained some relief which the judgment-debtor's objection in the subsequent application would, if successful, have prevented him from obtaining.[2054] Having regard to the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ram Kirpal's case, it is submitted that there is no reason for limiting the scope of the application of the principle underlying this section to execution proceedings, subject of course to the conditions set out in the section. This question has since been considered in a number of decisions and the view has generally been accepted that the bar of res judicata will apply even if the execution application was infructuous, provided the other conditions are satisfied.[2055]

Where the question whether the award of interest to the decree-holder was governed by section 34 of the Code had been decided in the suit, it is not open to the judgment-debtor to re-agitate that question in the course of execution proceedings.[2056] So also, where a question whether a particular plot of land was ryoti or not was in issue in the suit and a decree was passed on a finding that it was not ryoti, it is not open to the judgment-debtor in proceedings in execution for the sale of the land to raise the contention that it was not ryoti land, the sale of which is prohibited by sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act;[2057] but, this principle would not apply to the case of a successful judgment-debtor against a finding adverse to him since he had no right to challenge such a finding in appeal.[2058]

Though the said explanation may not stricto sensu apply to the trial stage, the principle couched in it must gain application thereto. It is immaterial that the writ petition was filed only subsequently because the findings made therein became final as no appeal was filed against the judgement. The basic idea in the rule of res judicata has sprouted from the maxim nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa. The principle of res judicata can be invoked not only in separate subsequent proceedings, they also get attracted in subsequent stage of the same proceedings. Once an order made in the course of proceeding becomes final, it would be binding at the subsequent stage of that proceeding.[2059] When once a decree is passed, it is obvious that the defendant in the suit, or the judgement- debtor would be precluded from carrying on blasting operations in his property. To say, when he is succeeded by other, they would be bound by the restraint relating to the enjoyment of the particular property, is to derogate from the principle of public policy and that there shall be no second litigation in respect of the same right and the same property. It cannot be the policy of law that every time an assignment of the decree of the schedule property takes place, the decree-holder should 2054. Mannu Singh v Hanuman Singh, AIR 1951 All 398. See also Ajimuddin v Budheswar Sarma, AIR 1951 Assam 75 : (1950) ILR 2 Assam 215; Nizamuddin v Ikramul Haq, AIR 1947 All 143 : (1946) ILR All 843; Gendalal v Hazari Lal, AIR 1936 All 21 (FB) : (1936) ILR 58 All 313; Ali Rasul v Balkishan, AIR 1937 All 446 : (1937) All LJ 482.

---

2055. Venkatarama v Chinnaseethamma, AIR 1941 Mad 440 (FB) : (1941) 1 Mad LJ 270; Adilakshmi v Srinivasa, AIR 1944 Mad 193; Vairavan Chetty v Rayaloo Iyer, AIR 1951 Mad 844 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 298; Sadashiv v Radhakistappa, AIR 1950 Hyd 15; Ashvini Kumar v Karamat Ali, AIR 1948 Cal 165; Amar Singh v Gulabchand, AIR 1960 Raj 218 : (1960) ILR 10 Raj 835; dissenting from Surjan Singh v Gindorilal, AIR 1957 Raj 398; contra Gendalal v Hazarilal, AIR 1936 All 21 : (1936) ILR 58 All 313; Appaiah v Venkataratnam, AIR 1954 Mad 1 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 225; K Kalabhai v CC Sodagar, AIR 1973 Guj 19 : 14 Guj LR 136.
2056. Palai Bank v Ramaswami Nadar, AIR 1959 Ker 194.
2057. Chintamani v Zahiruddin, AIR 1956 Pat 57.
2058. Tarabai v UOI, AIR 1971 Cal 225 : (1970) 74 Cal WN 789.
2059. Ashok Kumar Srivastava v National Insurance Co Ltd, (1998) 4 SCC 361.

institute a fresh suit against the assignee so as to prevent him from disobeying the decree obtained by the decree-holder against the original owner of the property.[2060]

When along with application under O IX, rule 13, CPC, an interim application is filed by judgment debtor for stay of execution proceeding, another application seeking stay of execution of decree was filed earlier by judgment debtor and was dismissed by the court and the said order had attained finality, the subsequent interim application in question would be hit by doctrine of res judicata.[2061]

It is clear that it is not that once a person is detention in civil prison, he cannot be proceeded with on second occasion for the fresh breach of injunction committed by him. Each breach is independent and is actionable in law. Merely by putting a person in civil prison the decree does not get wiped out or satisfied. The court of execution cannot apply the doctrine of constructive res judicata and hold that the judgment-debtor cannot be imprisonment on second occasion.[2062]

[s 11.30.2] Ex parte Orders

An ex parte order in execution proceedings passed after issue of notice and after the court is satisfied that the notice was served, is on general principles, binding as res judicata where the order would necessarily imply that the decree is capable of execution;[2063] but, the order will not have the force of res judicata if no notice is issued;[2064] or if the notice is not duly served,[2065] or if the notice does not clearly specify the nature of the claim.[2066] An order in an execution application which prays for a relief not granted by the decree[2067] is not res judicata, nor an order on an application of the decree-holder to sell properties not mentioned in the execution petition,[2068] unless the judgment-debtor had specific notice of the matter or knowledge thereof. An ex parte order that an application for execution is in time, will not operate as res judicata.[2069] If the judgment-debtor omits to appear on notice under O XXI, rule 22, he will not be debarred from objecting in a subsequent execution application that the prior application was not in the form prescribed by law and did not afford a starting point for limitation.[2070] Where no notice was issued to the judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 22, but one was served for settlement of sale proclamation under O XXI, rule 66, and he did not appear, it was held that he was not barred from raising the contention that the property was not saleable under 2060. Chothy Theyyathan v John Thomas, AIR 1997 Ker 249.

---

2061. Subbiah v Sakthi Finance Ltd, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1296 (Mad).
2062. Yashodabai Ganesh Naik Gauvekar v Gopi Mukund Naik, AIR 2003 Bom 77.
2063. Bangsidar v Jagmohan, AIR 1945 Oudh 21 : (1944) ILR 19 Luck 93; Venkataranga v Sithamana, AIR 1941 Mad 440 : (1941) 1 Mad LJ 270; Subbiah v Ramanathan, (1914) ILR 37 Mad 462; Lakshmanan v Kuttayan, (1901) ILR 24 Mad 669.
2064. Noor Mahomed v Mahomed Khan, AIR 1930 All 699 : (1930) ILR 52 All 1054; Sarala Bala Devi v Shyam Prasad, AIR 1953 Cal 765.
2065. Azagappa v Ramanathan, AIR 1933 Mad 466 : (1933) 64 Mad LJ 629; Pramatha Nath v Mackey, AIR 1933 Pat 208 : (1933) ILR 12 Pat 179; Kuruvilla v Ouseph Joseph, AIR 1957 TC 40 : (1956) ILR T C 726.
2066. Mittasaheb v Gurunath, AIR 1943 Bom 252 : (1943) 45 Bom LR 519; Narayan v Gopal Krishna, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 355; Sheik Budan v Ramchandra, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 537; Chidambaram v Thaivanai, AIR 1924 Mad 1 : (1923) ILR 46 Mad 768.
2067. Kuruvilla v Ouseph Joseph, AIR 1957 TC 40 : (1956) ILR TC 726.
2068. Banchha Nidhi Naik v Collector of Balasore, AIR 1957 Ori 274 : (1957) ILR Cut 446.
2069. Rafatulla v Kundarmal, AIR 1935 Cal 727 : (1935) 38 Cal WN 1144; Bir Bikram v Khalida, AIR 1935 Cal 646 : (1935) 39 Cal WN 1206.
2070. Mittasaheb v Gurunath, AIR 1943 Bom 252 : (1943) 45 Bom LR 519; Official Receiver v Hira Lal, AIR 1935 All 727 : (1935) All LJ 642.

section 60 as that was not a matter for decision under O XXI, rule 66;[2071] but, it has been held that when a judgment-debtor who has no notice under O XXI, rule 22, is subsequently served with notice in the execution application and fails to take objection that he had not been served with notice under O XXI, rule 22, he is barred from raising that objection thereafter.[2072] Where a judgment-debtor who was served with notice under O XXI, rule 22 did not appear to show cause why the decree should not be executed and where an order for execution was made under rule 23, it was held that he was barred from raising thereafter the plea that execution was barred by limitation.[2073]

Notice of intended execution was issued to the judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 22 of the CPC. The court passed an order under O XXI, rule 23(1), directing attachment. Judgment-debtor did not appeal against the above order. It was held that the order operated as res judicata and the judgment-debtor could not later file an independent application raising the objection of limitation.[2074]

Dismissal of a suit for default cannot operate as res judicata, though, in such circumstances, O IX, rule 9 bars a fresh suit.[2075]

A judgment-debtor who does not claim exemption under section 60(1)(c) when he receives notice of attachment, cannot claim such exemption at the time of proclamation of sale. Constructive res judicata applies under section 11, Explanation IV in such circumstances.[2076]

[s 11.30.3] Consent Orders

An order made by consent of parties in an execution proceeding is as binding on the parties as an order after a contentious trial.[2077]

Notice to show cause under O XXII, rule 22 was made absolute and an order for execution passed under O XXI, rule 23(1). It was held that subsequent objection by the defendant, that the decree was a nullity, was barred by res judicata. The same position was obtained even before the insertion of Explanation VII to section 11, on the principle of constructive res judicata. Where a consent decree is sought to be challenged on the grounds of contravention of O XXIII, rule 3, the only remedy is an appeal against the decree.[2078]

It is clear from the discussion above that right from the date of the Privy Council decision in Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari[2079] the courts have consistently applied the principles of res judicata to proceedings in execution including the principle of constructive res judicata embodied in Explanation IV. There are also a number of decisions wherein it has been held that before the principle was applied it had to be seen that the conditions laid down in the section were satisfied. What the new Explanation VII, therefore, does is to do legislatively what the courts had hitherto done judicially. The decisions so far rendered in regard to proceedings in execution would therefore, still have validity.

2071. Raghava Reddi v Krishnayya, AIR 1960 AP 631.
2072. Shyam v Venkata, AIR 1951 Mys 118 : (1952) ILR Mys 24.
2073. Gandhi Lakshmi Chand v Tulsidas, AIR 1963 Guj 1; Chandra Choor v Krishnawati, AIR 1969 Pat 251.
2074. P Sainath Reddy v G Narayana Reddy, AIR 1982 AP 247 (DB).
2075. Ram Awadh v Deputy Director, Consolidation, AIR 1986 All 15.
2076. Bhaskar Traders v Minikipacha Kunhiraman, AIR 1988 Ker 227.
2077. Kalidas v Prasanna, (1920) ILR 47 Cal 446; Coventry v Tulsi, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 822.
2078. UOI v Byram Pestonji Gariwala, AIR 1991 Bom 185.
2079. Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269 : (1883) 11 IA 87.

[s 11.30.4] Interlocutory Orders

In Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari above, the Privy Council said that upon general principles of law, interlocutory judgment in a suit is binding upon the parties in every proceeding in that suit. A decision in an administration suit as to the validity of a gift will be res judicata in a subsequent proceeding in the same suit.[2080] Where a defendant government takes a plea in a notice of motion of its being a sovereign foreign state but that plea is rejected at the hearing of the notice of motion, the same plea cannot be re-agitated subsequently at the time of the hearing of the suit.[2081] In a Lahore case,[2082] the court ordered an agreement to refer to arbitration to be filed. A party applied that the reference should be cancelled as the court had no jurisdiction. The court decided that it had jurisdiction and dismissed the application. The party was debarred from raising the same point as an objection to the award. Where a court orders attachment of properties before judgment after satisfying itself that there are sufficient grounds therefore, and that order has become final, an application for compensation under section 95 of the CPC is barred on general principle of res judicata, but in order to have that effect, it must have been passed after notice and on the merits.[2083] Thus, an order staying an interim injunction does not operate as res judicata as such an order does not purport to decide the merits on the controversy between the parties.[2084] An order of remand which is interlocutory in nature also does not decide the dispute between the parties.[2085]

In a suit for specific performance an interlocutory application for sending the disputed document for comparison by an expert was dismissed. Before the revision against the said order could be filed, the suit was decreed. During the appeal against the decree an interlocutory application with the same prayer for sending the disputed document for comparison was allowed. In the revision against the order allowing the interlocutory application, it was held that the earlier interlocutory application was not decided on merits and it neither finally decided the matter involved in the case nor terminated the suit so as to apply the rule of res judicata.[2086]

Again, in Louis Dreyfus v Arunachala,[2087] an order was made on 20 July, 1922, setting aside an award, under the Arbitration Act, 1899, made between D and A and remitting the matter back to an umpire, A appealed from the order but the appeal was ultimately dismissed by the Privy Council. After a fresh award was made by the umpire A objected that he was not bound by the submission to arbitration. The Privy Council said:

> Under the order of 20th July, 1922 the appeal from which to His Majesty in Council was dismissed, the matter was remitted to the umpire. This could have been done only upon the footing that the respondent (A) was bound by the submission to arbitration.

Their Lordships, accordingly, held that the question as to the umpire's jurisdiction over the parties was res judicata.

2080. Hook v AG of Bengal, AIR 1921 PC 11 : (1921) ILR 48 Cal 499 : 48 IA 187; Badar Bee v Habib Merican Noordin, AIR 1909 Cal 615.
2081. German Democratic Republic v DIU Ltd, AIR 1972 Bom 27 : (1972) ILR 74 Bom 731 : (1971) 73 Bom LR 183.
2082. Asa v Ganesh, AIR 1930 Lah 836 : (1930) ILR 11 Lah 470.
2083. Khalilur Rahman v Syed Husaini, AIR 1961 Mad 220.
2084. Punjab University v PC Handa, AIR 1971 P&H 177.
2085. UP Supply Co v TN Chatterjee, AIR 1972 SC 1201.
2086. Kalaiselvan v Velusamy, (2007) 4 Mad LJ 866 (Madu-Mal).
2087. Louis Dreyfus v Arunachala, AIR 1931 PC 289 : (1931) 35 Cal WN 1287 : 58 IA 381; Md Naim v Rowraffic and Far Eastern Ltd, AIR 1960 Cal 146.

[s 11.31] Insolvency Proceedings

The principle of the section has been applied in insolvency proceedings.[2088] In Vaithilingam v Lakshmana,[2089] the Madras High Court has held that if the insolvency court decides to pass and does pass an order of adjudication of title under section 4 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, such an order operates as res judicata in a subsequent dispute between the same parties. When an official receiver dismissed an application under section 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, holding that a sale was not a fraudulent preference, a creditor was debarred by the rule of res judicata from applying under sections 4 and 56 of the Act to set aside a sale as being in fraud or creditors.[2090] An order winding up a company on the application of a person who claims to be a creditor with respect to a specified debt, was held to operate as res judicata on the question as to the truth and amount of the debt.[2091] If a question had been decided in a civil court and the decision thereon is such that it would have operated as res judicata in another subsequent matter before a civil court, it would operate as res judicata also before the Insolvency Court.[2092]

[s 11.32] Summary Proceedings

The Calcutta High Court holds that the question of res judicata can arise even in consequence of antecedent summary proceedings. Thus, it was held by that court that the decision on the question of nature and extent of the tenure which was directly in issue between the parties and finally decided in the proceedings taken under section 26J of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 operated as res judicata to bar a subsequent suit for determining the nature of tenancy;[2093] but the Lahore High Court held that the decision of a district judge in proceedings of a summary nature cannot operate as res judicata to bar a subsequent suit for the determination of the same question.[2094] In Babu Bhagwan Din v Gir Har Saroop[2095] the Privy Council accepted the view of the Lahore High Court. It has since been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the rule of res judicata does not apply to summary and extra judicial proceedings.[2096] The scope of an inquiry in an application under section 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940, is limited to a decision whether the dispute between the parties is covered by the arbitration clause. Any opinion therefore, expressed in the order on the application of the rights of parties, cannot operate as res judicata in a suit between them in which they are in issue.[2097] A decision under section 38 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act, 1940, has been held, having regard to its scope and nature, not to operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit or proceedings between the parties.[2098] Orders passed under the Marwari Patta Act or the Rajasthan Protection of Tenants Act, 1949, have been held not to operate as res judicata in subsequent suits between the parties

---

2088. Lahori Singh v Official Receiver, AIR 1937 Lah 4; MRMS Chettiar Firm v Official Assignee, (1937) ILR 14 Rang 652; contra Gannamani v Donga, AIR 1950 Mad 184.
2089. Vaithilingam v Lakshmana, AIR 1965 Mad 331 : (1965) ILR 1 Mad 34 : (1965) 1 Mad LJ 242.
2090. Rangappa v Rangappa, AIR 1933 Mad 9 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 395; contra Bhalchandra Gangadhar v GB Pasule, AIR 1947 Ngp 76 : (1946) ILR Nag 937.
2091. Atmaram v Chitra Production, Co, AIR 1952 P&H 99.
2092. Kishan Piarey v Ram Dei, AIR 1965 All 248.
2093. Krishna Chandra v Manik Lal, AIR 1939 Cal 169 : (1938) ILR 2 Cal 418.
2094. Secunderabad Commercial and Banking Co v Indermull, AIR 1950 Hyd 59; Prem Nath v Har Ram, AIR 1934 Lah 771.
2095. Babu Bhagwan Din v Gir Har Saroop, 67 IA 1, p 5.
2096. Kiron Chandra v Bijoy Chandra, AIR 1950 Cal 123.
2097. Sailendranath v Chillarram, AIR 1955 Cal 251.
2098. Subose Chandra v Manoram, (1956) ILR 1 Cal 150.

as the proceedings are summary.[2099] A decision given by revenue authorities in mutation proceedings has similarly been held not to be res judicata.[2100] A decision under O XXII, rule 5, whether a person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased party to a proceeding is only for the purpose of that litigation and does not operate as res judicata in a suit where the right to represent is directly in issue.[2101] A decision given in a miscellaneous case not on the merits but on a technical grounds does not operate as res judicata in a regular suit.[2102]

[s 11.33] Application for Amendment of Decree

Though an application for amendment of a decree is not a "suit" within the meaning of this section, yet if such an application is heard and finally decided, it will debar a subsequent application for the same purpose upon general principles of law analogous to those of res judicata.[2103] If the application has been dismissed for default and there has been no adjudication on the merits, the dismissal will not operate as res judicata.[2104] The dismissal of an application for amendment of a decree on the ground of mistake does not operate as a bar to a party establishing his right in a suit, as the grant of relief by way of amendment is purely discretionary.[2105]

In a suit the plaintiff had not claimed the relief of mesne profits in the plaint but by way of amendment he tried to add the said relief in the plaint which was refused. Consequently, the relief with regard to mesne profits was not granted. It was held by the Patna High Court that the incorporation of the relief of mesne profits in the judgment and decree at a later stage was not wholly without jurisdiction as the Court was empowered to decide what proper relief should have been granted to the plaintiff on the basis of materials available on the record. Thus, it was held that the petition for amendment of judgment and decree was not barred under Explanation (V) of section 11 of the Code.[2106]

[s 11.34] Application for Review

Where an application is made for a review of judgment, and the application is refused, it does not operate as res judicata so as to bar a subsequent suit for the same relief and on the same grounds as those put forward in the application for review. Neither section 11 nor any doctrine of constructive res judicata can rightly be applied to such a case.[2107] An issue lost in Article 136 proceedings, sought to be re-agitated under Article 32, it was held the factual question could not be re-agitated in a petition under Article 32 of the Constitution. However, it is open to the petitioner to seek a review of the order of the Supreme Court in the special leave petition, if such review has not already been invoked and lost.[2108] The scope of that appeal

---

2099. Jaikishan v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1958 Raj 56 : (1958) ILR Raj 72; Hanuman Prasad v Board of Revenue, AIR 1957 Raj 281 : (1957) ILR Raj 1; Panna v Board of Revenue, AIR 1958 Raj 74 : (1958) ILR 8 Raj 80.
2100. Venkataraya v Louis, AIR 1960 Mys 209; differing from Narasimha v Muthuswami, (1958) 2 Mad LJ 216 : 1958 Mad WN 603.
2101. Bhudev Pandey v Gupteswar, AIR 1951 Pat 537 : (1949) ILR 28 Pat 814.
2102. Tribeni Missir v Gopal Misra, AIR 1963 Pat 60.
2103. Langat Singh v Janki Koer, (1911) ILR 39 Cal 265; A Chettiar v Kanthimathi Ammal, AIR 1966 Mad 319 : (1966) ILR 2 Mad 295 : (1965) 2 Mad LJ 551.
2104. Pramath Nath v Mackey, AIR 1933 Pat 208 : (1933) ILR 12 Pat 179.
2105. Subbiah Nadar v Champaka Pillai, AIR 1961 Mad 413; Bechelal v Hem Singh, AIR 1953 All 485.
2106. Umesh Chandra Karan v Shail Kumari Devi, AIR 2007 Pat 10 : (2006) 3 Pat LJR 552.
2107. Srish Chandra v Triguna, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 541.
2108. Sanjay Kedia v State of Bihar, (1994) Supp 1 SCC 509.

was the determination of the amount of compensation and not to declare the whole of the land acquisition proceedings a nullity. Whatever, therefore, was set by the high court either on the question of adverse possession or while rejecting the review petition was outside the scope of land acquisition appeal. It could not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit.[2109]

[s 11.35] Plea of Res Judicata

It is essential that the plea of res judicata be properly raised. In Jagadish Chandra v Gour Hari,[2110] the Privy Council upheld the decision of the Calcutta High Court which had declined to go into the question of res judicata on the ground that it had not been properly raised by the pleadings or in the issues, particularly in the issues. The Privy Council further observed that it was necessary to identify the subjects in dispute in the subsequent litigation with the subjects in disputes in the previous litigation. This case was distinguished in Shib Singh v Gaura.[2111] In Narasamma v Venkataratnam,[2112] the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that the opening words of the section required that the issue as to res judicata should be tried at the earlier stage of the suit and not at the end along with the rest of the issues; but, the Bombay view is that such an issue is not ordinarily to be tried as a preliminary issue but must be tried along with the rest of the issues.[2113] According to the Patna High Court, the question of res judicata is a mixed question of law and fact and can be raised at any stage of the proceeding, even at the stage of the second appeal, if it does not involve a fresh investigation of facts.[2114] It is well-known that res judicata is a mixed question of fact and law. It has to be specifically pleaded and parties relies on the principle of res judicata should place before the court all material particulars which would be sufficient to give a finding whether the particular case is barred by the principle of res judicata. The court relied upon the decisions reported as Gurrala Jaggarao v Gopisetti Bhaskara Ramchandra Rao Dora,[2115] wherein it was held that a plea of res judicata which was never raised before the court, nor the pleadings of the parties were before the court, such a new plea could not be allowed to be raised at the appellate stage, when further materials may be necessary for the purpose of determination of issue. Another judgement relied on was Sahadeb Nayak v Satyabadi Nayak,[2116] wherein it was laid down that the plea of res judicata has to be specifically pleaded and proved and such a plea would not be available for the first time in second appeal.[2117] No plea of res judicata raised before any other court, can now be raised before the Supreme Court. It was too late in the day now to permit the appellant to raise a plea of res judicata and that too without any basis.[2118]

When, from the pleadings and the documents produced, the court had reason to think that the suit or any issue was barred by res judicata, the absence of a specific plea to that effect should not stand in the way.[2119] Jurisdiction of the court to try suit or an issue is always there

---

2109. State of Jammu and Kashmir v Sanahullah Meer, (1980) 3 SCC 272.
2110. Zingu Deorao v Mahadeo Parashranji, AIR 1948 Ngp 358 : (1948) ILR Nag 747; Surayya v Gangadhara Ram Krishna, AIR 1936 PC 258; Ravesh Chand v Board of Revenue, AIR 1973 All 120.
2111. Shib Singh v Gaura, AIR 1944 Mad 601 : AIR 1945 All 76.
2112. Narasamma v Venkataratnam, AIR 1965 AP 12.
2113. Nagnath v Kishan, AIR 1972 Bom 228 : (1972) 74 Bom LR 41; Sorojini v Bhaskar, AIR 1977 Ori 42 : (1976) ILR Cut 1482.
2114. Narayan Chandra v Nath Bank Ltd, AIR 1967 Pat 124 : (1965) ILR 44 Pat 87; K Subbarao v Sri Ramulu, AIR 1970 AP 258.
2115. Gurrala Jaggarao v Gopisetti Bhaskara Ramchandra Rao Dora, AIR 1958 Ori 58.
2116. Sahadeb Nayak v Satyabadi Nayak, AIR 1984 Ori 30.
2117. Krishana Chandra Naiyak v Nilakantha Mohanty, AIR 1996 Ori 1.
2118. Ajmer Central Co-op Bank Ltd v Prescribed Authority, AIR 1996 SC 2911.
2119. Puthiyottil Kunhava v Kaniattichalil Mammadukully, AIR 1990 Ker 132.

and res judicata, only bars investigation and decision on the matters finally decided inter partes earlier. If the defendants omit to plead and prove res judicata and the court investigates and decides matters already concluded between the parties without knowing about such a decision, the decision is not void, for want of jurisdiction. Plea of res judicata is one which might be, and ought to be, raised as a defence and established, in order to operate as a bar in the exercise of jurisdiction to try and dispose off the matter subsequently. Otherwise, the later decision will prevail and the plea of res judicata itself will be barred by constructive res judicata and the later decision (though overlooking the bar of res judicata alone), will prevail.[2120]

Deputy Commissioner's Land Acquisition, is neither a "court" nor can his award be deemed to be a "decree".[2121] The defendant's plea that he was a tenant was negatived by the lower court. In revision, the defendant for the first time pleaded: (i) that he had been declared to be a tenant in earlier proceedings on a reference to the land tribunal; and (ii) that the earlier decision was res judicata. It was held that res judicata could not be pleaded so late.[2122] However, a court can go into the question of res judicata even if the plea is not taken in the pleadings, if the documents on record show that the matter has already been decided. At the same time, if, because of absence of the plea, the court decides a matter already decided, the later decision prevails.[2123]

Res judicata is a question of law. It constitutes a bar to suit, and the bar is created by law. A suit can be disposed off, on this preliminary point, under O XIV, rule 2(2)(b).[2124] As the plea of res judicata involves mixed questions of law and fact, the factual foundation for raising the plea should definitely find a place in the pleadings. Failure to do so is detrimental to the belated plea of res judicata taken at a subsequent stage. The onus is on the person who sets up the plea of res judicata, to establish it. He must definitely place all the materials before the court, to enable it to consider whether the said plea has been established or not. A party who fails to raise the plea before the Land tribunal and the appellate authority, cannot raise it for the first time in the revisional court.[2125] A judgment which either fails to deal with the plea of res judicata or deals with it in an ineffective and erroneous manner, does not, in law, deserve to be maintained. The doctrine of res judicata rests on sound principles of public policy; its importance cannot be under-rated.[2126] This golden rule acquires magnified dimensions in the present day context of the administration of justice. The doctrine of res judicata has therefore, to be interpreted and applied liberally. Its application should be influenced by no technical considerations as to form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law. The court has to go into a plea of res judicata as any other plea of law and then to decide whether the issue or the claim is barred or not.[2127] An appeal filed under section 13 of the Orissa House Rent Control Act against the order of the House Rent Controller, refusing to decide the question of res judicata as a preliminary issue, would not be maintainable. The position would have been different if the controller had decided that the application was barred by res judicata. The right of the landlord to prosecute the case would then have been affected, as the whole proceeding would have failed on that finding;[2128] but, as the order of the controller did

---

2120. Puthiyottil Kunhava v Kaniattichalil Mammadukully, AIR 1990 Ker 132.
2121. HG Shiranandappa v State of Karnataka, AIR 1991 NOC 83 (Kant).
2122. Iyatteri Shanmughan v Palhiyotil Radha, AIR 1989 Ker 227.
2123. Puthiyottil Kunhava v Kaniattichalil Mammadukully, AIR 1990 Ker 132.
2124. Laxmi Mani Dasi v Manik Chandra Das, AIR 1991 Cal 231.
2125. Iyatteri Shanmughan v Palhiyotil Radha, AIR 1992 Ker 227.
2126. Mohammad v Nemichand, AIR 1986 MP 155.
2127. Mohammad v Nemichand, AIR 1986 MP 155.
2128. Binay Kumar Das v Sunil Kumar Patra, AIR 1989 Ori 156 (FB).

not affect the right or liability of either party, it was simply an innocuous order and was not appealable.[2129]

[s 11.36] Waiver of Plea of Res Judicata

The plea of res judicata is not one which affects the jurisdiction of the court. It is a plea in bar which a party may waive. If a party does not raise the plea of res judicata, it will be deemed to be a matter directly and substantially in issue and decided against him.[2130]

[s 11.37] Conflicting Decrees

Where there are two or more conflicting decrees, the last decree alone is the effective decree, and it is this decree and not any other which can operate as res judicata.[2131] It is observed in Pritam Kaur v State of Pepsu[2132] that a decision given by a court on a matter which had been settled by a previous decision is without jurisdiction and cannot operate as res judicata. If that is the correct position, the rule that in the case of conflicting decisions, the later prevails, must be held to be erroneous. The decision of the Privy Council in Joychand Babu v Kamalaksha Chowdhry[2133] on which the above view rests, does not lay down any such proposition.

A court has jurisdiction to decide wrong as well as right and the later decision therefore, though erroneous, must be held to prevail. Res judicata applies if two conflicting decrees are passed by two competent courts. The irresistible conclusion that can be arrived at is, that the final decision in the first decree concludes the dispute between the parties relating to the same subject matter. Therefore, a subsequent decision is definitely hit by the provision of section 11, CPC. The finality of the earlier decision cannot be lost sight of, nor can it be brushed aside, even though there is a subsequent conflicting decree passed by some other competent court relating to the same subject matter between the same parties.[2134]

[s 11.38] Maintenance Order

An order refusing to enforce a maintenance order under section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for one period will not bar a subsequent application for a different period.[2135] The Hindu law recognises that the right of maintenance is a substantive and continuing right and the quantum of maintenance is variable from time to time. Neither section 11 of the Code, nor the principle of res judicata, nor the doctrine of estoppel, can be involved to defeat the wife's claim to a higher rate of maintenance allowance under altered circumstances. This is so even though, on an earlier occasion, a maintenance decree had been passed and a certain rate of maintenance had been fixed thereunder.[2136] When the foreign judgement is a nullity,

---

2129. Binay Kumar Das v Sunil Kumar Patra, AIR 1989 Ori 156 (FB).
2130. Moturi v Sri Rajah Venkatadri, (1916) 31 Mad LJ 219; Rajani v Ajmuddin, AIR 1929 Cal 163 : (1928) 48 Cal lj 577; contra Raja of Venkatagiri v Province of Madras, AIR 1947 Mad 5 : (1947) ILR Mad 190. See also K Subbarao v Sri Ramalu, AIR 1970 AP 258.
2131. Rajani v Ajmuddin, AIR 1929 Cal 163 : (1928) 48 Cal LJ 577; Madappa v Basava Lingappa, (1951) ILR Mys 396; Padmanabha Krishna v Madhavan Pillai, AIR 1952 TC 294 : (1952) ILR TC 252; Meewa Ram v Deo Prakash, AIR 1954 All 770; Subbarayudu v Balaramayya, AIR 1955 AP 194; Raman v Narayan, AIR 1957 Ker 31.
2132. Pritam Kaur v State of Pepsu, AIR 1963 P&H 9.
2133. Joychand Babu v Kamalaksha Chowdhry, AIR 1949 PC 239 : 76 IA 131.
2134. Bharat Chandra Das v Pran Gopal Das, AIR 1983 Gau 78 (DB).
2135. Maung Tin v Ma Hmin, AIR 1933 Rang 138 : (1933) ILR 11 Rang 226 (FB).
2136. Ram Shanker Rastogi v Vinay Rastogi, AIR 1991 All 255 (DB).

the parties will be continue to be husband and wife, unless a decree for divorce is granted in accordance with law. By acceptance of the maintenance, the wife cannot be deemed to have accepted the foreign judgement and would not be estopped from filing any petition for divorce. The principle of res judicata does not bar the petitioner from filing the petition for divorce.[2137]

The Orissa High Court has held that claim of maintenance under section 18 of the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, 1956, can be renewed on fresh cause of action. Where is an earlier case, maintenance claim of wife was rejected on the ground that she voluntarily deserted her husband, the subsequent claim of maintenance on the ground of non-implementation of a decree of restitution of conjugal rights by husband, was held to be not barred by res judicata.[2138]

[s 11.39] Income-tax Proceedings

The principle of res judicata does not apply to matters of taxation as each year's assessment is final only for the particular assessment year and does not govern the subsequent assessment years.[2139] Each assessment year being a unit, what is decided in one year may not apply in the following year; but where a fundamental aspect permeating through the different assessment years has been found as a fact one way or the other and parties have allowed that position to be sustained by not challenging the order, it would not be at all appropriate to allow the position to be changed in a subsequent year.[2140] This was also held to be so under the Income tax Act, 1922 (Now repealed by the Income Tax Act, 1961). Therefore, it is open to an Income-tax officer to depart from his decision in an assessment for an earlier year.[2141] This would be so even if the decision in the assessment for a particular year is the decision of the high court in an Income-tax reference.[2142] Failure of an assessee to raise a particular objection does not bar him from raising the same objection in a subsequent assessment proceeding on the ground that he might and ought to have raised it in the earlier assessment.[2143]

[s 11.40] Sales Tax Proceedings

Bar of res judicata does not apply in matters pertaining to tax for different assessment years because res judicata applies to debar courts from entertaining issues on the same cause of action whereas the cause of action for each assessment year is distinct. The courts will generally adopt an earlier pronouncement of the law or a conclusion of fact unless there is a new ground urged or a material change in the factual position. The reason why courts have held parties to the opinion expressed in a decision in one assessment year to the same opinion in a subsequent year is not because of any principle of res judicata but because of the theory of precedent or the precedential value of the earlier pronouncement. Where facts and law in a subsequent assessment year are the same, no authority whether quasi-judicial or judicial can generally be permitted to take a different view. This mandate is subject only to the usual gateways of distinguishing the earlier decision or where the earlier decision is per incuriam. However, these 2137. Veena Kalia v Jitender Nath Kalia, AIR 1996 Del 54.

---

2138. Dilip Kumar Barik v Smt. Ushrani Barik, AIR 2007 Ori 83 : 2006 (102) Cut LT 813 (DB).
2139. MM Ipoh v CIT, Madras, AIR 1968 SC 317 : (1968) 67 ITR 106; Municipal Corpn. Delhi v Madan Mohan, AIR 1976 Del 43; CIT v Punjabhai, AIR 1968 MP 103; CIT v DP Mora, AIR 1971 SC 2439; CIT v SC Bose, AIR 1969 Cal 4.
2140. Radhasoami Satsang, Saomi Bagh Agra v CIT, (1992) 1 SCC 659.
2141. Udayan Chinubhai v CIT, AIR 1967 SC 762 : (1967) 1 SCR 913.
2142. BI Corp Ltd v CIT, AIR 1967 All 362 : (1966) 60 ITR 793.
2143. Jwala Prasad v CIT, (1964) 52 ITR 392.

are fetters only on a coordinate bench which, failing the possibility of availing of either of these gateways, may yet differ with the view expressed and refer the matter to a bench of superior strength or in some cases to a bench of superior jurisdiction.[2144]

Ruma Pal J speaking in the three-Judge Bench decision for herself and for Dalveer Bhandari J observed as follows:

> The Court will generally adopt an earlier pronouncement of the law or a conclusion of fact unless there is a new ground urged or a material change in the factual position. The reason why Courts have held parties to the opinion expressed in a decision in one assessment year to the same opinion in a subsequent year is not because of any principle of res judicata but because of the theory of precedent or the precedential value of the earlier pronouncement. Where facts and law in a subsequent assessment year are the same, no authority whether quasi judicial or judicial can generally be permitted to take a different view. This mandate is subject only to the usual gateways of distinguishing the earlier decision or where the earlier decision is per incuriam. However, these are fetters only on a coordinate bench which, failing the possibility of availing of either of these gateways, may yet differ with the view expressed and refer the matter to a bench of superior strength or in some cases to a bench of superior jurisdiction.[2145]

[s 11.41] Writs

Section 11 of the CPC does not in terms apply to any proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution. The principle of res judicata does apply to all writ petitions under Article 226.[2146] It is well-nigh settled that a decision on an issue raised in a writ petition under Article 226 or Article 32 of the Constitution would also operate as res judicata in subsequent judicial proceedings. The only exception is that the rule of res judicata would not operate to the detriment or impairment of a fundamental right.[2147] The doctrine of res judicata is a universal doctrine laying down the finality of litigation between the parties. When a particular decision has become final and binding between the parties, it cannot be set at naught on the ground that such a decision is violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. So far as the parties are concerned, they will always be bound by the said decision. In other words, either of the parties will not be permitted to re-open the issue decided by such a decision on the ground that such decision violates the equality clause under the Constitution.[2148]

It is well-settled that judgments rendered by a competent court (like a high court in writ petition), are binding on the parties and operate as res judicata, so that the same question cannot be the subject of any other action like the suit. It would be most improper, in exercising civil jurisdiction for the high court to permit inquiries into the questions gone into by the high court while exercising its admittedly competent writ jurisdiction.[2149] Once the writ petition was dismissed and the said judgment was not challenged before the superior Court, the assessment order passed against the appellant attained finality. The assessment order having attained finality, the levy could not have been challenged by means of a separate suit in the civil court.[2150] If a writ petition is decided on merits by a speaking order, the question decided in 2144. Bharat Sanchar Nigam Ltd v UOI, AIR 2006 SC 1383 : (2006) 3 SCC 1.

---

2145. Bharat Sanchar Nigam Ltd v UOI, AIR 2006 SC 1383, para 20 at p 1390 : (2006) 3 SCC 1.
2146. GK Dudani v SD Sharma, (1985) Supp SCC 239; Centre of Indian Trade Union v UOI, AIR 1997 Bom 79; Sumermal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 Raj 1; State of Tamil Nadu v SS Jawahar, AIR 1998 Mad 303.
2147. Ashok Kumar Srivastava v National Insurance Co Ltd, (1998) 4 SCC 361.
2148. Supreme Court Employees Welfare Association v UOI, (1989) 4 SCC 187.
2149. Rabindra Nath Biswas v General Manager, NF Rly, AIR 1988 Pat 138.
2150. Premier Cable Co Ltd v Govt of India, AIR 2002 SC 2418 : (2002) 10 SCC 207.

that petition would operate as res judicata; but, a dismissal: (i) in limine; or (ii) on the ground of laches; or (iii) by reason of availability of alternative remedy, is not barred by res judicata.[2151] If a writ petition is dismissed upon merits, it operates as res judicata. It makes no difference that the writ court has expressed that the writ petition was not maintainable and that the proper remedy was to file a suit. Where the writ court chooses to decide even disputed questions of fact, then it is a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction. If the writ court proceeds to determine the merits, then it has heard and finally decided the case and its decision is res judicata. This is particularly so where the party never questioned the jurisdiction of the writ court to decide the petition on the merits.[2152]

A writ petition was filed in the Orissa High Court challenging the decision about the mode of allocation of new a coal block in the coal-fields area. In an earlier writ petition filed before the Delhi High Court, same issue had been raised. The Delhi High Court, in the earlier writ petition had finally adjudicated upon the issue and had upheld the impugned decision. The subsequent writ petition filed before the Orissa High Court was held to be barred by the principle of res judicata.[2153]

A Full Bench decision of the high court in a writ petition relating to a dispute between the "mergerists" of the service and the direct recruits, ordered that the rights accrued and the benefits conferred or derived by assigning the year of allotment, should not be disturbed. It was based on an understanding of the local conditions and the history of the service. The decision had become final, as the special leave petition against it was dismissed by the Supreme Court. It was held that the position settled by that decision and the tradition followed for decades in the service of the state, could not be disturbed and the principle of year of allotment, could not be challenged in the Supreme Court vicariously, by way of a civil appeal or a writ petition.[2154]

It is well-established that the principle of the res judicata are applicable to writ petitions.[2155] The second writ petition on the same cause of action is not maintainable when it was open for the petitioner to claim the relief in the first writ petition which has been claimed in second writ petition.[2156] In this case, the Hon'ble Supreme Court was called upon to consider the effect of withdrawal of writ petitions filed under Article 226 or Article 227 of the Constitution of India, without the permission of the high court to file a fresh petition. It was held that the provisions of the CPC are not in terms applicable to the writ proceedings, although the procedure prescribed therein as far as it can be made applicable is followed by the high court in disposing off the writ petitions.[2157] In this case, the Hon'ble Supreme Court was called upon to consider the effect of withdrawal of writ petitions filed under Article 226 or Article 227 of the Constitution of India without the permission of the high court to file a fresh petition. It was held that the provisions of the CPC are not in terms applicable to writ proceedings, although the procedure prescribed therein as far as it can be made applicable is followed by the high court in disposing off the writ petitions.[2158] In the facts and circumstances of this case, the same conditions were challenged before the high court which were under challenge before

---

2151. Pujari Bai v Madan Gopal, AIR 1989 SC 1764 : (1989) 3 SCC 433 : (1989) 3 SCR 383.
2152. Vivek Jain v UOI, AIR 1989 Del 301 (DB).
2153. Adhunik Metaliks Ltd v UOI, 2007 (103) Cut LT 617 (DB).
2154. Nityanandakar v State of Orissa, AIR 1991 SC 1134 : (1991) Supp 2 SCC 516 : (1992) 19 ATC 236.
2155. Direct Recruit Class II Engineering Officers Assn v State of Maharashtra, (1990) 2 SCC 715.
2156. Awadhesh Narain Pandey v District Inspector of Schools, Varanasi, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1266 (All) : (2006) AIHC 1825.
2157. Sarguja Transport Service v State Transport Appellate Tribunal, MP, (1987) 1 SCC 5; Avinash Nagara v Navodhya Vidhayala Samiti, (1997) 2 SCC 534.
2158. Sarguja Transport Service v State Transport Appellate Tribunal, MP, (1987) 1 SCC 5.

the Rajasthan Taxation Tribunal and the contentions raised by the petitioner were negatived by the tax tribunal. The challenge to the order of the tax tribunal by way of writ petition, was withdrawn without getting the liberty to file another writ petition. A subsequent writ petition on the same grounds is barred on the principle of res judicata.[2159] The respondent had appeared for the written test conducted by the appellant for selection to 150 posts of civil judges. The respondent secured less than 145 marks, and hence, was not called for interview. The respondent filed a writ petition praying that the examination be quashed, that the answer-book of the respondent should be placed before the high court and his answer-book should be re-evaluated. By an interim order, the answer–sheet of the respondent re-evaluated, as a result of which respondent secured 147 marks. The respondent was called for an interview but was not placed in the select list. Thereafter, the respondent filed a second writ petition praying that he should be selected for the post of civil judge. In the second writ petition, the respondent filed an application for amendment in which he expressed doubt regarding the key answers used in the evaluation of the written test. It was held, after taking the advantage of the interim orders and getting his papers re-evaluated, that the respondent cannot now contest by filing another writ petition, that the key answer-paper is wrong. If at all such a plea had to be raised, it should have been raised in the first writ petition. The contentions sought to be raised in a writ petition after the disposal of the earlier writ petition, are barred by the principles analogous to res judicata.[2160] As regards the principle of res judicata, it is clear that the court had applied its mind to the facts of the case and passed a speaking order in an earlier petition on the same cause of action, the second petition will not lie. The order howsoever short or precise, shall be treated to be passed on merits. It cannot be branded as a non-speaking order or an order which was passed without considering the merits of the case.[2161] Where a writ petition was filed claiming directions to authorities to give effect to coal linkage system and for supply of coal to petitioner, and the high court disposed off the writ petition by directing the authorities to dispose off the representation of the petitioner, thus, impliedly refusing the relief prayed for, the second writ petition based, on the same facts, is barred by the principle of res judicata and promissory estoppel. Further, during pendency of the second writ petition, the third writ petition praying for the same relief was also not maintainable.[2162] The question of correctness or validity of the judgement passed on the writ petition could not be raised in a contempt proceedings.[2163]

If a writ petition was withdrawn without liberty to file a fresh petition, fresh petition on the same cause of action is barred even if the petitioner had come into possession of some more particulars about the cause of action.[2164] A writ petition challenging the petitioner's dismissal from service, was dismissed in limine with reasoned order in respect of a ground raised in petition. Subsequent suit on the same ground plus new ground is barred. In respect of the ground raised earlier in the writ petition, it was held that so far as a reasoned order was given in the earlier writ petition which was dismissed in limine, the facts decided by that reasoned order operated as res judicata in the subsequent suit. Thus, the question regarding prejudice on account of non-supply of the copy of the statement of witnesses to the petitioner, clearly operated as res judicata in the subsequent suit. However, the subsequent suit was not barred

---

2159. Rajasthan Art Emporium v Rajasthan State Industrial and Investment Corp, AIR 1998 Raj 277.
2160. Madhya Pradesh Public Service Commission v Om Prakash Gupta, (1997) 6 SCC 645. See also Lal Singh Ram Singh Rajput v Assistant Executive Engineer, AIR 2005 SC 2175 : (2005) 11 SCC 204.
2161. Swatantra Kumar Aggarwal v Managing Director, UPFC, Kanpur, AIR 1994 All 187.
2162. Munna Industries v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1994 All 391.
2163. Comorin Match Industries Pvt Ltd v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1996 SC 1916 : (1996) 4 SCC 281.
2164. Krashn Kumar Balakram Pande v Municipal Corp, Baroda, AIR 1990 Guj 20 (DB).

in respect of the issue regarding refusal of the railways to allow its employees to appear as witnesses in support of the petitioner, since there was no adjudication on this issue in the earlier writ petition.[2165]

Decision of high court in a writ petition holding that authorities under Hyderabad Atiyat Enquiries Act, 1952, were competent to pass orders for possession in inquiries held under section 3A of the Act, cannot be re-agitated inter partes, by filing a suit.[2166]

Validity of a government notification was challenged through a writ petition by A on the ground that the notification under the Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Act, 1964, had not been duly published. Here, the court held that the notification had been duly published. Thereafter, B filed a suit, challenging the notification on the same ground. It was held that the earlier determination did not operate as res judicata.[2167] Where the plaintiff earlier filed writ petition challenging the validity of UP Sugar Undertaking Acquisition Ordinance (Ordinance No. 13 of 1971) which was dismissed, the subsequent suit for permanent injunction filed by the plaintiff against the authorities restraining them from interfering in possession, etc. of the company and further seeking declaration that properties mentioned in plaint were outside the preview of ordinance not being scheduled undertakings, the suit was found not barred by res judicata as in the earlier writ petition, the court was not considering as to which of the properties of the plaintiff was covered under the definition of scheduled undertaking.[2168] Where an ejectment suit is filed on the basis of permission obtained from the rent controller as required by the Rent Control Order passed in Central Provinces and Berar, and no plea of the tenancy being void was raised before the rent controller, then such a plea is not open in a subsequent suit.[2169] Where a writ court first expressing reservation as to the desirability of going into the merits of the case, subsequently considers the merits and decides the question of discrimination and departure from the norms, the decision on the merits becomes res judicata, as that of a civil court.[2170] Constructive res judicata applies to writ petitions also.[2171]

Where the writ petition was filed challenging the order of the authority regarding appointment of Administrative Board under section 73-H of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1961, it was held by a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court that dismissal of the same would not operate as res judicata in subsequent writ petition challenging the term of that Administrative Board.[2172]

In Narmada Bachao Andolan v Narmada Hydroelectric Development Corp,[2173] Dipak Misra J (as he then was), repelled the contention of the respondents that the writ petition is hit by the principles of res judicata as the issues raised herein were in earlier litigation. It was observed:

> In the earlier case the controversy was quite different. The issues that are raised by the petitioner are in different realm. In the present litigation number of issues emerged and there is frontal attack to the policy, awards passed by the Land Acquisition Officer. Role of 2165. Rabindra Nath Biswas v General Manager, NF Rly, AIR 1988 Pat 138.

---

2166. Attar Singh v Nanded Sikh Gurudwara, AIR 1981 Bom 24.
2167. Bhausaheb Tavnappa v State, AIR 1982 Bom 284.
2168. UP State Sugar Corp Ltd v Raza Buland Sugar Co Ltd, AIR 2001 All 100. See also Sri Krishna Salt works, Vishakhapatnam v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2004 AP 66 (DB).
2169. Prabhakar v Dev Ashish Co-op Housing Society, AIR 1984 Bom 65.
2170. Vivek Jain v UOI, 1989 ILR Del 301 (DB).
2171. Shiv Shakti Contractors v Commrs, Allahabad Division, Allahabad AIR 1991 NOC 54 (DB).
2172. Maroti Vishnu Borkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 (NOC) 2776 (Bom) : 2008 (5) All MR 309 (DB) (Aurangabad Bench).
2173. Narmada Bachao Andolan v Narmada Hydroelectric Development Corp, AIR 2008 MP 258 (DB).

> Narmada Control Authority and such other facts. When issues are not same and there is no adjudication in that regard, it is futile to say that the writ petition is barred by doctrine of res judicata...

In a writ petition challenging resumption of land was taken on the ground of decision of the high court in earlier writ petition. However, the Division Bench of the Orissa High Court found that the earlier writ petition was disposed towards granting liberty to petitioner to make representation before Industrial Infrastructure Development Corporation and the high court had not entered into the dispute raised between the parties. The principles of res judicata/ constructive res judicata has, therefore, no application.[2174]

Through a chain of authorities, the law stands settled that even if the provisions of the CPC are not applicable in writ jurisdiction, the principles enshrined in section 11 can be resorted to because they are founded on public policy and therefore, required to be extended and made applicable in writ jurisdiction also in the interest of administration of justice. Thus, where successive writ petitions were filed for quashing a notice under section 13(4) of the Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002, it was held that successive writ petitions claiming the same relief would be barred by the principles of res judicata. Even if the same relief is not claimed, but could have been claimed, the petition would be barred by constructive res judicata.[2175] BS Chauhan CJ (as he then was), speaking for the Division Bench in the above case quoted with approval a passage from the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Burn & Co v Their Employees,[2176] wherein it has been observed as follows:

> That would be contrary to the well recognised principle that a decision once rendered by a competent authority on a matter in issue between the parties after a full enquiry should not be permitted to be re-agitated. It is on this principle that the rule of res judicata enacted in section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code is based. That section is, no doubt, in terms inapplicable to the present matter, but the principle underlying it, expressed in the maxim "interest rei publicae ut sit finis litium", is founded on sound public policy and is of universal application. (Vide Broom's Legal Maxims, Tenth Edition, page 218). "The rule of res judicata is dictated" observed Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C.J. in Sheoparsan Singh v Ramnandan Prasad Singh "by a wisdom which is for all time".

Where the writ petition was not for declaration of any status or right between the parties, but for quashing the order of mutation passed by the revenue authorities, a subsequent suit by the petitioner, involving a dispute pertaining to the rights of parties, was not barred by the principle of res judicata. The jurisdiction of the high court in that writ petition was confined to the grounds raised for quashing the order of mutation. Since the jurisdiction of civil court had been specifically conferred by the statute, it cannot be taken away on filing a writ petition. Since the question raised by the plaintiffs required evidence to prove them, the decision in the writ petition would not operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.[2177] If a point became non-issue in earlier writ petition because of fraudulent submission of authorities the decision does not bar a consideration of the question, in subsequent petition for writ.[2178] Where a writ petition earlier filed by the present plaintiff was dismissed in limine by a one word order, it cannot be res judicata. When a petition after contest is disposed on the merits by a speaking order, then the question decided therein is res judicata; but in limine or dismissal on the ground

---

2174. Mesco Kalinga Steel Ltd v Orissa Industrial Infrastructure Development Corp, AIR 2008 (NOC) 837 (Ori) : 2008 (105) Cut LT 149 (DB).
2175. Tilak Rice & Oil Mills Pvt Ltd v DGM, Union Bank of India, AIR 2009 Ori 26 (DB).
2176. Burn & Co v Their Employees, AIR 1957 SC 38 : (1956) SCR 781, at p 789 (of SCR).
2177. Shyam Sunder v Hudibai, AIR 1989 MP 316.
2178. Katwe Jaggery Traders, Hubli v State of Karnataka, AIR 1991 Kant 63 (HG Balakrishna J).

of laches or availability of alternative remedy is not res judicata.[2179] (See also Workmen v Board of Esteem of Cochin Port Trust[2180] followed). A writ petition filed earlier for mutation of revenue records does not bar a subsequent suit involving a dispute pertaining to the rights of the parties.[2181] Whereas in the earlier petition the question raised challenged the action of the state government in attaching bags of sugar from petitioner-Company's godown and order of Tahasildar proposing recovery of sum of over Rs 5 crores, the subsequent petition raised a question regarding powers of State Government for fixing price for purchase of sugar cane higher than one fixed by Central Government. Thus, the question now raised was not at all considered or decided in earlier petition and thus the subsequent petition cannot be dismissed on ground of res judicata.[2182]

[s 11.41.1] Habeas corpus

The bar of res judicata or constructive res judicata would apply even to a petition under Article 32 of the Constitution where a similar petition seeking the same relief has been filed under Article 226 of the Constitution before the high court and the decision rendered against the petitioner therein has not been challenged by filing an appeal in the Supreme Court and has been allowed to become final. However, this principle, namely, the bar of res judicata or principles analogous thereto would not apply to a writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner prays for setting him at liberty. If a person under detention files a writ of habeas corpus under Article 226 of the Constitution before the high court and the writ petition is dismissed (whether by a detailed order after considering the case on merits or by a non-speaking order) and the said decision is not challenged by preferring a Special Leave Petition under Article 136 of the Constitution and is allowed to become final, it would still be open to him to file an independent petition under Article 32 of the Constitution seeking a writ of habeas corpus.[2183]

[s 11.41.2] Service Matters

A seniority list of a cadre should not be made the subject matter of the debate too often. However, the findings arrived at in one of challenge cannot be binding to a party, who had neither received nor had voluntarily appeared in the earlier case.[2184] Where, in the matter of selection for appointment, the first writ petition filed on the ground of apprehended bias was dismissed as withdrawn, the second writ petition filed on allegation of actual bias was found not barred by res judicata, more so, when the subject matter of the second writ petition was different.[2185] The question is whether a person like the General Manager, Telecommunication, under Article 12 of the Constitution can adopt different standards for the same class of people. If in a previous judgement, the franchisees who have executed agreement before 14 August 1992, are entitled to deduct a commission of 20 paise, there is no reason to single out the petitioners merely because they approached the court and failed. It was held that the judgement of the previous writ petition was a declaratory one.

2179. Pujari Bai v Madan Gopal, AIR 1989 SC 1764 : (1989) 3 SCC 433 : (1989) 3 SCR 383.
2180. Workmen v Board of Esteem of Cochin Port Trust, AIR 1978 SC 1283 : (1978) 3 SCC 119.
2181. Shyam Sunder v Hudibai, AIR 1989 MP 316.
2182. Gwalior Sugar Co Ltd v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 MP 218.
2183. TP Moideen Koya v Govt of Kerala, AIR 2004 SC 4733 : 2004 AIR SCW 5364 : (2004) 8 SCC 106 : 2004 SCR 904 : JT 2004 (8) SC 383.
2184. Dwaraka Nath v UOI, (1989) Supp 2 SCC 225.
2185. GN Nayak v Goa University, AIR 2002 SC 790 : (2002) 2 SCC 712 : JT 2002 (1) 526 : 2002 (1) SCR 636.

If it is a declaratory judgement, then that is binding on the department with respect to every subscriber coming under it. Hence, the question of res judicata does not arise.[2186] In service matters, an order passed by the court, which achieves finality, is binding on the department. If the court is satisfied that any employee has been prejudiced or his right under Article 14 has been violated, it may interfere in his favour; but, the department is precluded from challenging the interpretation given by the court.[2187] In a case of Himachal Pradesh Electricity Board, the Respondent–employee had all along been continuing in clerical line since 23 August 1974. Subsequent to the decision of the high court in CWP No. 336/1976 and the recommendation of the department promotion committee which considered the case of the respondent, pursuant to the directions given by the high court in the aforesaid writ petition, the Board passed an order on 11 August, 1982, reverting the respondent to the scale of junior stenographer w.e.f. 8 June, 1976 and by yet another office order, the respondent was again promoted to the post of head clerk, the respondent filed a writ petition No. 431/84 but withdrew the same on 12 September, 85. On the facts and circumstances of the present case, the Hon'ble Supreme Court was of the opinion that the respondent could not have re-agitated the claim by filing a fresh application before the tribunal challenging the very same cause of action which arose on 11 August, 82 against which Respondent filed a writ petition which was later on withdrawn.[2188] In a writ petition challenging the validity of Regulation 7 of New Bank of India (Officers Service) Regulations and certain provision of the promotion policy of the bank instituted before the high court, the single judge upheld Regulation 7 but annulled the impugned provisions of promotion policy. The petitioner did not challenge the decision but the bank challenged a part of the decision relating to promotion before the Division Bench. The Division Bench allowed the appeal of the bank. In such circumstances, the decision of a single judge in respect of the validity of Regulation 7 having reached finality, was held, as not to be challenged by the original writ petitioners in their appeal to the Supreme Court from the said decision of the Division Bench.[2189]

In a case relating to promotion and seniority the appellants pursued their remedy under the law and filed a writ petition which was allowed in their favour. The said order attained finality. Thus, the matter which has attained finality cannot be reopened again. Belated plea of the State that the promotion granted to some of the appellants were not in accordance with law cannot be allowed to be raised. Such contention raised too late is barred by the principle of res judicata.[2190] Explaining the point of law, SB Sinha J speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 23. We appreciate the anxiety on the part of the State that if the entire seniority list is directed to be reopened, it may give rise to many more litigations. It must think itself therefor. But it is the State alone who is responsible for such a situation. The appellants herein have been pursuing their remedies under the law. They had been granted relief as orders were passed in their favour. The said order, admittedly attained finality, and thus, cannot be reopened. It is thus, too late in the day for the state now to urge that promotions granted to some of the appellants herein in the post of Assistant Engineer (Elect.) were not in accordance with law. Such a contention is barred under the principle of res judicata.[2191]

2186. Suma Mathew v General Manager, Telecommunication, AIR 1998 Ker 182.
2187. Dharan Kallat v UOI, (1995) 4 SCC 207.
2188. HP State Electricity Board v KR Gulati, (1998) 2 SCC 624.
2189. KB Sharma v UOI, (1998) 9 SCC 38.
2190. N Birendra Singh v Priyo Kumar Singh, AIR 2006 SC 2228 : (2006) 9 SCC 650.
2191. N Birendra Singh v Priyo Kumar Singh, AIR 2006 SC 2228, para 23 at p 2233 : (2006) 9 SCC 650.

[s 11.41.3] Representative Suits

The principle of res judicata is not applicable where earlier writ petitions were filed by the petitioners in an individual capacity and the subsequent petition is filed in a representative capacity.[2192] A judgment inter partes of a competent court in a previous writ petition, would operate as res judicata, in a subsequent suit between the same parties, where the issues directly involved in the two proceedings are the same. This is irrespective of the fact whether or not the decision in the earlier writ petition was founded on a view contrary to the one subsequently expressed by the Supreme Court in a different case. The correctness or otherwise of the earlier decision is wholly irrelevant where the conditions for the application of the rule of res judicata are satisfied in the latter case.[2193]

[s 11.42] Arbitration

Principles of res judicata apply to arbitration proceedings.[2194] Section 41 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (Now repealed by the Arbitration & Conciliation Act, 1996), provides that the provisions of the CPC will apply to an arbitration proceeding. The provisions of res judicata are based on the principle that there shall be no multiplicity of proceedings and that there shall be finality to proceedings.[2195] res judicata is applicable to arbitration proceedings as well. Claimant raised some of the issues arising out of termination of contract in the first claim petition. It was held that he was precluded from seeking a second reference for remaining issues.[2196]

When the court does not modify the award with regard to grant of interest from the date of the award up to the date of payment, the effect would be as if the court itself has granted interest from the date of the decree till the payment at the rate which was determined by the arbitrator. The future interest would be regarded as having been ordered to be paid under section 29 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 when the court does not modify the award in this respect.[2197]

Supreme Court has made it clear that the existence, validity or effect of an arbitration agreement can be determined by the court at three stages: (1) before the arbitration proceedings commence, (2) during their pendency, and (3) after the award is made and filed in the court. If that is so and the question in this regard was raised before the court in a proceeding and that aspect was determined by the court, it cannot be said that such decision is not binding on the parties. Decision in arbitration suit was treated as arbitration petition under section 33 of Arbitration Act, 1940 holding that there was an arbitration agreement between parties which is binding on parties and operates as res judicata in matter of enforcement of foreign award. Independent of application of the principle of res judicata, one can spell out the existence of an arbitration clause between the parties in terms of the New York Convention to result in an arbitration and that further gets reinforced by the decision of the high court in the original suit in as much as that high court took the view that there is an arbitration agreement between the parties which is enforceable.[2198]

2192. Gulam Abbas v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1982) 1 SCC 71.
2193. Abdul Salam v State Bank of J&K, AIR 1981 J&K 21.
2194. DR Gupta v Steel Authority of India Ltd, AIR 1985 Ori 224.
2195. KV George v Secretary to Government, Trivandrum, AIR 1990 SC 53.
2196. KV George v Secretary to Government, Trivandrum, AIR 1990 SC 53.
2197. State of Orissa v BN Agarwalla, AIR 1997 SC 925 : AIR 1997 SCW 824 : (1997) 2 SCC 469. See also Greater Cochin Development Authority v Leelamma Vilson, AIR 2002 SC 952 : (2002) 2 SCC 573.
2198. Smita Conductors Ltd v Euro Alloys Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 3730 : 2001 AIR SCW 3517 : (2001) 7 SCC 728 : JT (2001) 7 SC 135.

Where the arbitration award in respect of fixing price for sale of land was set aside by the civil court on two grounds viz., violation of rules of natural justice and for not joining all the co-owners of land, i.e., sisters of vendees as parties to the agreement and the second ground of invalidity of the award was not expressly challenged in the appeal preferred to the high court against the order setting aside the award and the high court had confirmed judgment of the civil court setting aside the award and the same has attained finality, it would operate as res judicata between the parties. In the subsequent proceedings initiated on the same arbitration agreement, therefore, it is not open to the party to contend that the award was set aside only on ground of breach of natural justice and not on the ground of its invalidity that the sisters were not parties to the arbitration agreement and not bound either by agreement of sale of fixation of price at the instance of the brothers. By ignoring the two grounds of setting aside the award, the civil court could not have allowed revival of arbitration proceedings on the same agreement, by permitting substitution of another arbitrator to the panel in place of the deceased arbitrator.[2199]

For the applicability of res judicata parties should be common or they shall be holding under the same title of the parties which were before the court. But when plaintiffs 3 and 4 claimed to be the trustees of plaintiff No. 1, they were not parties to arbitration agreement. The rights of the trustees are different and cannot be merged with that of the individual rights that a person may have. In that view of the matter when there were not parties as trustees to the arbitration agreement (some of them not even parties), the decision of the arbitrator which has been made a rule of the court and decree passed will not operate as res judicata so as to bind the plaintiffs vis-a-vis the nature of the suit that has been filed and the claim that they are the trustees and not the defendants 1 to 4.[2200]

A suit filed by the plaintiff was withdrawn in view of the arbitration agreement entered into between parties. However, when the counter-claim of the defendant was entertained by the court, then immediately on the next date the plaintiff filed an application and submitted his objection under section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 to refer the parties to arbitration. It was held by the Madhya Pradesh High Court that section 8 of the Act of 1996 is a departure from section 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and the plea of waiver or the ground of approbate or reprobate relief are not permissible under the New Act. It is imperative for the Court to refer the matter for arbitration. The principle of res judicata applies to bring a fresh suit for the same cause of action.[2201]

In another case from Madhya Pradesh a peculiar circumstance arose when the order passed by the district judge was in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court, but that decision was overruled by a larger Bench of the Apex Court. The facts of the case are than an application was filed in the court of the district judge for appointment of arbitrator. The said application was dismissed on merit. At that time the district judge had jurisdiction to decide the matter. The said dismissal order was not challenged in higher forum. It was held by the Madhya Pradesh High Court the subsequent application cannot be entertained merely on the ground that now the jurisdiction vested in the high court and not with the district judge. At the time when the application for constitution of Arbitral Tribunal was decided by the district judge, he had competence to decide the matter in view of the decision of Supreme Court in 2199. Shanmughasundaram v Diravia Nadar, AIR 2005 SC 1836 : 2005 AIR SCW 1426 : (2005) 10 SCC 728 : (2005) 2 SCR 649 : JT 2005 (3) SC 186.

---

2200. Bhai Hospital Trust v Parvinder Singh, AIR 2002 Del 311.
2201. Charanjit Kaur v SR Cable, AIR 2009 MP 66 : (2008) 4 MPLJ 221 (Indore Bench).

Konkan Railway Corp v Rani Construction Ltd,[2202] which decision was later overruled by a seven-Judge Bench in SBP & Co v Patel Engineering Ltd[2203] But the Supreme Court in the latter case also observed that the earlier orders passed by the district judge as delegate of the Chief Justice would be saved and would remain unaffected.[2204]

[s 11.43] Appeal

It is not possible to accept that the principle of res judicata will apply to bar the appeal. Section 11 of the CPC would bar the court from trying any suit or issue in which the matter "directly and substantially in issue" between the same parties or between the parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title in a court competent to try such subsequent suit or suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, has been "heard and finally decided by such court".[2205]

The plea of res judicata cannot be raised for the first time in appeal before the Supreme Court.[2206]

The contention that the first appeal filed producing the copy of the order sent by the Land Tribunal was not a valid appeal and the appeal filed for the second time along with certified copy of the order of the land tribunal is a valid appeal and therefore, the appellate authority committed an error by dismissing the second appeal, is wholly untenable and deserves rejection. When the first appeal itself was dismissed on the ground of limitation, the appeal filed for the second time is in a worse position as the same was much more belated than the first appeal. Even assuming that the contention is correct, when the first appeal itself was dismissed on the ground of limitation, the second appeal is also liable to be dismissed on the same ground. Thus, in any event the appeal filed for the second time deserves dismissal. Consequently, it makes no difference for the petitioners if the same is dismissed on the ground of res judicata or on the ground of limitation. In any event, having suffered an adverse order in the first appeal, the appeal filed for the second time is not maintainable and the same was bad in law. On this ground also the order under revision is legal and valid and no interference is warranted.[2207] Even in law, so far as Supreme Court is concerned, it is not bound by the finding of the Tribunal rendered in the first instance while remanding the case to the lower authorities because Supreme Court is now hearing an appeal against the order of the tribunal in which the earlier order has merged.[2208]

In an appeal against the high court's finding, the Supreme Court is not bound by what the high court might have held in its remand order. It is true that a subordinate court is bound by the direction of the high court. It is equally true that the same high court, hearing the matter on a second occasion or any other court of coordinate authority hearing the matter cannot discard the earlier holding but a finding in a remand order cannot bind a higher court when it hears the matter in appeal.[2209]

2202. Konkan Railway Corp v Rani Construction Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 778 : (2002) 2 SCC 388.
2203. SBP & Co v Patel Engineering Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 450 : (2005) 8 SCC 618.
2204. Chandreshwar Jha (Engineers & Contractors) v Northern Coalfields Ltd, AIR 2009 MP 21 : (2009) 1 MPLJ 214.
2205. Bajranglal Shivchandrai Ruia v Shashikant N Ruia, AIR 2004 SC 2546 : (2004) 5 SCC 272.
2206. ITC Ltd v Commr of Central Excise, New Delhi, AIR 2005 SC 1370 : (2004) 7 SCC 591 : (2004) 7 JT 409 : (2004) 171 ELT 433.
2207. Shivarama Bhat v Thimma Poojary, AIR 2003 Kant 455.
2208. Collector of Central Excise v Hindustan Lever Ltd, AIR 2000 SC 2907 : (2000) 6 SCC 614. See also N Chandrasekharan Nair v Kalliani Amma Gomathi Amma, AIR 2001 Ker 210.
2209. Jasraj Inder Singh v Hemraj Multanchand, AIR 1977 SC 1011 : (1977) 2 SCC 155.

When the remand order passed by the lower appellate court remanding the case in the trial court is not challenged it will bind only lower appellate court and not the high court in second appeal, which is superior court.[2210]

Where, the three suits involving various issues were decided by the trial court on merit, including common issue, one appeal by the plaintiff and 3 appeals by the defendants were filed. The appeal filed by the plaintiff abated on the ground of death of sole respondent who was also one of the respondents in other appeals, resulting in conformation of decision on common issue by trial court in that appeal. The hearing of common issue over again in the remaining appeals would be barred by res judicata.[2211]

Order XXI rule 22 culminates in end of one stage before attachment of the property can take place in furtherance of execution of decree. The proceedings under O XXI rule 23 can only be taken if the executing court either finds that after issuing notice under O XXI rule 21 the judgment-debtor has not raised any objection or if such objection has been raised, the same has been decided by the executing court. The sub-rule (1) as well as sub-rule (2) under O XXI rule 22 operates simultaneously on the same field. Sub-rule (1) operates when no objection is filed; then the court proceeds and clears the way for going to the next stage of the proceedings namely attachment of the property and if the court finds objections on record then it decides the objections in the first instance and thereafter clears the way for taking up the matter for attachment of the property if the objections have been overruled. Whether the order is made under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2) it has the effect of determining the preliminary stage before the attachment process is set in motion. In this background, the order of the court to proceed with attachment on finding that no objection has been raised also operates as an order deciding the preliminary stage of the execution proceedings and operates as if the judgment-debtor has no objection to file. If thereafter, the judgment-debtor wants to raise an objection in the same proceedings in the absence of any modification of order passed under O XXI rule 22 sub-rules (1) or (2) he has to take recourse to get rid of the order by way of appeal. There is no dispute that the order for proceeding by the judgment under O XXI rule 22 amounts to a decree under section 47 of the CPC and is appealable as a decree, i.e., to say it is not an appeal against the interim order but an appeal against the decree which is provided against the final order only means that at the different stages of the execution orders passed by the executing court have been attached finality unless they are set aside by way of appeal before the higher forum else they bind the parties at the subsequent stage of the execution proceedings so that the smooth progress of execution is not jeopardised and the stage which reached the finality by dint of various orders of the O XXI operates as res judicata for the subsequent stage of the proceedings. Since the order passed at different stage itself operates as decree and appealable as such, the same cannot be challenged in appeal against subsequent orders also, because appeal against an order passed under O XXI, rule 22 does not fall as appeal against order at initial stage but amounts to a decree finally determining the question. That is why no appeal against orders made under O XXI have been provided under O XLIII. In this background where a judgment-debtor has an opportunity to raise objection which he could have raised but failed to take and allowed the preliminary stage to come to an end for taking up the matter to the next stage for attachment of property and sale of the property under O XXI rule 23 which fell within the above principle, the judgment-debtor thereafter cannot raise such objections subsequently and revert back to earlier stage of proceedings unless the order resulting in termination of preliminary stage which amounts to a decree is appealed against and order is set aside or modified.

2210. N Chandrasekharan Nair v Kalliani Amma Gomathi Amma, AIR 2001 Ker 210.
2211. Alwar Chettiar v Natarajan Pillai, AIR 2001 Mad 151.

In view of the aforesaid conclusions that the principle of res judicata including constructive res judicata operates in execution proceedings and that the order made under rule 22, clauses (1) and (2) of O XXI CPC, which result in closure of preliminary stage and commencement of next stage operates as res judicata, and precludes the judgment-debtor from raising objections to continuance of proceeding thereafter unless such order is appealed against as a decree.[2212]

An appeal cannot be entertained against an order dismissing a suit for default. The appeal being incompetent, order of remand passed therein is also without jurisdiction and cannot attract res judicata.[2213]

[s 11.44] Special Leave Petition

In the instant case, one V, died in the year 1936, leaving behind two sons. The dispute arose in respect of the residential house which was an arbitration. On 29 August, 1939, the arbitrator gave an award in respect of the partition of the house in question. On an application being filed on behalf of the defendant–appellant, the said award was set aside. However, on an appeal being filed before the high court, the award was directed to be made rule of the court. Thereafter, a suit was filed in the year 1963 by the plaintiff–respondent for partition of land adjoining the pucca house. The defendant-appellant resisted the suit for partition on the ground that even the land adjoining the pucca house had already been partitioned on the basis of the award dated 29 August, 1939. The high court in its order for making the award a rule of the court clearly recorded a finding that the award was in respect of the pucca house only and did not cover the area adjoining the house, which had not been partitioned. The findings arrived at by the high court became final and binding between the parties.[2214] A decision on an abstract question of law, unrelated to facts which give rise to a right, cannot operate as res judicata; nor also can a decision on the question of jurisdiction be res judicata in a subsequent suit or proceedings; but, if the question of law is related to the fact in issue, an erroneous decision on such a question of law may operate as res judicata between the parties in a subsequent suit or proceedings, if the cause of action is the same.[2215] Since the claims of the petitioners and the respondents has arisen from the same cause of action and the findings of the appellate court that damage has accrued to the Respondents, the decree which is the subject matter of the special leave petition cannot be assailed. The same question was directly in issue and was the subject matter of the suits. The same having been allowed to become final. it could not be gone into, since the same had attained finality, the petitioner not having filed any appeal against the appeal dismissing the suit.[2216] It is settled law that even the dismissal of special leave petition in limine operates as a final order between the parties and any order passed by the high court or the tribunal, subsequently operates as a res judicata as the parties thereto are concerned.[2217] An issue of non-joinder of a party tried as a preliminary issue and negatived by trial court where the high court on revision confirmed the same; in appeal, before the Supreme Court, the issue cannot be allowed to be raised as being barred by the principle of res judicata.[2218] A dispute raised by an application under Article 32 of the Constitution, must be held as barred by principle of res judicata and constructive res judicata if the same

---

2212. Barkat Ali v Badrinarain, AIR 2001 Raj 51 (DB).
2213. Superintendent of Police, Cachar v Abdul Rashid, AIR 1980 Gau 8.
2214. Badrinarain Upadhyaya v Jagdish Narain Upadhyaya, (1998) 8 SCC 728.
2215. Supreme Court Employees, Welfare Association v UOI, (1989) 4 SCC 187.
2216. Ram Prakash v Charan Kaur, (1997) 9 SCC 543.
2217. Shree Narayan Dharmasanghom Trust v Swami Prakashnanda, (1997) 6 SCC 78.
2218. Fennar (India) Ltd v Punjab and Sindh Bank, (1997) 7 SCC 89.

has been earlier decided by a competent court and has become final. The dismissal of special leave petition is not ordinarily a seal of total approval of the view of the high court in arriving in its decision.[2219] Dismissal of a special leave petition in limine cannot preclude the Supreme Court from considering on merits, the same issues involved in a subsequent appeal.[2220] An order dismissing special leave petition in limine does not constitute res judicata, particularly in a dispute which was not between the same parties.[2221] A dismissal of a special leave petition by the Supreme Court by non-speaking order, would not operate as bar against a party filing writ petitions in the high court.[2222] Since, the appellant in its earlier special leave petition had also questioned the grant of solatium at 15% and interest at 6% in the Supreme Court and their plea failed on 19 December 1985, it is not permissible for them now to re-open the issue relating to the grant of solatium at 15% and interest of 6%. The principle of res judicata applies.[2223]

Where a government circular and fresh gradation list was held to be illegal by the tribunal, the special leave petition against the decision was filed by one appellant and was dismissed as infructuous in view of government circular issued as per the tribunal's decision, the liberty however was given by Supreme Court to the appellant to assail the government's action on different cause. Since no liberty was given to the appellants to re-open the question as regards the validity of the gradation list of 1984, which became final and binding, the principle of res judicata was made applicable and the tribunal had no jurisdiction to re-open the issue.[2224]

Following the decision in the case of Kunhayammed,[2225] that the dismissal of the special leave petition against the main judgment of the high court would not constitute res judicata when a special leave petition is filed against the order passed in the review petition provided the review petition was filed prior to filing of special leave petition against the main judgment of the high court. The position would be different where after dismissal of the special leave petition against the main judgment a party files a review petition after a long delay on the ground that the party was prosecuting remedy by way of special leave petition. In such a situation of filing of review would be an abuse of the process of the law. The view taken in Abbai Maligai Partnership Firm,[2226] that if high court allows the review petition filed after the special leave petition was dismissed after condoning the delay, it would be treated as affront to the order of the Supreme Court. The review petition was filed well within time and since the review petition was not being decided by the high court, the appellant filed the special leave petition against the main judgment of the high court. The appeal arising out of special leave petition is maintainable.[2227]

The Supreme Court, while remanding the matter to the tribunal, categorically stated that all these matters should be sent to the State Transport Appellate Tribunal which shall treat the writ petitions filed in the high court as appeals and after hearing all the parties, dispose of the matters in accordance with law. The Supreme Court never expressed any opinion on the merits

---

2219. Nityanandkar v State of Orissa, (1991) Supp 2 SCC 516.
2220. Scientific Adviser to the Ministry of Defence v S Daniel, (1990) Supp SCC 374.
2221. UOI v Sube Ram, (1997) 9 SCC 69.
2222. Sahi Ram v Avtar Singh, AIR 1999 Del 96.
2223. UOI v Asha Sharma, (1998) 2 SCC 698.
2224. Sarat Chandra Mishra v State of Orissa, AIR 2006 SC 861 : (2006) 1 SCC 638 : (2006) 1 SCR 116.
2225. Kunhayammed v State of Kerela, AIR 2000 SC 2587 : AIR 2000 SCW 2608 : (2000) 6 SCC 359.
2226. Abbai Maligai Partnership Firm v K Santhakumaran, AIR 1999 SC 1486 : AIR 1998 SCW 4061 : (1998) 7 SCC 386.
2227. K Rajamouli v AVKN Swamy, AIR 2001 SC 2316 : AIR 2001 SCW 2146 : (2001) 5 SCC 37. See also Green View Tea and Industries v Collector, Golaghat, AIR 2004 SC 1738 : AIR 2004 SCW 1347 : (2004) 4 SCC 122 : JT 2004 (2) 556.

of the case whatsoever. Therefore, the dismissal of special leave petitions pertaining to the route in question by various orders of Supreme Court neither amounts to res judicata nor does it amount that order passed by the high court amounts to upholding the law propounded in the decision sought to be appealed against.[2228]

[s 11.45] Land Acquisition

Where the Land Acquisition Officer decides the question of a title, the decision becomes res judicata;[2229] but where the revenue officer does not have jurisdiction to decide whether the claimant was the landlord and, as such, entitled to eject a tenant, then decision is not res judicata.[2230] Where the relief sought in the land acquisition proceeding and in the subsequent suit are different, then there is no question of res judicata.[2231]

It is not very often that question of title is decided in a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act. In some proceedings like one for injunction, the question of title does sometimes crop up, but they appear as ancillary issues. However, where the right to receive compensation for property acquired in land acquisition proceedings as between rival claimants depends on the title to the property acquired and the dispute as to title is raised by the parties and is decided by the Land Acquisition Judge after contest, the decision as to title operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties on the question of title. The binding force of a judgment delivered under the Land Acquisition Act depends on general principles of law and not on section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code and the decision of the Land Acquisition Judge would operate as res judicata even though he was not competent to try the subsequent suit. The fact that the judgment of the Privy Council in appeal is the above case was given in default of appearance, was held to be in material as the judgments in the first two Courts were given after full contest.[2232]

[s 11.46] Ceiling Act and Res Judicata

Proceedings under the Ceiling Act, are not adversarial as are proceedings in suit. The Ceiling Act is a legislation to give effect to the directive principles contained in clauses (b) and (c) of Article 39 of the Constitution. The state is advised by the directive principles contained in Constitution to take necessary legislative measures so as to ensure social justice by equitable distribution of ownership and control of material resources and avoid concentration of wealth and means of production in few hands. The laudable social objectives sought to be achieved by the ceiling legislation is to take surplus land from the holders and distribute the same to the landless agricultural labourers and peasants surviving on agriculture. In applying the principles of res judicata, therefore, to the ceiling proceedings, the object of the Act cannot be lost sight of. All principles of res judicata contained in section 11 of the CPC cannot be strictly and rigorously made applicable to ceiling proceedings. Section 38-B introduced by Amendment Act of 1976 with the transitory provisions made both in the Amendment Act No 18 of 1973 and Act No 20 of 1976 is a departure from the provisions of section 11 of the CPC and indicate non-applicability of bar of res judicata in ceiling proceedings under the Act.[2233]

2228. UP SRTC v Omaditya Verma, AIR 2005 SC 2250 : (2005) 4 SCC 424.
2229. Rajlakshmidasi v Banmali Sen, AIR 1953 SC 33 : 1953 SCR 154.
2230. Richpal Singh v Dalip, (1987) 4 SCC 410.
2231. State of Jammu and Kashmir v Sahahallu Mir, AIR 1980 SC 1349 : (1980) 3 SCC 272.
2232. Rajlakshmi Dasi v Banmali Sen, AIR 1953 SC 33 : 1953 SCR 154.
2233. Escorts Farms Ltd v Commr, Kumanon Division, Nainital, AIR 2004 SC 2186 : AIR 2004 SCW 1960 : (2004) 4 SCC 281.

[s 11.47] Exceptions to Res Judicata

The doctrine of res judicata, has certain notable exceptions. The doctrine cannot be invoked to confer finality to:

(i) An erroneous decision on the jurisdiction of the court.

(ii) An erroneous judgment on a pure question of law.

In Canara Bank v NG Subbaraya Setty,[2234] the Supreme Court dealt with issues concerning application of the second exception. After comprehensive analysis of the doctrine, the statutory provisions embodying it and the case law, the court cleared the ambiguities concerning its application. It held that the general rule is that all issues that arise directly and substantially in a former suit or proceeding between the same parties are res judicata in a subsequent suit or proceeding between the same parties. These would include issues of fact, mixed questions of fact and law, and issues of law.

This general rule, the court said, has certain exceptions when it comes to issues of law. The court elucidated them holding that where an issue of law decided between the same parties in a former suit or proceeding relates to the jurisdiction of the court, an erroneous decision in the former suit or proceeding is not res judicata in a subsequent suit or proceeding between the same parties, even where the issue raised in the second suit or proceeding is directly and substantially the same as that raised in the former suit or proceeding. An issue of law which arises between the same parties in a subsequent suit or proceeding is not res judicata if, by an erroneous decision given on a statutory prohibition in the former suit or proceeding, the statutory prohibition is not given effect to. This is despite the fact that the matter in issue between the parties may be the same as that directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit or proceeding. This is for the reason that in such cases, the rights of the parties are not the only matter for consideration (as is the case of an erroneous interpretation of a statute interpartes), as the public policy contained in the statutory prohibition cannot be set at naught.

Another exception to this general rule follows from the matter in issue being an issue of law different from that in the previous suit or proceeding. This can happen when the issue of law in the second suit or proceeding is based on different facts from the matter directly and substantially in issue in the first suit or proceeding. Equally, where the law is altered by a competent authority since the earlier decision, the matter in issue in the subsequent suit or proceeding is not the same as in the previous suit or proceeding, because the law to be interpreted is different.

[S 12] Bar to further suit.—Where a plaintiff is precluded by rules from instituting a further suit in respect of any particular cause of action, he shall not be entitled to institute a suit in respect of such cause of action in any Court to which this Code applies.

[s 12.1] Rules Precluding Institution of a Further Suit in Respect of the Same Cause of Action

This section was necessitated by the transfer of certain of the provisions of the Code of 1882 to the Rules. The following is a list of the rules that bar a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action:

2234. Canara Bank v NG SubbarayaSetty, (2018) 16 SCC 228.

Order II, rule 2 — Omission to sue in respect of part of a claim.

Order IX, rule 9 — Decree against plaintiff by default bars a fresh suit.

Order XXII, rule 9 — Abatement of suit bars a fresh suit.

Order XXIII, rule 1 — Withdrawal of suit without leave of court bars a fresh suit.

The word "rules" means rules contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125. Hence, the section applies to suits precluded under the rules and not on account of some provision in some other statute.[2235] If plaintiff withdraws a suit without the leave of the Court, i.e., against the mandate provided under Order XXXIII rule 1, then the plaintiff would have no right to file "further suit" in respect of cause of action, which was the same cause of action in a previous suit.[2236]

[S 13] When foreign judgment not conclusive.—A foreign judgment shall be conclusive as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title except—

(a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction;

(b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case;

(c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or a refusal to recognise the law of [2237][India] in cases in which such law is applicable;

(d) where the proceedings in which judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice;

(e) where it has been obtained by fraud;

(f) where it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in [45][India].

SYNOPSIS

[s 13.1] Alterations in the Section 405
[s 13.2] Principle of Territorial Sovereignty..... 405
[s 13.3] International Law (Private)—Meaning of..... 405
[s 13.4] Act of State..... 406
[s 13.5] Foreign Judgment..... 406
[s 13.6] "shall be conclusive" 407
[s 13.7] "any matter" 408
[s 13.8] "directly adjudicated upon" 408
[s 13.9] "the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim"..... 409
[s 13.10] "litigating under the same title" 409
[s 13.11] Enforcement of foreign judgments in India 409
[s 13.12] Enforcement of decrees passed by Courts of Indian States after merger.... 410
[s 13.13] Decree passed by Court fallen into Pakistan..... 411
[s 13.14] Operation of the section..... 411
[s 13.15] Foreign judgment pronounced by a Court without jurisdiction not enforceable..... 412
[s 13.16] Submission to the jurisdiction of foreign Courts..... 413
[s 13.16.1] Agreement to Submit to Foreign Jurisdiction..... 415
[s 13.16.2] Carrying on Business in a Foreign Country through an Agent..... 415
[s 13.16.3] Possession of Immovable Property in a Foreign Country..... 415

2235. Vineet Kumar v Bhagwan Dei, AIR 1978 All 312.
2236. Namdev v Managing Director, NWKRTC, MANU/KA/2592/2020.
2237. Substituted for words "the States" by Act 2 of 1951, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

[s 13.17] Jurisdiction of foreign Courts over non-resident legal representatives in a pending action 415
[s 13.18] Irregularities not affecting jurisdiction 416
[s 13.19] Foreign judgment against a foreign firm 416
[s 13.20] Foreign judgment on a decree of an Indian Court 416
[s 13.21] Foreign judgment as Res Judicata 416
[s 13.22] Clause (A) : Court of competent jurisdiction 417
[s 13.23] Clause (B) : Merits of the case 418
[s 13.24] Clause (C) : Law Applicable 421
[s 13.25] Clause (D) : Natural Justice 421
[s 13.26] Clause (E) : Fraud 423
[s 13.27] Clause (F) : Breach of any Law in India 423
[s 13.28] Limitation 424
[s 13.29] Suits on foreign awards 424
[s 13.30] Execution of foreign judgments 425
[s 13.31] Custody, divorce and maintenance 425

[s 13.1] Alterations in the Section

Clause (a) was inserted in 1908. The last clause of section 14 of the Act of 1882 was then omitted. (See note below, "How a foreign judgment may be enforced in India".) Other alterations were only verbal.

[s 13.2] Principle of Territorial Sovereignty

It is a well settled principle of international law, that owing to the principle of territorial sovereignty a judgment delivered in one country, in the absence of international agreement, cannot have a direct operation of its own in another. It is also well settled that all individuals and all properties within a territory of a state are within its dominion and sway (quidquid est in territorio es etiam de territorio). The municipal courts are under a constitutional compulsion to give effect to the law of their own sovereign legislature.[2238]

[s 13.3] International Law (Private)—Meaning of

What is called private international law is not law governing relations between independent states; private international law, or as it is sometimes called "conflict of laws", is simply a branch of the civil law of the state evolved to do justice between litigating parties in respect of transactions or personal status involving a foreign element. The rules of private international law of each state must therefore in the very nature of things differ, but by the comity of nations certain rules are recognised as common to civilised jurisdictions. Through part of the judicial system of each state, these common rules have been adopted to adjudicate upon disputes involving a foreign element and to effectuate judgments of foreign courts in certain matters, or as a result of international conventions.[2239]

There is a well-recognised distinction in private international law between a judgment in rem and a judgment in personam. A foreign judgment which purports to operate in rem will not attract extra territorial recognition unless it has been given by a court internationally competent in this respect. In other words, such a court must have jurisdiction to give a judgment binding all persons generally.[2240]

2238. Sagoon Jayaidee Dhond v Sociedade Civill e Particular dos Toris of Volooi, Ponda Concelhe, AIR 1966 Goa, Daman and Diu 38 (FB).
2239. R Visnanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2240. Duggamma v Ganeshayya, AIR 1965 Mys 97.

[s 13.4] Act of State

An "act of state" is not a judgment, and it cannot, therefore, have the effect of res judicata. Thus, it has been held before Independence that an order of the political agent of Meywar and the Maharana of Udepore deposing a high priest from his gadi was not a foreign judgment, but merely an "act of state", and it cannot therefore, operate as res judicata.[2241]

[s 13.5] Foreign Judgment

The expression "foreign judgment" is defined in section 2(6) as meaning the judgments of a foreign court, that is, a court situated beyond the limits of India which has no authority in India and is not established or continued by the President of the Indian Union. The definition of judgment as given in section 2(9) is inapplicable to foreign judgments. A foreign judgment must be understood to mean "an adjudication by a foreign court upon a matter before it" and not the reasons for the order made by it, or otherwise section 13 would not be applicable to an order made by it where no reasons are given.[2242] The present section provides that a foreign judgment may operate as res judicata except in the six cases specified in the section, and of course, in order to so operate the other conditions, section 11 must be fulfilled.[2243] The foreign court must be competent to try the suit, not only as regards pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction and the subject matter of the suit, but also with reference to its territorial jurisdiction and the competency of the jurisdiction of the foreign court which is to be judged not by the territorial law of the foreign state, but by the rules of private international law. That is, the foreign court must have competence in an international sense and not merely according to the law of the state in which the court is functioning.[2244] In matrimonial matters, an order for the custody of minor children by a West German court with the consent of the parents, both residing at the time within the jurisdiction of the court was held to be one which would be recognised and enforced by courts in India.[2245] Similarly, a decree of a foreign court, within whose jurisdiction the husband's domicile was annulling a Hindu marriage solemnised in India will be recognised by courts in India. It is not as if such a marriage can be dissolved only in conformity with the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, and on grounds provided therein or by courts in India only.[2246] Courts of one country have no jurisdiction to decide questions of title to immovable property situated in another country nor pass a decree capable of enforcement against the same, but they have jurisdiction over all persons residing within its borders and can pass a decree as regards movables situated outside the state, provided it can effectively be enforced by process against the judgment-debtor within the state. Thus, a decree of the Madras High Court directing the defendant residing within the state to transfer shares in a company whose registered office was outside the state was held to be valid[2247] but a decree creating a charge over immovable properties in a foreign state is without jurisdiction.[2248] So, a decision of a Kathiawar Court as to a custom governing partition will not be res judicata in a 2241. Goswami Govardhanlalji v Goswami Shri Girdharlalji, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 620.

---

2242. Brijlal Ramjidas v Govindram Gobordhandas, AIR 1947 PC 192 : 74 IA 203 : (1948) 52 Cal WN 82 : (1948) 50 Bom LR 556.
2243. Indar v Thakur, AIR 1921 Lah 20.
2244. Viswanathan v Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1; Chormal Balchand v Kasturchand, (1936) ILR 63 Cal 1033 : (1936) 40 Cal WN 59; Panchapakesa v Hussain, AIR 1934 Mad 35 : (1934) 64 Mad LJ 209.
2245. Marggarate M Pulparampil v Dr Chacko Pulparampil, AIR 1970 Ker 1 : (1969) ILR 1 Ker 293.
2246. S Teja Singh v Smt Satya, AIR 1971 P&H 80; reversed on appeal in Satya v Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105.
2247. Viswanathan v Abdul Majid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2248. Sivaramakrishnan v Mammu, AIR 1957 Mad 214; Duggamma v Ganeshayya, AIR 1965 Mys 97.

suit for partition between the same parties of lands in British territory.[2249] In matters of foreign judgments, the courts here are guided by very much the same principles as those adopted by the courts of England.[2250] As in England, the foreign judgment must be final and conclusive in the court in which it is passed and it may be final although it is subject to appeal to a higher court.[2251]

[s 13.6] "shall be conclusive"

A foreign judgment is conclusive as to any matter directly adjudicated upon thereby, but it does not include the reasons for the judgment given by the foreign court. What is conclusive under section 13 is the judgment, i.e., the final adjudication, and not the reasons. Section 13 in essence enacts a branch of the rule of res judicata in its relation to foreign judgments, but not every foreign judgment is made conclusive in the Indian courts by section 13.[2252]

The rule of conclusiveness of a foreign judgment, as enacted in section 18, is somewhat different in its operation from the rule of res judicata.[2253]

Manifestly, therefore, every issue heard and finally decided in a foreign court is not conclusive between the parties. What is conclusive is the judgment, again, the competence of a court for the application of the rule of res judicata fails to be determined strictly by the municipal law, but the competence of the foreign tribunal must satisfy a dual test of competence by the laws of the state in which the court functions, and also in an international sense. Title to immovable property may be determined directly or indirectly only by the law of the state, and by the court of the state in which it is situated.[2254]

Under section 31 of the Recovery of Debts due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, a suit for recovery of money due to Bank based on foreign judgment cannot be transferred to Debt Recovery Tribunal without findings as to the conclusive nature of foreign judgment. The conclusive nature of foreign judgment is to be decided by civil court and this function cannot be delegated to the Debt Recovery Tribunal.[2255] Discussing the applicability of section 31 of the Act, it was observed in the above case as follows:

> Section 31 of the Act is intended for transfer of suits or other proceedings pending for recovery of debts due to banks and financial institutions. By taking recourse to Section 31, the civil court cannot delegate its power to adjudicate the question, set out in Section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure to a Tribunal constituted under the Act. The rules laid down in s 13 are rules of substantive law and not merely the procedure and therefore the only authority rested with the jurisdiction to adjudicate the questions enumerated under s 13 is the civil court. Even otherwise, in view of the bar under s 22 of the Act on the observance of the procedure under the Code, the Tribunal cannot apply s 13 of the code.[2256]

The authority vested with jurisdiction to decide as to the conclusive nature of a foreign judgment is the civil court under section 13 of the Code. Therefore, where a husband filed a suit in India for grant of injunction to restrain his wife from continuing with complaint for

---

2249. Prithisingi v Umedsingi, (1903) 6 Bom LR 98, doubting Babahbat v Narharbhat, (1888) ILR 13 Bom 224.
2250. Nalla v Mahomed, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 112, p 114; Duggamma v Ganeshayya, AIR 1965 Mys 97.
2251. Baijnath v Vallabhadas, AIR 1933 Mad 511 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 951; Nauvion v Freeman, [1890] 15 AC 1.
2252. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2253. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2254. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2255. TK Shahal Hassan Musaliyar v Bank of Baroda, Kollam, AIR 2008 Ker 21 : (2007) 4 Ker LT 90.
2256. TK Shahal Hassan Musaliyar v Bank of Baroda, Kollam, AIR 2008 Ker 21, p 23 : (2007) 4 Ker LT 90.

divorce in a foreign Court, it was held by the Punjab and Haryana High Court that the wife being not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Court where the suit was filed, injunction cannot be granted. It was also held that foreign Court cannot be treated as a Court subordinate to civil court in India and decree of divorce, even if granted, would be required to be examined as binding on the husband in terms of section 13 of the Code.[2257]

When an issue is decided or adjudicated upon, it would mean that the issue has been conclusively decided between the parties.[2258]

Where the issue or the "matter" which the chamber judge was required to consider and to adjudicate upon between the parties was forum non-con-veniens, both the parties were heard by the chamber judge in extenso. Costs were awarded after hearing both the counsel, who appeared before the chamber judge. The court of appeal also passed an order upon reading notices filed on behalf of defendant, the order of the chamber judge was affirmed and the libel action was stayed by the appeal court while directing the plaintiffs to pay costs to defendant, it cannot be said that since no evidence was led while delivering the order, it is not a judgment which is conclusive as it has not been given on merits of the case as required under section 13(b) of the CPC.[2259]

[s 13.7] "any matter"

The expression "matter" in section 13 is not equivalent to subject-matter, it means the right claimed.[2260]

The term "matter" used in section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code refers to an issue to be decided. It is not as if the entire case has to be adjudicated upon and only then can the decision be executed.[2261]

The language of section 13 speaks not of the judgment but "any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon" and the word "any" shows that all the adjudicative parts of the judgment are equally conclusive.[2262]

[s 13.8] "directly adjudicated upon"

Adjudication in every case does not mean that evidence must be led. The term "adjudication" means to decide on, pronounce, sit in judgment. This decision or pronouncement can be made without evidence being led by the parties if there is sufficient material for the adjudicating authority to draw any conclusion in respect of the issue involved between the parties. Therefore, the adjudication of a matter on merits would not necessarily mean that evidence must be led. In fact, if the parties agree that no evidence need be led in particular case and merely rely on the pleadings and submissions made, it could not be said that a decision in such a case would not be on merits.[2263]

2257. Rakesh Kumar v Ashima Kumar, AIR 2007 P&H 63.
2258. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.
2259. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.
2260. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2261. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.
2262. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2263. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.

[s 13.9] "the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim"

See notes to condition II, "The same parties or parties under whom any of them claim" in section 11.

[s 13.10] "litigating under the same title"

See notes to condition III to section 11, "litigating under the same title".

[s 13.11] Enforcement of foreign judgments in India

A judgment of an Indian court can only be enforced by proceedings in execution. A foreign judgment, however, may be enforced by proceedings in execution in certain specified cases only (sections 44 and 44A). In other cases, a foreign judgment can only be enforced by a suit upon the judgment. That is to say, if A has obtained a decree against B for Rs 5,000 in a French court at Pondicherry, and if B has got no property in Pondicherry to satisfy the decree, but has got property in Bombay, A may bring a suit against B in Bombay to recover the amount of the judgment. The suit may be brought within three years from the date of the judgment,[2264] and if a decree is passed in favour of A, he may proceed to execute it by attachment and sale of B's property in Bombay. A foreign judgment is not affected by any of the defects mentioned in clause (a)–(f) of the section wherein creates a new obligation and so, the court will not inquire whether the foreign judgment is correct in fact or in law;[2265] but the original cause of action does not merge in such a judgment, so that a party has the option either to sue on the foreign judgment or on the original cause of action in a domestic court.[2266] Where a suit on a foreign judgment has been dismissed on merits, no application will thereafter lie to execute that judgment as it had become merged in the decree dismissing the suit thereon.[2267] A decree passed ex parte by a foreign court, merely on the pleading without taking any evidence is not a judgment on merits.[2268] .

There was at one time difference of opinion as to whether a suit could be maintained in British India as it was then upon the judgment of a court of an Indian state or whether the plaintiff could sue only upon the original cause of action. The Madras High Court held that a suit could be maintained on the judgment,[2269] while the Bombay High Court held that no such suit was maintainable[2270] and that the only remedy was by way of a suit on the original cause of action. It is submitted that the Bombay view was not correct since it was contrary to the general rule that a court which entertains a suit on a foreign judgment cannot institute an inquiry into the merits of the original claim or the propriety of decision.[2271] With a view to resolve the conflict of views, a clause was added to section 14 of the Code of 1882, by section 5

2264. The Indian Limitation Act, 1963, Sch 1, Article 101.
2265. Popat v Damodar, AIR 1934 Bom 390 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 844.
2266. Nilratan Cooch Behar Loan Office, AIR 1941 Cal 64 : 45 Cal WN 113 : 72 Cal LJ 148 : (1941) ILR 1 Cal 171; Setabgang Sugar Mills v Benazir Ahmed, AIR 1952 Cal 116; East India Trading Co v Badat and Co, AIR 1959 Bom 414 : (1959) ILR Bom 1004; Gopal Singh v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1976 Del 115.
2267. Gena v Birdhichand, AIR 1958 Raj 189 : (1958) ILR Raj 374.
2268. Gurdas Mann v Mohinder Singh Brar, AIR 1993 P&H 92; followed Algemene Bank Nederland NV v Satish Dayalal Choksi, AIR 1990 Bom 170.
2269. Sama Rayar v Annamalai, (1884) ILR 7 Mad 164.
2270. Himmat Lall v Shivajirav, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 593.
2271. Ganga Prasad v Ganeshi Lal, AIR 1924 All 161 : (1924) ILR 46 All 119.

of Act 7 of 1888, but that clause was deleted in 1908 as the raison desire for such a clause was no longer tenable.[2272] The result is that the Madras view prevails.

Though a foreign judgment may be enforced by a suit in India, it is not to be supposed that Indian courts are bound in all cases to take cognizance of the suit, and they may refuse to entertain it on grounds of expediency.[2273] The scope, operation, and effect of foreign judgments will be found explained in the under-mentioned cases.[2274]

[s 13.12] Enforcement of decrees passed by Courts of Indian States after merger

The merger of the Indian states in the Indian Union under the Constitution has given rise to a new problem as to the enforceability of decrees passed by the courts in those states prior to merger. Before Independence, the Indian states held, as already noted, sovereign status and they continued to retain it, even after independence. The fact that they acceded to the Indian Union did not by itself affect their status because they had thereby surrendered only some of their sovereign rights and the position was precisely what it was when the British had paramount over them. It was only when they merged in the Indian Union on 26 January, 1950, that they were completely divested of their sovereign status and ceased to be foreign states. Prior to merger, the only mode of enforcing judgments of courts in those states would be by suit under section 13 or by execution under sections 44 and 44A. The point that came to be debated was whether that position had been altered by merger and the decrees became executable under the Code. In Bhagwan v Rajaram,[2275] a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held that a decree passed on a personal action against a non-resident foreigner was a nullity only in the sense that it could not be enforced in the foreign state but that it was capable of execution within the state itself and that when a foreign state has ceased to be foreign, there was no impediment to the decree being executed by the courts in those territories. This view has been adopted in some decisions.[2276] A different view was taken in several decisions and it was held that the character of a decree and the rights flowing therefrom must be determined as on the date of the decree and that in consequence decrees passed in Indian states prior to merger were incapable of execution under sections 44 and 44A.[2277] The question is now concluded by the decision of the Supreme Court in Maloji Nar Singh Rao v Shankar Saran.[2278]

2272. Gurdyal Singh v Raja of Faridkot, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 222, 237 : 21 IA 171; Mayaram v Raoji, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 86.
2273. Murugesa v Annamalai, (1900) ILR 23 Mad 458.
2274. Mallappa v Raghavendra, AIR 1938 Bom 173 : (1938) ILR Bom 16; Chormal Balchand v Kasturichand, AIR 1938 Cal 511 : (1938) ILR 63 Cal 1003.
2275. Bhagwan v Rajaram, AIR 1951 Bom 125 : 53 Beng LR 198.
2276. Kala Bechar v Mohan Bhagwan, AIR 1953 Sau 16 (FB); Meherunnissa Begum v Venkat Murh, AIR 1955 MB 1 : (1955) ILR Hyd 464.
2277. Vareed v Gopal Bai, AIR 1954 Tr and Coch 358 : (1954) ILR Tr and Coch 694; Ram Kisan v Harmukharai, AIR 1955 Ngp 103 : (1955) ILR Nag 194; Firm Kanhaiyalal Somani v Param Sukh, AIR 1956 Ngp 273 : (1956) ILR Nag 539; Firm Radhesham v Kundanlal, AIR 1956 P&H 193 : (1956) ILR Punj 434; Lakshmi Chand v Tripur, AIR 1956 Raj 81 : 1956 ILR Raj 236; Variath Augusthi v Subramanya Iyer, AIR 1958 Ker 15 : (1957) ILR Ker 1036 (FB); Gena v Birdhichand supra; Gauri Lal Firm v Jugal Kishore, AIR 1959 P&H 265; Metal Corp of India v P Colombi, AIR 1960 Mys 1; Kishendas v Indocarnatic Bank, AIR 1958 AP 407.
2278. Maloji Nar Singh Rao v Shankar Saran, AIR 1962 SC 1737; affirming AIR 1958 All 175; Laxmidas v L Chandraphan, AIR 1969 Guj 23 : 10 Guj LR 93.

On 18 January, 1948, an ex parte decree was passed against a non-resident foreigner by a court in Gwalior and after merger, an order was made on 14 September 1951 under sections 38 and 39 of the Code transferring the decree for execution to a court in Allahabad. Dealing with the question of the maintainability of the execution application, the Supreme Court held that the nationality of a decree should be judged as on the date when it was passed and that therefore, the decree dated 18 November 1948, was a foreign decree, that having been passed against a non-resident foreigner, it was a nullity in an international sense and not merely unenforceable in a foreign state and that the right and obligations created by it stood unaffected by subsequent changes. It was further held that sections 38 and 39 of the Code had no application as they had reference to decrees passed by courts to which the Code applied and that the decree passed by the Gwalior court therefore, fell outside their operation. In view of this pronouncement, it is unnecessary to review the previous case law on the subject.

It may be noted that the above decision relates to execution of a decree passed by a court in the Indian states by a court in what was British India. The same reasoning must apply to execution of an ex parte decree passed by a court in British India against a non-resident subject of an Indian state when it is sought to be executed in a court within that state.[2279]

Where as a result of merger, the territory once belonging to an Indian state has become part of the Union of India and this Code has been made applicable to it a transfer for execution of a decree formerly passed by a court in that territory from that court to another court is valid and effective.[2280]

[s 13.13] Decree passed by Court fallen into Pakistan

A decree passed before partition of India by a court having territorial jurisdiction over land which has fallen into Pakistan would be considered to be a foreign judgment. It cannot be executed in the Indian dominion, but a suit will have to be brought upon it.[2281]

[s 13.14] Operation of the section

The operation of the section may be illustrated by the following cases:

(i) A sues B in a foreign court. If the suit is dismissed, the decision will operate as a bar to a fresh suit by A in India on the original cause of action, unless the decision is inoperative by reason of one or more of the circumstances specified in the section.[2282] If a decree is passed in favour of A in the foreign court and A sues B on the judgment in India, B will be precluded from putting in issue the same matters that were directly and substantially in issue in the suit in the foreign court, unless the decision of the foreign court is inoperative on any one of the six grounds specified in the section.

(ii) A obtained a decree against B in the Cochin court which was then a foreign court and applied for execution of the decree in the High Court of Bombay. (Decrees of the Cochin Court may be executed in India under section 44.) It was proved that

---

2279. Vareed v Gopalbai supra; Variath Augusthi v Subramanya Iyer supra; Kishendas v Indo-carnatic Bank supra; Mental Corp of India v P Colombi supra; Narhari Shivram v Pannalal Unediram, AIR 1977 SC 164 (case of transfer to Goa Court) : (1976) 3 SCC 203 : (1976) SCR 3 149.
2280. Shaligram v Firm Daulatram Kundanmal, AIR 1967 SC 739 : [1963] 2 SCR 574 : 65 Bom LR 331.
2281. SS Said-ul-Hamid v Federal Indian Assurance Co, AIR 1951 Simla 255.
2282. Bababhat v Narharbhat, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 224.

A obtained the decree at Cochin by concealment of essential facts and by fraud. (See clause (e) of the section). It was held that execution of the decree should be refused.[2283]

[s 13.15] Foreign judgment pronounced by a Court without jurisdiction not enforceable

The leading case on the subject is Gurdyal v Raja of Faridkot.[2284] In that case, A sued B in the court of the Indian state of Faridkot claiming Rs 60,000 alleged to have been misappropriated by B while in A's service at Faridkot. B did not appear at the hearing, and an ex parte decree was passed against him. B was a native of another Indian state, Jind. In 1869, he left Jind and went to Faridkot to take up service under A. In 1874, he left A's service, and returned to Jind. The suit was brought against him in 1879. At the date of the suit B neither resided in Faridkot nor was he a domiciled subject of the Faridkot state nor did he owe allegiance to that state. On these facts, the Faridkot state had on general principles of international law, no jurisdiction to entertain the suit against B in respect of the claim, which, it should be noted, was a mere personal claim as distinguished from a claim relating to land or movables.[2285] The decree of the Faridkot court was therefore, an absolute nullity. A then sued B in a British Indian court on the judgment of the Faridkot court. The court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the Faridkot court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. This decision was upheld by their Lordships of the Privy Council. The mere fact that the alleged embezzlement took place at Faridkot was not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Faridkot court. The result would be the same if the suit were for damages for breach of a contract entered into by B with A at Faridkot.[2286] In other words, a foreign court cannot assume jurisdiction in cases where the claim is a personal one merely because the cause on action arose within its jurisdiction. But if B was residing at Faridkot at the date of the suit, the Faridkot court would have had complete jurisdiction. In the case of personal claims, it is the residence at the time when the action began that gives jurisdiction in a suit to a foreign court[2287] unless: (i) The defendant was a subject of that foreign state;[2288] (ii) where the defendant in the character of a plaintiff had elected the forum in which he is afterwards sued; or (iii) where he, the defendant, had voluntarily appeared in that court and had submitted to its jurisdiction, or (iv) where he had contracted to submit himself to that foreign forum.[2289] On this rule, a decree passed by a court in Pakistan was held to be a nullity and not enforceable under this section on the ground that the defendant was neither a national nor a person having a domicile there at the date of commencement of the suit, nor was he served with the summons when he was there, nor had he submitted himself to the jurisdiction of that court.[2290] The same rule applies where the country in which the judgment was passed and that in which it is sought to be enforced have separate and distinct systems of administration and judicature, though owing allegiance to the same sovereign. Thus, a decree passed by the Ceylon Court (which is a foreign court within 2283. Hajimusa v Purmanand, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 216.

---

2284. Gurdyal v Raja of Faridkot, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 222 : 1895 IA 171.
2285. Lakshmishankar v Vishnuram, (1900) 24 Bom 77; Nalla v Mahomed, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 112.
2286. Mathapa v Chellappa, (1876) ILR Mad 196.
2287. Chunilal Kasturchand v Dundappa Damappa, AIR 1951 Bom 190 : (1950) ILR Bom 640; Jivappa v Iverg, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 551; Kassim v Isuf, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 500; Ishri Prasad v Sri Ram, AIR 1927 All 510 : (1927) 25 All LJ 887.
2288. Ramalinga v Swaminatha, AIR 1941 Mad 688 : (1941) ILR Mad 891.
2289. Chormal Balchand v Kasturchand, ILR 63 Cal 1033 : 40 Cal WN 591; Vithalbhai v Laibhai, AIR 1942 Bom 189 : 44 Beng LR 380 : 202 IC 286 : (1942) ILR Bom 688.
2290. Bharat Nidhi Ltd v Megh Raj, AIR 1967 Del 22 : 69 Punj LR 88.

the meaning of section 21 in a suit on a contract), against a native of India, who was not at the time of the action residing in Ceylon is a nullity and it cannot be enforced by a suit in an Indian court.[2291]

Suppose that in the above case the Faridkot Legislature had passed an Act empowering the courts of Faridkot to entertain suits in cases where the cause of action had arisen in Faridkot though the defendant was a foreigner neither residing in Faridkot nor owing any allegiance or obedience to the Faridkot state. Could effect be then given to the judgment of the Faridkot court in a suit brought upon the judgment in a court in India? Jurisdiction conferred against the general principles of international law is not recognized and no one state can by its legislation confer jurisdiction upon its court to entertain a suit in respect of a personal claim against foreigners who at the date of the suit were neither resident in that state nor owed any allegiance or obedience to that state;[2292] but, such a decree is not an absolute nullity if its domestic courts have jurisdiction over foreigners either generally or under specified circumstances. Section 20(c) of this Code confers jurisdiction on courts in India over foreigners if the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of a particular court in India even in the absence of the foreigner and even where he has not submitted to its jurisdiction. To say that such a decree is an absolute nullity is not apposite; it is more appropriate to say that it is not executable in a court outside this country.[2293] This is so because the municipal courts of a country are under a constitutional compulsion to give effect to the laws made by their own legislature.[2294] Indian subjects before Independence owed allegiance to the sovereign of Great Britain and the British Parliament could therefore by legislation confer jurisdiction upon the courts of England, as it has in fact done, against British Indian subjects in British India.[2295] Hence, a judgment, passed by the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice of England (a foreign court) against a British Indian subject residing in British India in an action founded on a breach of a contract committed within the jurisdiction of that court, was not a nullity, and a suit might be brought on the judgment in British India.[2296]

[s 13.16] Submission to the jurisdiction of foreign Courts

Where a suit is instituted in India on the judgment of a foreign court, effect will be given to the judgment, though that court had no jurisdiction over the defendant, if the defendant appears and defends the suit brought against him in that court without making any objection to its jurisdiction,[2297] for, having taken a chance of judgment in his favour, it is not right that he should take exception to jurisdiction when judgment goes against him;[2298] but, if he protests against the jurisdiction, and the suit is then proceeded with against him, the judgment is a nullity, and no effect will be given to it in a suit brought on the judgment. The protest against jurisdiction must be made at an early stage of proceedings hence, where no objection to the jurisdiction was made until the case had reached the stage of appeal, it was

---

2291. Shaik Atham v Davud, (1909) ILR 32 Mad 469.
2292. Christien v Deanney, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 931; Hinde v Ponnath, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 359; Chormal Balchand v Kasturichand, 63 Cal 1033 : 40 Cal WN 591.
2293. Lalji Raja and Sons v Hansraj Nathoram, AIR 1971 SC 974.
2294. Sagoon Jayaidee v Sociede Civil d and Dos Taris, AIR 1966 Goa 38.
2295. See RSC, O XI, rule 1.
2296. Hossein Khan v Paphael, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 641; Viswanadha Reddi v Keymer, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 95, 100; affirmed 40 Mad 112 : 44 IA 6.
2297. Ganga Prasad v Ganeshi Lal, AIR 1924 All 161 : (1924) ILR 46 All 119; Shaik Atham v Davud, (1909) ILR 32 Mad 469.
2298. Kandoth v N Abdul, (1976) 8 Mad HC 14.

held that there was submission to jurisdiction.[2299] Nice questions sometimes arise as to what amounts to submission to jurisdiction. A person who appears in response to a summons of a foreign court and applies for leave to defend the suit without objecting to its jurisdiction has been held to have voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of such court.[2300] A defendant who employs a pleader in a suit in a foreign court will not be said to have submitted himself to the jurisdiction of that court if the pleader states at the hearing that he has no instructions from his client;[2301] but, if the defendant, while protesting against the jurisdiction, appears on the argument of the point of jurisdiction, thereby taking the chance of getting a decision in his favour, he will be deemed to have submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court.[2302] A fortiori, it is so if he also pleads on the merits,[2303] or consents to have a decree passed in terms of an award.[2304] When the parties have appeared before the foreign court and have arrived at an agreement, eg, in regard to the custody of their children, courts in India would not allow that agreement to be flouted unilaterally by one of them. This is so even though the father is the natural guardian and is therefore, ordinarily entitled in law to the custody of the children.[2305] On the same principle, the Lahore High Court held that an application to a foreign court to set aside an ex parte decree is a submission to its jurisdiction;[2306] but, this has been dissented from on the ground that a submission after decree is of no effect; and when a defendant applied to a foreign court to set aside its decree passed without jurisdiction after the decree had been transferred for execution to a court in British India, the Madras High Court held that the decree continued to be a nullity and inexecutable.[2307] However, the submission is not voluntary if the appearance is made only to release property seized by a foreign tribunal in attachment or other proceedings; in such a case the judgment of the foreign tribunal is not binding on the party. Whether submission was voluntary or it was for the purpose of saving property is a pure question of fact.[2308]

A person who sues in a foreign court as plaintiff voluntarily submits to the jurisdiction and cannot afterwards dispute it.[2309] An ex parte decree was passed by a court of an Indian state against a native of British India who was not resident in that state. In 1926, the decree was transferred under section 44 to a British court for execution. The judgment-debtor's movable property was attached and the judgment-debtor paid Rs 100 into the British court and applied for further time. In 1928, the decree was again transferred to the same British court for execution, and the judgment-debtor then for the first time objected that the decree was a nullity for want of jurisdiction. It was held that the judgment-debtor's appearance in the British court did not amount to submission to the foreign court, and that the objection was not barred by res judicata.[2310] A suit was filed in a foreign court against a non-resident defendant who remained absent. However, during the course of the trial he asked for a concession with respect

---

2299. Kaliyugam v Chokalinga, (1884) ILR 7 Mad 105.
2300. Shaligram v Firm Daulatram Kumdanmmal, supra.
2301. Sivaraman v Ibrahim, (1895) ILR 18 Mad 327.
2302. Subramania v Annaswami, AIR 1948 Mad 203; Harris v Taylor, [1915] 2 KB 580; Wansborough Paper Co v Laughland, (1920) WN 344; but see Rajaratnam v Muthuswamy, AIR 1958 Mad 203.
2303. Subramania v Annaswami supra; Harchand v Gubalchand, (1914) ILR 39 Bom 34; Rama v Krishna, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 733 (FB); overruling Parry and Co v Appasami, (1880) ILR 2 Mad 407.
2304. Mallappa v Raghavendra, AIR 1938 Bom 173 : (1938) ILR Bom 16.
2305. Marggarate v Chacko, AIR 1970 Ker 1 : (1969) ILR 1 Ker 293.
2306. Hari Singh v Mahammad, AIR 1927 Lah 200 : (1927) 8 Lah 54.
2307. Narappa v Rangaswami, AIR 1933 Mad 393 : (1933) 64 Mad LJ 531; Firm Kanhaiyalal v Param Sukh, AIR 1956 Ngp 273.
2308. Veeraraghava Ayyar v Mugga Sait, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 24.
2309. Nallatambi v Ponnusami, (1879) ILR 2 Mad 400, 404.
2310. Sheo Tahal v Binaik, AIR 1931 All 689 : (1931) ILR 53 All 747.

to a part of the claim, which was due to him and which had been attached before judgment in the course of the suit; but the request was refused, and the suit decreed ex parte. It was held that by his conduct the defendant must be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the foreign court.[2311] A minor cannot be said to have submitted to the jurisdiction of a foreign court through his guardian if such a guardian has not filed his appearance.[2312]

[s 13.16.1] Agreement to Submit to Foreign Jurisdiction

Where there is an express agreement to submit to the jurisdiction of a foreign court, a judgment pronounced by such court binds the parties, and effect will be given to such a judgment in Indian courts.[2313]

The mere fact of entering into a contract of partnership in a foreign country does not involve an agreement that all matters and disputes arising in connection with the partnership shall be submitted to, and therefore, lie within the jurisdiction of the courts of that country.[2314]

[s 13.16.2] Carrying on Business in a Foreign Country through an Agent

Persons who carry on business in a foreign country through an agent, submit to the jurisdiction of the courts of that country by giving the agent a general power of attorney including the right to institute or defend suits relating to matters connected with their business or otherwise.[2315]

[s 13.16.3] Possession of Immovable Property in a Foreign Country

The possession of immovable property in a foreign country gives the courts of that country jurisdiction to deal with the property itself,[2316] but not jurisdiction in personam over the possessor, even in regard to obligations connected with that property.[2317]

[s 13.17] Jurisdiction of foreign Courts over non-resident legal representatives in a pending action

Where a foreign court has jurisdiction with respect to a personal action instituted against a foreigner, either because he is resident within the state at the time of the suit or he has submitted to it, a decree passed by it in the suit is not without jurisdiction by reason of the fact that the defendant died pending the action and his legal representatives were neither residents within the state nor had submitted to its jurisdiction.[2318]

2311. Oomer Hajee v Tirunavakkarasu, AIR 1936 Mad 252 : (1936) ILR 59 Mad 618; Sundaram v Kandaswami, AIR 1941 Mad 387.
2312. Sankaran v Lakshmi, AIR 1974 SC 1764 : (1975) 3 SCC 351 : (1975) 1 SCR 57.
2313. Austrian Lloyd Steamship Co v Gresham Life Assurance Society, [1903] 1 KB 249; Kirchner and Co v Grubban, [1909] 1 Ch 413; Burjor v Ellerman City Lines, Ltd, AIR 1925 Bom 449 : (1925) ILR 49 Bom 854; Haji Abdulla v Stamp, AIR 1924 Bom 381 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 224.
2314. Emanuel v Symon, [1908] 1 KB 302; Guruswami v Muhahhad Khan, [1908] 1 KB 302; Guruswami v Muhahhad Khan, AIR 1933 Mad 112 : (1932) 63 Mad LJ 761.
2315. Ramanathan v Kalimuthu, (1912) ILR 37 Mad 163; Janoo v Mahamad, AIR 1925 Mad 155 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 877.
2316. Douglas v Forrest, (1828) 4 Bing 686; London and North-Western Ry Co v Linsay, (1858) 3 Macq 99.
2317. Emanuel v Symon, [1908] 1 KB 302.
2318. Andhra Bank v Srinivasan, AIR 1962 SC 232.

[s 13.18] Irregularities not affecting jurisdiction

In cases where a foreign court has jurisdiction, or where the defendant has submitted himself to the jurisdiction of a foreign court, the judgment of such court is not vitiated by irregularities which do not affect the jurisdiction of the court even when they are such as would, in the view of the foreign court, render the judgment there a nullity.[2319] Where the constitution of a Full Bench of the Mysore High Court was not in strict accordance with the rules framed in that behalf, its judgment is not open to attack as without jurisdiction as it is a case of irregular assumption and not want of jurisdiction.[2320]

[s 13.19] Foreign judgment against a foreign firm

A, B and C carry on business at Singapore in partnership in the name of X and Y. D, a creditor of the firm, brings an action against the firm in the Supreme Court of Singapore, but A alone is served with the writ of summons. B and C are British Indian subjects, and they did not reside at Singapore at the date of the suit or at any other time. A decree is passed against the firm by the Singapore court. A suit is then brought by D in British India on the judgment of the Singapore Court against A, B, and C for a personal decree against them. No personal decree can be passed against B and C as they were not served, though such a decree may be passed against A.[2321] Compare O XXI, rule 50.

[s 13.20] Foreign judgment on a decree of an Indian Court

The judgment of a foreign court obtained on a decree of a court in India is no bar to the execution of the original decree in India.[2322]

[s 13.21] Foreign judgment as Res Judicata

The rule of conclusiveness of a foreign judgment as enacted in section 18 is somewhat different in its operation from the rule of res judicata.

Undoubtedly both the rules are founded upon the principle of sanctity of judgments competently rendered. But the rule of res judicata applied to all matters in issue in a former suit which have been heard and finally decided between the parties, and includes matters which might and ought to have been made ground of attack or defence in the former suit. The rule of conclusiveness of foreign judgments applied only to matters directly adjudicated upon.[2323]

In order that a foreign judgment may operate as res judicata it must have been given on the merits of the case, whether it was a judgment of a foreign court in Europe or America or a foreign court in Asia or Africa.[2324]

It is a well-established principle of private international law that if a foreign judgment was obtained by fraud, or if the proceedings in which it was obtained were opposed to natural justice, it will not operate as res judicata. An action to set aside a judgment cannot be brought on the ground that it has been decided wrongly, namely that on the merits the decision was one

---

2319. Re Gudaru Marodugula, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 292; Pemberton v Hughes, [1899] 1 Ch 781.
2320. Vishwanathan v Abdul Majid, supra.
2321. Sahib Thambi v Hamid, (1913) ILR 36 Mad 414.
2322. Fakuruddeen v Official Trustee of Bengal, (1881) ILR 7 Cal 82.
2323. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
2324. Santa Singh v Ralla Singh, (1919) PR 14, p 30; RHMV Achi v RMAR Chettiar, AIR 1973 Mad 141 : (1972) 2 Mad LJ 468.

which should not have been rendered, but it can be set aside if the Court was imposed upon or tricked into giving the judgment. A foreign judgment is impeachable for fraud in the sense that upon proof of fraud it cannot be enforced by action or operate as res judicata.[2325]

This section applies not only to suits on foreign judgments, but also to cases in which the defendant relies on a foreign judgment as a bar to a suit in India[2326] and it has been held that a foreign judgment rendered after the institution of a suit would operate as a bar on principle of res judicata embodied in section 11.[2327]

An "act of State" is not a judgment, and it cannot, therefore, have the effect of res judicata. Thus, it has been held before Independence that an order of the political agent of Meywar and the Maharana of Udepore deposing a high priest from his gadi was not a foreign judgment, but merely an "act of state", and it cannot therefore, operate as res judicata.[2328]

[s 13.22] Clause (A) : Court of competent jurisdiction

Undoubtedly, a Court of a foreign country has jurisdiction to deliver a judgment in rem which may be enforced or recognised in the Indian court, provided that the subject-matter of the action is property whether movable or immovable within the foreign country. It is also well settled that a court of a foreign country has no jurisdiction to deliver a judgment capable of enforcement or recognition in another country in any proceeding the subject-matter of which is title to immovable property outside that country. But there is no general rule of private international law that a court can in no event exercise jurisdiction in relation to persons, matters or property outside jurisdiction. The courts of a country generally impose a threefold restriction upon the exercise of their jurisdiction: (1) jurisdiction in rem (binding not only the parties but the world at large) by a court over res (outside the jurisdiction) will not be exercised, because it will not be recognised by other courts; (2) The court will not deal directly with title to immovable property outside the jurisdiction of the state from which it derives its authority, and (3) court will not assist in the enforcement within its jurisdiction of foreign penal or revenue laws.[2329]

An action in personam lies normally where the defendant is personally within the jurisdiction or submits to the jurisdiction or though outside the jurisdiction may be reached by an order of the court. In an action in personam the court has jurisdiction to make an order for delivery of movables where the parties submit to the jurisdiction. A person who institutes a suit in a foreign court and claims a decree in personam cannot after the judgment is pronounced against him, say that the court had no jurisdiction which he invoked and which the court exercised, for it is well recognised that a party who is present within or who had submitted to jurisdiction cannot afterwards question it.[2330]

Unless a foreign court has jurisdiction in the international sense, a judgment delivered by that court would not be recognized or enforceable in India. The true basis of enforcement of a foreign judgment is that the judgment imposes an obligation upon the defendant and, therefore, there must be a connection between him and the forum sufficiently close to make it his duty to perform that obligation. It cannot be said that an order declaring the domicile of

---

2325. Sankaran Govindam v Lakshmi Bharathi, AIR 1974 SC 1764 : (1975) 3 SCC 351 : (1975) 1 SCR 57.
2326. Chockalinga v Duraiswami, AIR 1928 Mad 327 : (1928) ILR 51 Mad 720.
2327. R Vishwanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1 : (1963) 3 SCR 22.
2328. Shriman Goswami Govardhanlalji v Goswami Shri Girdharlalji, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 620.
2329. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1 : (1963) 3 SCR 22.
2330. R Viswanathan v Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1 : (1963) 3 SCR 22.

a person under O XI of RSC of England is a judgment in rem. Persons affected by such order must submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign court which makes the declaration if otherwise they are not subject to its jurisdiction.[2331]

[s 13.23] Clause (B) : Merits of the case

It cannot be said that the expression "judgment on the merits" implies that it must have been passed after contest and after evidence had been let in by both sides. An ex parte judgment in favour of the plaintiff may be deemed to be a judgment given on merits if some evidence is adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs and the judgment, however, brief, is based on a consideration of that evidence. Where however no evidence is adduced on the plaintiffs' side and his suit is decreed merely because of the absence of the defendant either by way of penalty or in a formal manner, the judgment may not be one based on the merits of the case.[2332]

The judgment of a foreign Court based on a settlement arrived at and with consent of parties is enforceable. The party giving consent and inviting the Court to pass judgment on terms of the consent is precluded from raising the defence subsequently that the said judgment is not on merits and hence not enforceable in view of section 13(b) of the Code.[2333] The Bombay High Court in the above case noticed the decision of the Supreme Court in International Woollen Mills case (supra) and observed that a consent order or consent decree by itself prevents the court from going into merits of the case. It has also been held by the Bombay High Court that where settlement agreement between the parties formed part of the suit proceedings in the foreign court, the Court in India can pass judgment on the basis of the said agreement under O XII, rule 6 of the Code.[2334]

Undoubtedly the burden of proving that the decree is not on merits would be on the party alleging it. However Courts never expect impossible proofs. It would never be possible for a party to lead evidence about the state of mind of the Judge who passed the decree. Of course, amongst other things, the party must show that the decree does not show that it is on merits, if necessary the rules of that court, the existence or lack of existence of material before the court when the decree was passed and the manner in which the decree is passed.[2335]

In order that a foreign judgment may operate as res judicata it must have been given on the merits of the case, whether it was a judgment of a foreign court in Europe or America or a foreign court in Asia or Africa.[2336] Courts in India have the right to examine a foreign judgment to see whether it has been given on merits.[2337] In Keymer v Visvanathan[2338] an action was brought in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in England to recover a liquidated amount. The defendant failed to comply with an order to answer interrogatories and his defence was struck off and judgment was entered for the amount claimed for the plaintiff under RSC, O XXXI, rule 21, corresponding to O XI, rule 21 below. The plaintiff subsequently instituted a suit on the judgment in the Madras High Court. It was held by the

---

2331. Sankaran Govindam v Lakshmi Bharathi, AIR 1974 SC 1764: (1975) 3 SCC 351 : (1975) 1 SCR 57.
2332. International Wollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134 : (2001) 5 SCC 265.
2333. HSBC Bank USA v Silverline Technologies Ltd, AIR 2006 Bom 134 : (2006) 3 Mah LJ 107.
2334. HSBC Bank USA v Silverline Technologies Ltd, AIR 2006 Bom 134 : (2006) 3 Mah LJ 107.
2335. HSBC Bank USA v Silverline Technologies Ltd, AIR 2006 Bom 134 : (2006) 3 Mah LJ 107.
2336. Santa Singh v Ralla Singh, (1919) PR 14, p 30; RHMV Achi v RMAR Chettiar, AIR 1973 Mad 141 : (1972) 2 Mad LJ 468.
2337. Mallappa v Raghavendra, AIR 1938 Bom 173 : (1938) II R Bom 16; International Woolen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, [2001] 2 LRI 765.
2338. Keymer v Visvanatham, AIR 1916 PC 121 : 21 Cal WN 308 : (1917) 44 IA 6 : 40 Mad 112, affirming 39 Mad 95.

Judicial Committee, affirming the judgment of the Madras High Court, that the judgment sued on was not given on the merits of the case and that the suit was not maintainable. It has also been held by the same tribunal that a judgment on an award obtained in England by default cannot be sued on in India, since it is not a judgment "on the merits of the case".[2339]

In the following sub-synopsis the foreign judgments passed in summary procedures, ex parte, dismissed in default, compromise etc. are evaluated by higher courts in India to ascertain if these can be treated as judgment on merit of the case within the meaning of clause (b) of section 13:

(i) Summary procedure.—A decree passed by a foreign court (Singapore court) under summary proceedings, after refusing leave to defend sought for by the defendant, is not a judgment on merits. Hence, the judgment cannot be considered as conclusive as contemplated by section 13(b).[2340] According to the Calcutta High Court a judgment given in England in summary procedure contemplated by O XIV, RSC is not a judgment on the merits for the purposes of section 13, CPC, there being no appearance or defence by the defendant and no consideration of plaintiffs evidence.[2341]

(ii) Dismissed in default.—Where a suit filed in a foreign court, by a creditor against the principal debtor is dismissed for default of appearance, the judgment is not one on the merits of the case, and cannot be availed of by the surety to resist his liability to the creditor.[2342]

(iii) Default on the part of defendant.—A foreign judgment passed on default of appearance of the defendant duly served with summons on the allegations contained in the plaint without any trial on evidence, is not one passed "on the merits of the case", and a suit cannot be brought on such judgment in any court in India.[2343]

So also, where a decree was passed in consequence of the default of the defendant in furnishing security, it is not one upon the merits.[2344]

(iv) Non-production of document by plaintiff.—Where a suit was dismissed even before the written statement was filed by the defendant on the ground of non-production of a document by the plaintiff, the order is not one of the merits of the case.[2345]

(v) Ex parte decree.—On the basis of presumption in section 114 of the Evidence Act that judicial acts have been regularly performed a decree given ex parte cannot be presumed to be on merits. Section 114 merely raises the presumption, under Illustration (e) thereof, that judicial acts have been regularly performed. To say that a decree has been passed regularly is completely different from saying that the decree has been passed on merits. An ex parte decree passed without consideration of merits may be decree passed regular if permitted by the rules of that Court. Such a decree would be valid in that country in which it is passed unless set aside by a Court of Appeal. However, even though it may be a valid and enforceable decree in that country, it would not enforceable in India if it has not been passed on merits. Therefore for a

---

2339. Oppenheim and Co v Mahomed Haneef, AIR 1922 PC 120 : (1922) 49 IA 174 : 45 Mad 496.
2340. KM Abdul Jabbar v Indo-Singapore Traders Pvt Ltd, AIR 1981 Mad 118.
2341. Middle East Bank Ltd v Rajendra Prasad Sethia, AIR 1991 Cal 335.
2342. Bharat National Bank v Thakur Das, AIR 1935 Lah 729 : (1935) 16 Lah 757.
2343. Moahomed Kasim v Seeni Pakir, AIR 1927 Mad 265 (FB) : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 261; overruling Janoo v Mahammad, AIR 1925 Mad 155 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 877; Ishri Prasad v Sri Ram, AIR 1927 All 510 : (1928) ILR 50 All 270; Abdul Rahiman v Mahomed Ali, AIR 1928 Rang 319 : (1928) 6 Rang 552; Arunachellam v Mahomed, AIR 1928 Mad 133; Derby McIntyre v Mitter and Co, 39 Cal WN 557.
2344. Sivagaminatha v Natarajan, AIR 1961 Mad 385.
2345. Firm THFJKD Rajan Singh v Parmanand, AIR 1959 P&H 306 : (1959) ILR Punj 613.

decision on the question whether a decree has been passed on merits or not, the presumption under section 114 would be of no help at all.[2346]

It would be relevant to quote here the following passage in Sir William Rattigan's Private International Law (1895).

> It would seem to be equally plain that, if, for instance, it should happen that by the law of a foreign country, a plaintiff was entitled to judgment simply on the non-appearance of a defendant who had been duly served, and without adducing any evidence whatever in support of his claim, or if the wrong-headedness of a foreign Judge should induce him to so decide, the plaintiff would not be entitled in an English Court to sue upon a judgment so obtained. If on no other ground, such a judgment of a foreign Court would, at all events, be so contrary to the fundamental principles of the Law of England as, for this reason alone, to be incapable of receiving any effect in a British Court." The above passage does not, however, as I read it, support the present appellant's position, as it cannot, in my opinion, be affirmed in this case that the plaintiff has obtained judgment from the High Court in England "simply on the non-appearance of the defendant without adducing any evidence whatever in support of his claim.[2347]

If a decree, though ex parte, is passed after hearing evidence adduced by the plaintiff,[2348] and the presumption would be that the ex parte decree was passed on evidence and so, the defendant must rebut the presumption by positive evidence.[2349]

The mere fact of the decree being ex parte will not justify a finding that it was not on the merits. The real test is whether it was merely formally passed, as a matter of course, or by way of penalty, or based upon a consideration of the truth or otherwise of the plaintiffs claim, though the evidence was led by him in the absence of the defendant.[2350]

Where, the ex parte decree of a foreign court in UK did not mention that the second affidavit filed by the plaintiff has been read, the judgment and decree not indicating whether the documents were looked into an/or, whether the merits of the case was at all considered, the plea about inferior quality of material raised by the defendant in his, reply to the notice was not dealt with, the judgment passed was held not a judgment on merits so not enforceable in India.[2351]

(vi) Settlement Compromise.—Where a suit in a foreign court is adjourned for settlement, and it is agreed between the parties that if the suit is not settled judgment should be passed for the plaintiff, and there being no settlement, the plaintiff appears on the adjourned date but the defendant does not appear and judgment is passed for the plaintiff according to the agreement, the judgment is one on the merits of the case, and a suit can be brought on such a judgment in a court in India.[2352] But in China Appalaraju v Venkata Subba Rao[2353] where it was held that

---

2346. International Wollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134 : (2001) 5 SCC 265.
2347. International Wollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134 : (2001) 5 SCC 265.
2348. Code v Harper, (1910) ILR 41 All 521; Meher Singh v Ishar Singh, AIR 1932 Lah 649 : (1932) 14 Lah 58; Gajanan v Shantabai, AIR 1939 Bom 374 : (1939) 41 Bom LR 818; Walker v Walker, AIR 1935 Rang 284.
2349. Sh Abdol Rahim v Mahamed Din, AIR 1943 Cal 42 : 75 Cal LJ 271.
2350. Wazir Sahu v Munishi Dass, AIR 1941 Pat 109 : (1941) ILR 20 Pat 144; Kulwant v Dhunraj, AIR 1935 Lah 396 : (1935) 16 Lah 768; Indian and General Investment Trust v Raja of Khalikote, AIR 1952 Cal 508; Jayaratnam v Muthusamy supra; East India Trading Co v Badat and Co, supra; Govindan v Sankaran, AIR 1958 Ker 203 : (1958) ILR Ker 80; Varma v Gebrilal, AIR 1962 Raj 231 : (1961) ILR Raj 103; Trilochan v Dayanidhi, AIR 1961 Ori 158 : (1961) ILR Cut 150.
2351. International Wollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134.
2352. Mohammad v Chinthamani, AIR 1929 Mad 469 : (1929) ILR 52 Mad 503; Satyanarain v Balkaran, AIR 1955 Raj 59 : (1954) ILR Raj 905.
2353. China Appalaraju v Venkata Subba Rao, AIR 1946 Mad 296 : 225 IC 348.

a foreign judgment based on compromise is not one passed on merits. It cannot be said of a judgment that it was not given on merits merely because it proceeds on a wrong view as to the burden of proof or the legal liability of a party.[2354]

[s 13.24] Clause (C) : Law Applicable

The mistake must be apparent on the face of the proceedings. In England, it has been held that a mere mistake as to English law will not vitiate a foreign judgment, even though the mistake may appear on the face of the proceedings.[2355] In an old Madras case[2356] this clause was referred to where a foreign court had exercised jurisdiction contrary to the principles of international law. Where a foreign court in an inquiry before it in a probate proceeding refused to recognise the law of British India applicable to the deceased's immovable property in British India, it was held that the judgment of the foreign court was not one on which a suit will successfully lie.[2357] The judgment of a foreign court which awarded interest on costs does not become unenforceable under this section on the ground that there is no similar provision in the municipal law.[2358] So also, a decree of a Ceylon court awarding interest is not open to attack on the ground that the amount decreed is not in accordance with the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1938.[2359]

It has been held that section 13 holds that, to be conclusive, an order or decree must have been obtained after following the due judicial process by giving reasonable notice and opportunity of hearing to all the proper and necessary parties. A foreign judgment which has become final and conclusive between the parties is not impeachable either on facts or law, except on limited grounds enunciated under section 13. In construing section 13, a court needs to look at the plain meaning of the words and expressions used therein and need not look at any other factors. Further, under section 14 there is a presumption that the foreign court which passed the order is a court of competent jurisdiction which is a rebuttable presumption. In the instant case, the appellant did not dispute the jurisdiction of the English Court but his grievance was that it was not executable on other grounds. It was contended that the English Court's order imposing costs was not given on merits and that it fell under section 13(c) making it inconclusive and consequently inexecutable. The Supreme Court held that a judgment can be considered as a judgment passed on merits when the court deciding the case gives opportunity to the parties to the case to advance their case and after considering rival submissions contended at the bar, gives its decision as an order or judgment, it shall be treated as an order on merits of the case for the purposes of interpretation of section 13(c).[2360]

[s 13.25] Clause (D) : Natural Justice

When applied to foreign judgments, the expression "contrary to natural justice" merely relates to the alleged irregularities in procedure adopted by the adjudicating court and has nothing to do with the merits of the case. If the proceedings be in accordance with the practice of the foreign court but that practice is not in accordance with natural justice, the court will not

---

2354. Rama Shenoi v Hallagna, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 205.
2355. Godard v Gray, (1870) LR 6 QB 139.
2356. Hinde v Ponnath, (1881) ILR 4 Mad 359.
2357. Panchpakesa Iyer v KN Husain, AIR 1934 Mad 145 : (1934) 66 Mad LJ 209.
2358. Barket Lal v Devi Das, AIR 1953 Hyd 29 : (1952) ILR Hyd 233.
2359. Kunhiman v Idoise Kutty, AIR 1958 Ker 128 : (1958) ILR Ker 100.
2360. M/s Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem SA of Fos 34320 Roujan, AIR 2017 SC 1 : (2016) 12 Scale 645 : (2017) 2 SCC 253.

allow it to be concluded by them. In other words the courts are vigilant to see that the defendant had not been deprived of an opportunity to present his side of the case. The wholesome maxim audi alteram partem is deemed to be universal and not merely of domestic application. All that is required by rules of natural justice is that in the case of minors they should be given an opportunity to contest through their natural guardians. Even if there was any breach of the rule of procedure prevailing in the forum where the proceedings were conducted, that would not be material, as what we have to see is whether the proceedings have been conducted in substantial compliance with the prevailing notion of fairplay. And, when the natural guardians evinced their intention not to contest the proceedings by not putting any appearance on behalf of the minors, the requirement of natural justice was satisfied when the court appointed an officer of the court to be guardian ad Item of the minors in the proceedings.[2361]

The expression "natural justice" in this clause refers rather to the form of procedure than to the merits of the particular case. The mere fact that a foreign judgment is wrong in law does not make it one opposed to "natural justice". There must be something in the procedure anterior to the judgment which is repugnant to natural justice.[2362] Thus, a foreign judgment obtained without notice of the suit to the defendant is contrary to natural justice, and a suit on such judgment is not maintainable in an Indian court.[2363] So also, a judgment based on a third review after two applications for review had been refused;[2364] or a judgment against a minor defendant for whom no guardian ad litem had been appointed,[2365] or a judgment against a minor defendant who was not properly represented.[2366] However, where notice is served on an agent empowered to sue and defend suits in the foreign court it is held as sufficient.[2367] As to sufficiency of notice, if the foreign court has held service of the notice to be sufficient, it must be taken to be correct in the absence of evidence to the contrary.[2368] The words "natural justice" are not limited to the plea that the defendant was not served or was not given an opportunity of being heard. It covers all matters forming part of the judicial process culminating in the judgment. A foreign judgment would be opposed to natural justice, if the judges who pronounced it are shown to have been biased or partial.[2369] But, a foreign judgment is not open to attack on the ground that in deciding on the validity of an adoption, the court had failed to apply the law of domicile by which the parties were governed,[2370] nor on the ground of a mere mistake even when that consists of error in calculation, nor on the ground that proper court fee has not been paid in the foreign court.[2371] The binding character of a foreign judgment can be displaced only on one of the grounds mentioned in clause (a)–(f) and not otherwise. It is not open to attack on the ground that it proceeds on an erroneous view of the evidence or of the law.[2372] If the proceedings be in accordance with the practice of the foreign court and that

---

2361. Sankaran Govindan v Lakshmi Bharathi, AIR 1974 SC 1764 : (2001) 5 SCC 265 : (1975) 1 SCR 57.
2362. Rama Shenoi v Hallagna, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 205.
2363. London Bank v Harmasji, (1871) ILR 5 Bom 223; London Bank v Govind, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 223; London Bank v Burjorji, (1885) ILR 9 Bom 346; Edulji v Manekji, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 241; Bangarusami v Balasubramaniam, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 496; Indian and General Investment Trust v Raja of Khalikote, supra.
2364. Hari Singh v Muhammad, AIR 1927 Lah 200 : (1927) 8 Lah 54.
2365. Hari Singh v Muhammad, supra.
2366. Popat v Damodar, AIR 1934 Bom 390 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 844; Gajanan v Shantabai, supra.
2367. Janoo v Mahamad, AIR 1925 Mad 155 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 877; overruled on another point in 50 Mad 261 supra.
2368. Janoo v Mahamad, supra; citing Pemberton v Huges, [1899] 1 Ch 781.
2369. Viswanathan v Abdul Wajid, supra.
2370. Vasant v Dattoba, AIR 1956 Bom 49.
2371. Monoharlal v Raghunath, AIR 1957 MB 74.
2372. Viswanathan v Abdul Wajid, supra.

practice is not in accordance with natural justice, the Indian court will not allow the matter to be concluded by them. In other words, the courts are vigilant to see that the defendant had not been deprived of an opportunity to present his side of the case. In a Bombay case, the defendant had been given sufficient opportunities both, by the Hong Kong Court and by Indian courts, to ensure that he gets adequate opportunity to defend his case. The defendant had not made proper use of such opportunities which were given to him. Hence, the principles of natural justice had not been violated in any manner and the proceedings in which a foreign judgment had been obtained, were not opposed to the principles of natural justice.[2373]

[s 13.26] Clause (E) : Fraud

The fraud relied upon must be extrinsic or collateral and not merely fraud which is imputed from alleged false statements made at the trial which were met with counter-statements and the whole adjudicated upon by Court and so passed into the limbo of estoppel by the judgment. That estoppel cannot be disturbed except upon allegation and proof of new and material facts which were not before the former Court and from which is to be deduced the new proposition that the former judgment was obtained by fraud. The fraud which vitiates a judgment must generally be fraud of the party in whose favour the judgment is obtained.[2374]

All judgments, whether domestic or foreign, are void if obtained by fraud. Accordingly, a foreign decree procured by fraud bearing on jurisdictional facts would not be recognised under this section as being contrary to public policy and as offending against notions of substantial justice.[2375] In the case of domestic judgments, the fraud must be extrinsic to the matter tried but apparently, this rule does not apply to foreign judgments,[2376] but in Sundaram Pillai v Kandeswami Pillai,[2377] it was held that a foreign judgment said to have been obtained on perjured evidence could not be said to have been obtained by fraud.

Where, the deceased donor infact had expired long before the respondents fraudulently obtained mutation in their favour showing deceased as present and witnessing said mutation of immovable property, the mutation obtained by fraudulent means is non-est just like decree obtained by fraud is nullity.[2378] HK Sema J observed "fraud avoids all judicial acts. A decree obtained by playing fraud is a nullity and it can be challenged in any court, even in collateral proceedings."

[s 13.27] Clause (F) : Breach of any Law in India

Under section 47(3) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973, a suit for the enforcement of a guarantee for which permission of the Reserve Bank/Central Government would have been required under section 26(6) can be brought in India. Filing of a suit, therefore, on such a guarantee cannot be said to be contrary to any law in India because section 47(3) expressly permits such legal proceedings in India. Such proceedings abroad cannot be said to be violative of any law in India. However, no steps can be taken for the purpose of enforcing any judgment or order for the payment of any sum under such a guarantee except in respect of so much thereof as the Central Government or the Reserve Bank may permit to be paid. The result is

---

2373. Algemene Bank Nederland NV v Satish Dayalal Choksi, AIR 1990 Bom 170.
2374. Sankaran Govindan v Lakshmi Bharathi, AIR 1974 SC 1764 : (2001) 5 SC 265 : (1975) 1 SCR 57.
2375. Sayta v Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105 : (1975) 1 SCC 120.
2376. Nistarini Dassi v Kundo Lal, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 891, 910.
2377. Sundaram Pillai v Kandeswami Pillai, AIR 1941 Mad 387 : (1941) 1 Mad LJ 140.
2378. N Khosla v Rajlakshmi, AIR 2006 SC 1249 : (2006) 3 SCC 605.

that before a foreign decree passed on such a guarantee can be executed in India, permission of the Reserve Bank or the Central Government for realising such sum is necessary.[2379]

A claim sustained in a foreign judgment founded on a breach of any law in force in India makes the foreign judgment as inconclusive and inapplicable in India. The position in England appears to be similar which appears obvious from the following passage in Sir William Rattigan's Private International Law (1895).[2380]

> It would seem to be equally plain that, if, for instance, it should happen that by the law of a foreign country, a plaintiff was entitled to judgment simply on the non-appearance of a defendant who had been duly served, and without adducing any evidence whatever in support of his claim, or if the wrong-headedness of a foreign Judge should induce him to so decide, the plaintiff would not be entitled in an English Court to sue upon a judgment so obtained. If on no other ground, such a judgment of a foreign Court would, at all events, be so contrary to the fundamental principles of the Law of England as, for this reason alone, to be incapable of receiving any effect in a British Court.

Presumably, a foreign judgment for a gambling debt would not be enforced in India.

[s 13.28] Limitation

The period of limitation for a suit on a foreign judgment is six years from the date of the judgment. (See Limitation Act, 1963, Sch 1 Article 101.)

The pendency of an appeal in the foreign country will not bar a suit on a foreign judgment;[2381] but, if the appeal results in a decree dismissing the appeal, the appellate decree affords a fresh starting point for limitation.[2382]

Whereas in the case of a suit on a contract, limitation merely bars the remedy but does not extinguish the right, the judgment of a foreign court is not open to the objection that the suit was barred by the law of limitation applicable in the country where the contract was made.[2383]

Where the court of a foreign country holds, applying its own law, that a suit is not barred by the law of limitation, it cannot be said that it has refused to recognize the law of India because the suit was barred according to the law of India.[2384]

[s 13.29] Suits on foreign awards

An award given in a foreign state by arbitrators selected by the parties cannot be equated to a judgment given by the foreign court and its validity is not open to attack on the grounds mentioned in section 13.[2385] An award pronounced in a foreign state is not a judgment within this section and no suit will in consequence lie on it even if it was filed in a foreign court unless it was made a rule of court.[2386]

Section 9 of Foreign Awards (Recognition and Enforcement) Act, 1961 excludes the operation of the Act as to what may be regarded as a "domestic award" in the sense of the

---

2379. Algemene Bank Nederland NV v Satish Dayalal Choksi, AIR 1990 Bom 170.
2380. International Woollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd. AIR 2001 SC 2134 : (2001) 5 SCC 265 : (2001) 1 Mad LW 28 : (2001) 2 LR 1765.
2381. See Hari Singh v Muhammad, AIR 1927 Lah 200 : (1927) 8 Lah 54.
2382. Baijnath v Vallabhdas, AIR 1933 Mad 511 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 951.
2383. Nallatambi v Ponnusami, (1879) ILR 2 Mad 400.
2384. Ganga Prasad v Ganeshi Lal, AIR 1924 All 161 : (1924) ILR 46 All 119.
2385. East India Trading Co v Badat and Co, supra; Ganguli Engineering Co v Srimathi Sneha Bala, AIR 1957 Cal 103 : 60 Cal WN 289.
2386. Gopaldas v Dogduram, AIR 1952 Hyd 49 : (1852) ILR Hyd 323.

award having been made on an arbitration agreement governed by the law of India, although the dispute was with a foreigner and the arbitration was held and the award was made in a foreign state. Such an award necessarily falls under the Arbitration Act, 1940 (Now repealed by the Arbitration & Conciliation Act, 1996), and is amenable to the jurisdiction of Indian courts and control by the Indian system of law just as in the case of any domestic award, except that the proceedings held abroad and leading to the award were in certain respect amendable to be controlled by the public policy and the mandatory requirements of the law of the place of arbitration and competent courts of that place.[2387] Where a foreign judgment in terms of a foreign award is passed, the award does not merge in the judgment. Application for filing the award in an Indian court and for judgment in accordance with the award, is maintainable.[2388] The following cases were cited.[2389]

[s 13.30] Execution of foreign judgments

Where a foreign judgment is sought to be enforced in execution under sections 44 and 44(A), it will be open to the judgment-debtor to raise all objections which would have been open to him under section 13 if a suit had been filed on the judgment.[2390]

Having regard to the provisions of section 17 of the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act (51 of 1993) which states that on and from the appointed day the jurisdiction, powers and authorities to entertain and decide application for recovery of debt due to such banks and financial institutions shall be exercised by the Tribunal and the scope of powers of the Tribunal under section 22 of the Recovery of Debts due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act execution of a foreign decree must be heard and tried by the Tribunal since it is within the jurisdiction of that Tribunal to do so. Therefore, the execution application, which falls within the jurisdiction of the debt recovery tribunal must be transferred to the said Tribunal immediately, if it is filed before civil court.[2391]

[s 13.31] Custody, divorce and maintenance

In matters relating to matrimony and custody, the law of that place must govern, which has the closest concern with the well-being of the spouses and the welfare of the marriage. In a case decided by the Supreme Court of India, the spouses had made England their home and a boy was born in England from the marriage. It was held that the father cannot deprive the English court of its jurisdiction to decide upon the custody of the child by fraudulently removing the boy to India.[2392] Foreign determinations of custody of children made in divorce jurisdiction or otherwise, by a foreign court, have occasionally figured in many other Indian cases during the recent years. A Rajasthan case is illustrative of the same where without holding that such determinations are conclusive, the high court noted that the foreign court had granted custody of the two daughters of the marriage to the mother, with visiting rights to the father. Later, the mother had obtained a decree from the foreign court, granting her exclusive custody of the 2387. National Thermal Power Corp v Singer Co, (1992) 3 SCC 551.

---

2388. Northern Sales Co Ltd v Reliable Extraction Industries, AIR 1985 Bom 332, 334, paras 7–8 (Pendse J).
2389. Oppenheim and Co v Haneef Mahomed, AIR 1922 PC 120 : [1922] 1 AC 482; Badal and Co v East India Trading Co, AIR 1964 SC 538; OP Verma v Lala Gehrilal, AIR 1962 Raj 231; East India Trading Co, New York v Badal and Co, AIR 1959 Bom 414; Setabganj Sugar Mills v Benazir Ahmad, AIR 1959 Bom 414; Gopal Singh Hira Singh v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1976 Del 115.
2390. Firm Gauri Lal v Jugal Kishore, AIR 1958 P&H 265 (FB) : (1958) ILR Punj 1211.
2391. Bank of India v Harshadrai Odhavji, AIR 2002 Bom 449.
2392. Surinder Kaur Sandhu v Harbans Singh Sandhu, (1984) 3 SCC 698.

girls. In the circumstances, the Rajasthan High Court, in a writ petition by the mother, held that removal by the father of the girls from the United States to India in a "secret and furtive manner", and in disregard of the decrees of the American courts was illegal.[2393]

In a Punjab case, the children and parents were Canadians. The Canadian court had granted interim custody to the mother. The father had effected unauthorised removal of the children from Canada to India. Here, the mother was a graduate and financially sound and the father unemployed. It was held that the order of the Canadian court must be honoured. Mere allegation that the mother was living in adultery, was of no avail. Judgment of the foreign court should be given due regard.[2394] An order of the Supreme Court of Ontario (Canada) awarded custody of a child to the mother. The father illegally brought the child to India. It was held that Indian courts should respect the foreign judgment. Mere allegation that the mother is living in adultery, is of no avail.[2395] The above ruling was given in a writ petition wherein the under-noted decisions were cited. [2396]

In a case before the Supreme Court, legal proceedings had engaged the parties in a bitter battle for the custody of their only child, aged about 11 years, born in America and hence, a citizen of that country by birth. These proceedings included an action filed by the father before an American Court seeking divorce from his wife and custody of their only son. The order passed by the American Court eventually led to the issue of a red corner notice based on allegations of child abduction levelled against the mother who, like the father of the minor child, was a person of Indian origin living with her parents in Delhi. The mother took refuge under an order passed by ADJ's Court at Delhi in a petition under sections 7, 8, 10 and 11 of Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 granting interim custody of the minor to her. Aggrieved by the said order, the father of the minor filed a petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India before Delhi High Court. The high court allowed the petition, set aside the order passed by the district court and dismissed the custody case filed by the mother primarily on the ground that the court at Delhi had no jurisdiction to entertain the same as the minor was not ordinarily residing at Delhi—a condition precedent for the Delhi Court to exercise jurisdiction. The high court further held that all issues relating to the custody of child ought to be agitated and decided by the Court in America not only because that Court had already passed an order in favour of the father, but also because all three parties, namely, the parents of the minor and the minor himself were American citizens. The high court based its decision on the principle of comity of courts.

On appeal, it was held by the Supreme Court that the "comity of courts" principle ensures that foreign judgments and orders are unconditionally conclusive of the matter in controversy. This is all the more so where the courts in this country deal with matters concerning the interest and welfare of minors including their custody. The interest and welfare of the minor being paramount, a competent court in this country is entitled and indeed duty-bound to examine the matter independently, taking the foreign judgment, if any, only as an input for its final adjudication. The Supreme Court noticed that there were no proceedings between the parties in any court in America before they came to India with the minor. Such proceedings were instituted by the father only after he had agreed to leave the mother and the minor 2393. Isavell Singh v Ram Singh, AIR 1985 Raj 30, 35, 36, para 18.

---

2394. Kuldeep Sidhu v Chanan Singh, AIR 1989 P&H 103.
2395. Kuldeep Sidhu v Chanan Singh, AIR 1989 P&H 103.
2396. Elizabeth v Aruvand, AIR 1987 SC 3 : (1987) 1 SCC 42; Surinder Kaur v Harbax Singh, AIR 1984 SC 1224 : (1984) 3 SCC 698; Marilyn v Margaret, AIR 1983 NOC 217 (P&H); Re HC Infant, [1966] 1 All ER 886 : (1966) 1 WLR 381 (QB).

behind in India, for the former to explore career options and the latter to get admitted to a school. The charge of abduction contrary to the valid order granting custody was, therefore, held to be untenable. The Supreme Court further observed that in the course of the hearing of the case, it had an occasion to interact with the minor in chambers and he appeared to be happy with his studies and school and did not evince any interest in returning to his school in America. His concern was largely related to the abduction charge and consequent harassment being faced by his mother and maternal grandparents. The Supreme Court further noticed that the father did not begrudge the appellant for getting custody of the minor, provided that she returned to America with the minor. All that the father wanted was that the minor be brought up and educated in America, instead of in India, as the minor would benefit from the same. The mother was not willing to accept that proposal, as she no intention of returning to that country in the foreseeable future especially after a very traumatic period on account of the matrimonial discord. In the light of all these circumstances, repatriation of the minor to the United States, on the principle of "comity of courts" was not held by Supreme Court to be an acceptable option worthy of being exercised at this stage. Dismissal of the application for custody with disregard to the attendant circumstances referred to above was held to be not a proper exercise of discretion by the high court. It was accordingly ordered that interest of the minor shall be better served if he continued to remain in the custody of his mother, especially when the father had contracted a second marriage and did not appear to be keen on having actual custody of the minor.[2397]

The petitioner is a German national, seeking the custody of the child from her divorced husband. A judgement was given in her favour by the family court and Higher Regional Court, Dusseldorf, Germany, after considering the welfare of the child. In the absence of any exceptions enumerated under sections 13 and 14 of CPC, the foreign judgement was held to be binding on the parties and the Petitioner was entitled to the custody of the minor child in view of the foreign judgment.[2398]

Applying the principle laid down in V Ravi Chandran,[2399] the Supreme Court has reiterated that in cases pertaining to custody of children where there is conflict of laws in private international law of two sovereign States, the jurisdiction of the State which has the most intimate contact with the issues arising shall be preferred.[2400] In V Ravi Chandran,[2401] the petitioner, who was of Indian origin, was a citizen of USA. He married and had a child while the couple was in USA. Subsequently, a dispute arose between the parties regarding custody of the child, and the parties obtained consent order from the court of competent jurisdiction in USA under which both the parents were to have alternate custody of the child on weekly basis. However, the mother, in violation of the said court's orders, removed the child to India for staying with her parents. The petitioner in turn moved the USA court for modification of custody order and for taking action against mother for violation of court order. The petitioner was granted temporary sole legal and physical custody of the minor child and mother was directed to immediately turn over the minor child and his passport to the petitioner. The order could not however be implemented in the USA because of removal of the child to India.

2397. Ruchi Majoo v Sanjeev Majoo, (2011) 6 SCC 479.
2398. Jacqueline Kapoor v Surender Pal Kapoor, AIR 1994 P&H 309; Elizabeth Dinshaw v Arvand M Dinshaw, (1987) 1 SCC 42.
2399. V Ravi Chandran (2) v UOI, (2010) 1 SCC 174.
2400. Arathi Bandi v Bandi Jagadrakshaka Rao, AIR 2014 SC 918 : 2013 AIR SCW 6571 : (2013) 15 SCC 790 : JT 2013 (11) SC 48; See also Surya Vadnan v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2015 SC 2243 : 2015 AIR SCW 3192 : (2015) 5 SCC 450 : JT 2015 (3) SC 85.
2401. V Ravi Chandran (2) v UOI, (2010) 1 SCC 174.

The petitioner thereafter filed habeas corpus petition under Article 32 of the Constitution in the Supreme Court for production of the minor child and for handing over his custody to the petitioner along with the child's passport. The Supreme Court specifically approved the modern theory of conflict of laws, which prefers the jurisdiction of the State which has the "most intimate contact with the issues arising in the case". The court also held that jurisdiction is not attracted "by the operation or creation of fortuitous circumstances". It was held that it would be in accord with the principles of comity as well as on facts to return the child back to the USA from where he had been removed and enable the parties to establish the case before the courts there for modification of the existing custody orders.

There are two reasons why foreign decree of divorce cannot be challenged as invalid. Firstly because, consent of the respondent to the grant of relief by a foreign forum has been taken as curing the defect in the validity of the decree. If consent can cure the defect of jurisdiction of the forum, which grants the decree, by the same logic it should also place a decree granted by such a forum beyond challenge on the ground that the relief granted was not available to the parties as per the personal law prevalent in the country of their origin. If consent to the grant of relief is taken as a relevant circumstance, there is no reason to make a distinction between cases, where the defect to be cured is one relating to the jurisdiction of the forum and others, where the defect arises from the ground on which the relief has been granted.[2402]

A husband seeking to enforce a foreign decree must establish that judgment had been given on merits. Where the publication of the notice against wife was in the Official Gazette only and the husband never appeared before the Mexican court, a decree was passed without recording any evidence. It was held that judgment of the Mexican court was not given on merits.[2403] Decree of divorce obtained in the foreign court is binding, if none of the grounds mentioned in section 13 are proved to exist.[2404]

Domicile is a jurisdiction fact. A foreign decree of divorce is subject to collateral attack for fraud or for want of jurisdiction, even though jurisdictional facts are recited in the judgment. The courts in England were competent to entertain the petition for divorce filed by the husband (Indian) and the matter was set down for trial as a contested matter. The judge preferred the evidence of the husband to the evidence tendered by the wife and passed a decree nisi, which was made absolute. Thus, the decree was passed on the merits and the provision in Indian law, i.e., Hindu Marriage Act, covered the same ground as was covered by the similar provisions of the English Act under which the decree was granted. The party, i.e., the wife challenging the decision as null and void, had the opportunity to defend and the requirement as to conferment of jurisdiction was complied with. In these circumstances, the Delhi High Court held that the wife could not question conclusiveness of the judgment of the court of England, as the same did not suffer from any defects enumerated in section 13 of the CPC.[2405]

In a suit for maintenance by wife against husband (residing in USA), it was found first, that the husband had obtained a foreign decree of divorce from a Mexican court; secondly, that he could not be said to be a bona fide resident or domiciled in Mexico state; and thirdly, that he had obtained the judgment by misleading the court regarding his residence. It was held that the decree having been so obtained by making a false representation as to the jurisdictional

---

2402. Deva Prasad Reddy v Kamini Reddy, AIR 2002 Kant 356.
2403. Maganbhai Chotubhai Patel v Mani Ben, AIR 1985 Guj 187.
2404. Dr Padmini Mishra v Dr Ramesh Chandra Mishra, AIR 1991 Ori 263.
2405. Anoop Beniwal v Dr Jagbir Singh Beniwal, AIR 1990 Del 305.

facts, it was obtained by fraud within section 13(b), CPC. In this case, it was held that the judgment was not given on the merits and publication of summons was only by notification in the Official Gazette.[2406] In this case, the Hon'ble Supreme Court advised examination of feasibility of legislation safe-guarding the interest of women by incorporating the following provisions as:

(a) no marriage between an NRI and an Indian woman which has taken place in India may be annulled by a foreign court;

(b) provisions may be made for adequate alimony to the wife in the property of the husband both, in India and abroad.

(c) A decree granted by an Indian court may be made executable in foreign courts both, on principle of comity and by entering into reciprocal agreements like section 44-A of the CPC, which makes a foreign decree executable as it would have been a decree passed by that court.[2407]

In a Gujarat case, the provisions of section 13, clauses (b), (d) and (e), CPC, were at issue. The wife had, in this case, sued for maintenance against the husband (residing in the United States). The husband, it seems, had obtained a decree of divorce in a Mexican court. The objection of the wife was, that the husband was not a bona fide resident of Mexico and had obtained the judgment by misleading the Mexican court and therefore, the decree of divorce was vitiated by fraud. Further, the decree was passed without recording any evidence and was not given on merits, and the wife was not heard personally by the Mexican court. The wife did not appear or submit to the jurisdiction of the Mexican court and the divorce decree was therefore, invalid for breach of natural justice. Upholding these objections, the Gujarat High Court declared the marriage to be subsisting and held that the wife was entitled to maintenance.[2408]

Where the ground on which the marriage of the defendant husband was dissolved is not available in the Hindu Marriage Act, the parties are Hindu, their marriage was solemnised according to the Hindu rites, their matrimonial disputes or relationship was, therefore, governable by the provisions of Hindu Marriage Act. Since the plaintiff wife did not submit to the jurisdiction of the USA Court nor did she consent for the grant of divorce in the USA Court the decree obtained by the defendant from the Connecticut Court of USA is neither recognizable nor enforceable in India.[2409]

[S 14] Presumption as to foreign judgments.—The Court shall presume, upon the production of any document purporting to be a certified copy of a foreign judgment, that such judgment was pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears on the record; but such presumption may be displaced by proving want of jurisdiction.

SYNOPSIS

[s 14.1]	Scope	430	[s 14.3]	"foreign judgment"	430
[s 14.2]	"shall presume"	430	[s 14.4]	"Court of competent jurisdiction"	430

2406. Maganbhai v Maniben, AIR 1985 Guj 187.
2407. Neeraja Saraph v Jayant Saraph, (1994) 6 SCC 461.
2408. Maganbhai v Maniben, AIR 1985 Guj 187.
2409. Anubha v Vikas Aggarwal, AIR 2003 Del 175.

[s 14.1] Scope

The presumption under this section would stand rebutted as where the foreign judgment declares that the defendant was served within the jurisdiction of the court delivering such a judgment, if, it is shown that he was at the relevant time physically not within that foreign territory.[2410] (See section 13, clause (a), and the undermentioned cases).[2411]

In Oren Bydorcarbons Pvt Ltd v MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA, the Hon'ble Court noted that the plaintiff had participated in the proceedings before the London Court, and the London Court passed judgment on merits thus, plaintiff cannot reagitate the same issues already decided. Hence, the presumption of section 14 would apply as plaintiff failed to rebut the same.[2412]

(See notes to section 13 under the heading "clause (a) court of competent jurisdiction.")

[s 14.2] "shall presume"

(See Indian Evidence 1872, section 4.)[2413]

[s 14.3] "foreign judgment"

(See notes to section 13 under the same heading.)

[s 14.4] "Court of competent jurisdiction"

(See notes to section 13 under the same heading.)

Place of Suing

[S 15] Court in which suits to be instituted.—Every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it.

SYNOPSIS

[s 15.1]	Place of Suing	431
[s 15.2]	Scope and object of the section	431
[s 15.3]	Jurisdiction	432
[s 15.4]	Judgment of Court not competent to deliver it	434
[s 15.5]	Court of lowest grade competent to try a suit	434
[s 15.6]	Where a suit which ought to be instituted in a Court of lower grade is instituted in a Court of higher grade	435
[s 15.7]	Where a suit which ought to instituted in a Court of higher grade is instituted in a Court of lower grade	436
[s 15.8]	Principles regulating pecuniary jurisdiction	437
[s 15.9]	Over-valuation and under-valuation	437
[s 15.10]	Where the subject matter of a suit does not admit of being satisfactorily valued	439

2410. Bharat Nidhi Ltd v Megh Raj, AIR 1967 Del 22.
2411. Ishri Prasad v Sri Ram, AIR 1927 All 510 : (1927) 25 All LJ 887; Mithalal v Kapoorchand, AIR 1959 Raj 47 : (1958) ILR Raj 1140.
2412. Oren Bydorcarbons Pvt Ltd v MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co. SA, Civil Suit No. 319 of 2017, decided on 14 December 2019 (Madras HC).
2413. For further details see commentary on section 4, Indian Evidence by Woodroft and Amir Ali by LexisNexis.

[s 15.1] Place of Suing

The heading governs sections 15–25. The word "place" in its context means place in India, "the courts referred to therein mean courts in India and the immovable property referred to" also means immovable property in India. These sections thus, regulate the venue within India and apply only to those places where the Code is in force. They deal with matters of domestic concern and prescribe rules for the assumption of territorial jurisdiction by Indian courts in matters within their cognizance and do not govern claims against persons of things totally outside their jurisdiction.[2414] The question as to territorial jurisdiction is mixed question of law and fact.[2415]

One important aspect of the provisions of section 24 of the CPC is that the power of transfer is conferred on high court or the district court; Courts which normally exercise appellate or supervisory jurisdiction in the scheme of procedure envisaged under the provisions of the CPC. The power is conferred on a higher judicial forum. While it is an accepted judicial norm that the Judges of the higher Judiciary have the choice to hear a matter in the sense that the Judge himself can recuse from the case and direct the matter to be posted before any other Judges if the learned Judge has the feeling that one of the parties to the proceeding may have a reasonable apprehension of bias if the proceedings should go on before the particular Judge, may be for a variety of reasons such as a previous acquaintance of one of the parties to the proceedings with the Judge which may give rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias on the part of the other party, irrespective of the fact as to whether the Judge is really biased or not; the learned Judge having earlier dealt with the subject matter of the proceedings before the Court, having been involved in the proceedings at an earlier stage in any capacity. A classic example being a Judge shall not sit in appeal over his own judgment, order or decision or even the learned Judge having expressed his earlier in respect of the subject matter before him in any other context. But, in so far as the proceedings before the trial courts are concerned, it is strictly determined as per the provisions of the Code, particularly having regard to the provisions of sections 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20 of the CPC. What needs to be observed and pointed out in the scheme of the CPC is that the Judge of the subordinate judiciary, do not have the power to recuse themselves from the suit or proceeding pending before the Court over which they preside.[2416]

[s 15.2] Scope and object of the section

Section 15 is enacted not merely to avoid overcrowding in the higher Court but also for the convenience for the parties and witnesses who may be examined by them.[2417]

The object of the section in requiring a suitor to bring his suit in the court of lowest grade competent to try it, is that courts of higher grades shall not be overcrowded with suits. This section is a rule of procedure, not of jurisdiction, and whilst it lays down that a suit shall be instituted in the court of the lowest grade, it does not oust the jurisdiction of the courts of higher grades which they possess under the Acts constituting them.[2418]

2414. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 297 : (1928) 9 Lah 455; Venkatachallam v Surya Narayan Murti, AIR 1941 Mad 129 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 520.
2415. Isha Distribution House Pvt Ltd v Aditya Birla Nuvo Ltd, (2019) 12 SCC 205.
2416. MV Ganesh Prasad v ML Vasndevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
2417. Germanthangi v F Rokunga, AIR 2004 Gau 42.
2418. Mohini Mohan v Kunja Behari, (1943) 47 Cal WN 720 : 77 Cal LJ 309; Dakor Temple Committee v Shankerlal, AIR 1944 Bom 300 : 46 Beng LR 653; Nidhi Lal v Mazhar, (1885) ILR 7 All 230; Balgonda Appanna v Ramgonda, (1969) 71 Bom LR 582; Germanthangi v F Rokunga, AIR 2004 Gau 42.

Although, therefore, as a matter of procedure, a suit below a certain value ought to be instituted in the court of the munsiff, the subordinate judge has still the jurisdiction to try it.[2419] Thus, when a subordinate Judge is invested by notification under the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, with power to take cognizance of any proceeding under the Succession Act, his jurisdiction over such matters is co-extensive with that of the district judge and the proceedings should accordingly be instituted in view of section 15 of the Code in the court of the subordinate judge as being the lower Court but this does not deprive the district judge of his jurisdiction to entertain them as the section enacts only a rule of procedure.[2420] As a matter of procedure, he ought not to entertain the suit, but should return the plaint to the plaintiff to be presented to the munsiff as provided by O VII, rule 10 of the Code of 1882, section 57.[2421] This is explained fully below.

[s 15.3] Jurisdiction

The word "competent" used in this section has reference to the jurisdiction of a court. Jurisdiction means the extent of the authority of a court to administer justice not only with reference to the subject matter of the suit but also to the local and pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction. Thus, A Presidency Small Cause court has no jurisdiction to try suits in which the amount or value of the subject matter exceeds the prescribed monetary value; this is said to be the jurisdiction of a court as regards its pecuniary limits. Nor can it try suits for specific performance of contracts or for an injunction, or for a dissolution of partnership; this is said to be the jurisdiction of a court as regards the subject matter of a suit. Nor can it try a suit on a cause of action that has arisen beyond the local limits of the original civil jurisdiction of the high court; this is said to be the local limits of its jurisdiction.

Vide the Delhi High Court (Amendment) Act, 2015 which came into force on 26 October 2015, the words Rs 20 lakhs were substituted with the words Rs 2 crores in section 5(2) of the Delhi High Court Act, thereby providing for ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court in suits in which the value exceeded Rs 2 crores. Subsequently, Office Order dated 24 November 2015 was issued by the high court. In Subhashini Malik,[2422] a Full Bench of the Delhi High Court held that even after coming into force of the Amendment Act and the Office Order dated 24 November 2015, the high court can entertain and hear application for amendment of plaint in a suit, which in terms of the aforesaid Office Order had been administratively ordered to be transferred to the subordinate courts and where it finds the amendment enhancing the valuation of the suit for the purposes of pecuniary jurisdiction to be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy, the high court has jurisdiction to allow the said amendment. It was held that the Amendment Act was prospective in its nature and thus, did not affect the suits instituted prior to the coming into force thereof. It was further held that the suits, valuation whereof for the purposes of jurisdiction was in excess of Rs 20 lakhs and which as per the law in force at the time of the institution were filed before the high court, even

---

2419. Ratan Sen v Bhau, AIR 1944 All 1 : (1944) ILR All 20; Marta Mondal v Hari, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 155; Krishnasami v Kanakasabai, (1891) ILR 14 Mad 183; Augustine v Medly Cott, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 241; Goura Chandra v Vikrama Deo, 23 Mad 367; Ramamirtham v Rama Film Service, (1951) 2 Mad LJ 121 : (1951) ILR Mad 93 (FB); Venkateswarlu v Satyanarayana, AIR 1957 AP 49 : 1956 And WR 117 (FB).
2420. Ramasubbarayalu v Rangammal, AIR 1962 Mad 450 : 75 LW 452 (FB) : (1962) ILR Mad 1001 : (1962) 2 Mad LJ 318.
2421. Nidhi Lal v Mazhar, (1885) ILR 7 All 230.
2422. Subhashini Malik v SK Gandhi, 233 (2016) DLT 83 : 2016 (160) DRJ 1.

after coming into force of the Amendment Act were to continue as would have continued before the high court, in spite of their valuation being less than Rs. 2 crores but for section 4 thereof, which empowered the Hon'ble Chief Justice to transfer any suit or other proceeding pending before the high court immediately before the commencement of the Amendment Act to such subordinate courts that would have jurisdiction to entertain such suit had the same been instituted post coming into force of the Amendment Act.

The Supreme Court has held that the question of jurisdiction is a question of law that needs to be adjudicated only on the basis of statutory provisions and not on considerations like quantum of filing of cases. As to the choice of forum, it cannot be a justification to state that the particular forum was chosen because less number of cases were filed therein and possibility of speedy disposal was higher. The court held that the principle under section 15 of the CPC cannot be invoked whilst interpreting section 2(1)(e) of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996. A high court therefore is not the "Principal civil court of original jurisdiction" as under section 2(1)(e) of the 1996 Act. The Supreme Court dealt with the question as to whether a challenge to an arbitration award (or arbitral agreement, or arbitral proceeding), wherein jurisdiction lies with more than one court, can be permitted to proceed simultaneously in two different courts? In the present case, both the parties had approached different courts on the same day. It became necessary for the Supreme Court to choose the jurisdiction of one of two courts, i.e., either the "ordinary original civil jurisdiction" of the High Court of Bombay or the "principal civil court of original jurisdiction" in the district of Thane. The court held that the legislative intent emerging from section 2(1)(e) makes it abundantly clear that legislative choice is clearly in favour of the high court. Accordingly, it was held that the high court had the exclusive jurisdiction in the circumstances of the case. The court also ruled that section 15 of the CPC, which provides that every suit shall be instituted in the court of the lowest grade competent to try it, cannot be invoked whilst interpreting section 2(1)(e) of the 1996 Act.[2423]

Section 92 of the CPC lays down specifically that suits relating to public trusts are to be instituted in "the principal civil court of original jurisdiction or in any other court empowered in that behalf by the State Government." The Supreme Court held that the word "or" used in section 92 denotes an alternative, giving a choice. Even if the State notified any other court for instituting a suit relating to Trusts, the jurisdiction of district court does not stand substituted.[2424]

In the above case, the State Government, acting under the Tamil Nadu Civil Courts Act, 1873, had fixed local limits of jurisdiction of any district court or subordinate Judge's Court and had also invested all Courts of Subordinate Judges with jurisdiction under the Code in respect of suits relating to Trusts. Explaining the point further, Raveendran J speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> Assuming that there was only need for applying the principles of interpretation, let us next consider whether the word "or" was used in section 92 of the Code in a substitutive sense. It is clear from section 92 of the Code that the legislature did not want to go by the general rule contained in section 15 of the Code that every suit shall be instituted in the court of the lowest grade competent to try it, in regard to suits relating to public Trusts. The intention of the law makers was that such suits should be tried by the District Court. At the same time, the law makers contemplated that if there was heavy work load on the District 2423. State of Maharashtra v Atlanta Ltd, (2014) 11 SCC 619.

2424. Sri Jeyaram Educational Trust v AG Syed Mohideen, AIR 2010 SC 671 : (2010) 2 SCC 513.

> Court, the State Government should be enabled to empower any other court (within the local limits of whose jurisdiction, the whole or any part of the subject-matter is situate), also to entertain such suits. Therefore, the word "or" is used in the ordinary and normal sense, that is to denote an alternative, giving a choice. The provisions of section 92 do not give room for interpreting the word "or" as a substitutive, so as to lead to an interpretation that when the Government notified any other court, such notified court alone will have jurisdiction and not the District Court.[2425]

The jurisdiction of a court may again be original or appellate. In the exercise of its original jurisdiction, a court entertains original suits. In the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, it entertains appeals.

[s 15.4] Judgment of Court not competent to deliver it

See notes under section 11 under the same heading. See notes under heading "Contract providing for place of suing" under section 10 and "agreement as to choice of court" under section 20.

[s 15.5] Court of lowest grade competent to try a suit

There are in India a large number of courts. The high courts of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Patna and Nagpur each have been established by a Royal Charter. Under Article 214(1) of the Constitution, there is now a high court for each state. Under Article 214(2), high courts exercising jurisdiction in relation to any province immediately before the commencement of the Constitution have become high courts for the corresponding states. Article 225 preserves their existing jurisdiction, the powers of judges of these high courts and the laws administered in these high courts, subject to the provision of the Constitution and subject to the provisions of any law made by the appropriate legislature by virtue of the powers conferred on such legislature by the Constitution. The high courts of Orissa and Assam were established after the Independence but before the Constitution by Order of the Governor-General. Other courts in India have been established almost all by Local Acts and they are of various grades with different pecuniary limits of jurisdiction.

In each of the three Presidency-towns, there is a high court and a small cause court. high courts are empowered in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction to try suits of any value except suits falling within the jurisdiction of Presidency Small Cause courts of which the value does not exceed Rs 100.[2426] The pecuniary jurisdiction of Presidency Small Cause courts is confined to suits of which the value does not exceed Rs 2,000.[2427] Thus, both a high court and a Presidency Small Cause court are competent to try a suit for Rs 500, for damages for breach of contract, but of these two courts it is the small cause court which is the "court of the lowest grade competent to try the suit". The suit, therefore, "shall" be instituted in the small cause court as required by the present section. This does not mean that the high court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It has jurisdiction to try the suit, but in order that the high court may not be overcrowded with suits, the legislature has established small cause court, and the present section requires that suits which a Presidency Small Cause court is competent to try shall be brought in that court. There are, however, certain suits which a small cause court is not competent to try, such as suits for the recovery or partition of immovable property; or for the foreclosure or redemption of a mortgage of immovable property; or suits for injunction

---

2425. Sri Jeyaram Educational Trust v AG Syed Mohideen, AIR 2010 SC 671, para 8 : (2010) 2 SCC 513
2426. See clause 12 of the Letters Patent, Appendix I.
2427. Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, section 18.

or for specific performance.[2428] These suits must be brought in the high court, though the value of the suits may be under Rs 100. There are in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, courts of original jurisdiction established under special statutes called City Civil Courts with power to take cognizance of suits up to a pecuniary limit, not being matters relating to testamentary, intestate, or matrimonial jurisdiction. It has been held that where there is a conflict between the original jurisdiction of the high court under Letters Patent and that of the City Civil Court, section 15 has no application and that proceedings could be taken in the high court even though they could also be instituted in the City Civil Court.[2429] The Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, confers on the district court exclusive jurisdiction to try petitions presented under that Act and its operation is not controlled by section 15. It has accordingly been held that a petition for declaration of nullity of marriage should be filed in the City Civil Court and not in the high court in its original side even though the value of the relief claimed in the petition exceeds the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction.[2430] A suit challenging an order of suspension against the employee of a panchayat was filed in the court of civil judge, junior division. The suit cannot be held to be not maintainable on the ground that it should have been filed in the Court of Civil Judge, Senior Division according to section 32 of the Bombay civil courts Act. Section 15 of the CPC requires that the suit should be filed in the court of the lowest grade competent to try it and, in view of the provisions of section 24 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869, the suit could have been, and should have been filed in the Court of Civil Judge only. Panchayat is not "government".[2431]

Plaintiff's valuation of a leasehold on the basis of rent would ordinarily be regarded as reasonable.[2432] The plaintiff's valuation (unless he has grossly over-valued or under-valued the suit) should be accepted. mesne profits claimed at Rs 7800 per month for premises of the nature in question in Calcutta cannot be regarded as fanciful.[2433]

[s 15.6] Where a suit which ought to be instituted in a Court of lower grade is instituted in a Court of higher grade

Section 15 of CPC enacts on rule of procedure but it does not affect the jurisdiction of a Court of higher grade to try the suit entertainable by a Court of lower grade.[2434] Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code lays down the rule of procedure only and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Courts of higher grades to try a suit entertainable by courts of lower grades. In cases, when such plaints are presented before the Court of higher grade, there would be a discretion caused on that Court either to try the suit itself or return the plaint for presentation before the Court of lower grade.[2435]

When a suit triable by a Court of lower grade is instituted in a Court of higher grade, the latter Court may return the plaint. It is only discretionary on the part of such latter Court (i.e., to say the Court of higher grade) either to try the suit itself or to return the plaint for presentation in the Court of the lower grade. Section 15 is enacted not merely to avoid

---

2428. Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, section 19.
2429. Ramavatharam v Rama Films Service supra; Bank of Chettinad v SPS KRV Firm, AIR 1935 Rang 517; Manindra v Lal Mohan, (1929) ILR 56 Cal 940.
2430. Monika Das v Promode Kumar, AIR 1960 Cal 577.
2431. Natvarlal Khodidas Parmar v District Panchayat, Jamnagar, AIR 1990 Guj 142.
2432. Tara Devi v Sri Thakur Radha Krishna Maharaj, (1987) 4 SCC 69.
2433. Nandita Bose v Ratanlal Nahata, (1987) 3 SCC 705.
2434. Germanthangi v F Rokunga, AIR 2004 Gau 42.
2435. Thulasimani v Maheswari, CRP (PD) No. 3109/2015 and MP No. 1/2015 decided on 19 January 2019 by the Madras High Court.

overcrowding in the higher Court but also for the convenience for the parties and witnesses who may be examined by them.[2436]

If a suit which under this section ought to have been instituted in a munsiff's court is brought in the court of a subordinate judge and the subordinate judge, instead of returning the plaint under O VII, rule 10, tries it and passes a decree against the defendant, notwithstanding an objection taken by the defendant, the decree is not a nullity as the subordinate judge has jurisdiction to try the suit. It is a case of irregularity, not affecting the jurisdiction of the court within the meaning of section 99.[2437] The language of O VII, rule 10, though imperative, is addressed to the suitor and not to the court, which has under this section a discretion either to return the plaint to be presented to the court of the lowest jurisdiction or to try it itself.[2438] The fact that the court of lowest grade has no jurisdiction to try a suit by summary jurisdiction provided by O XXXVII, rule 2(1) does not mean that court is not competent to try that suit if it is otherwise within its jurisdiction nor does that fact enable the plaintiff to have his suits tried by a higher court. O XXXVII, rule 2(1) has no bearing on the jurisdiction of that court or on the nature of the suit.[2439] If a suit under O XXI, rule 103 is for declaration of title and possession, the question of jurisdiction in regard to it would be determined by the market value of the property. If such market value is within the jurisdiction of lower court, the suit would lie in that court, although the effect of the decree passed therein would be to upset an order passed by the high court in favour of an obstructionist.[2440] If a court has jurisdiction to entertain a claim, it has the jurisdiction also to pass all appropriate orders in that suit including even an order staying execution of a decree passed by the Supreme Court.[2441]

[s 15.7] Where a suit which ought to instituted in a Court of higher grade is instituted in a Court of lower grade

In such a case, the court of lower grade ought to return the plaint to the plaintiff to be presented to the court of higher grade (O VII, rule 10). If this is not done, and the suit is heard by the court of lower grade, the decree is one passed without jurisdiction. This a case of want of jurisdiction as distinguished from a mere irregularity within the meaning of section 99 below.[2442] Where a suit which ought to be instituted in a court of higher grade is instituted in a court of lower grade and subsequently thereto, the pecuniary jurisdiction of the lower court is raised so as to cover the suit previously instituted, that does not cure the defect of want of jurisdiction at the time of the institution.[2443] In Bansilal v Dadus,[2444] it was held that when once a suit has been validly instituted in a Court, its jurisdiction to try it is not affected by subsequent legislation, unless it is express. (As to cases where a suit is by reason

---

2436. Thulasimani v Maheswari, CRP (PD) No. 3109/2015 and MP No. 1/2015 decided on 19 January 2019 by the Madras High Court.
2437. Nidhi Lal v Mazhar Hisain, (1885) ILR 7 All 230; Matra Mondal v Hari, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 155, both cases of overvaluation; but decided without reference to the Suits Valuation Act, 1887; Bishambar Dayal v Girdharlal, AIR 1953 All 158; Krishnamurthi v Ramamurthi, AIR 1951 AP 654; Vidyamba v Venkayamma, AIR 1958 AP 218; Arya Pratinidhi Sabha v Devaraj, AIR 1963 P&H 208.
2438. Bhuvaneswari v Raghubansh, AIR 1954 Pat 34; Bipan Kumar v Sham Sunder, AIR 1977 HP 90.
2439. JK Sharma v Ram Chandra Setty, AIR 1965 Mys 248.
2440. Paul Vaz v Elizabeth, AIR 1967 Bom 389.
2441. Kurella Ratnam v Mokhamatla Bhadriah, AIR 1969 AP 236.
2442. Matra Mondal v Hari, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 155, 160; a case of over-valuation, but decided without reference to the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.
2443. Kesarimal v Bansilal, AIR 1952 MB 196.
2444. Bansilal v Dadus, (1957) ILR Raj 241; but see Sri Bhagwan v Omkarmal, AIR 1952 Bom 365, Fazal Hussein v Yusuf Ali, AIR 1955 Bom 55. It is submitted that these decisions require reconsideration.

of under-valuation brought in a court of lower grade, see notes below: "Over-valuation and under-valuation".)

[s 15.8] Principles regulating pecuniary jurisdiction

It is the plaintiff's valuation in his plaint which fixes the jurisdiction of the court, and not the amount which may be found and decreed by the court.[2445] Thus, where in a suit for accounts the plaintiff values has claim at less than Rs 5,000 which is the maximum pecuniary jurisdiction of the court in which the suit is filed and the amount found due on taking the accounts exceeds Rs 5,000, the court has power to pass a decree for that amount,[2446] and the court can entertain an application for execution of the decree.[2447] On this principle if, in a suit for partition, valuation given by the plaintiff is such that the suit is within the jurisdiction of the court in which it is filed, that court can pass a decree in terms of an award of an arbitrator to whom the parties have, after the filing of the suit, referred the disputes in the suit for arbitration, even though the award is for an amount exceeding the pecuniary jurisdiction of that court;[2448] but jurisdiction may be destroyed if the plaint is so amended as to exceed the pecuniary limits of the court in which the suit is instituted.[2449] Where on the allegations in the plaint, the court has pecuniary jurisdiction to try a suit, any decree or order passed thereon is not open to attack on the ground that on its true valuation, the claim was beyond the jurisdiction of the court. It is a defect which is not fundamental and could be waived.[2450]

[s 15.9] Over-valuation and under-valuation

Although ordinarily, it is the value put by the plaintiff on his suit that prima facie determines jurisdiction, it does not follow that a plaintiff is in every case at liberty to assign any arbitrary value to the suit and thus be free to choose the court in which he should bring the suit.[2451] In a suit for accounts, the correct amount payable by one party to the other can be ascertained only when the accounts are examined and it is not possible to give an accurate valuation of the claim at the inception of the suit. The plaintiff is, therefore, allowed to give his own tentative valuation. Ordinarily, the court shall not examine the correctness of the valuation chosen, but the plaintiff cannot act arbitrarily in this matter. If a plaintiff chooses whimsically, a ridiculous figure, it is tantamount to not exercising his right in this regard. In such a case, it is not only open to the court, but, its duty is to reject such a valuation.[2452] The principles which regulate the pecuniary jurisdiction of civil courts are well-settled. Ordinarily, the valuation of a suit depends upon the relief claimed therein and the plaintiff's valuation in his plaint determines the court in which it can be presented; but the plaintiff cannot invoke the jurisdiction of a

---

2445. Lakshman v Babaji, (1883) ILR 8 Bom 31; Mahabir Singh v Behari Lal, (1891) ILR 13 All 320; Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) ILR 16 All 286; Ishwarappa v Dhanji, AIR 1932 Bom 337 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 23; Ishwar Din v Md Ishaq, AIR 1952 All 496; Debi Sahai v Ganga Sahai, AIR 1954 All 749; Radha Charan Das v Th Mohni Behariji, AIR 1975 All 368.
2446. Krishnaji v Motilal, AIR 1929 Bom 337 : (1929) 31 Bom LR 476; Chidambarum v Muthia, AIR 1937 Rang 320 : (1937) Rang 214.
2447. U Po Mya v Father Rionpreyt, AIR 1939 Rang 115 : (1939) Rang 134.
2448. Mahadeo v Hanumanmal, AIR 1969 Raj 304.
2449. Chandu v Kombi, (1886) ILR 9 Mad 208.
2450. Syam Nandan v Danpati Kauer, AIR 1960 Pat 244 : (1960) Pat LR 4.
2451. Boidya Nath v Makhan Lal, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 680, 683; Dayaram v Gordhandas, (1906) ILR 31 Bom 73, 78; Raj Krishna v Bipin, (1912) ILR 40 Cal 245, 249; Balgonda Appanna v Ramgonda, (1969) 71 Bom LR 582.
2452. Abdul Hamid Shamsi v Abdul Nazid, (1988) 2 SCC 575.

court by either grossly over-valuing or grossly under-valuing a suit. The court always has the jurisdiction to prevent the abuse of the process of law.[2453]

The Delhi High Court has held that if the plaintiff is allowed to over-value a suit in such a way as to file the suit in the Court he prefers, then section 15 would become redundant and would result in "forum shopping".[2454]

Cases do occur in which a plaintiff over-values his suit or he under-values it. The over-valuation or under-valuation may be erroneous, or it may be done intentionally by the plaintiff for the purpose of bringing the suit in a court different from that in which it would lie if it were properly valued. If the over-valuation or under-valuation is patent on the face of the plaint, it is the duty of the court to which the plaint is presented to return it to the plaintiff to be presented to the proper court under O VII, rule 10. If it is not patent on the face of the plaint, but objection is taken by the defendant that it is over-valued or under-valued, the court may require the plaintiff to show that the suit has been properly valued if there are prima facie grounds for believing that the suit has not been properly valued,[2455] but not otherwise.[2456] Where there is an amendment in the valuation clause of a plaint, the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper court having pecuniary jurisdiction, even if a higher court fee is paid. The court below had committed a manifest error of law and had illegally held that even by giving a higher valuation by the deponent, the jurisdiction of the court would remain the same.[2457]

If a suit is over-valued or under-valued so that it is brought in a court whose grade is higher or lower than that of the court which would have been competent to try it if it had been properly valued, the decree passed is such a suit is not liable to be set aside or reversed by the appellate court unless: (i) the objection as to jurisdiction on account of over-valuation or under-valuation was raised by the defendant in the trial court at or before the hearing at which the issues were framed; or (ii) such over-valuation or under-valuation is found by the appellate court to have prejudicially affected the disposal of the suit on merits.[2458] It is immaterial whether such over-valuation or under-valuation is erroneous or intentional.[2459] (See Suits Valuation Act, 1887, section 11).

The High Court of Calcutta has held that where a suit is under-valued with the result that the appeal from the decree in the suit is heard and decided by a district court instead of by a high court, the decree of the district court is one passed by a court without jurisdiction and, therefore, a nullity. This happens in cases where a suit of which the true value exceeds Rs 5,000 is valued at less than Rs 5,000. A brings a suit against B for possession of immovable property in the court of a subordinate judge. The real value of the suit exceeds Rs 5,000, but the suit is valued at Rs 2,100 only. A decree is passed in the suit for A. B files an appeal in the district court, but the appeal is dismissed. According to the Calcutta decisions, the decree of the district court is a nullity as being one passed without jurisdiction. The reason given is that the true value of the suit being more than Rs 5,000, the proper forum of appeal if the suit had been

---

2453. Nandita Bose v Ratan Lal Nahata, (1987) 3 SCC 705.
2454. Mahesh Gupta v Ranjit Singh, AIR 2010 (NOC) 385 (Del).
2455. Appa Rao v Sobhanadri, (1901) ILR 24 Mad 158; Hamidunnissa v Gopal, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 661, 667.
2456. Koti Pujari v Manjaya, (1898) 21 ILR Mad 271.
2457. Devendra Singh v Bhola Ram, AIR 1991 All 157.
2458. Sheo Deni v Tulsi, (1893) ILR 15 All 378, 380; Raman v Secretary of State, (1901) ILR 24 Mad 427; Jose Antonio v Francisco, (1910) ILR 35 Bom 24.
2459. Hamidunnissa v Gopal, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 661; Krishnasami v Kanakasabai, (1891) ILR 14 Mad 183.

properly valued, would have been the high court, and not the district court, and the result of the under-valuation was to oust the jurisdiction of the high court as the court of appeal.[2460] In Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan,[2461] a suit valued at Rs 2,500 was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr, and against the decree dismissing the suit, the plaintiff preferred an appeal to the district court. That appeal also having been dismissed, the plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the high court. There, the court determined that the correct valuation of the suit was Rs 9,880 and the appellant paid the deficit court fee. On the revised valuation, the suit would be within the competence of the subordinate judge, but an appeal against his judgment would lie not to the district judge but to the high court. The appellant accordingly contended before the high court that the appeal to the district court was incompetent and its decree a nullity and that the second appeal should be heard as a first appeal. The high court negatived this contention following a Full Bench decision of the court in Radio Singh v Raja Marian[2462] and dismissed the appeal as no prejudice had been shown. The matter was taken in appeal to the Supreme Court and in affirming the decision of the high court, the Supreme Court held that even an objection on the ground of jurisdiction arising out of over-valuation or under-valuation could, in view of the provisions of section 11 of the Suit Valuation Act, be taken only in the manner mentioned therein, that the decision of the district court was therefore, not a nullity and that a mere change of forum for appeal was not a prejudice contemplated by the section, nor a mere error on the conclusion reached on the merits.[2463]

[s 15.10] Where the subject matter of a suit does not admit of being satisfactorily valued

In some suits, the subject matter is not capable of being estimated at a money value, eg, suits for restitution of conjugal rights; suits to remove a karnavan,[2464] suits to direct registration of a document under the Registration Act, 1908, section 77,[2465] etc. The court fee in such suits is Rs 10 as provided by the Court Fees Act, 1870, Sch II, Article 17, clause (vi). There is a distinction, however, between valuation for the purpose of jurisdiction and valuation for the purpose of ascertaining court fee.[2466] The subject now under consideration is valuation for purposes of jurisdiction.

In case where the subject matter is not capable of being estimated at a money value, it is provided by section 9 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, that the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is what the high court may specify by rules made under that section. Where no rules are made, the high courts of Allahabad and Calcutta have said that the safest and most convenient course is to treat the valuation made by the plaintiff as prima facie the true valuation, but subject to correction by the court. If the defective valuation has been due to an improper motive, the court must decide what should be considered to be the proper value.[2467]

2460. Rajlakshmi v Katyayani, (1911) ILR 38 Cal 639.
2461. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : [1955] 1 SCR 117 : 1954 SCJ 514.
2462. Radio Singh v Raja Marian, AIR 1949 Pat 278 : (1948) ILR 27 Pat 1091(FB).
2463. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340; Kelu Achan v Parvatghi, (1923) ILR 46 Mad 631 : (1923) 45 Mad LJ 135 (FB); Moolchand v Ramakrishna, (1933) ILR 55 All 315; Ram Deo Singh v Raj Narain, AIR 1949 Pat 278 : (1948) ILR 27 Pat 1091 (FB).
2464. Govindan Nambiar v Krishnan Nambiar, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 146.
2465. Savarimuthu v Alagium, (1902) 12 Mad LJ 88; Ramu Aiyar v Sankara Aiyar, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 89.
2466. Dayaram v Gordandas, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 73.
2467. Zair Husain Khan v Khurshed Jan, (1906) ILR 28 All 545; Jan Mahomed v Mahar Bibi, (1907) 34 ILR Cal 352.

The cases in which the above rule was laid down were suits for restitution of conjugal rights. In a subsequent case, however, the High Court of Madras said that, though the rule adopted by the high courts of Allahabad and Calcutta might be appropriate in suits for restitution of conjugal rights, it was not so in suits which affected property, and that the best rule in such cases was to value the suits according to the value of the property liable to be affected thereby.[2468] Thus, a suit to compel registration of an instrument whether the instrument be registrable compulsorily (for example, an instrument of gift) or voluntarily (for example, a will), is valued in Madras according to the value of the property that would be affected by the suit;[2469] and a suit to set aside an instrument according to the value of the plaintiff's interest in the instrument.[2470] The Madras High Court has also held that though the court fee on a suit for the removal of a karnavan is only Rs 10, it does not follow that a district munsiff has jurisdiction to try such a suit where the value of the tarvad property exceeds the pecuniary limits of jurisdiction of the munsiff's court;[2471] and that a munsiff has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit to set aside an adoption, if the value of the property, which would be lost to the adopted son, if the adoption were set aside, exceeds the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court.[2472] The high courts of Allahabad and Calcutta would probably not agree. In fact, the High Court of Allahabad has held that the value, for the purposes of jurisdiction of a suit to set aside an adoption, is not the value of the property which may possibly change hands if the adoption be set aside, but the value put upon his plaint by the plaintiff.[2473] According to the Bombay view, in a suit to enforce registration of a document under section 77 of the Registration Act, where the subject matter of the suit is not capable of monetary value, the valuation placed by the plaintiff would be the prima facie valuation and if that exceeds the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court of the lowest grade, the suit can be rightly filed in the higher court;[2474] but, whichever view be correct, it is certain since the enactment of the Suits Valuation Act (7 of 1887), section 11, that when once a suit of this class is decided on its merits by the lower court, the decision will not be reversed in appeal on the ground of want of jurisdiction unless the cognizance of the suit by that court has prejudicially affected its disposal on the merits.

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where the jurisdiction of a court, eg, the City Civil Court at Bombay, is limited to try suits not exceeding a certain amount in value, it cannot entertain a suit, the subject matter of which is not capable of monetary valuation.[2475] The Bombay decision has been negatived by section 6 of Maharashtra Act 9 of 1970.

[S 16] Suits to be instituted where subject-matter situate.—Subject to the pecuniary or other limitations prescribed by any law, suits—

(a) for the recovery of immovable property with or without rent or profits,

(b) for the partition of immovable property,

2468. Ramu Aiyar v Sankara Aiyar, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 89.
2469. Ramkrishnama v Bhagamma, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 56 (deed of gift); Ramu Aiyar v Sankara Aiyar, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 89.
2470. Kanaran v Komappan, (1891) ILR 14 Mad 169; Parathayi v Sankumani, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 294.
2471. Krishna v Raman, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 266.
2472. Keshava v Lakshminarayana, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 192.
2473. Sheo Deni Rani v Tulsi Ram, (1883) ILR 15 All 378.
2474. Leela v EC Shinde, AIR 1970 Bom 109.
2475. Induman Ben v UOI, AIR 1969 Bom 423; Paras Ram v Janki Bai, AIR 1961 All 395 : (1961) ILR 1 All 932, (FB).

(c) for foreclosure, sale or redemption in the case of a mortgage of or charge upon immovable property,

(d) for the determination of any other right to or interest in immovable property,

(e) for compensation for wrong to immovable property,

(f) for the recovery of movable property actually under distraint or attachment, shall be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate:

Provided that a suit to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property, held by or on behalf of the defendant may, where the relief sought can be entirely obtained through his personal obedience, be instituted either in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate, or in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally, works for gain.

Explanation.—In this section "property" means property situate in [2476][India].

SYNOPSIS

[s 16.1] Subject to the Pecuniary or Other Limitations Prescribed by Law 441
[s 16.1.1] High Courts 442
[s 16.2] Scope of the Section 442
[s 16.3] Section 16(c) and Section 20—Choice of Court 443
[s 16.4] Section 16(d) and Section 20—Choice of Court 443
[s 16.5] Judgment of Court Not Competent to Deliver It 443
[s 16.6] Suit for Specific Performance of Agreement to Sell Immovable Property Without Agreement to Sell 444
[s 16.7] Clause (a): Suits for Recovery of Immovable Property 445
[s 16.8] Clause (b): Suit for Partition of Immovable Property 445
[s 16.9] Clause (c): Suit for Foreclosure, Sale or Redemption 446
[s 16.10] Clause (d): Suits for the Determination of Any Other Right to or Interest in Immovable Property 447
[s 16.10.1] Income and Mesne Profits of Land Situated Outside India 450
[s 16.11] Clause (e): Wrong to Immovable Property 450
[s 16.12] Clause (f): Movable Property Actually under Distraint or Attachment 450
[s 16.13] Proviso to the Section 451
[s 16.14] Equity Acts In Personam 452
[s 16.15] Suits In Personam 453
[s 16.16] "Actually and Voluntarily Resides" 453
[s 16.17] "Carries on Business" 454
[s 16.18] "Personally Works for Gain" 454

[s 16.1] Subject to the Pecuniary or Other Limitations Prescribed by Law

The pecuniary limitations have been referred to in the notes on section 15. Instances of other limitations are suits under section 92, or suits in Bombay against government or an officer of government in his official capacity,[2477] which can only be filed in a high court or a district court.

2476. Substituted for words "the States" by Act 2 of 1951, section 3.
2477. Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869, section 32.

[s 16.1.1] High Courts

This section does not apply to high courts in the exercise of their original civil jurisdiction (see section 120). The nature and extent of the jurisdiction of the High Courts at Calcutta, Bombay, Delhi and Madras, which are the only courts having original civil jurisdiction, is defined by the charter for each of these courts which is retained by virtue of Article 225 of the Constitution. The original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay is defined by clause 12 of the charter which empowers them to try suits "for land or other immovable property, if such land or property be situated wholly within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction or, in case leave of the court shall have been first obtained, in part within such limits". There have been many conflicting decisions as to the meaning of the expression "suits for land or other immovable property" in the Letters Patent, but the more specific and detailed provisions of this section leave no scope for uncertainty. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that invocation of original jurisdiction in ordinary original civil jurisdiction has to be guided by the provision of clause 12 and clause 12 alone, and nothing else unless the Special Act provides otherwise. Even in case of an arbitration proceeding, the principal civil court of jurisdiction is determinable is the context of the provisions under clause 12 of the Letters Patent.[2478]

[s 16.2] Scope of the Section

This is one of a group of sections which refer to courts in India and to immovable property situated in India. This is specially expressed in the explanation, lest the proviso be construed as giving a mofussil court jurisdiction in respect of immovable property out of India, for Indian courts have no such jurisdiction.[2479] It specifies the court in which suits relating to immovable property and suits for the recovery of movable property actually under distraint or attachment are to be instituted. Section 19 indicates the courts in which suits for compensation for wrong done to the person or to movable property are to be instituted. Section 20 is a general section. Sections 3 and 12 of the Bombay City Civil Courts Act, 1948, which confer jurisdiction on the City Civil Court, Bombay, cannot be construed as excluding section 16 of the Code, and that accordingly, a suit on a mortgage over properties situated outside greater Bombay is not maintainable in the City Civil Court, Bombay.[2480] Section 16 has an overriding effect on section 20 as ultimately if relief is granted to the respondent, he has to work out his remedy against the immovable properties.[2481] Where the court had jurisdiction over the whole of the district of lower Assam but held its sittings sometimes in Nowgong and sometimes at Gauhati, a suit on a mortgage over properties situated in Nowgong area could be instituted at Gauhati.[2482] Compliance with this section is required at the time of institution of the suit. Hence, if subsequent to such institution, the area in which the immovable property in the suit is situated is transferred for any reason to another district, the court in which the suit was instituted is not as a result of such transfer divested of its jurisdiction to proceed with and decide it.[2483]

2478. IMR Metallurgical Resources AG v Hindustan Newsprint Ltd, AIR 2006 Cal 141 : 2006 (2) ICC 263.
2479. Venkatachallam v Suryanarayan Murty, AIR 1941 Mad 129 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 520; Krishna Swami v Venugopala, AIR 1942 Mad 614 : (1942) ILR Mad 376; Nachiappa Chettiar v Muthu Karuppan Chettiar, AIR 1946 Mad 398 : (1946) ILR Mad 858; Krishnaji v Gajanan, (1909) ILR 33 Bom 373.
2480. Urmila Bai v Pastakia, AIR 1953 Bom 75.
2481. Shree Shanthi Homes Pvt Ltd v CREF Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Kant 252.
2482. Jiban Ram v Dasuram, AIR 1955 Assam 217 : (1955) ILR Assam 275.
2483. Re District Judge, Puri, AIR 1971 Ori 89 (FB).

[s 16.3] Section 16(c) and Section 20—Choice of Court

If the suit is governed by section 16(c) which has overriding effect over section 20, the court within whose jurisdiction the immovable properties are situated is the court which has jurisdiction to try the suit.[2484]

Where, in a suit for recovery of loan filed by the finance company there was an agreement and also a memorandum of understanding by which it was agreed that suit shall be filed only in the court at Bombay, the suit, however, was filed at Bangalore and from the plaint it was clear that "apparently", all the immovable properties were undisputedly situated in Bangalore, no part of the contract had taken place in Mumbai. It was clear that the plaintiff was seeking relief of foreclosure of the mortgage of the properties which were mortgaged with the finance company, as per the registered documents, the suit was found to be governed by section 16(c) which has an overriding effect on section 20, so the Bangalore court was found to have jurisdiction to try it.[2485]

[s 16.4] Section 16(d) and Section 20—Choice of Court

Suit for specific performance and possession of immovable property agreed to be sold falls under clause (d) of section 16, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 20 enacts the rule as to the forums in all cases not falling within the limitations of sections 15 to 19, of the Code of Civil Procedure as is made clear by the opening words "Subject to the limitations aforesaid" appearing in section 20. Since the suit under section 16(d) of the Code of Civil Procedure is maintainable only before the court within jurisdiction of which the suit property is situated and section 20 has no application, the parties cannot by agreement vest the jurisdiction in any other court other than the court within jurisdiction whereof the suit property is situate. Therefore, even if it be assumed that the parties agreed to the jurisdiction of courts, such agreement being against the law would be bad under sections 23 and 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.[2486]

In a case relating to purchase agreement, there was breach of agreement and a suit was filed for damages and breach of contract at Nagpur where the manufacturing unit of the plaintiff was located. The registered office of the defendants was located as Pune where the purchase agreement was executed. Other defendants also resided at Pune and the terms of the agreement also restricted the jurisdiction of courts at Pune. Since there were several causes of action, the Supreme Court in appeal permitted the plaintiff to file separate suit in relation to the purchase order at Pune and further asked him to make necessary amendments to the plaint filed at Nagpur.[2487]

[s 16.5] Judgment of Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes under section 11 under the same heading. See notes under heading "Contract Providing for Place of Suing" under section 10 and "Agreement as to Choice of Court" under section 20.

2484. Shree Shanthi Homes Pvt Ltd v CREF Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Kant 252.
2485. Shree Shanthi Homes Pvt Ltd v CREF Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Kant 252.
2486. Ranjana Nagpal v Devi Ram, AIR 2002 HP 166.
2487. Sandeep Polymers Pvt Ltd v Bajaj Auto Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 2656 : (2007) 7 SCC 148.

[s 16.6] Suit for Specific Performance of Agreement to Sell Immovable Property Without Agreement to Sell

The suit for specific performance of an agreement for sale of immovable property without having any relief for possession of the property cannot be a suit for land. When the plaintiff has asked simply for execution and registration of the conveyance and no relief for possession has been asked for, since the plaintiff is already in possession in different capacity, in such a suit for specific performance, the adjudication of right, title and interest of immovable property is not required and the suit is not suit for land.[2488]

In the above case Qadri, J, speaking for the Bench of the Supreme Court quoted from a decision of the Federal Court and observed in para 13 of the judgment as follows:

> 13. In M/s. Moolji Jaitha and Co. v Khandesh Spinning and Weaving Mills Co. Ltd., (AIR 1950 FC 83), there is divergence of opinion among the learned Judge of five-Judge Bench of the Federal Court in regard to the import of the expression "suit for land". Chief Justice Kania opined, "Taking the suit as a whole, one has to consider whether it is for the purpose of obtaining a direction for possession or a decision on title to land, or the object of the suit is something different but involves the consideration of the question of title to land indirectly." Justice FAZL Ali observed, "If I had really felt that I was called upon to decide it, I would have agreed with the line of cases in which it has been held that, broadly speaking, the expression 'suit for land' covers the following three classes of suits: (1) suits for the determination of title to land; (2) suits for possession of land; and (3) other suits in which the reliefs claimed, if granted, would directly affect title to or possession of land." Justice PATANJALI SASTRI took the view, "The words in question, besides obviously covering claims for recovery of possession or control of land, are apt to connote also suit which primarily and substantially seek an adjudication upon title to immovable property or a determination of any right or interest therein." Justice MAHAJAN observed, "If an attempt is made to find a comprehensive definition of the phrase, it will eventually be discovered that it has created further complications. I, therefore, content myself by saying that where the nature of the suit is such that in substance it involves a controversy about land or immovable property and the Court is called upon to decide conflicting claims to such property and a decree or order is prayed for which will bring about a change in the title to it, that suit can be said to be in respect of land or immovable property; but where incidentally in a suit, the main purpose of which or the primary object of which is quite different, some relief has to be given about land, the title to it not being in dispute in the real sense of the term, then such a suit cannot fall within the four corners of this expression." He added, "In my opinion, if the suit is for specific performance and a decree for possession of the land sold is claimed, such a suit would certainly be a 'suit for land', but if the suit is simpliciter for specific performance, i.e., for the enforcement of the contract of sale and for execution of a conveyance, in that event there can be no good ground for holding that such a suit is a suit for determination of title to land or that the decree in it would operate on the land.[2489]

After discussing the Federal Court's decision in detail, Qadri J, went on to observe in para 15 as follows:

> 15. From the above discussion it follows that a "suit for land" is a suit in which the relief claimed relates to title to or delivery of possession of land or immovable property. Whether a suit as a "suit for land" or not has to be determined on the averments in the plaint with reference to the reliefs claimed therein; where the relief relates to adjudication of title to

---

2488. Adcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Daulat, AIR 2001 SC 3712 : (2001) 7 SCC 698; Deepak Prakash v Jayanta Kumar Bose, AIR 2003 Cal 153.

2489. Adcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Daulat, AIR 2001 SC 3712 at pp 3714–3715 : (2001) 7 SCC 698 : 2001 (4) Mah LJ 469.

land or immovable property or delivery of possession of the land or immovable property, it will be a "suit for land".[2490]

[s 16.7] Clause (a): Suits for Recovery of Immovable Property

A suit for the recovery of immovable property situated in the City of Bombay must be instituted in a court in Bombay having jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The Small Cause Court in Bombay has no jurisdiction to try such a suit.[2491] The suit must, therefore, be brought in the High Court of Bombay or the City Civil Court depending upon the monetary value of the subject matter of the suit. Hence, it is that the section commences with the words "subject to the pecuniary or other limitations prescribed by any law". The insertion of the words "with or without rent or profits" is intended to remove any difficulty there may be where the defendant does not reside within the local limits of the courts within whose jurisdiction the property is situated.

Since the allotted land under the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Act, 1954, was situated in Jullundur District and the appellants were not claiming declaration of ownership of land in Pakistan, the high court was palpably wrong in holding that the civil court has no jurisdiction to declare that the appellants were owners of land in Pakistan and entitled to retain the possession of land allotted to them in lieu thereof.[2492]

The court within whose jurisdiction property which has been mortgaged is situated shall have the jurisdiction to entertain and try this suit. Operations of all provisions of section 20 are not relevant, when provision is adequately made by section 15.[2493]

[s 16.8] Clause (b): Suit for Partition of Immovable Property

(For cases where the property is in the jurisdiction of different courts, see section 17 post.) If part of the property is outside India, the court will deal with the property in India while declining jurisdiction as to the rest.[2494] The Lahore High Court held that a British court can in a partition suit deal with property situated in an Indian state;[2495] but, this is incorrect. Suit was filed for the partition of joint Hindu family properties, and for accounts. Properties were situated in Delhi, Jullundur and the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It was held that the Delhi High Court had territorial jurisdiction to entertain and decide the suit in respect of properties situated in the State of Jammu and Kashmir also. Although, strictly speaking, sections 16 and 17 of the Code were not attracted and the doctrine enunciated by court of equity in England in terms was not applicable in the circumstances of the case and the peculiar situation prevailing in our country, a new equitable doctrine was to be evolved. That doctrine was that the principles of enforceability or executability justified a decision in favour of maintainability of the suit.[2496]

2490. Adcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Daulat, AIR 2001 SC 3712 at p 3715 : (2001) 7 SCC 698 : 2001 (4) Mah LJ 469.; see also Inox AIR Products Ltd v Rathi Ispat Ltd, AIR 2007 Del 53 : 2007 (136) DLT 101; Bhawna Seth v DLF Universal Ltd, AIR 2007 Del 189 : 2007 (138) DLT 639.
2491. Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, section 19.
2492. Dalip Chand v UOI, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 233.
2493. Praking v State Bank of Indore, AIR 1996 MP 28.
2494. Nachiappa Chettiar v Muthu Karuppan Chettiar, AIR 1946 Mad 398; Punchanna v Shib Chandar, (1887) ILR 14 Cal WN 835 (a case under clause 12 of the Letters Patent); Harmindar Singh v Balbir Singh, AIR 1957 Punj 214 : (1957) ILR Punj 1032.
2495. Ram Kishan v Ranshan, AIR 1923 Lah 551.
2496. Dewan Izzat Rai Nanda v Dewan Iqbal Nath Nanda, AIR 1981 Del 262.

A very interesting case relating to jurisdiction came up before the Supreme Court. In that case, the plaintiff had filed a suit seeking a negative declaration that the Will allegedly made at Delhi and relied upon by defendants was never made. In fact, relief claimed in the suit was for partition and declaration in respect of properties situated outside the jurisdiction at Delhi and the negative declaration sought for was superfluous and unnecessary. It was held by the Supreme Court that the suit comes within the purview of section 16(b) and (d). The relief of partition, accounting and declaration of invalidity of sale deed executed in respect of immovable property situated outside the jurisdiction of Court at Delhi, could not entirely be obtained by personal obedience to the decree by the defendants in the suit. It was further held that by ingeniously introducing the pleas regarding oral Will, the property which was outside the jurisdiction of Court could not be brought within jurisdiction to get the relief of partition.[2497]

PK Balasubramanyan, J, speaking for the Bench, observed in para 12 of the judgment as follows:

> 12. On a reading of the plaint as a whole, it is clear, as we have indicated above, that the suit is one which comes within the purview of section 16(b) and (d) of the Code. If a suit comes within Section 16 of the Code, it has been held by this Court in Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd., [(2005) 7 SCC 791] that Section 20 of the Code cannot have application in view of the opening words of Section 20 "subject to the limitations aforesaid". This Court has also held that the proviso to Section 16 would apply only if the relief sought could entirely be obtained by personal obedience of the defendant. The relief of partition, accounting and declaration of invalidity of the sale executed in respect of immovable property situate in Village Pataudi, Gurgaon, could not entirely be obtained by a personal obedience to the decree by the defendants in the suit. We are in respectful agreement with the view expressed in the above decision.[2498]

Where a plaint is filed in a court having no jurisdiction to try different causes of action, and the court decides that it can deal with only one of the causes of action set out in the plaint, then it should retain the plaint and strike out from the plaint that part which it holds as beyond its jurisdiction and then the plaintiff can file another suit in the proper court as to that cause of action so struck off.[2499]

[s 16.9] Clause (c): Suit for Foreclosure, Sale or Redemption

A mortgages certain immovable property to B to secure payment of money lent to him by B. Here, A is the mortgagor and B is the mortgagee. If A does not repay the loan on the due date, B may institute a suit against A for sale of the mortgaged property, so that the mortgage-debt may be paid out of the sale proceeds of the property, or he may sue for foreclosure of the mortgage. The decree in a foreclosure suit provides that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount that may be found due to the mortgagee within a time specified by the court (generally six months), the mortgagor shall be absolutely debarred of all right to redeem the property.[2500] If A offers payment of the mortgage-debt to B, but B disputes the amount and refuses to reconvey, A may sue B for redemption of the mortgage, and the court will pass a decree ordering an account to be taken of what will be due to B, and directing that upon A paying to B the amount so due, B shall reconvey the property to A.[2501] Suits for foreclosure, 2497. Begum Sabiha Sultan v Nawab Mansur Ali Khan, AIR 2007 SC 1636 : (2007) 4 SCC 343.

---

2498. Begum Sabiha Sultan v Nawab Mansur Ali Khan, AIR 2007 SC 1636, at p 1640 : (2007) 4 SCC 343.
2499. State Bank of India v Sanjeev Mallik, AIR 1996 Del 284 (DB).
2500. Transfer of Property Act, 1882, sections 86–87, O XXXIV, rules 2–3.
2501. Transfer of Property Act, 1882, section 93, O XXXIV, rules 7–8.

sale or redemption must be instituted in the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the mortgaged property is situated. In view of the commencing words of the section, a case directly under clause (c), section 20 cannot be called in aid,[2502] where the immovable property regarding which an equitable mortgage was created as a collateral security for loan advanced by the plaintiff is situated at Jagadhari in the State of Haryana. Here, a suit for foreclosure or sale of such mortgaged property could be instituted only before the civil courts at Jagadhari, in view of explicit and mandatory provisions contained in clause (c) of section 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[2503]

A court cannot declare a charge on property wholly outside its jurisdiction and if it does, a purchaser under such a decree would be in no better position than a purchaser under a money decree.[2504]

[s 16.10] Clause (d): Suits for the Determination of Any Other Right to or Interest in Immovable Property

There is no definition of immovable property in the Code. "Immovable property" is defined in the General Clauses Act, 1897, section 3, clause (25) as including land, benefits to arise out of land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth. Trees standing on land are immovable property;[2505] but, once the trees are severed from the land, they become movable property; so also, coal cut and raised from the mine.[2506] Growing-crops are movable property.[2507] Land includes water and a right of fishery in an enclosed water is immovable property.[2508] Benefits to arise out of land include incorporeal hereditaments such as a right of ferry,[2509] pensions and allowances charged upon land and rents. Thus, a haat is immovable property[2510] and so is the life interest of a widow in the rents and profits of her husband's estate.[2511] "Immovable property" as stated above, includes "benefits to arise out of land". Rent that has already accrued due is movable property, for it is a benefit which has arisen out of land, but rent that is to accrue due is immovable property, for it is a benefit to arise out of land. Hence, a suit for arrears of rent is governed not by the provisions of this section, but by those of section 20, and it may be instituted in any one of the courts specified in that section, although in such suit the plaintiff's title to the property for which the rent is claimed may incidentally come in question.[2512] A suit for specific performance and possession of immovable property agreed to be sold falls under clause (d) of section 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[2513] A suit for refund of premium paid by a lessee on the ground that the lease had become impossible of performance is not a suit for the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property and is governed not by section 16 but by section 20

2502. Rosy Joseph v Union Bank of India, AIR 1978 Ker 209.
2503. Central Bank of India v Eleena Fasteners Pvt Ltd, AIR 1999 HP 104.
2504. Gudri Lall v Jagannath, (1886) ILR 8 All 117.
2505. Sakharam v Vishram, (1895) ILR 19 Bom 207; Bapu v Dhondi, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 353; Umed Khan v Daulat Ram, (1883) ILR 5 All 564.
2506. Mannibai v Cambetta, AIR 1948 Nag 286 : (1948) ILR Nag 200.
2507. See section 2, clause (13).
2508. Shibu Haldar v Gopi Sundari, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 449.
2509. Krishna v Akilanda, (1887) ILR 13 Mad 54.
2510. Surendra v Bhai Lal, (1897) ILR 22 Cal 449.
2511. Natha v Dhunbhaiji, (1898) ILR 23 Bom 1.
2512. Chintaman v Madhavrao, (1869) 6 Bom HC App 29; Rango Lal v Wilson, (1901) ILR 26 Cal 204; Kunja v Manindra, AIR 1923 Cal 619 : (1923) 27 Cal WN 542; Neelakanda Pillai v Kunju Pillai, AIR 1935 Mad 545 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 506; Hardayal Singh v Ram Ujagar, AIR 1955 All 416.
2513. Ranjana Nagpal v Devi Ram, AIR 2002 HP 166.

of the Code;[2514] but, a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to rent where such right is denied comes under clause (d) of the present section, and must be instituted in the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situated.[2515] So also, a suit for rent and ejectment under section 66 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.[2516] A suit to recover a share of the sale proceeds of land which have already been realised is a suit for money governed by the provisions of section 20;[2517] but, a suit by a vendor of land for the recovery of unpaid purchase money against the buyer who refuses to complete the purchase, is a suit "for the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property" within the meaning of clause (d).[2518] A claim for a beneficial interest under an endowment cannot be considered de hors the immovable properties covered by the endowment and therefore, such a claim would fall under this clause. A suit by a mortgagee to recover the mortgage-debt from the mortgagor personally is a suit for debt governed by the provisions of section 20; but if in addition to the claim against the mortgagor personally, the mortgagee seeks to recover the mortgage-debt by sale of the mortgaged property, the suit will come under clause (c) of the present section.[2519] A suit by a mortgagee complaining of the deprivation of the whole of the security by or in consequence of a wrongful act by the mortgagor is in the nature of a wrong done to immovable property and therefore, can only be filed in the court within whose jurisdiction it is situated.[2520] Clause (d) relates to such suits in which the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property not covered by clauses (a), (b) and (c) is involved. Hence, a suit for injunction restraining interference with the plaintiff's possession of land and his operating a tube-well therein, is a suit falling under clause (d).[2521] Wherein a suit for maintenance the plaintiff claims that she is entitled to a charge on immovable property in the hands of the defendant, the case is one within clause (d) of this section; so, where the claim is for a decree by a Muhammedan lady with a prayer for declaring charge on her husband's immovable property, it falls within clause (d) of the section.[2522] Though a court has jurisdiction to declare a charge only over immovable properties situated within its jurisdiction, it is competent under section 8 of the Bombay Hindu Divorce Act of 1947, to declare a charge over properties outside its jurisdiction as security for the amount awarded as maintenance to the wife.[2523] A suit for damages for breach of contract to assign a lease entered into at Madras was filed in the subordinate court at Ottapalam in Malabar on the strength of a prayer that the decree amount should be charged on the leasehold estate which was within the jurisdiction of that court. It was held that the court at Ottapalam had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit under section 16(d) as that section applied only if the dispute related to title or interest in immovable property existing at the date of the suit and not if it is to arise as a result of the decree.[2524] It has been held by the High Court of

---

2514. Dada Siba Estate v Dharan Dev Chand, AIR 1961 Punj 143 : (1960) ILR 1 Punj 384.
2515. Keshav v Vinayak, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 22.
2516. Kunja v Manindra, AIR 1923 Cal 619 : (1923) 27 Cal WN 542.
2517. Venkata v Krishnasami, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 344; Ahmad v Abdul Rahman, (1904) ILR 26 All 603.
2518. Maturi v Kota, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 227.
2519. Vithalrao v Vaghoji, (1893) ILR Bom 570.
2520. Hadibandhu v Chandra Shekar, AIR 1973 Ori 141.
2521. Om Prakash v Anar Singh, AIR 1973 All 555.
2522. Mst Gauhar Jehan v Mt Imteyaz Jehan, AIR 1948 Pat 384 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 523; New Mofussil Co v Shankerlal, AIR 1941 Bom 247 : (1941) ILR Bom 361 : 43 Beng LR 293; Muhamed Eusoof v Subramanian, AIR 1950 Mad 272; Sitabai v Laxmibai, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 337; Snehalata Devi v Samantha Radha, AIR 1953 Ori 25 : (1952) Cut 451; Gouri Gupta v Taran Gupta Chaudhary, AIR 1968 Cal 305; Nagubai v B Sharma Rao, AIR 1953 SC 593, 597; Kanu Mulu v Manglaben, AIR 1969 Guj 308.
2523. Ambalal v Sarada Gowri, (1955) ILR Bom 759 : (1955) 57 Bom LR 499.
2524. Pulikkal Estate v Joseph, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 228 wherein the scope of the decisions in 26 Pat 523 : ILR 40 Bom 337 are discussed.

Orissa that a suit for reduction of maintenance awarded by a decree and charged on immovable property does not fall within section 16(1)(d) as the relief has reference only to the quantum of maintenance and not to the subsistence of the charge therefore.[2525] A suit for accounts of a dissolved partnership against a defendant who is residing within the jurisdiction of the court in which the suit is filed is maintainable in that court, although the partnership assets in the shape of immovable properties are situated in a foreign country. Such a suit does not fall under any of the clauses (a)–(e) of this section.[2526] A suit for dissolution of partnership with the usual ancillary reliefs is not a suit within clause (d) merely because a part of the partnership assets consists of a factory.[2527] Machinery is movable property unless it is shown to have been attached or permanently fastened to earth and a suit with reference thereto does not fall within clause (a) or clause (d) of section 16.[2528]

In a case, joint venture agreements (JVA) were entered into by parties at Delhi for development of a commercial complex on a plot of land situated in Haryana. According to the agreement, money was also payable at Delhi and the parties had further agreed that the court at Delhi shall have jurisdiction to decide disputes, that since ownership and title to the property was not in question, the Delhi High Court will have jurisdiction.[2529] It was observed by the court as follows:

> The parties having entered into the contract of their own free will and volition and with open eyes, the respondent cannot be heard to state that a petition of the present nature ought to be treated at par with a suit for specific performance in respect of an immovable property and that as the subject premises is not situated within the local limits of this Court, the petition is liable to be rejected for lack of territorial jurisdiction. Nature of disputes raised by the petitioner hinges on the JVA and the clauses contained therein.[2530]

On this point, the observation of the Supreme Court in Jatinder Nath v Chopra Land Developers Ltd,[2531] finally settles the matter:

> In the present case, a bare reading of the agreement indicates that it is an agreement to develop. The appellant remains the owner, the Developer remains the contractor. The Developer is the financer. The appellant is the owner of an asset. The contractor/Developer agrees to exploit that asset on behalf of the owner. The Developer funds the scheme. The building plans remained in the name of the owner. The D.D.A. informs the owner regarding revocation of the building plan. The owner files the writ petition challenging the revocation. The contractor is paid consideration in terms of a part of the property. In the circumstances, it cannot be said that this case is similar to a suit for land.

Plaintiff-tenant was occupying a building at Puri (Orissa). He was taken by the landlord to Calcutta and there compelled by fraud to sign an agreement surrendering his tenancy. Plaintiff's suit challenging the agreement can be filed in the Calcutta City Civil Court, because the cause of action arose at Calcutta, where fraud was practiced and the Calcutta court had jurisdiction under section 20(c). The plaintiff had not sought for any determination of a right to immovable property. It was true that if the suit was decreed, the plaintiff's tenancy rights would be restored. However, merely because of that, it cannot be said that the suit was one for determination of a right to or interest in immovable property.[2532]

2525. Satyabhama v Krishna Chandra, AIR 1961 Ori 69.
2526. Dorairaj v Karuppiah Ambalam, AIR 1970 Mad 119.
2527. Durga Das v Jai Narain, AIR 1922 Bom 188 : (1917) ILR 41 All 513.
2528. Standard Tubewell and Engg Works Ltd v Jogindra, AIR 1959 Cal 461.
2529. Suresh Jain v Dinesh Kumar, AIR 2008 Del 127.
2530. Suresh Jain v Dinesh Kumar, AIR 2008 Del 127, at p 131.
2531. Jatinder Nath v Chopra Land Developers Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 1401, at p 1408. Kapadia, J (as he then was) speaking for the Bench.
2532. Parimal Mitra v Paresh Chandra, AIR 1982 Cal 361.

Property situated beyond the jurisdiction of City Civil Court, Calcutta, was acquired. The Land Acquisition Officer who awarded compensation, had his office within the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court, Calcutta and the plaintiff's office was also within Calcutta. The plaintiff sued at Calcutta for determination of his right and status in regard to the property. It was held that the Calcutta court had no jurisdiction under section 16(d). Only the court within whose jurisdiction the property was situated could try the suit. The plaint must be returned under O VII, rule 10.[2533]

[s 16.10.1] Income and Mesne Profits of Land Situated Outside India

A suit will lie in an Indian court to establish a right to a share in income derived from grants of land situated outside India, but received by the defendant within the local limits of an Indian court.[2534] Similarly, a suit to recover mesne profits of land situated outside India, of which the defendant was in wrongful possession but of which he subsequently delivered possession to the plaintiff, may be instituted in a court in India.[2535] Both these cases fall under section 20, below. A suit for arrears of rent due in respect of a house in Pakistan was held to be maintainable in the small cause court, Calcutta, within whose jurisdiction the parties resided.[2536]

[s 16.11] Clause (e): Wrong to Immovable Property

This refers to torts affecting immovable property such as trespass,[2537] nuisance, infringement of easement, etc.

Where a reading of the plaint leads to one conclusion only, viz, that it was for damages relating to immovable property in Mathura, section 16(e) of the Code of Civil Procedure would apply, then section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure is of no avail to the plaintiff. The mere factum of the execution of the sale deed and payment of the sale consideration being in Delhi, does not comprise any part of cause of action relating to the claim for damages to immovable property raised in this suit. Even if section 16(e) is assumed not to have any applicability to the facts of the case, Delhi courts do not possess territorial jurisdiction because the defendant does not have its principal office in this city. The fact that it has a subordinate office in Delhi, seems to be of little consequence, since no part of cause of action voiced in the plaint has arisen in Delhi.[2538]

[s 16.12] Clause (f): Movable Property Actually under Distraint or Attachment

Movable property under attachment constitutes an exception to the general rule that movables follow the person.[2539] This exception is probably based on the principle that a movable property under attachment is one in session of the court.[2540] The Code follows this rule for the sake of convenience of judicial administration.[2541] The clause applies to courts

---

2533. Trustee for Improvement of Calcutta v Bahadur Khan, AIR 1984 Cal 412.
2534. Kashinath v Anant, (1900) ILR 24 Bom 407.
2535. Mahadeo v Ramchandra, AIR 1922 Bom 188 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 108.
2536. Debendra v Pramatha, AIR 1958 Cal 700 : (1956) ILR 1 Cal 503.
2537. Crisp v Watson, (1893) ILR 20 Cal 689.
2538. Anant Raj Industries Ltd v Balmer Lawrie and Co Ltd, AIR 2003 Del 367.
2539. Companhia de Mocambique v British South Africa Co, [1892] 2 QB 358, 367.
2540. State of Assam v Biraj Mohan, AIR 1965 Assam 35.
2541. Woodroffe and Amir Ali, Law of Evidence, LexisNexis, 20th 2017 Edn, 2016, p 74.

in India, where movables are under an attachment by a foreign court and the defendant is a resident in India, and is able to get the attachment decree to recover the property.[2542]

[s 16.13] Proviso to the Section

The proviso is an exception to the main part of the section which cannot be interpreted or construed to enlarge the scope of the principal provision. It would apply only if the suit falls within one of the categories specified in the main part of the section and the relief sought could entirely be obtained by personal obedience of the defendant.[2543] In the above case, the suit for specific performance of agreement related to a property situated in Gurgaon (Haryana). The defendants were having their Head Office at Delhi and the agreement entered into between the parties at Delhi provided for payment to be made at Delhi. It was held by the Supreme Court that court at Haryana has jurisdiction to try the suit and the fact that parties had agreed that Delhi High Court alone has jurisdiction was immaterial as such agreement was void being against public policy.

Thakker, J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 16. The proviso is thus an exception to the main part of the section which in our considered opinion, cannot be interpreted or construed to enlarge the scope of the principal provision. It would apply only if the suit falls within one of the categories specified in the main part of the section and the relief sought could entirely be obtained by personal obedience of the defendant.
>
> 17. In the instant case, the proviso has no application. The relief sought by the plaintiff is for specific performance of agreement respecting immovable property by directing the defendant No. 1 to execute sale deed in favour of the plaintiff and to deliver possession to him. The trial Court was, therefore, right in holding that the suit was covered by clause (d) of section 16 of the Code and the proviso had no application.
>
> 18. In our opinion, the submission of the learned counsel for the appellant that the parties had agreed that Delhi Court alone had jurisdiction in the matter arising out of the transaction has also no force. Such a provision, in our opinion, would apply to those cases where two or more courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit and the parties have agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of one court.[2544]

Hakam Singh's case[2545] was the first leading decision of the Supreme Court on the point. In that case, a contract was entered into by the parties for construction work. An agreement provided that notwithstanding where the work was to be executed, the contract "shall be deemed to have been entered into at Bombay" and Bombay Court "alone shall have jurisdiction to adjudicate" the dispute between the parties. In that case, it was held as follows:

> By Clause 13 of the agreement it was expressly stipulated between the parties that the contract shall be deemed to have been entered into by the parties concerned in the city of Bombay. In any event the respondents have their principal office in Bombay and they were liable in respect of a cause of action arising under the terms of the tender to be sued in the courts of Bombay. It is not open to the parties by agreement to confer by their agreement jurisdiction on a court which it does not possess under the Code. But where two courts or more have under the Code of Civil Procedure Jurisdiction to try a suit or proceeding on agreement between the parties that the dispute between them shall be tried in one of such courts is not contrary to public policy. Such an agreement does not contravene Section 28 of the Contract Act.

2542. Kottich v Udaya, (1912) Mad WN 524.
2543. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF, Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446 : (2005) 7 SCC 791.
2544. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF, Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446, at p 4451 : (2005) 7 SCC 791.
2545. Hakam Singh v Gamon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740 : (1971) 1 SCC 286 : 1971 SCR (3) 314. (Shah, CJ, speaking for the Bench).

As the plaintiff has the option of suing in the local jurisdiction, the scope of the proviso is more limited than in the rule of English Equity. The proviso is an exception to the main clauses and should not be construed as enlarging their scope. It applies, therefore, only if the suit falls within one of the categories mentioned in the section and complete relief could be granted by compelling obedience of the defendant to the decree.[2546]

The last paragraph of the section provides that suits to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to immovable property, may be instituted at the plaintiff's option either in the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situated, or in the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, provided:

(i) the property is held by or on behalf of the defendant;

(ii) the relief sought can be entirely obtained through the personal obedience of the defendant;[2547] and

(iii) the property is situated in, and not beyond, India.[2548]

The proviso does not apply when the property is in the possession of the plaintiff.[2549] As the plaintiff has the option of suing in the local jurisdiction, the scope of the proviso is more limited than in the rule of English Equity. The proviso is an exception to the main clauses and should not be construed as enlarging their scope. It applies therefore only if the suit falls within one of the categories mentioned in the section and complete relief could be granted by compelling obedience of the defendant to the decree.[2550] If the relief sought by the plaintiff is for specific performance of agreement respecting immovable property by directing the defendant No 1 to execute sale deed in favour of the plaintiff and to deliver possession to him. That the suit was covered by clause (d) of section 16 of the Code and the proviso had no application. [2551]

[s 16.14] Equity Acts In Personam

This proviso is an application, though in a highly modified form, of the maxim Equity Acts in personam. When it is said that Equity Acts in personam what is meant is that the court of equity in England (the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice in the 21st century) has jurisdiction to entertain certain suits (suits in clauses (a)–(c) of the present section being entirely excluded), respecting immovable property, though the property may be situated abroad, if the relief sought can be obtained through the personal obedience of the defendant. The personal obedience of the defendant can be secured only if the defendant resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court, or carries on business within those limits. For in the one case, the person of the defendant being within the jurisdiction and in the other his personal property, the court may if he does not comply with the judgment, direct an arrest of the defendant and commit him to jail or order that his goods be attached until he complies with the order of the court;[2552] but, if neither the person of the defendant nor his personal property is within the jurisdiction, the court will not entertain a suit for a relief respecting

---

2546. Pulikal Estate v Joseph, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 228.
2547. Norman Bentwich, Westlake's Private International Law, Sweet & Maxwell, London, 7th Edn, 1925, p 58; Mahadeo v Ramchandra, AIR 1922 Bom 188; Arunachalla v Mathiah, (1912) 23 Mad LJ 679.
2548. Krishnaji v Gajanan, (1909) ILR 33 Bom 373.
2549. Crisp v Watson, (1893) ILR 20 Cal WN 689; SK Jawala v Helen Jan Haong Lee, AIR 1978 Cal 247.
2550. Pulikal Estate v Joseph, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 228.
2551. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF, Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446 : (2005) 7 SCC 791.
2552. Penn v Lord Baltimore, (1750) 1 Ves Sen 444.

immovable property situated beyond its jurisdiction, for the court cannot in that event execute its decree either in rem or in personam and a court does not entertain a suit if it cannot enforce its decree in the suit.[2553]

[s 16.15] Suits In Personam

Suits in respect of which courts of equity in England exercise jurisdiction in personam are called suits in personam. The essential feature of suits in personam is that the land in respect of which the suit is brought is situated abroad, but the person of the defendant or his personal property is within the jurisdiction of the court in which the suit is brought. The land being situated abroad, the decree cannot be executed in rem, that is to say, it cannot be executed against the land; but, the person or the personal property of the defendant being within the jurisdiction, the decree can be executed in personam that is to say, against the person or personal property of the defendant. It must, however, be noted that the only class of cases in which courts of equity in England entertain suits relating to land situated abroad are cases of contracts, fraud, and trust. In the jurisdiction clause of the agreement, words like "alone", "only", "exclusive" and the like are not used and in the absence thereof, it cannot be held that the said condition excluded the jurisdiction of the court, who was otherwise competent to try the suit by reason of a part of a cause of action having accrued within its jurisdiction.[2554] Thus, suits for specific performance of contracts for sale of land[2555] and suits for foreclosure,[2556] sale[2557] or redemption[2558] in the case of a mortgage of land are cases of contract and the court of equity in England will entertain such suits if the contract is made in England, and the defendant resides or carries on business in England, though the land may be situated abroad. Similarly, where lands abroad have been acquired by the fraud of a party residing in England, a suit to set aside the transaction will be entertained by the court of equity in England.[2559] The court of equity will also entertain a suit to enforce express trusts affecting land situated in a foreign country, or for preservation or protection of the trust fund situated in a foreign country if the trustee resides in England,[2560] but has no jurisdiction to interfere with the administration of a trust which has to be conducted in a foreign territory.[2561] It has also no jurisdiction to entertain suits for recovery[2562] or for partition[2563] of land, or for damages for trespass of land.[2564] (See clauses (a)–(e) of this section.)

[s 16.16] "Actually and Voluntarily Resides"

See notes to section 20 under the same heading.

2553. Trimbak v Lakshman, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 495.
2554. KL Shroff v State of Haryana, AIR 1998 Del 404.
2555. Colyer v Finch, (1856) 5 HL Ca 905.
2556. Paget v Ede, (1874) LR 18 Eq 118.
2557. 2 Spence's Eq Jur 678.
2558. Bent v Young, (1838) 9 Sim 180, 190.
2559. Lord Cranstown v Johnston, (1796) 3 Ves 170.
2560. Bilasrai Joharmal v Shivanarayan Sarupchand, AIR 1944 PC 36 : 71 IA 47 : 46 Beng LR 518 : 48 Cal WN 448; Nelson v Bridport, (1826) 8 Beav 547.
2561. Bilasrai Johormull v Shivanarayan Sarupchand, AIR 1944 PC 36 : 71 IA 47 : 46 Beng LR 518 : 48 Cal WN 448.
2562. Re Hawthorn, (1883) 23 Ch D 748.
2563. Cartwright v Pettus, (1875) 2 Ch Cas 214.
2564. British South Africa Co v Companhia de Mocambique, AIR 1893 Cal 602 : [1892] 2 QB 358.

[s 16.17] "Carries on Business"

See notes to section 20 under the same heading.

[s 16.18] "Personally Works for Gain"

See notes to section 20 under the same heading.

[S 17] Suits for immovable property situate within jurisdiction of different Courts.—Where a suit is to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property situate within the jurisdiction of different Courts, the suit may be instituted in any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate:

Provided that, in respect of the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the entire claim is cognizable by such Court.

SYNOPSIS

[s 17.1]	Scope and Object of the Section	454	[s 17.5]	Immovable Property Within the Jurisdiction of Different Courts	457
[s 17.2]	May Be Instituted	455	[s 17.6]	Appeal	457
[s 17.3]	Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It	455	[s 17.7]	Execution	457
[s 17.4]	Section 17 Inapplicable If Cause of Action as to Property Outside Local Limits of Jurisdiction Is Different	456	[s 17.8]	Courts	458
			[s 17.9]	High Courts	458

[s 17.1] Scope and Object of the Section

This section supplements the provisions of section 16, and applies only to suits falling within clauses (a)–(e) of that section.[2565] It is intended for the benefit of suitors, the object being to avoid multiplicity of suit.[2566] Sections 16 and 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure are part of one statutory scheme. Section 16 contains general principle whereas section 17 provides for an exception to the general rule as mentioned in section 16.[2567] A sues B in a court in district X on a mortgage of two properties, one situated in district X and the other in district Y. The court in district X has jurisdiction under this section to order the sale not only of the property in district X, but also of the property in district Y, and to sell execution of its decree the property in district Y.[2568] A is not obliged to bring two suits, one in the court of district X and the other in the court of district Y. He may bring only one suit in either court, and it matters not if the properties are several, one in each district, or one property extending over two or more districts.[2569] The same rule applies to suits for partition[2570] and to suits for the recovery of immovable property.[2571] A can sue in any court in which any part of the immovable

2565. Satya Narayan Banerjee v Radha Nath Das, AIR 1942 Cal 69 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 235 : 45 Cal WN 1085.
2566. Harchandar v Lal Bahadur, (1894) ILR 16 All 359.
2567. Shivnarayan (D) by LRs v Maniklal (D) thr LRs, 2019 (2) JT SC 295 : 2019 (1) RCR (Civil) 985 : 2019 (2) Scale 620.
2568. Maseyk v Steel, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 661; Gopi Mohan v Doybaki, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 13; Tinkouri v Shib Chandra, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 639.
2569. Shurrop Chander v Ameerrunissa, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 703.
2570. Khatija v Ismail, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 380.
2571. Kubra Jan v Ram Bali, (1908) ILR 30 All 560.

property is situated and he has the right to select his own forum;[2572] though this right may be controlled by the court of appeal or the high court; (see sections 22 and 23 below); but, no partition can be made of property situated outside India.[2573]

A bona fide compromise will not divest the court of jurisdiction once jurisdiction has properly vested in it. A sues B in a court in district X to recover possession of two properties, one situated in district X and the other in district Y. The suit is compromised as regards the property situated in district X. This does not take away the jurisdiction of the court in district X to proceed with the suit as regards the property situated in district Y, unless it be shown that the compromise was a mere contrivance to defeat the policy of the rule of procedure as to local jurisdiction.[2574]

Ascertaining the meaning of "any portion of the property", the Supreme Court held that the expression "property" in section 17 is used as "singular" but as per section 13 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, it may be read as "plural", i.e., "properties". Also, expression "any portion of the property" can be read as portion of one or more properties situated in jurisdiction of different courts. Moreover, a suit in respect of more than one property situated in different jurisdictions can be instituted in the local limits of the court where one or more properties are situated provided suit is based on "same cause of action" with respect to the properties situated in jurisdiction of different courts.[2575]

[s 17.2] May Be Instituted

Cases are conflicting as to whether a plaintiff suing in respect of a part of a property in one district only is barred from suing as to the other part or the rest of the property in another district in the jurisdiction of another court. But the better opinion is that there is no bar and that the section is permissive.[2576] Thus, if A succeeds as heir to two properties, one in district X and the other in district Y, A may sue in the court of district X for the recovery of both properties. But, if A sues in the court of district X for the recovery of the property in that district only, he will not be barred from suing subsequently in the court of district Y for the recovery of the property in that district. In an export transaction, a corporation provided credit limit facility to an export firm. The export firm made payments for losses as per agreement at the headquarters of the corporation by demand draft which were encashed by the corporation at that place. Dispute arose as to liability for losses. It was held that the suit can be filed at the place of encashment.[2577]

[s 17.3] Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes under section 11 under the same heading. See notes under heading "Contract Providing for Place of Suing", under section 10 supra, and "Agreement as to Choice of Court", under section 20 infra.

2572. Ratnagiri Pillai v Vava Ravuthan, (1890) ILR 19 Mad 477; Zamiran v Fateh Ali, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 146.
2573. Ramacharya v Anantacharya, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 989.
2574. Khatija v Ismail, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 380; Kubra Jan v Ram Bali, (1908) ILR 30 All 560.
2575. Shivnarayan (D) by LRs v Maniklal (D) thr LRs, 2019 (2) JT SC 295 : 2019 (1) RCR (Civil) 985 : 2019 (2) Scale 620.
2576. Subba Rau v Rama Rau, (1867) 3 Mad HCR 376 (decided under the Act of 1859 where leave of a superior court was required); Nihal Singh v Sowaya, (1884) PR 162; Hari Narayan v Ganpatrao, (1883) ILR 8 Bom 272; contra Jamoona v Bhamasoondaree, (1865) 2 WR 148.
2577. HP State Small Industries Export Corp v Export Credit and Guarantee Corp, AIR 1992 HP 17.

[s 17.4] Section 17 Inapplicable If Cause of Action as to Property Outside Local Limits of Jurisdiction Is Different

The plaintiff filed a suit in an Oudh Court to recover one immovable property within its jurisdiction and two immovable properties situated in the Punjab without jurisdiction. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to these three properties under a Will. He also joined in the suit a prayer to be declared mutawalli of a wakf of another property situated in Punjab called the Khalikabad estate. The plaintiff had a right to include the first two Punjab properties in the Oudh suit; but as to the other Punjab property, the Privy Council said:

> There remains the question of the Khalikabad estate. Here the respondent cannot succeed unless he shows that under the terms of the deed creating the waqf he is the trustee. That question depends upon the construction of the deed. It is a separate and different cause of action from those which found the proceedings in respect of the other three properties. Their Lordships are unable to find any justification for bringing the suit in respect of this property elsewhere than in the court of the district where the property is situated. Such justification cannot, in their Lordships' judgment, be found in Section 17, Code of Civil Procedure, upon which the respondent relied.[2578]

The Supreme Court has held that when the main question involved in the suit is that whether the property involved in Waqf property or not, it can only be decided by a Wakf Tribunal and not by a civil court. Further, it also laid down that matters falling under sections 51 and 52 of the Waqf Act, 1995, are also required to be decided by the Tribunal and not civil court.[2579]

However, if a plaintiff has a single cause of action in respect of properties, some of which are situated at Delhi and the rest in Hissar, Haryana, he can file a suit in respect of all of them either at Delhi or in Hissar. Since this section gives him such a right, inconvenience to the defendants who may be residing in Hissar is no ground for preventing him to choose his forum at Delhi.[2580] A suit filed in the court of the sub-judge, Arrat challenging the gift deed as a forged document was a validly filed suit although properties which were the subject matter of the suit were situated in Arrat and other different places. The plaintiff was not expected to challenge such a gift piecemeal in different courts within whose jurisdiction different properties were situated.[2581] The principle is that it is only in those cases where there is one cause of action and the basis of the plaintiff's claim is the same in all this claims that one joint suit in respect of all the immovable properties, whether situated within the jurisdiction of that court or within the jurisdiction of different courts, can be taken cognizance of, provided that a part of the property lies within the territorial jurisdiction and the total claim is also within the pecuniary jurisdiction.[2582] A suit by reversioner challenging several alienations by a widow of properties situated in different jurisdictions could be instituted under this section in any one of the courts if the alienations formed part of a series.[2583] The section was also applicable where a plaintiff was dispossessed of one property in one district in one month and of another property in another district where the dispossessions were by the same defendant and under the same alleged right.[2584]

2578. Nisar Ali v Mohamad Ali, AIR 1932 PC 172 : (1932) 59 IA 268 : 7 Luck 324; Administrator General v Sulajini Debi, AIR 1962 Cal 616.
2579. Rajasthan Wakf Board v Devki Nandan Pathak, AIR 2017 SC 2155 : 2017 (14) SCC 561 : 2017 (5) Scale 769.
2580. Prem Kumar v Dharam Pal, AIR 1972 Del 90.
2581. Chitranjan v Addl Commissioner, AIR 1967 All 375.
2582. Janki Devi v Manilal, AIR 1975 All 91 : 1975 All LJ 53.
2583. Ramdhin Baldeo Prasad v Thakuram, AIR 1952 Nag 303 : (1952) ILR Nag 182.
2584. Harchandar v Lal Bahadur, (1894) ILR 16 All 359.

[s 17.5] Immovable Property Within the Jurisdiction of Different Courts

As already stated, the immovable property to which this section refers must be situated in India, for, the courts in India have no jurisdiction over a property situated outside India.[2585] Thus, the court in British India had no jurisdiction to pass a decree in respect of property in Berar before the Independence.[2586] When a mortgagee sued for sale, in the court of the sub-judge of Satara, of a mortgage of properties situated in Satara, Belgaum and Kolhapur, it was held that the court had jurisdiction to deal with the Satara property and with the Belgaum property situated in the jurisdiction of another court in British India, but not with the Kolhapur property situated outside British India.[2587]

The court will deal with property in India, if the suit is for partition, while declining jurisdiction as to the rest.[2588] So also, if part of the property is in a scheduled district outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court and which is outside the local extent of the Code.[2589] Where the properties which were the subject matter of a suit for partition were situated, some of them in British India and others in Chandranagore which was then a foreign state, it was held that a decree for partition could be made only with respect to the former and not the latter properties.[2590] Where the family-owned properties, both in India and in a foreign state, it was held that while courts in this country could not pass any decree for partition of the foreign properties, it could direct the parties to account for income derived therefrom.[2591] Where a suit was filed after independence in the court of the subordinate judge of Ludhiana, East Punjab, for partition of properties, bulk of which was situated in Pakistan, it was held that no relief could be granted in respect of those properties and that the immovable properties referred to in sections 16 and 17 had reference to properties situated in India.[2592]

[s 17.6] Appeal

In a suit, property in dispute lay partly in Lucknow and partly in Cawnpore district. The suit was brought in a court in Lucknow district. After the decree in the court dismissing the suit, the plaintiff submitted to the decree so far as property in the Lucknow district was concerned, but went in appeal to the Oudh Chief Court as regards the decision relating to Cawnpore property. It was contended that as the subject matter under appeal was not within the jurisdiction of the Oudh Chief Court, the appeal could not be heard by that court. Held that the suit as filed was proper and that the only court that could hear the appeal was the Oudh Chief Court.[2593]

[s 17.7] Execution

When the court has power to pass a decree as to immovable property in a different jurisdiction, it has also power to execute it. (See note under section 38, Jurisdiction of Court Executing a Decree.)

2585. Krishna v Gajanan, (1909) ILR 33 Bom 373.
2586. Kurusinga v Narsinha, AIR 1938 Bom 121 : (1937) ILR Bom 895.
2587. Nilkanth v Vidya Narsing, AIR 1930 PC 188 : ILR 54 Bom 495 : (1930) 57 IA 194.
2588. Punchanan v Shib Chandar, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 936; Balaram v Ramchandra, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 922.
2589. Setrucherla v Maharaja of Jeypur, (1919) 46 IA 151 : (1919) ILR 42 Mad 813.
2590. Debendra v Amarenda, AIR 1955 Cal 159.
2591. Ramanathan Chettiar v Narayanan Chettiar, AIR 1955 Mad 629.
2592. Harmindar Singh v Balbir Singh, AIR 1957 Punj 214 : (1957) ILR Punj 1032.
2593. B Sunder Lal v B Gur Saran Lal, AIR 1938 Oudh 65.

[s 17.8] Courts

Courts in this section mean courts to which the Code of Civil Procedure applies.[2594]

[s 17.9] High Courts

This section does not apply to high courts in the exercise of their original civil jurisdiction. See section 120 and notes to section 16, "High Courts".

[S 18] Place of institution of suit where local limits of jurisdiction of Courts are uncertain.—(1) Where it is alleged to be uncertain within the local limits of the jurisdiction of which of two or more Courts any immovable property is situate, any one of those Courts may, if satisfied that there is ground for the alleged uncertainty, record a statement to that effect and thereupon proceed to entertain and dispose of any suit relating to that property, and its decree in the suit shall have the same effect as if the property were situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction:

Provided that the suit is one with respect to which the Court is competent as regards the nature and value of the suit to exercise jurisdiction.

(2) Where a statement has not been recorded under sub-section (1), and an objection is taken before an Appellate or Revisional Court that a decree or order in a suit relating to such property was made by a court not having jurisdiction where the property is situate, the Appellate or Revisional Court shall not allow the objection unless in its opinion there was, at the time of the institution of the suit, no reasonable ground for uncertainty as to the Court having jurisdiction with respect thereto and there has been a consequent failure of justice.

SYNOPSIS

[s 18.1]	Uncertainty of Local Limits of Jurisdiction	458	[s 18.3]	Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It	459
[s 18.2]	"And there has been a consequent failure of justice"	458

[s 18.1] Uncertainty of Local Limits of Jurisdiction

The uncertainty which legislature had in view was the alteration of boundaries of fluvial action.[2595] The absence of a notification of the boundaries of a district was held to create a reasonable uncertainty.[2596]

[s 18.2] "And there has been a consequent failure of justice"

These have been added in order to further restrict the taking of technical objections as to jurisdiction. Alla Ditta v Abdul Qadir[2597] is an instance of an objection to jurisdiction being disallowed although no statement was recorded as required by sub-section (1).

2594. Setrucherla v Maharaja of Jeypur, (1919) 42 Mad 813; Nrisingha v Rajuta, AIR 1936 PC 189 : (1936) 63 IA 311 : (1934) ILR 15 Pat 567.
2595. Mr Scoble's speech, Legislative Council, 10 March 1888.
2596. Shibu Haldar v Gupi Sundari, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 449.
2597. Alla Ditta v Abdul Qadir, (1901) PR 1, p 5.

[s 18.3] Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes under section 11 under the same heading.

[S 19] Suits for compensation for wrongs to person or movables.—Where a suit is for compensation for wrong done to the person or to movable property, if the wrong was done within the local limits of the jurisdiction of one Court and the defendant resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another Court, the suit may be instituted at the option of the plaintiff in either of the said Courts.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A, residing in Delhi beats B in Calcutta. B may sue A either in Calcutta or in Delhi.

(b) A, residing in Delhi, publishes in Calcutta statements defamatory of B. B may sue A either in Calcutta or in Delhi.

SYNOPSIS

[s 19.1]	Scope of Section	459	[s 19.4]	Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It	461
[s 19.2]	Wrong	459
[s 19.3]	Suits Against Government	460

[s 19.1] Scope of Section

Section 16 refers to suits for immovable property which have to be filed in the local jurisdiction. Section 20 refers to personal actions such as action in tort or contract, where jurisdiction depends upon the residence of the defendant or the accrual of the cause of action. Section 20 overlaps this section which gives an option where the cause of action accrues in the jurisdiction of one court and the defendant resides in the jurisdiction of another court. The section is limited to actions in torts committed in India and to defendants residing or carrying on business or personally working for gain in India.[2598] It excludes suits for an injunction and suits in respect of torts committed outside India. Such suits fall, where the defendant is resident in India, not under this section, but under section 20.

Section 19 applies only where the wrong takes place (and the place of wrong is not the same where defendant resides). The suit can be filed at the place where the wrong takes place or at the place where defendant resides, or works for gain, or carries on business.[2599]

[s 19.2] Wrong

Wrong means a tort or actionable wrong, i.e., an act which is legally wrongful as prejudicially affecting a legal right of the plaintiff;[2600] but, it must be a tort affecting the plaintiff's person, or his reputation as in the illustrations, or his movable property; for torts affecting immovable property such as trespass or nuisance or infringement of easement fall under section 16(e). Likewise, when the tort for which the claim for compensation is made is malicious prosecution, the suit will fall within the section only when the injury resulting therefrom is to the person or 2598. Govindan Nair v Achutha Menon, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 433.

2599. Escorts Ltd v Tejpal Singh Sisodia, 2019 SCC OnLine (Del) 7607 : LNIND 2019 DEL 851.
2600. Templeton v Laurie, (1900) 2 Bom LR 244.

to reputation.[2601] Where a vendor of goods continued in possession thereof after sale, a suit by the purchaser for damages for non-delivery of goods is not a suit for wrong done to property within section 19 but one for damages for breach of contract and must be instituted under section 20 in the court within whose jurisdiction the defendant resides or the cause of action has arisen wholly or in part.[2602]

The plaintiff may sue either where the defendant resides or the wrong was committed.[2603] If the wrong takes place in the jurisdiction where defendant resides, then the plaintiff has no option but to prefer suit where defendant resides.[2604] A wrong may, however, consist of a series of acts and it is sometimes not easy to specify the place where it was committed. Thus, in a case from Burma,[2605] the defendant at Pyapon wrongfully obtained a magistrate's order for the seizure of plaintiff's boats at Rangoon and it was held that the Rangoon court had jurisdiction as the wrong was done at Rangoon. In an action for malicious prosecution, the court within whose jurisdiction the plaintiff was served with the summons in the criminal case instituted against him has jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The reason given is that though such service is not part of the cause of action for such a suit, the essence of malicious prosecution is the malicious abuse of the process of the court, viz, service of the summons. Hence, the court within whose jurisdiction such abuse has taken place can entertain such a suit under this section;[2606] but it is only at either of the two places mentioned in the section that the suit lies.[2607] The High Court of Bombay, however, has extended the meaning of the words "wrong done" to include not only the place where the wrong was done but also the place where its consequences occurred. Hence, a plaintiff may also file his suit at the place where damage of the wrong was sustained.[2608] According to the Gauhati High Court, the expression "wrong done", in section 19, covers not only the act which caused the wrong, but also the effect of the act.[2609] However, a tribunal is constituted under section 165 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, for the purpose of adjudicating upon claims for compensation in respect of accidents involving the death of, or bodily injury to, persons arising out of the use of motor vehicles or damage to any property of a third party. Section 165 does not authorise such a tribunal to adjudicate upon any claim for damages to property of the insured or the 1st party.[2610]

The provisions of Indian Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, are supplemental in addition to the rights of the plaintiff to claim damages under the ordinary civil law.[2611]

[s 19.3] Suits Against Government

The word "resides" refers only to natural persons. The words "carries on business" refer to commercial business. The section, therefore, does not apply to suits against the government for

---

2601. Gokuldas v Baldev Das, AIR 1961 Mys 188.
2602. Misrilal v Moda, (1951) ILR Raj 662.
2603. Haveli Shah v Painda Khan, AIR 1926 Cal 88 : (1926) 31 Cal WN 174; Jabar Deb v National Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 Gau 143 (DB).
2604. Escorts Ltd v Tejpal Singh Sisodia, 2019 SCC OnLine (Del) 7607 : LNIND 2019 DEL 851.
2605. Re Ma Myity Shwe Tha, (1917) 3 LBR 164.
2606. Khandchand v Harumal, (1964) 66 Bom LR 829.
2607. Sreepathi Hosiery Mills v Chitra Knitting Co, AIR 1977 Mad 258 : (1977) Mad LJ 222.
2608. State v Sarvodaya Industries, AIR 1975 Bom 197 : (1974) Mah LJ 966.
2609. State of Meghalaya v Jyotsna Das, AIR 1991 Gau 96.
2610. Jabar Deb v National Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 Gau 143 : 2006 (6) AIR Bom R 1002 (NOC) (DB) (Agartala Bench).
2611. Pratap Singh v Gurdial Kaur, AIR 1999 P&H 86.

damages for a tort where the tort is committed outside the jurisdiction. Such suits can only lie in the court of the place where the tort is committed.[2612]

[s 19.4] Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes to section 11 under the same heading.

[S 20] Other suits to be instituted where defendants reside or cause of action arises.—Subject to the limitations aforesaid, every suit shall be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction—

(a) the defendant, or each of the defendants where there are more than one, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain; or

(b) any of the defendants, where there are more than one, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, provided that in such case either the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution: or

(c) the cause of action, wholly or in part, arises.

[2613][* * *]

[2614][Explanation.]—A corporation shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in [2615]India or, in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office, at such place.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A is a tradesman in Calcutta. B carries on business in Delhi. B, by his agent in Calcutta, buys goods of A and request A to deliver them to the East Indian Railway Company. A delivers the goods accordingly in Calcutta. A may sue B for the price of the goods either in Calcutta, where the cause of action has arisen, or in Delhi, where B carries on business.

(b) A resides at Shimla, B at Calcutta and C at Delhi. A, B and C being together at Benaras, B and C make a joint promissory note payable on demand and deliver it to A. A may sue B and C at Benaras, where the cause of action arose. He may also sue them at Calcutta, where B resides, or at Delhi where C resides; but in each of these cases, if the non-resident defendant objects, the suit cannot proceed without the leave of the Court.

SYNOPSIS

[s 20.1] Legislative Changes 462
[s 20.2] "Subject to the limitations aforesaid" ... 462
[s 20.3] High Courts 463
[s 20.4] Scope and Principle of the Section 463
[s 20.4.1] Defendant 464
[s 20.4.2] "Actually and Voluntarily Resides" 464
[s 20.4.3] "Dwells" Within the Meaning of Clause 12 of Letters Patent 468
[s 20.4.4] "Carries on business" 469
[s 20.4.5] Government and Railways 471

2612. Govindarajulu v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 Mad 689 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 449.
2613. Explanation I omitted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 7 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
2614. Substituted for "Explanation II" by Ibid.
2615. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 3 for "the States" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

[s 20.4.6] Place of Residence or Work of Plaintiff..... 473
[s 20.5] Old Explanation I, Temporary Residence 473
[s 20.6] Section 16(c) and Section 20—Choice of Court..... 474
[s 20.7] Section 16(d) and Section 20—Choice of Court..... 474
[s 20.8] Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It..... 474
[s 20.9] Leave of the Court 474
[s 20.10] Acquiesce 475
[s 20.11] "Personally works for gain"..... 476
[s 20.12] Cause of Action..... 476
[s 20.13] Cause of Action in Writs..... 479
[s 20.14] Cause of Action in Suits on Contracts..... 480
[s 20.14.1] Making of a Contract..... 482
[s 20.14.2] Termination 485
[s 20.14.3] Performance..... 485
[s 20.15] Cause of Action in Other Suits 488
[s 20.16] Section 20 (c) and Article 226 (2) of the Constitution of India..... 493
[s 20.17] Contract of Agency..... 493
[s 20.18] Place Where Money Is Expressly or Impliedly Payable..... 494
[s 20.19] The Debtor Must Find His Creditor..... 495
[s 20.20] Negotiable Instruments..... 498
[s 20.21] Bill of Lading 500
[s 20.22] Partnership..... 501
[s 20.23] Suit on Foreign Judgment..... 502
[s 20.24] Place of Suing in Suits to Set Aside the Decree on the Ground of Fraud..... 502
[s 20.25] Explanation: Suit Against Corporation 503
[s 20.26] Suit Against Non-resident Foreigners..... 505
[s 20.27] Agreement as to the Choice of Court 507
[s 20.28] Agreement as to Choice of Foreign Court 511
[s 20.29] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Construction of Ouster Clause 512
[s 20.30] Agreement as to Choice of Court-ignoring of Ouster Clause..... 514
[s 20.31] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Jurisdiction Cannot Be Conferred upon a Court Which Lacks It..... 515
[s 20.32] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Effect on Third Party 516
[s 20.33] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Mandatory in Nature..... 516
[s 20.34] Choice of Court—Invoice, Insurance Policy, Lottery, Purchase Order, etc. Containing Printed Clause..... 516
[s 20.35] Notice Under Section 80..... 518

[s 20.1] Legislative Changes

The Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 substituted the words "every suit" for the words "all other suits". The Code of Civil Procedure of 1908 added the words "wholly or in part" in clause (c). The 1908 Code of Civil Procedure also deleted Explanation III to section 17 of the 1882 Code which related to cause of action in cases of contracts. That was done on account of the words "wholly or in part" having been inserted in clause (c). See notes below "Cause of Action in Suits on Contracts". The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976) has omitted Explanation I which provided:

> Where a person has a permanent dwelling at one place and also a temporary residence at another place, he shall be deemed to reside at both places in respect of any cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary residence.

With the omission of Explanation I, Explanation II has remained the only Explanation and has accordingly, been renumbered as "Explanation".

[s 20.2] "Subject to the limitations aforesaid"

Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure enacts the rule as to the forums in all cases not falling within the limitations of sections 15 to 19 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, as is made clear by the opening words "Subject to the limitations aforesaid" appearing in section 20.[2616]

2616. Ranjana Nagpal v Devi Ram, AIR 2002 H P 166.

"Subject to the limitations aforesaid" makes it clear that it is a residuary provision and covers those cases not falling within sections 15 to 19 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.[2617] If the torts take place outside India, then the provision of section 20 would apply. Moreover, the court said that the expression "at such place" which falls under Explanation to section 20 and the word "or" suggests that if the case falls within the later part of the Explanation, i.e., where the defendant does not have a sole office but has a principal office at one place and also have a subordinate office at another place, the court within whose jurisdiction it has subordinate office alone shall have jurisdiction "in respect of the cause of action".[2618]

The limitations are the pecuniary and other limitations referred to in section 16. (See note under the same heading below that section.) The former section was a residuary section referring to "all other suits" and as such was held to be subject to section 19.[2619] The present section overlaps section 19 and is subject to section 16 and by implication to section 15. Therefore, a suit involving adjudication of title to land situated wholly outside the City of Calcutta cannot be instituted in the original side of the High Court of Calcutta, even though the cause of action might have arisen within its limits.[2620]

[s 20.3] High Courts

Section 120 provides that the section is not to apply to high courts exercising their original civil jurisdiction.[2621]

[s 20.4] Scope and Principle of the Section

Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of section 20 are independent of each other.[2622]

This is a general section embracing all personal actions. At common law, actions are either personal or real. Personal actions are also called transitory because they may occur anywhere, such as actions for tort to persons or to movable property or suits on contracts. Real actions are actions against the res or property and are called local because they must be brought in the forum where the immovable property is situated. An action may also be a mixed action being partly real and partly personal. Torts to immovable property such as trespass and nuisance are mixed actions and are referred to in section 16(e). Otherwise, section 16 deals with real and local actions, while sections 19 and 20 deal with personal or transitory actions. Thus, a suit for a declaration that certain documents are void as having been obtained fraudulently and for injunction restraining the defendant from using them is one of the personal reliefs falling under this section and not under section 16(d) as it is not for determining any right to or interest in an immovable property though such property is the subject matter of the impugned documents.[2623] The principle underlying section 20(a) and section 20(b) is that the suit is to be instituted at the place where the defendant can defend the suit without undue trouble.[2624]

2617. Kalyan Complex v Sha Sumermalji, Civil Revision Petition No. 1724 of 2016, decided on 18 December 2020 (AP High Court).
2618. Sarine Technologies Ltd v Diyora and Bhanderi Corp, 2020 (81) PTC 369 (SC).
2619. Fazlur Rahim v Dwarka Nath, (1903) ILR 30 Cal 453.
2620. Probirendra v State of Bihar, (1959) ILR Cal 767.
2621. Babulal v Caltex (India) Ltd, AIR 1967 Cal 205.
2622. Sucheta Dilip Ghate v Dilip Shantaram Ghate, AIR 2003 Bom 390 (DB).
2623. Shyama Sundari Dasi v Ramapati, AIR 1973 Cal 319.
2624. UOI v Ladulal Jain, AIR 1963 SC 1681.

In Dashrath Rupsingh Rathod, the Apex Court summarised the judicial approach on the issue of jurisdiction under section 20 and stated the position thus:

> A plain reading of Section 20 of the CPC arguably allows the plaintiff a multitude of choices in regard to where it may institute its lis, suit or action. Corporations and partnership firms, and even sole proprietorship concerns, could well be transacting business simultaneously in several cities. If clauses (a) and (b) of Section 20 are to be interpreted disjunctively from clause (c), as the use of the word "or" appears to permit the plaintiff to file the suit at any of the places where the cause of action may have arisen regardless of whether the defendant has even a subordinate office at that place. However, if the defendant's location is to form the fulcrum of jurisdiction, and it has an office also at the place where the cause of action has occurred, it has been held that the plaintiff is precluded from instituting the suit anywhere else. Obviously, this is also because every other place would constitute a forum non conveniens. This Court has harmonised the various hues of the conundrum of the place of suing in several cases and has gone to the extent of laying down that it should be courts' endeavour to locate the place where the cause of action has substantially arisen and reject others where it may have incidentally arisen. … if the defendant corporation has a subordinate office in the place where the cause of action arises, litigation must be instituted at that place alone, regardless of the amplitude of options postulated in Section 20 of the CPC.[2625]

The limitations mentioned in this section exclude the real and mixed actions of section 16 and confine the section to personal actions. The plaintiff has the option of suing either: (i) where the cause of action has accrued; or (ii) in the forum of the defendant, i.e., where the defendant resides, or carries on business or personally works for gain.[2626] This alternative is shown in the illustrations which are taken from two old cases, the first from Winter v Way[2627] and the second from DeSouza v Coles.[2628] Before the jurisdiction of a court can be invoked under this section, it must be shown that the defendant was actually and voluntarily residing or carrying on business or personally working for gain within its jurisdiction at the time of the suit. Neither the fact that he once resided there nor that he became a resident thereafter the suit was instituted would confer jurisdiction on the court if he was not residing there at the commencement of the suit.[2629]

[s 20.4.1] Defendant

The expression "Defendant" includes corporation or a company registered under the Companies Act, 2013.[2630] When the court finds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit on the ground that the defendants are staying outside its territorial jurisdiction, the court should reject the plaint or return it to the plaintiff for presentation before the proper court or dismiss the same in accordance with provisions contained in the Code of Civil Procedure.[2631]

[s 20.4.2] "Actually and Voluntarily Resides"

The word "actually" does not necessarily include domicile and excludes constructive residence. The word "voluntarily" likewise excludes compulsory residence as when a person is

---

2625. Dashrath Rupsingh Rathod v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2014 SC 3519 : (2014) 9 SCC 129 : JT 2014 (9) 81.
2626. Ratnagiri v Syed Vava, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 477; Velupillai Narayan Pillai v N Gopala Pillai, AIR 1974 Ker 27; Ram Rattan v Food Corp of India, AIR 1978 Del 183.
2627. Winter v Way, (1863) 1 Mad HC 200
2628. DeSouza v Coles, (1868) 3 Mad HC 384.
2629. Permnath v Kandoomal, AIR 1958 Punj 361 : (1958) ILR Punj 682; Suraj Karan v Sitaram, AIR 1952 Raj 31.
2630. Patel Roadways Ltd Bombay v Prasad Trading Co, (1991) 4 SCC 270.
2631. Neela Productions, Sreekumar Theatre, Trivandrum v S Kumarswami, AIR 1996 Ker 239.

confined to a particular place. The word "resides" means to make an abode for a considerable time, to dwell permanently or for a length of time, to have a settled abode for a time. The word "actually" means something real and constructive as opposed to speculative. Residence may be legal and technical or actual and physical. If the family of a person lives at one place and he himself lives for the greater part of the time at another place, he has legal residence where his family resides and actual residence where he resides.[2632] The residence contemplated by clauses (a) and (b) is of such a nature as to show that the court in which the defendant is sued is his natural forum. On the other hand, if a person has been continuously residing in a particular place, his temporary absence therefrom will not take away the case out of the scope of clause (a). Also, if a person has a house where he ordinarily resides, the fact that he has made available for himself another house at a different place where he resides in summer, does not mean that he is a permanent resident of that place also.[2633] The fact that a person has a house at the place of his birth but has made a permanent home at another place where he actually resides and carried on his vacation, does not mean that it is the former place where he actually resides.[2634]

The word "resides" is a flexible one and has many shades of meaning but it must take its colour and content from the context in which it appears and cannot be read in isolation. According to Webster's Dictionary, "to reside" has been defined as meaning "to dwell permanently or for any length of time". The expression "resides" brings with it the concept or incidence of some permanency or continuity. The Kerala High Court has held that "Even if there be any confusion of thought on this aspect, the legislature did not evidently want to leave any ambiguity in the expression and that is why the word "resides" was qualified by the expression "actually and voluntarily"."[2635] In the above case, which was a suit for recovery based on pronote, the plaintiff and the defendant were both employed in foreign country and at the time of executing the promissory note, the defendant was in a foreign country. Even at the time of filing of suit, the defendant was in foreign country and not at his permanent residence in India. It was held in the above case that the court in India did not have territorial jurisdiction. However, the defendant had started residing in India permanently. Therefore, it was observed that accepting the plea regarding jurisdiction, even if the plaint were to be returned, it will be presented again before the same in view of changed circumstances regarding defendant's permanent residence. In that view of the matter, the suit was allowed to be disposed of by the same court.[2636]

When the matter was taken to Supreme Court, SB Sinha, J, speaking for the Bench explained the point of law involved in the following words:

> Determination in regard to maintainability of the suit, it is trite, must be made with reference to the date of the institution of the suit. If a cause of action arises at a later date, a fresh suit may lie but that would not mean that the suit which was not maintainable on the date of its institution, unless an exceptional case is made out therefor can be held to have been validly instituted. Discretion, as is well known, cannot be exercised, arbitrarily or capriciously. It must be exercised in accordance with law. When there exists a statute, the question of exercise of jurisdiction which would be contrary to the provisions of the statute would not arise. Application of doctrine of dominus litus is confined only to the cause of action which would fall within Sections 15 to 18 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It will have no application in a case where the provisions of Section 20 thereof is sought to be invoked.[2637]

2632. Mohan Singh v Lajya Ram, AIR 1956 Punj 188.
2633. MSM Buhari v SM Buhari, AIR 1971 Mad 363.
2634. MSM Buhari v SM Buhari, AIR 1971 Mad 363.
2635. Mohanakumaran Nair v Vijayakumaran Nair, AIR 2006 Ker 243 : 2006 (3) Ker LT 293.
2636. Ibid.
2637. Mohanakumaran Nair v Vijayakumaran Nair, AIR 2008 SC 213, p 215 : (2007) 14 SCC 426.

The legislature has used the word "resides" at various places in different contexts in the code. It is sometimes used in a more restricted sense and sometimes in an extended sense; (see section 136 and O XXV, rule 1). The word, therefore, has to be construed according to the intention of the legislature. However, there is no distinction between the word "resides" as used in sections 16, 19 and 20 and the word "dwell" in clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Hence, cases decided on the latter word would be authorities on the construction of the former. The words "actually and voluntarily resides" in clauses (a) and (b) refer to natural and not juristic persons. They have, therefore, no application to government or legal persons like registered companies.

As regards personal actions, residence gives jurisdiction even when the cause of action has arisen outside India.[2638] Thus, a partner could sue in the court at Bulsar for dissolution of partnership commenced and carried on in foreign territory since the defendant partner resided in Bulsar at the time of the institution of the suit.[2639] On the other hand, if the cause of action has arisen within its jurisdiction, a court in India can entertain a suit against a non-resident foreigner.

Where in a suit for damages the telegram was sent from place C by defendant to American Consulate, for deciding cause of action, it was observed that since the defendants were residing at place H, the plaintiff can file suit either at place H or at place C from where telegram was sent.[2640]

The court has no jurisdiction in a suit against a non-resident foreigner on a cause of action which arose wholly outside the Indian territory.[2641] As already stated, the court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit against a foreigner resident within the limits of its jurisdiction in respect of a cause of action that has accrued abroad.[2642] A foreigner is not exempt from the jurisdiction of Indian courts.[2643] If a foreigner resident himself carries on business or personally works for gain, in India, it is clear that he is amenable to the jurisdiction of Indian courts. But what if a foreigner does not reside, or does not himself carry on business or personally work for gain in India, and:

(i) the cause of action arises within the local limits of an Indian court; or

(ii) the cause of action arises outside India but the foreigner carries on business through his agent within the local limits of an Indian court.

As to case (a), it is settled that a non-resident foreigner, who is a subject of a foreign state such as a protected native state before independence may be sued in the court of India if the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of such court.[2644]

Thus, if A, a subject of the native state of Sangli and residing at Sangli, borrows money from B at Belgaum, B may sue A for recovery of money in the Belgaum court, for the cause of action arises at Belgaum. The rule of private international law that a court has no jurisdiction

---

2638. Muthia Chettiar v Shamungham, AIR 1969 SC 552 : (1969) 1 SCR 444 : 1969 (2) SCJ 105.
2639. Ismailji v Ismail, AIR 1921 Bom 460 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 1228; DeSilva v Soosai Pillai, AIR 1954 TC 141.
2640. SC Bose & Co v G Srikanth, AIR 2006 AP 337.
2641. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 297 : (1928) 9 Lah 455.
2642. Ismailiji v Ismail, AIR 1921 Bom 460 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 1228; Bhujbal v Nanheju, (1897) ILR 19 All 450.
2643. Smith v Indian Textile Co, AIR 1927 All 413 : (1927) ILR 49 All 669.
2644. Chunilal Kasturchand v Dundappa Damppa, AIR 1951 Bom 190 : (1950) ILR Bom 640; Ram Ravji v Pralhaddas, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 133; Girdhar v Kassigar, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662; Tadepalli v Nawab Sayed, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 69; Annamalai v Murugasa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 544 : 30 IA 220; Rambhat v Sankar, (1901) 25 Bom 258; Srinivasa v Venkata, (1911) 38 IA 129 : (1911) ILR 34 Mad 257; affirming ILR 29 Mad 239; Swaminathan v Somasundaram, AIR 1938 Mad 731 : (1938) ILR Mad 1080; Neelakanda v Kunju, AIR 1935 Mad 545 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 506.

to entertain a suit against a foreigner who does not reside within its jurisdiction and who has not submitted to it, is subject to the rules of municipal law. A suit is accordingly, maintainable in an Indian court within its jurisdiction.[2645] A decree passed in such a suit, however, would not be enforceable in a foreign court and where the decree is against several defendants, some of whom are residing within the jurisdiction and some others not, it will be executable against all within the state; outside the state it will not be executable against non-resident foreigners.[2646]

As to case (b), the High Court of Bombay in one case held that where no part of the cause of action arose in Bombay, it had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit against a foreigner who did not reside in Bombay, but carried on business through an agent in Bombay;[2647] but this decision was disapproved in the later case of Girdhar v Kassiga.[2648] The point arose in a later case before the Privy Council, but it was left open.[2649] The Madras High Court has held that the expression "carrying on business" in clause 12 of the Letters Patent included carrying on business through an agent in British India by foreigners living outside jurisdiction.[2650] It has been held that a suit for specific performance of an agreement to convey immovable property situated within India could be instituted in the court within whose jurisdiction the properties are situated, wherever the agreement might have been entered into and even when the defendant is a non-resident foreigner.[2651] The question of whether the defendant resides within jurisdiction is relevant only when he is a foreigner. A decree passed by a court against its own citizen who owns a permanent dwelling house at the place is not open to attack on the ground that at the time of the action, he was not actually residing there or submitted to its jurisdiction.[2652] The fortuitous presence of the ship in the Bombay harbour will not entitle the owner to file a limitation action in the absence of any claim being made or apprehended against him or the vessel in that court. Therefore, bringing the ship to the Bombay Port, in order to confer jurisdiction on Bombay High Court, has the character of forum shopping, rather than anything else. The presence of a foreign defendant, who appeared under protest to contest jurisdiction, cannot be considered as conferring jurisdiction on the court to take action. Unless a foreign defendant either resides within jurisdiction or voluntarily appears or has contracted to submit to the jurisdiction of the court, it is not possible to hold that the court will have the jurisdiction against the foreign defendant.[2653] Where the cargo was discharged by the vessel at the Madras port instead of Calcutta port where it was agreed to be discharged, the Madras High Court would have admiralty jurisdiction to decide the suit filed by the owner of goods for damages for breach of court act when the suit was filed at the time when the ship was berthed in the Port of Madras. It cannot be said in such a case that the Madras High Court would have no such jurisdiction as the agreement between parties conferred jurisdiction on the courts in the country where the carrier has his principal place of business namely that of 2645. Narain v Balabadra, AIR 1957 Pat 256.

---

2646. Narasinga Rao v Sankar Saran, AIR 1958 All 775; Maloji Nar Singh Rao v Shankar Saran, affirmed in AIR 1962 SC 1737; Karnataka Films v Official Receiver, Madras, AIR 1952 Mad 481.
2647. Kesowji v Khimji (1888) ILR 12 Bom 507.
2648. Girdhar v Kassiga, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662 (a case under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, section 18).
2649. Annamalai v Murugasa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 544 : 30 IA 220 (a case under section 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, corresponding with section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908).
2650. Janoo v Batchu, AIR 1924 Mad 158 : (1936) 45 Mad LJ 471; dissenting from ILR 12 Bom 507; Girdhar v Kassiga, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662.
2651. Md Yusuf v Subramaniam Chettiar, AIR 1950 Mad 27 : (1949) 2 Mad LJ 735; Panchanan v Tarapada, AIR 1961 Cal 193 : 65 Cal WN 661.
2652. Jhumarla v Tansukrai, AIR 1957 Assam 127.
2653. World Tanker Carrier Corp v SNP Shipping Services Pvt Ltd, (1998) 5 SCC 310.

Canada in the instant case. It was more so when there was no ouster of jurisdiction in respect of other courts.[2654]

A contract was entered into by the plaintiff with a foreign company incorporated in the United States of America for the supply of brass dross of guaranteed 90% of metallic recovery. The foreign company had been carrying on its business in India through agents. The offer for supply was given and a contract signed by an Indian agency on behalf of a foreign company in New Delhi. It was held that a suit against the foreign company can be filed in New Delhi.[2655]

[s 20.4.3] "Dwells" Within the Meaning of Clause 12 of Letters Patent

The dwelling or residence must be of a more or less permanent character. It must be of such a nature as to show that the high court in which a defendant is sued is his natural forum.[2656] Therefore, when the defendant has a permanent dwelling at one place, he cannot be said to "dwell" at a place where he has lodged for a temporary purpose only; eg, to defend a suit brought against him,[2657] or for a change while on leave.[2658]

It has been held by the Supreme Court that the jurisdiction of a court under section 20 is different from its jurisdiction under clause 12 of the Letters Patent, and thus, same considerations would not apply in the determination of jurisdiction of courts under section 20 of the CPC and clause 12 of the Letters Patent. Therefore, the plaintiff did not have an absolute right to bring proceedings in the high court and can only do so with the prior leave of the court.[2659]

Every person is deemed in law to have a dwelling or place of residence, and so if he has no permanent place of residence, he will be deemed to "dwell" where he is actually staying at the time. Thus, where a defendant, who was a political agent in Kolhapur, residing in a government building there, sold his furniture and other effects and left Kolhapur on a year's furlough, and while en route to England stayed in Bombay for three days before sailing, he was held to dwell in Bombay so as to give jurisdiction to the high court in a suit instituted against him during his stay in Bombay.[2660] In a Calcutta case, a racing man, who had come to Calcutta for a month for racing, was held to dwell in Calcutta for he had no other residence at the time when the suit was instituted against him.[2661]

On the other hand, a person may have more than one permanent place of residence at the same time. If so, he will be deemed to "dwell" in any one of the places where he is actually staying for the time being, and he may be sued in that place. In Order v Skinner,[2662] the defendant, who had a dwelling place in Mussoorie, was held under the circumstances of the case, to have another dwelling place in Bilaspur. Similarly, where a defendant spent his time alternately in Calcutta and the mofussil, it was held that he could be sued in Calcutta where he was residing at 2654. Supreme Paper Mills Ltd v Owner and other persons Interest in the Motor Vessel "ARABELLA", AIR 1999 Mad 118.

---

2655. Nandan Iron and Metal Industries v Fensty Inc, AIR 1992 Del 364.
2656. Goswami v Goverdhanlalji, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 541 (SC); in appeal (1894) ILR 18 Bom 290; in appeal to PC (1894) ILR 18 Bom 294; but see Srinivasa v Venkata, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 239; SC on appeal (1911) 38 IA 129, 139.
2657. Emritloll v Kidd, (1864) 2 Hyd 119.
2658. Kavasji v Wallace, (1863) 1 Bom HC 113; Kissun Singh v Sturt, (1870) 5 Mad HC 471.
2659. Food Corp of India v Evdomen Corp, AIR 1999 SC 2352 : (1999) 2 SCC 446; see also full bench decision by Madras High Court in Duro Flex Pvt Ltd v Duroflex Sittings System, AIR 2015 Mad 30.
2660. Fernandez v Wray, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 176.
2661. Morris v Baumgarten, (1865) Coryton 152; Mayhew v Tullock, (1872) 4 NWPHCR 25.
2662. Order v Skinner, (1881) ILR 3 All 91 : 7 IA 196.

the time of institution of the suit;[2663] but a person who has been living and carrying on business in Bombay for 20 years cannot be said to be residing at Ahmedabad because he has a family house in Ahmedabad which he visits occasionally; in such a case, Ahmedabad cannot be said to be one of his places of residence.[2664] Where an Acharya (Hindu head-priest), who had his permanent place of residence at Nathdwar, where he had been installed on the gadi in 1879, came to Bombay for the first time in April 1889 at the invitation of his devotees and stayed in a house which he had purchased in 1888 for occasional residence and exchanged visits with his followers, it was held in a suit that could be brought against him in Bombay in May 1889 that he did not "dwell" in Bombay.[2665] Where a person who was domiciled and resided in Mysore left his house in charge of a servant, and hired a house in Madras to which he brought his wife and family, and apprenticed himself for a year to a vakil in Madras, it was held in a suit brought against him in Madras some months after his residence there that inasmuch as he had taken up his abode in Madras, meaning to remain there for several months, and was actually living there when the suit was instituted, he "dwelled" in Madras within the meaning of clause 12 of the Letters Patent.[2666]

[s 20.4.4] "Carries on business"

These words also occur in clause 12 of the Letters Patent, and the decisions under that clause apply equally to cases arising under sections 16, 19 and 20. The word "business" is used in a restricted sense[2667] and is limited to commercial business. The expression "carries on business" is intended to relate to business in which a man may contract debts and is liable to be sued by persons having business transactions with him.[2668] In the case of a work's contract, the place where the contract was executed and the place where it was performed would both give jurisdiction.[2669] A Hindu priest who receives offerings from his followers cannot be said to carry on business, although the offerings are on such a large scale that he employs servants to collect and keep an account of them.[2670] A zamindari business has been held not to be the kind of business contemplated by this section.[2671] A person may be carrying on business at a place where he has no office or regular establishment. Thus, a person residing in the mofussil who goes once or twice a week from the mofussil to a friend's house in Calcutta and does business there will be said to "carry on business" in Calcutta.[2672] The business need not be carried on personally.[2673] The phrase "carries on business" is used as distinct from the phrase "personally works for gain". It does not involve actual presence or personal effort and a man may carry on business in a place through an agent or through a manager or by his servants without having ever gone there. It means having an interest in a business at that place, a voice in what is done, a share in the gain or loss and some control, if not over the actual method of working, 2663. Nishadiney v Kally, (1864) Coryton 24.

---

2664. Ugar Chand v Surajmal, (1900) 2 Bom LR 605; Guranditta Mal v Ram Das, (1916) PR No 112, P 343; Suraj Karan v Sitaram, AIR 1952 Raj 31, Mohan Singh v Lajya-ram, AIR 1956 Punj 188 : (1956) ILR Punj 1299; Mannalal v Paney Chand, AIR 1959 Raj 166 : (1959) ILR Raj 62.
2665. Goswami v Goverdhanlalji, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 541.
2666. Srinivasa v Venkata, (1911) ILR 34 Mad 257 : 38 IA 129; in app from 29 Mad 239.
2667. Daya Narain v Secretary of State, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 256; Govindarajulu v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 Mad 689 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 449.
2668. Goswami v Goverdhanlalji, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 541.
2669. Sarkar & Sarkar v State of West Bengal, AIR 1992 Cal 365.
2670. Goswami v Goverdhanlalji, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 541 (SC).
2671. Nobin Chander v Buroda, (1875) 19 WR 341; Anonymous case (1875) 23 WR 223.
2672. Greschunder v Collins, (1864) 2 Hyde 79.
2673. Muthaya v Allan, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 209; Shivbhagwan v Onkarmal, AIR 1952 Bom 365.

at any rate upon the existence of the business.[2674] The expression "carries on business", has the connotation of permanence and regularity in order to distinguish it from an isolated act or activity. The amplitude of the expression "carries on business" cannot, however, be restricted, merely because it is used in conjunction with the words "personally works for gain". Nor is it possible to read into the expression "carries on business", the element of gain or of profit in the activity that is carried on. The expression is much wider than what the expression in normal parlance connotes, because of the ambit of a civil action within the meaning of section 9 of the Code;[2675] but it is necessary that the following three conditions should concur, namely:

(i) The agent must be a special agent who attends exclusively to the business of the principal and carries it on in the name of the principal and not a general agent who does business for any one that pays him. Thus, a trader in the mofussil who habitually sends grain to Madras for sale by a firm of commission agents who have an independent business of selling goods for others on commission, cannot be said to "carry on business" in Madras.[2676] So, a firm in England, carrying on business in the name of AB & Co, which employs upon the usual terms a Bombay firm carrying on business in the name of CD & Co, to act as the English firm's commission agents in Bombay, does not "carry on business" in Bombay so as to render itself liable to be sued in Bombay.[2677]

(ii) The person acting as agent must be an agent in the strict sense of the term. The manager of a joint Hindu family is not an "agent" within the meaning of this condition.[2678]

(iii) To constitute "carrying on business" at a certain place, the essential part of the business must take place in that place. Therefore, a retail dealer who sells goods in the mofussil cannot be said to "carry on business" in Bombay merely because he has an agent in Bombay to import and purchase his stock for him. He cannot be said to carry on business in Bombay unless his agent made sales there on his behalf.[2679] A Calcutta firm that employs an agent at Amritsar who has no power to receive money or to enter into contracts, but only collects orders which are forwarded to and dealt with in Calcutta, cannot be said to do business in Amritsar;[2680] but, a Bombay firm that has a branch office at Amritsar, where orders are received subject to confirmation by the head office at Bombay, and where money is paid and disbursed, is carrying on business at Amritsar and is liable to be sued at Amritsar.[2681] Similarly, a life assurance company which carries on business in Bombay and employs an agent at Madras who acts merely as a Post Office forwarding proposals and sending moneys cannot be said to do business in Madras.[2682] Where a contract of insurance was made at place A and the insurance amount was also payable there, a suit filed at place B where the insurance company had a branch office was held

---

2674. Kirpa Ram v Mangal Sen, AIR 1922 All 367 : (1921) 19 All LJ 696.
2675. Bakhtawar Singh Balkrishna v UOI, AIR 1983 Del 201.
2676. Chinnammal v Tulukannatammal, (1866) 6 Mad HCR 146.
2677. Khimji v Forbes, (1871) 8 Bom HC 102.
2678. Annamalai v Murugasa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 544 : 30 IA 220.
2679. Framji v Hormasji, (1865) 1 Bom HC 220.
2680. Hiranand v Gurmukh Rai, AIR 1923 Lah 427; Md Kasim v Hanuman Industries, AIR 1956 TC 200.
2681. Kanshi Ram v Dule Rai, AIR 1933 Lah 11 (1933) 14 Lah 42.
2682. Pachaimmal v Hindustan CI Society, AIR 1941 Mad 270 : (1941) ILR Mad 109; John v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 1929 Mad 347 : (1928) 56 Mad LJ 299.

not maintainable.[2683] Where the plaintiff instituted a suit at Kozhikode alleging that its account with the defendant Bank at its Calcutta branch had been wrongly debited and it was claimed that that court had jurisdiction as the defendant had a branch there, it was held that the existence of a branch was not part of the cause of action and that the Kozhikode court therefore, had no jurisdiction;[2684] but, when a company though incorporated outside India gets itself registered in India and does business in a place in India through its agent authorised to accept insurance proposals, and to pay claims, and to do other business incidental to the work of agency, the company carries on business at the place of business in India.[2685]

[s 20.4.5] Government and Railways

Regarding the words "carries on business" in clauses (a) and (b), there was at one time a conflict of judicial opinion as to whether they can apply to government. Some decisions drew a distinction between the activities of a government attributable to its sovereign character such as war, defence and the like and the commercial activities in which it engages like any of its subjects and held that in respect of the latter, the suit relating to such activities could be instituted in the court within whose jurisdiction the head office is situated.[2686] A number of other decisions, on the other hand, held that though this distinction may be material on the question of liability of the government, it had no relevance on the question of the forum wherein the government could be sued, that it could not be said of the government that it carries on business within the meaning of section 20 and therefore a suit against the government could be instituted where the cause of action arose wholly or in part.[2687] The controversy is set at rest by the Supreme Court in UOI v Sri Ladulal Jain[2688] where it stated that the principle underlying clauses (a) and (b) is that the suit should be instituted at a place where the defendant would be in a position to defend the action against it effectively and without trouble and that the running of railways by the government was a business activity and that accordingly, the court of the subordinate judges at Gauhati within whose jurisdiction the railway has its headquarters had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The mere fact, however, that the particular railway run by the government has its headquarters within the jurisdiction of the court is not enough. In order to attract the jurisdiction of that particular court, the plaintiff would have to show that the railway administration in respect whereof the liability arose is the one to which liability can be fastened by virtue of the provisions of the Railways Act, 1890. If there is a claim against the Union of India in respect of loss which occurred either at the dispatching station or the destination station or along the railway line, such a claim can be entertained against the Union of India, although the place where the loss occurred is outside 2683. Bharat Insurance Co v Wasudev, AIR 1956 Nag 203 : (1956) ILR Nag 494.

---

2684. Nedungadi Bank Ltd v Central Bank of India, AIR 1961 Ker 50 : (1960) ILR Ker 1444.
2685. Guardian Assurance v Shiva Mangal, AIR 1937 All 208 : (1937) ILR All 234.
2686. Pratap Chandra Biswas v UOI, AIR 1956 Assam 85 : (1956) ILR Assam 51; Golab Roy v Secy of State, (1941) ILR 2 Cal 160; unreported judgement of the Madras High Court in CRP 1573 and 1574 of 1950; discussed in Azizuddin v UOI, AIR 1955 Mad 346 : (1955) ILR Mad 912.
2687. Daya Narayana v Secy of State, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 256; Govindarajulu v Secy of State, AIR 1927 Mad 689 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 449; Calcutta Motor Cycle Co v UOI, AIR 1954 Bom 129 : (1953) ILR Bom 1157; Lakmichand v State of Punjab, AIR 1954 Punj 181 : (1954) ILR Punj 613; Achut Anant v GG-in-Council, AIR 1955 Cal 331; Azizuddin v UOI, AIR 1959 Cal 273; Elias & Co v State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 Cal 247; Trilokchand v Dominion of India, AIR 1959 Cal 281 : (1958) 62 Cal WN 900; Kalwani v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 430 : (1960) 64 Cal WN 765; Badri Narain v Excise Commissioner, AIR 1962 AP 382 : (1962) 1 Andh WR 133.
2688. UOI v Sri Ladulal Jain, AIR 1963 SC 1681 : (1964) 1 SCJ 101.

the jurisdiction of the court, provided the Union of India is carrying on administration of the railways within its jurisdiction.[2689] Conversely, if the headquarters of a railway administration are situated within the jurisdiction of the court where the suit is filed, the jurisdiction of that court would be attracted if the cause of action has arisen wholly or in part within the local limits of its jurisdiction.[2690]

Where a suit is governed by section 80, Indian Railways Act, 1890, the forum has to be determined solely on the basis of that section. The provisions of section 20, Code of Civil Procedure or of section 18, Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, do not apply.[2691] Under section 80, Indian Railways Act, 1890, a suit for compensation for loss of life of, or personal injury to, a passenger, or for damage, deterioration or non-delivery of animals or goods, could be instituted at the court having jurisdiction: (i) over the place at which the passenger obtained his pass or purchased his ticket or the animals or goods were delivered for carriage, as the case may be; or (ii) over the place in which the destination station lies; or (iii) loss, injury, destruction, damage or deterioration occurred.[2692] In a Bombay case, a suit was filed for damages against the railway administration for the loss of goods in transit. Another party was also made defendant and leave of the court was obtained under section 20(b) for filing the suit in the particular court, even though that court did not have jurisdiction against the railway administration under section 80, Indian Railways Act, 1890. It was held that while section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a general provision for suits, section 80, Indian Railways Act, 1890, is a special provision for railways and therefore, permission granted under section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure would be of no avail in the circumstances.[2693] Contract was entered into with the Divisional Superintendent of Railways at Lucknow. Lucknow being in Northern Railways and headquarters of Northern Railways being at Delhi, the suit could be filed against the Union of India in Delhi. The contract was for building or maintenance of the staff quarters which are all necessary and incidental adjuncts to the business of running of railways. The running of railways does not mean only the transporting of passengers and goods, but would also inevitably include within it all the works like building quarters, laying down rails and all acts connected with the running of the railways.[2694] The impugned orders of the Central Government (at Delhi) fixed the selling price and retention price of aluminium. The petitioner company, with its head office at Calcutta, alleged that it had suffered loss owing to such fixation. It was held that the cause of action arose, in part at Calcutta and the Calcutta High Court could entertain the writ petition.[2695] A writ petition is not entertained unless the petitioner comes with a case that he has been prejudiced by state action. In this case, the state action had caused prejudice at Calcutta.[2696] Certain charitable endowments were created by a will. The will related to a few temples within the East Thanjore District. Some matter relating to the endowment had been disposed of by the Deputy Commissioner. The Commissioner had suo moto reopened the matter. A suit to set aside the order of the commissioner was filed in the City Civil Court at Madras, in which the office of the Commissioner was situated. An objection to territorial jurisdiction of the court was raised in the written statement. It was held that only the subordinate judge who had got jurisdiction over the properties situated in Sirkali Taluka (which was dealt with by the Will), could entertain the suit. Consequently, the City

---

2689. Jagannath v UOI, AIR 1966 Cal 540.
2690. Maniklal v UOI, AIR 1966 MP 243.
2691. Assam Cold Storage Co v UOI, AIR 1971 Assam 69 dissented from.
2692. Ratanlal Adukia v UOI, (1989) 3 SCC 537.
2693. South Eastern Railway Administration v Govind Lal, AIR 1984 Bom 223.
2694. Kuldeep Singh v UOI, AIR 1986 Del 56 (FB).
2695. Advocate General v MP Khaer Industries, AIR 1980 SC 846 distinguished.
2696. UOI v Hindustan Aluminium Corp, AIR 1983 Cal 307.

Civil Court, Madras had no jurisdiction.[2697] Courts were concerned with the central control and management of the business concerned. Where the business is not of a commercial nature, the suit must be filed against the government at the place where the cause of action arises, wholly or in part. The expression "business" (as used in section 20) means commercial business and not duties or functions of a sovereign character. The place where the state is carrying on business, is a pure question of fact. The test is: what is the nature and purpose of the activity in question? If it is commercial in character, the suit can be filed: (i) at the principal place of business or principal office; and (ii) also at the place where the cause of action arises, wholly or in part.[2698] A construction contract between the plaintiff and the state government, provided that the chief engineer of the state government would have control in the matter. The chief engineer's office was at Jaipur, which was also the headquarters of the state government. It was held that the suit should be filed at Jaipur. The suit was against both the state government and the chief engineer. The main object of section 20 is that the defendants should be able to defend the suit without undue trouble.[2699] The courts at Delhi cannot be said to have the jurisdiction in regard to all disputes relating to all contracts executed by the Union of India simply because the Union of India has its "office" in Delhi. It is not possible to accept the view that Union of India carried on business or worked for gain through the Director of Supplies and Disposals, New Delhi to confer jurisdiction on the courts at Delhi. The expression "voluntarily resides" in section 20 is significant. It necessarily refers to natural persons and not to legal entities. Likewise, the expression "carries on business" or "personally works for gain" do not refer to functions carried on by the Union of India in discharge of its executing powers conferred by the Constitution of India.[2700]

[s 20.4.6] Place of Residence or Work of Plaintiff

Unlike defendant(s), the place of residence or business or work of the plaintiff is immaterial to ascertain the jurisdiction of the court. It is another matter if the plaintiff and defendant are residing or working for gain or doing business within the same locality or the territorial jurisdiction of the same court. But in that case also it is the dwelling place, business place or working place of the defendant which attracts the jurisdiction of the court with regard to dispute between the parties pertaining to movable properties, contract, etc. The point is that it is the place of residence, business and work of the defendant(s) which has a bearing on the question of jurisdiction of the court under sections 20(a) and (b) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Where the suit is filed at place G, suit property is situated at place S and the defendant also resides at place S. In such a case, territorial jurisdiction of the trial court extends to place S, also the application filed by the defendant seeking hearing of the suit at place S, cannot be rejected on the ground that the plaintiff resides at place G.[2701]

[s 20.5] Old Explanation I, Temporary Residence

The Calcutta High Court on the strength of Explanation I as it stood before its omission held in a case where the defendant had a permanent residence at Gopalganj but resided at

---

2697. Commissioner, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Dept, Madras v Govindrajan, AIR 1982 Mad 417.
2698. Gupta Sanitary Stores v UOI, AIR 1985 Del 122.
2699. Hotchand Moolchand v Stage, AIR 1987 Raj 154.
2700. Bakhtawar Singh Bal Kishan v UOI, (1998) 2 SCC 293.
2701. Gopal Jat v Gheesa Lal, AIR 2003 Raj 312.

Calcutta where he carried on business that a suit in which the cause of action arose at Calcutta could be brought in the Court at Gopalganj.[2702] Thus, Explanation I was relevant only in relation to the Court having jurisdiction where the defendant had a dwelling elsewhere.[2703] Under the deeming provision in Explanation I, if a person had a permanent dwelling at one place and a temporary residence elsewhere he was said to reside at both the places. Under the main part of the section, a suit can be filed (i) where the defendant actually and voluntarily resides or (ii) where he carries on business or (iii) where he personally works for gain or (iv) where the cause of action arises wholly or in part. By providing deemed residence at both the places, was the object to extend the scope of the operative part of the section? If that was so, there was no point in providing a further requirement of the cause of action arising at the place of his temporary residence. If the object was as the Madras High Court said to give jurisdiction to the Court where the permanent dwelling is situated, the requirement of the cause of action arising at the temporary residence was unnecessary. The deeming double residence did not also specify that both were places of his actual and voluntary residence so as to be in harmony with the main part of the section. Explanation I has thus been rightly omitted.

[s 20.6] Section 16(c) and Section 20—Choice of Court

See notes to section 16 under the same heading.

[s 20.7] Section 16(d) and Section 20—Choice of Court

See notes to section 16 under the same heading.

[s 20.8] Judgment of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes under section 11 under the same heading. See notes under heading "Contract Providing for Place of Suing", under section 10 (supra), and "Agreement as to Choice of Court", under section 20 (infra).

[s 20.9] Leave of the Court

Leave of court is required when some of the defendants are within and others outside jurisdiction. Thus, a suit against the members of a firm, one of whom resides within jurisdiction, may be instituted with leave of the court as the non-resident defendants;[2704] and if the court refuses leave, the suit cannot proceed unless the non-resident defendants acquiesce.[2705] Goods kept at a place, A, were damaged by fire. Goods were insured at A, with companies B and C. Claim was filed in the court at A. Court at A had jurisdiction against B to entertain the claim, but not against C. Court at A can grant leave under section 20(b) to file a claim against C.[2706] Plaintiff filed a suit for the recovery of certain amounts against six defendants. The sixth defendant was a bank, a body corporate incorporated in West Germany and it had a branch at Bombay. By an application under section 20(b), leave was sought by the plaintiff to institute the suit against the sixth defendant. It was held by the trial court that the leave sought for could not be given arbitrarily, especially when the defendant not residing within

---

2702. Sitnath v Jatindra, (1930) 57 Cal 65, (30) AC 347.
2703. MSM Buhari v SM Buhari, 1971 AM 363.
2704. Alagappa v Annamalai, (1916) 35 IC 74.
2705. Mahomedbhai v Adamji, AIR 1922 Bom 152 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 229.
2706. Firm Babu Lal, Mandi v New India Assurance Co Ltd, New Delhi AIR 1980 Raj 126.

the territorial jurisdiction of the court happened to be the main defendant. On revision, it was held that allegations in the plaint showed that the plaintiff was seeking a decree against the sixth defendant in the alternative only. In such a situation, it could not be said at that stage that the sixth defendant was the main defendant. All the five defendants and the plaintiff were carrying on business at Delhi. Evidence to be produced on their behalf was available mostly in Delhi. It was, therefore, in the interest of justice to grant the leave sought for, so as to avoid hardship to the plaintiff and to the five defendants.[2707] Leave may be given even after institution of the suit,[2708] and even at the stage of appeal.[2709] There is an obligation upon the court before granting leave to consider the position of non-resident defendants who do not appear as well as to consider the objections of those who appear, and especially, when they are the real contestants.[2710] Non-residents include even residents outside India.[2711] The merits of an order refusing leave under section 20(b), cannot be attacked in an appeal from an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper court.[2712]

[s 20.10] Acquiesce

Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 provided that if a defendant, not residing within the jurisdiction, did not apply to the court for a stay of proceedings, he should be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit.[2713] The clause has been omitted from the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. There is no provision for such a presumption also in sections 22–24. Accordingly, the Calcutta High Court held that a defendant could not be deemed to have acquiesced on the ground that he failed to apply for a transfer.[2714] In a divorce petition under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, the defendant had raised objection to territorial jurisdiction in the written statement and issue had also been framed on the said objection. The Madhya Pradesh High Court held regarding the plea that as the objection was not raised about territorial jurisdiction at earliest opportunity, the same cannot be raised at later stage, is intenable.[2715]

However, if a party to the suit has admitted the territorial jurisdiction of a court, he would be estopped from denying it at a later stage on the ground that he could not both, approbate and reprobate.[2716] One defendant carried on business or resided within jurisdiction of the court. Another defendant was not residing or carrying on business or personally working for gain within the jurisdiction of that court. It is only if he acquiesced that the court would have jurisdiction unless leave of court is obtained.[2717]

2707. Bank of India v Mehta Brothers, AIR 1984 Del 18.
2708. Narayan v Secretary of State, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 570.
2709. Dwarakadas v Hanuman Das, AIR 1961 Raj 187 : (1960) ILR Raj 1497; Manoramabai v Ibrahim Khan, AIR 1969 Bom 366.
2710. Dalsukh Nathmal v Motilal, AIR 1938 Ngp 262 : (1940) ILR Nag 502; BG Guttal v RR Diwakar, AIR 1977 Kant 211 : (1977) 1 Kant 287.
2711. Swaminathan v Somasundaram, AIR 1938 Mad 731 : (1938) ILR Mad 1080.
2712. Allan Brothers v Anrui Mal, AIR 1925 Lah 338 : (1925) 7 Lah LJ 68.
2713. Venkata v Krishnasami, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 344; Ramappa v Ganpat, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 81.
2714. Ratan Chand v Secretary of State, (1914) 18 Cal WN 1340; Manuranabhai v Ibrahim Khan, AIR 1969 Bom 366.
2715. Rajesh Makhija v Smt. Mamta alias Shalu, AIR 2006 MP 23 : 2005 (3) MPLJ 564 (Gwalior Bench).
2716. Controller of Insurance v Vanguard Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 1966 Mad 437.
2717. Orient Middle East Lines Ltd Bombay v Brace Transport Corp of Montovia, AIR 1986 Guj 63.

[s 20.11] "Personally works for gain"

These words were inserted to give jurisdiction where a person lives outside the local limits of jurisdiction but comes within them to work for gain as the case of a pleader who lives outside the jurisdiction of the high court where he practices.[2718] The word "works" implies mental or physical effort and does not apply to the receipt of offerings by a Hindu priest.[2719] As already stated, the phrase "works for gain" is not applicable to the government,[2720] nor to companies or corporations.[2721]

[s 20.12] Cause of Action

Section 20 of the CPC recognises the territorial jurisdiction of courts, inter alia, wherever the cause of action wholly or in part arises.[2722]

The expression "cause of action" has acquired a judicially settled meaning. In the restricted sense, "cause of action", means the circumstances forming the infraction of the right or the immediate occasion for the action. In the wider sense, it means the necessary conditions for the maintenance of the suit, including not only the infraction of the right, but the infraction coupled with the right itself. Compendiously, the expression means every fact by which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the court. Every fact which is necessary to be proved, as distinguished from every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, comprises "cause of action". It has to be left to be determined in each individual case as to where the cause of action arises.[2723] The cause of action means the circumstances forming infraction of the right or immediate occasion for action. It is left to be determined in each individual case as to where the cause of action arises. The cause of action in suit/petition has no reference to the defence taken in the suit, nor is it related to the evidence by which the cause of action is established.[2724]

A suit is always based on a cause of action. There can be no suit without a cause of action and such cause of action having accrued to the plaintiff, the jurisdiction of the court in a matter of contract will depend on the situs of the contract and the cause of action arising through connecting factors. A cause of action is a bundle of facts which taken with the law applicable, gives the plaintiff a right to relief against the defendant.[2725] It must include some act done by the defendant since in the absence of an act no cause of action can possibly accrue.[2726] It is not limited to actual infringement of right sued on, but includes all the material facts on which it is founded.[2727] It does not comprise of evidence necessary to prove such facts, but every fact

---

2718. Rai Narain v Newtaon, (1873) 6 NWPHCR 25.
2719. Goswami v Goverdhanlalji, (1890) ILR 14 Bom 541.
2720. Daya Narain v Secretary of State, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 256, pp 273–74; UOI v Ladulal, AIR 1963 SC 1681.
2721. ST&E Works v JN Sen, AIR 1959 Cal 461.
2722. KLG Systel Ltd v Fujitsu, ICIM Ltd, AIR 2001 Del 357.
2723. Rajasthan High Court Advocates Association v UOI, AIR 2001 SC 416 : AIR 2001 SCW 1 : (2001) 2 SCC 294.
2724. Sucheta Dilip Ghate v Dilip Shantaram Ghate, AIR 2003 Bom 390 (DB).
2725. Dhanajishaw v Fforde, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 649; Musa v Manilal, (1905) ILR 29 Bom 368; Raghoonath v Gobindnarain, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 451.
2726. Radhakrishnamurthy v Chandrasekhara, AIR 1966 AP 334; Ram Avalamb v Jata Shankar, AIR 1969 All 526, p 536; Ujjal Talukdar v Natichand, AIR 1969 Cal 224; Il'Veen Chettiar v ST Officer, Bombay, AIR 1971 Mad 155; Salik Ram v Ram Lakhan, AIR 1973 All 107.
2727. Puranmal v Onkarmath, AIR 1959 Pat 128 : (1959) ILR 38 Pat 247.

necessary for the plaintiff to prove to enable him to obtain a decree.[2728] Everything which if not proved would give the defendant a right to immediate judgment must be part of the cause of action;[2729] but it has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff.[2730] "A cause of action" means every fact, which, if traversed, it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to support his right to a judgment of the court.[2731] It is a media upon which the plaintiff asks the court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour.[2732] In legal parlance, the expression "cause of action" is generally understood to mean a situation or a state of facts that entitle a party to maintain an action in a court or a tribunal; a group of operative facts giving rise to one or more bases for suing; a factual situation that entitles one person to obtain a remedy in court from another person.[2733]

The cause of action must be antecedent to the institution of the suit.[2734] Accordingly, when a plaintiff filed a suit for ejectment 15 days before he was entitled to possession, he failed for want of cause of action.[2735] The death of the assured is a material part of the cause of action, the plaintiff is bound to prove the fact if traversed and if not proved, the defendant will have an immediate right to judgment. Hence, the court at the place where the assured died has jurisdiction to try a suit for recovery of the insurance money.[2736] Courts in whose jurisdiction the cheques were dishonoured shall have the jurisdiction.[2737]

Where the work in question was awarded and executed in Maharashtra, the show cause notice was in Maharashtra by the Assistant Labour Commissioner, the whole cause of action took place in Maharashtra and respondents 7 to 9, against whom petitioner claims a cause of action, are based in Maharashtra, mere impleadment of Coal India Ltd, the nodal authority, or of Union of India will not confer jurisdiction to Delhi High Court.[2738]

In a case relating to agreement of settlement between bank and loanee a dispute arose as to territorial jurisdiction of court. Every act connected with the loan was performed by the parties at Delhi, like communication as regards increased offer in the original proposal was made by the plaintiff to the office of the bank at Delhi, the draft attached to the said communication was also issued by bank at Delhi, even proceedings of meetings of the independent settlement

---

2728. Dhanraj Mills v NP Boobna, AIR 1949 Pat 270 : (1948) ILR Pat 723; Arthur Butler v District Board of Gaya, AIR 1947 Pat 134 : (1946) ILR Pat 292; Reed v Brown, [1888] 22 QBD 128, p 131; Murti v Bhola Ram, (1893) ILR 16 All 165 (FB); Salima Bibi v Sheik Muhammad, (1896) ILR 18 All 131; Muhammad Zakaria v Muhammad Hafiz, (1917) ILR 39 All 506; Baroda Oil Cakes Traders v Parshotham, AIR 1954 Bom 491; Yar Mohamed v Lakshmi Das, AIR 1959 All 1; Baku Mahton v Widow of Anathi Thakur, AIR 1978 Pat 146.
2729. Arthur Butler v District Board of Gaya, (1936) ILR15 Pat 292; Reed v Brown, (1888) 22 QBD 128; Joshi v State of Bombay, AIR 1959 Bom 363 : (1959) ILR Bom 1267.
2730. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies Salem, (1989) 2 SCC 163 : (1994) 6 SCC 322.
2731. Cook v Gill, (1873) 8 CP 107; London Bombay Bank v Badee, (1880) ILR 5 Bom 42; Narayan v Secretary of State, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 570; Alexander Brault v Indra Krishna, AIR 1933 Cal 706, (1933) ILR 60 Cal 918; Amrit Kunwar v Gur Charan, AIR 1934 All 226; Narayanamurthy v Gangaraju, AIR 1958 AP 451.
2732. Gauda Singh v Zora Singh, AIR 1950 Pepsu 21; Chand Kour v Partab Singh, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 98, 102, 15 IA 156; Venkatesha Bhat v Kamal Pat Motila, AIR 1957 Mad 201; Gupta v Vishnu, AIR 1958 Nag 204 : (1956) ILR Nag 556.
2733. Navin Chandra N Majithia v State of Maharashtra, [2000] 3 LRI 1013.
2734. Dominion of India v Nath & Co, AIR 1950 Cal 207; Mahant Gobind v Rani Debendrabala, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 387, 393.
2735. Gulzar Singh v Kalyan Chand, (1893) ILR 15 All 399.
2736. Life Insurance Corporation of India v Krishna Singh, AIR 1999 Pat 106.
2737. Chanana Steel Tubes Pvt Ltd v Jaitu Steel Tubes Pvt Ltd, AIR 2000 HP 48; Board of Trustee for the Port of Calcutta v Bombay Flour Mills Pvt Ltd, (1995) 2 SCC 559.
2738. Groheven Tradex Private Ltd v UOI, AIR 2001 Del 37.

advisory, wherein the plaintiff participated, took place at the head office of the bank at Delhi. The High Court of Delhi held that mere communication of the letter of repudiation of the settlement agreement was sent from Meerut to Ghaziabad would not divest the High Court at Delhi of territorial jurisdiction.[2739]

In a case where petition seeking appointment of arbitrator was filed, it was held that major part of cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of Jharkhand State and within the district of Bokaro and, therefore, section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with section 2(1)(c) and section 11(12)(b) of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, confers territorial jurisdiction to Jharkhand High Court.[2740]

Section 45 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, mandates that a judicial authority under certain circumstances has to mandatorily refer the parties to arbitration, unless it finds that the said agreement is null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed. A judicial authority has no option but to refer the parties to arbitration notwithstanding anything contained in the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, or in the CPC. Thus, even if, under section 9 read with section 20 of the CPC, the high court had the jurisdiction to entertain the suit, once a request is made by one of the parties to refer the parties to arbitration, the high court is bound to refer the parties to arbitration unless it finds that the said agreement referred to in section 44 was null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed. Section 45 does not even require a formal application to be made for the purpose. It refers to the request of one of the parties or any person claiming through or under him to refer the parties to arbitration.[2741]

When it comes to the question of territorial jurisdiction relating to the application under section 11 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, section 20 becomes relevant.[2742]

In a suit for injunction in the case of infringement of patent under the Patents Act, 1970, it was held that the industrial unit where two products were manufactured by the plaintiff was situated in SIIDCUL, Pant Nagar within the limits of Udham Singh Nagar, Uttarakhand and hence the court at Uttarakhand would have jurisdiction. However, because of suppression of facts, the discretionary relief of injunction was refused.[2743]

The provisions of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, are beneficial for women and infirm old parents for their maintenance while in distress. It cannot be presumed by any stretch of imagination that such person in distress would have to run from pillar to post for relief under the provisions of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, if the husband or son keeps on changing his residence or prefers to reside in a far away town from the town of wife or parents. In view of this taking of recourse to clause (c) of section 20 of the CPC. the proceedings could be instituted at the place of residence of wife, who is residing at a different place than her husband. The family court at the place where wife and daughter reside. therefore, shall have jurisdiction to entertain the said petition filed by the appellants under the provisions of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956, and the Special Marriage Act. 1954.[2744]

2739. Maharaji Educational Trust v Punjab and Sind Bank, AIR 2006 Del 226 : 2006 (127) DLT 161.
2740. Rungta Projects v Tenughat Vidyut Nigam Ltd, AIR 2006 Jhar 64 : 2005 Cal WN 1084.
2741. World Sport Group (Mauritius) Ltd v MSM Satellite (Singapore) Pvt Ltd, AIR 2014 SC 968 : (2014) 11 SCC 639; see also Chloro Controls India (Pvt) Ltd v Severn Trent Water Purification Inc, (2013) 1 SCC 641.
2742. Swastik Gases (Pvt) Ltd v Indian Oil Corp Ltd, (2013) 9 SCC 32 : 2013 (8) Scale 433.
2743. Acme Tele Power Ltd v Sintex Industries Ltd, AIR 2008 Uttr 49 : MIPR 2009 (1) 321.
2744. Sucheta Dilip Ghate v Dilip Shantaram Ghate, AIR 2003 Bom 390 (DB).

[s 20.13] Cause of Action in Writs

In order to confer jurisdiction on a high court to entertain a writ petition or a special civil application, the high court must be satisfied from the entire facts pleaded in support of the cause of action that those facts do constitute a cause so as to empower the court to decide a dispute which has, at least in part, arisen within its jurisdiction. It is clear that each and every fact pleaded in the application does not ipso facto lead to the conclusion that those facts give rise to a cause of action within the court's territorial jurisdiction unless those facts pleaded are such which have a nexus or relevance with the lis that is involved in the case. Facts which have no bearing with the lis or the dispute involved in the case, do not give rise to a cause of action so as to confer territorial jurisdiction on the court concerned.[2745]

The entire bundle of facts pleaded need not constitute a cause of action as what is necessary to be proved before the petitioner can obtain a decree in the material facts.

The expression "material facts" is also known as integral facts. Keeping in view the expressions used in clause (2) of Article 226 of the Constitution of India, indisputably even if a small fraction of "cause of action" accrues within the jurisdiction of the court, the court will have jurisdiction in the matter. However, even if a small part of "cause of action", arises within the territorial jurisdiction of the high court, the same by itself may not be considered to be a determinative factor compelling the high court to decide the matter on merit. In appropriate cases, the court may refuse to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction by invoking the doctrine of forum conveniens.[2746] In Ambika Industries v Commissioner of Central Excise,[2747] the Supreme Court followed its earlier judgement in Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd,[2748] and held that although in view of section 141 of the CPC, the provisions thereof would not apply to writ proceedings, the expressions used in section 20(c) and Article 226(2) of the Constitution, being pari materia, the decisions of the Supreme Court rendered on the interpretation of section 20(c) of the CPC shall apply to the writ proceedings also.

In a dispute arising out of breach of contract, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that acceptance of tender and its communication by respondents to petitioners by e-mail at the place where petitioner carried on his business amounted to completion of contract. Therefore, part of cause of action having arisen at that place in the State of Uttar Pradesh, the Allahabad High Court has territorial jurisdiction to entertain writ petition. It was further held in the case that any ouster clause in the contract can oust the territorial jurisdiction of civil court but not of the high court under Article 226, which cannot be curtailed even by statute.[2749]

A full bench of the Kerala High Court has held that in view of the provisions contained in Article 226(2) of the Constitution of India, a writ petition can be maintained in a high court within the territorial jurisdiction of which an integral part of the cause of action has arisen. Though the expression "cause of action" is not defined either in the Constitution or in the Code of Civil Procedure, it has to be understood in the light of section 20(c) and it means a bundle of facts which is required to be proven by a petitioner or a plaintiff to seek relief in a court of law.[2750]

2745. UOI v Adavi Exports Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 126 : (2002) 1 SCC 567 : 2001 (7) Scale 575.
2746. Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 2321 : (2004) 6 SCC 254.
2747. Ambika Industries v Commissioner of Central Excise, AIR 2007 SC 1618 : (2007) 6 SCC 769.
2748. Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 2321 : (2004) 6 SCC 254 : 2004 (5) Scale 304.
2749. PR Transport Agency v UOI, AIR 2006 All 23 : 2005 All LJ 3568 (DB).
2750. The Registrar v KG Viswanathan, 2014 (4) Ker HC 451 : 2014 (4) Ker LJ 640.

The Supreme Court has held that "cause of action" referred to in Article 226(2) of the Constitution, carries the same meaning as section 20(c) of the CPC. The high court can issue a writ when the person or the authority against whom the writ is issued is located outside its territorial jurisdiction, if the cause of action wholly or partially arises within the court's territorial jurisdiction. The question of whether or not the cause of action wholly or in part has arisen within the territorial limit of any high court has to be decided in the light of the nature and character of the proceedings under Article 226.[2751]

[s 20.14] Cause of Action in Suits on Contracts

The corresponding section of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 merely referred to the place where the cause of action arose. It was not clear whether this meant the whole cause of action or any part to the cause of action. The section was therefore amended by section 7 of Act 7 of 1888, which added an Explanation as to the significance of the term when applied to contracts. The Explanation was as follows:

> Explanation III—In suits arising out of contract, the cause of action arises within the meaning of this section of any of the following places, namely:
>
> (i) the place where the contract was made;
>
> (ii) the place where the contract was to be performed or performance thereof completed;
>
> (iii) the place wherein performance of the contract any money to which the suit relates was expressly or impliedly payable.

This Explanation made it clear that in suits on contracts, cause of action meant the whole or any part of the cause of action, but it was still not clear that it meant the same in other suits.[2752] In the Code, the words "wholly or in part" have been inserted after the words "cause of action" which make it plain that all suits may be instituted where the cause of action arises wholly or in part.[2753] Explanation III has been omitted as no longer necessary but it is nevertheless a correct statement of what is still the law.[2754] The Supreme Court has laid down the following propositions regarding venue for suits on contract:

(i) Ordinarily, acceptance of an offer and its intimation, result in a contract; hence, a suit can be filed in a court within whose jurisdiction the acceptance was communicated.

(ii) The performance of a contract is part of the cause of action and a suit in respect of the breach can always be filed at the place where the contract should have been performed or its performance completed.

(iii) In suits for agency actions, the cause of action arises at the place where the contract of agency was made or the place where the actions are to be rendered and the payment is to be made by the agent.

(iv) Part of the cause of action arises where money is expressly or impliedly payable under a contract.

(v) In cases of repudiation of a contract, the place where the repudiation is received, is the place where the suit would lie.

2751. Nawal Kishore Sharma v UOI, AIR 2014 SC 3607 : (2014) 9 SCC 329.
2752. Banke Behari v Pokhe Ram, (1903) ILR 25 All 48.
2753. Salig Ram v Chaha Mal, (1912) ILR 34 All 49; BC Paul & Sons v UOI, AIR 1978 Cal 423.
2754. Peoples' Insurance Co v Benoy Bhusan, AIR 1943 Cal 199 : (1943) ILR 1 Cal 564; Sita Ram v Ram Chandra, (1918) PR 26.

(vi) If a contract is pleaded as part of the cause of action giving jurisdiction to the court where the suit is filed and the contract is found to be invalid, such part of the cause of action disappears.[2755]

Some of the connecting factors have been thus set out in the judgment of the Supreme Court. In a suit for damages for breach of contract, the cause of action consists of the making of the contract, and of its breach, so that the suit may be filed either at the place where the contract was made or at the place where it should have been performed and the breach occurred. The making of the contract is part of the cause of action. A suit on a contract, therefore, can be filed at the place where it was made. The determination of the place where the contract was made is part of the law of contract; but, making of an offer on a particular place does not form cause of action in a suit for damages for breach of contract. Ordinarily, acceptance of an offer and its intimation results in a contract and hence, a suit can be filed in a court within whose jurisdiction the acceptance was communicated. The performance of a contract is part of cause of action and a suit in respect of the breach can always be filed at the place where the contract would have been performed or its performance completed. If the contract is to be performed at the place where it is made, the suit on the contract is to be filed there and nowhere else. In suits for agency actions, the cause of action arises at the place where the contract of agency was made or the place where actions are to be rendered and payment is to be made by the agent. Part of the cause of action arises where money is expressly or impliedly payable under a contract. In cases of repudiation of a contract, the place where repudiation is received is the place where the suit would lie. If the contract is pleaded as part of the cause of action giving jurisdiction to the court where the suit is filed and the contract is found to be invalid, such part of the cause of action disappears. The above are some of the connecting factors.[2756]

In a case relating to breach of confidentiality clause in service contract, the Supreme Court has held that "cause of action" and "applicability of law" are two distinct, different and independent things and one cannot be confused with the other. The fact that service contract was entered into outside India would not be relevant when the breach of confidentiality clause took place at Delhi and consequently a court at Delhi would have jurisdiction to try the suit. It was observed that though section 20 of the Code has been designed to secure that justice might be brought as near as possible to every man's hearthstone and that the defendant should not be put to the trouble and expense of travelling long distances in order to defend himself, but in a case of breach of confidentiality clause in a service contract, the place where the breach has taken place will have jurisdiction.[2757]

All terms of the contract were negotiated and finalised in Bombay. It was, thereafter, that the formal contract was engrossed and sent to Ludhiana for the signatures of respondent. The respondent's director signed the contract, document and forwarded it to its broker at Bombay, for onward transmission to the petitioner for taking necessary action. This issue can be looked at in two ways. If the contract is said to have been concluded when the terms were prepared, then obviously that took place in Bombay. If the contract is said to have been finalised only after both parties had signed, then it is clear that only one of the parties signed at Ludhiana and other signed it in Bombay.[2758]

In a suit for damages for breach of contract, the cause of action consists of the making of the contract, and of its breach; so that the suit may be filed either at the place where the contract

---

2755. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies, Salem, AIR 1989 SC 1239 : (1989) 2 SCC 163 : 1989 (1) Scale 633.
2756. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies, Salem, AIR 1989 SC 1239 : (1989) 2 SCC 163 : 1989 (1) Scale 633.
2757. Laxman Prasad v Prodigy Electronics Ltd, AIR 2008 SC 685 : (2008) 1 SCC 618.
2758. Toepfer International Asia Pvt Ltd v Thapar Ispat Ltd, AIR 1999 Bom 417.

was made or at the place where it should have been performed and the breach occurred.[2759] Thus, if a contract is made in Poona to be performed in Poona, the whole cause of action arises in Poona and the suit for breach can only be filed in the Poona Court; but, if the contract is made in Poona to be performed in Belgaum, the suit for its breach can be filed either in the Poona or the Belgaum court. No leave of the court is required in respect of a suit where part of the cause of action arises out of jurisdiction as in the case of high court suits governed by clause 12 of the Letters Patent. But if the suit is for damages for breach of contract to ship goods to Calcutta and the goods are rejected at Calcutta, the rejection is part of the cause of action and the suit can be filed in the high court at Calcutta with leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent.[2760] A suit seeking compensation for non-delivery and short delivery of the goods instituted in a court within whose jurisdiction neither goods were booked nor were delivered, it was held that such court would not have the jurisdiction to entertain the suit.[2761] The real place of making of contract is a place where communication came to hand or was received and in case of communication by post or telegram, the place where it started its journey and not at the place where it ended is the place where cause of action in part would arise and not the place where it came to be received.[2762] In this case, the petitioner entered into an agreement with the Government of Maharashtra in 1968. In 1972, the petitioner abandoned the work. Under clause 3(b) of the agreement, the appropriate authority of the Government of Maharashtra determined a sum to be recovered from the petitioner. Thereafter, a recovery certificate was issued by the officer of Maharashtra to the collector of Jhansi (Uttar Pradesh) for recovering the above amount as arrears of land revenue. The construction contract was executed in the State of Maharashtra. The liability of the contractor for abandonment of the contract arose in Maharashtra. It was held that the challenge to the liability as determined by the officer of Maharashtra cannot be challenged in the courts in Uttar Pradesh.[2763] When port of loading was Bombay, and the consignee was located in Zurich, Switzerland, no part of "cause of action", had arisen in Delhi, the defendant did not have principal place of business or habitual residence in Delhi, the goods were to travel firstly by sea and thereafter by road, rail or air, the subject carriage would constitute multimodal transport thereby attracting the provisions of section 20. It was held that the Delhi High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.[2764]

[s 20.14.1] Making of a Contract

The making of a contract is part of the cause of action. A suit on a contract, therefore, can be filed at the place where it was made.[2765] The determination of the place where it was made is part of the law of contract. When offeror and offeree are not at one place and exchanging the offer and acceptance through post, then the contract would be deemed to have been entered

---

2759. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies, Salem, AIR 1989 SC 1239 : (1989) 2 SCC 163 : 1989 (1) Scale 633; Arthur Butler v District Board of Gaya, (1936) ILR 15 Pat 292; Dhunjisha v Fforde, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 649, p 652; Mulchand v Suganchand, (1876) ILR 1 Bom 23 (hundi); Doya v Secretary of State, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 256; Rampurtab v Premsuk, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 93; Dobson v Bengal Spg & Wvg Co, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 126; Seshagiri Row v Nawab Askur, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 494.
2760. Engineering Supplies v Dhandhania, AIR 1931 Cal 659 : (1931) ILR 58 Cal 539.
2761. UOI v New India Assurance Co Ltd, AIR 1997 Del 54.
2762. ONGC v Muderu Construction & Co, AIR 1998 Guj 46 (DB).
2763. Chetan Swarup v Collector, Jhansi District, AIR 1994 All 269 (DB).
2764. Bhat Carpets v AMI India Logistics Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 404.
2765. D Muhammad Shafi v Karamat Ali, (1896) PR 76; Sita Ram v Ram Chandra, (1918) PR 26; Sukh Ram v Chaba Mal, (1912) ILR 34 All 49; Jupiter General Insurance Co v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1924 Rang 2. (1923) 1 Rang 231; Dobson v Bengal Spg & Wvg Co, (1879) ILR 21 Bom 126; Jai Ram v Babha, (1920) 1 Lah 203.

into at the place where the offer was received and the acceptance was posted. The place of delivery of acceptance is irrelevant and does not provide any cause of action.[2766] Where the goods were sent from place A to place B and the goods, forwarding note contained a clause that jurisdiction for deciding disputes between the parties would be at place C and subsequently the letter of subrogation and Power of Attorney was granted at place D in favour of the insurer, who compensated the consignee for the loss sustained by him in an accident during the said transportation, the suit for recovery of damages by the consignee and the insurer against the carrier is maintainable before the trial court at place D as subrogation was also a part of "cause of action", which has arisen at place D.[2767]

A contract by correspondence is made at the place where the letter of acceptance is posted so far as the proposer is concerned;[2768] it is repudiated at the place where the letter of such repudiation is received.[2769] If acceptance is by performance of a condition, the suit may be instituted at the place where the condition is performed.[2770] If the petitioner carries business at Calcutta or replies by mails to correspondence made by it, received at Calcutta, this is not an integral part of cause of action, so, Calcutta High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain writ petition.[2771] In Bombay Steam Navigation Co Ltd v UOI,[2772] the High Court of Bombay held that the making of an offer is part of the cause of action and therefore, a suit could be instituted in the court within whose jurisdiction the offer was made. The court held that the receipt of acceptance of an offer was part of the cause of action and that therefore, the suit could be filed at the place where it was received. Both these points were dissented from by the same high court in a subsequent decision on the grounds, firstly, that an offer would be complete only when communicated and therefore the mere dispatch of an offer was not sufficient to give jurisdiction of the court, and secondly, that as a contract is complete when it is accepted, the communication thereof is not a part of the cause of action.[2773] It is well-settled that making of an offer at a particular place does not form part of the cause of action in a suit for damages for breach of contract. Ordinarily, acceptance of such an offer and its intimation result in a contract unless the offeror has waived such intimation or the course of negotiations implies an agreement to the contrary. Revocation of a contract is part of the cause of action. Hence, a suit can be filed in a court within whose jurisdiction it was communicated.[2774] A tender for the construction of a building at Kolhapur was accepted by the government. The acceptance was communicated to the contractor by the government at the contractor's head office in Pune. It was held that part of the cause of action arose at Pune. Hence, the Pune court had jurisdiction to entertain a petition under section 8(1)(b), read with section 2(b) of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (repealed by the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996).[2775] Plaintiff entered into an agreement for the sale of silicon by the plaintiff to the defendant. There was preliminary negotiation at New Delhi. The agreement was sent by the defendant to the plaintiff and the 2766. Progressive Construction Ltd v Bharat Hydro Power Corp Ltd, AIR 1996 Del 92.

---

2767. Kalpala Transport Co Ltd v Oriental FRG I Co Ltd, AIR 2001 Mad 264.
2768. Dhanraj Mills Ltd v Boobna, AIR 1949 Pat 270; Manilal v Venkatachalapathi, AIR 1943 Mad 471; Ratanlal v Harcharan, AIR 1947 All 337 : (1947) ILR All 44; Kamisetti v Katha, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 355; Muhammad Esuff v M Haleem & Co, AIR 1934 Mad 581.
2769. Dhanraj Mills Ltd v Boobna, AIR 1949 Pat 270.
2770. Sitaram v Thompson, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 884.
2771. National Textile Corp Ltd v Haribox Swalram, AIR 2004 SC 1998 : (2004) 9 SCC 786 : 2004 (4) Scale 227.
2772. Bombay Steam Navigation Co Ltd v UOI, AIR 1954 Bom 145.
2773. Baroda Oil Cakes Traders v Purshottam, AIR 1954 Bom 491 : 1954 (ILR) Bom 1137; Firm Kanhaiyalal v Dinesh Chandra, AIR 1959 MP 234.
2774. Arthur Butler & Co Ltd v District Board of Gaya, 15 Pat 292; Firm Hajarimal v Firm Gulab Chand, AIR 1956 Nag 118 : (1955) ILR Nag 722; Venkatesh Bhat v Kamal Pat Motila, AIR 1957 Mad 201.
2775. State v Ranjeet Construction, AIR 1986 Bom 76.

plaintiff later signed the same at Bhubaneswar, making part payment there. Therefore, the acceptance of offer and payment was made at Bhubaneswar, where the cause of action arose.[2776] The High Court of Punjab held that the place where an agreement was accepted, that is to say, where the acceptance of the agreement was conveyed, gives rise to cause of action and to jurisdiction under section 20(c).[2777]

The high court in the above cases elaborated its reasoning in these words:

> Clause (c) of section 20 of the Code deals with "cause of action". In the suit based on a contract, the cause of action will consist of the making of the contract and of its breach at the place where it is to be performed. An action, therefore, for breach of a contract at the option of the plaintiff can be brought either at the place where the contract was made or at the place where the breach was committed. In deciding the question as to where the contract is made, the court must take into consideration the provisions of Section 4 of the Contract Act. A contract is made when an offer of one party is accepted by the other party.[2778]

An action for breach of contract can be brought either at the place where the contract was made or at the place where the breach was committed. In deciding the question as to where the contract is made, the court must take into consideration the provision of section 4 of the Contract Act, 1872. A contract is made when an offer of one party is accepted by the other party. Where acceptance is conveyed to the plaintiff at C, a part of the cause of action arises there and the civil court has jurisdiction to entertain petition under sections 14 and 17 of the Arbitration Act, 1940.[2779] In case of a contract by post or telegram, the contract is complete when acceptance of the offer is put in the cause of transmission of the offeror by the offeree by posting a letter or dispatching a telegram and it is the place where acceptance is posted which is the place where the contract is made. However, in the case of a contract by telephone though the offeror and the offeree may be at different places separated by space, they are in a sense in the presence of each other in as much as they can instantaneously hear each other. Communications by telephone or telex, which are instantaneously heard, stand for that reason on a different footing than those by post or telegram and therefore the rule in regard to contracts by post or telegram does not apply to those by telephone and telex. In the case it is the latter, place where acceptance of the offer is received is the place of the contract.[2780] Accordingly, where the offer was made by the plaintiff by telephonic conversation from Ahmedabad and the same was accepted by the defendant by telephonic conversation from Khamgaon, the contract was held to have been made at Ahmedabad where the acceptance was communicated and a part of the cause of action in a suit for damages for breach of contract arose within the jurisdiction of the Ahmedabad court.[2781]

In a suit arising out of contract, making or conclusion of the contract and payment form important parts in determining the cause of action and consequently the territorial jurisdiction of the court. Thus, a suit based on contract can be filed at the place where the contract was made or concluded. On acceptance of offer upon making of demand, the contract would be complete. Thus, where demand drafts were accepted, the place of acceptance of payment would furnish cause of action.[2782]

2776. Minerals and Metals Trading Corp of India Ltd v Indian Metal & Ferro Alloys Ltd, AIR 1981 Ori 76.
2777. UOI v Shibboomal & Sons, AIR 1989 P&H 205.
2778. UOI v Shibboomal & Sons, AIR 1989 P&H 205.
2779. UOI v Shibboomal & Sons, Chandigarh, AIR 1989 P&H 205.
2780. Entores v Miles Far East Corp, [1955] 2 QB 327.
2781. Bhagwandas v Girdharlal & Co, AIR 1966 SC 543.
2782. Shriram Steel, Raipur v Vandana Trailers, Sakti, AIR 2008 Chhat 34 : 2008 CgLJ 358.

When the contract is entered into between the parties at a distance, such a contract can invariably be made only by correspondence. In a contract by correspondence, the acceptance must be communicated in some perceptible form as suggested or indicated in the correspondence between the parties, or by speech or other acts. Thus, the question of whether a concluded contract has been made between parties at a distance depends on the facts of the case, and such facts must be established by usual evidence. Where a suit is based on a tripartite agreement between the parties having their headquarters at distant places and it is clear from the contract that the effective date of contract is the date of acceptance of advance payment of money by one of the parties as a part of the performance of the contract and it is agreed to pay the advance by demand draft payable in the bank at Cochin, the court in Cochin would have the jurisdiction to entertain the suit.[2783] As regards repudiation of a contract, the place where such repudiation is received is the place where the suit would lie.[2784] If a contract is pleaded as part of the cause of action giving jurisdiction to the court where the suit is filed and that contract is found to be invalid, such part of the cause of action disappears. Hence, the suit cannot be said to be within the jurisdiction of the court.[2785]

[s 20.14.2] Termination

Revocation or termination of a contract constitutes a part of the cause of action, and the place where the same takes place, can vest jurisdiction in the court situated therein. In the instant case, although, ostensibly, the letter dated 8 February 1983 tended to formally communicate termination of contract by the respondent to the petitioner, yet, in reality, that termination and repudiation took place when the petitioner had unmitigatingly conveyed to the respondent at B, that the agreed rates could not remain in force from 4 December 1979. Petitioner thereby declined to carry out the remaining part of the contract, unless the rates were revised. So far as the existing rates were concerned, there was thus, a clear repudiation. That having taken place at B with the receipt of the communication from the petitioner, the court at B alone had jurisdiction to entertain the petitioner for reference under the Arbitration Act, 1940.[2786] State of Orissa appointed the plaintiff company as mining agent to raise coal in a colliery within Orissa. Later, the state terminated the contract. This was done by serving a notice of termination. Two notices were served, the first one being served on the plaintiff's agent at A, and the second one on the plaintiff company itself at its registered office at B. The agent at A had no authority to receive the notice of termination, as per the contract clause. It was held that in the circumstances, the termination by the first notice (served on the agent) was ineffective and section 229 of the Contract Act, 1872, did not help. It was the notice at B that effectively terminated the contract. As the termination at B constituted a part of the cause of action, the plaintiff was entitled to sue at B.[2787]

[s 20.14.3] Performance

The performance of a contract is part of the cause of action and a suit in respect of breach can always be filed at the place where the contract should have been performed or its performance

---

2783. Shakti Cement Co Pvt Ltd v FACT, AIR 1990 Ker 86.
2784. Fertilizer Corp of India v S. Kumar, AIR 1965 Punj 107; Dhanraj Mills Ltd v Boohna, AIR 1949 Pat 270 : (1948) ILR Pat 723, p 728.
2785. Surjit Singh v UOI, AIR 1965 Cal 191.
2786. Span Consultants Pvt Ltd v Rashtriya Chemicals and Fertilizer Ltd., AIR 1982 Del 157.
2787. State of Orissa v Goenka Investment, AIR 1983 Cal 438 (DB).

completed.[2788] An intention was shown in the bank guarantee itself that the amount shall be paid to the Finance Secretary to the Government of Sikkim at Gangtok. Accordingly, part of the contract was performable at Gangtok so as to satisfy section 49 and there was jurisdiction to entertain the suit. When a promise is to be performed without application by the promisee and no place is fixed for the performance of it, it is the duty of the promisor to apply to the promisee to appoint a reasonable place for the performance of the promise and to perform it at such place.[2789] The usual case is that of a contract for the sale of goods and a suit on such a contract may be filed at the place where the goods are deliverable or the price payable.[2790] Thus, if goods for delivery at Allahabad are sold according to sample and paid for in Bombay, the buyer may sue in Allahabad if the goods prove not to be of sample quality.[2791] When a buyer at Kasganj ordered dyes from a seller at Delhi, but after paying for and opening the parcel found it to contain only clay, he was entitled to sue for damages at Kasganj.[2792] Where the textile mill was situated in Bombay, the order for purchase of cloth was placed by the party having business in Calcutta, the supply of cloth was to be made ex-factory from Bombay, the writ petition by the purchaser/petitioner against the mill was found maintainable at Bombay and not in Calcutta.[2793] If not otherwise provided by the contract, goods sold are deliverable at the place where they are sold, or if not ready, at the place of manufacture. If they are sent by common carrier at seller's risk, the contract is performed at the place where they are delivered to the buyer or if at buyer's risk, at the place where they are delivered to the carrier.[2794] In the case of a Free on Board contract (FOB), Bombay, the place of performance is Bombay.[2795] A suit against railway administration for breach of contract for failure to deliver goods could be filed at the place where the goods were consigned as that is part of the cause of action.[2796] Such a suit is also maintainable at the place where the goods were deliverable.[2797] Where a contract for the sale of goods made at Calcutta provided for delivery of goods and payment of price at Calcutta, the entire cause of action arises there, and a suit for damages for breach of the agreement on the ground that the goods were not according to the contract does not lie at Madras where the purchaser was to take delivery.[2798] Where goods delivered to a common carrier were lost through fire while in transit, a suit based on tort would fall under section 19.[2799]

The place of performance is generally expressed in the contract and if not so expressed, it may be inferred from the nature of the act. Thus, a contract to repair a house must be performed where the house is situated, and an agreement to register a mortgage must be

---

2788. Gopikishna v Nikomul, (1974) 13 Beng LR 461 : 22 WR 79; Chunilal v Mahiputrav, (1870) 5 Bom HC 33 (AC); Premji v Ghulam, (1908) PR 36; Bhuttacharya v Cawnpore Woollen Mills, (1911) 16 Cal WN 325; Champaklal v Nectar Tea Co, AIR 1933 Bom 179 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 306.
2789. State of Sikkim v Jammu & Kashmir Bank Ltd, AIR 2002 Sikkim 8.
2790. Battepati v Calcutta Glass and Silicate Works, AIR 1949 Mad 145; Llewhellin v Chunni Lal, (1882) ILR 4 All 423; Sheo Charan v Taj Bhai, (1917) ILR 39 All 368; Abdur Rashid v Sizing Material Co., (1920) ILR 42 All 480 : 56 TC 192; Patel Bros. v Vadilal, AIR 1959 Mad 227 : (1959) 1 Mad LJ 106.
2791. Sheo Charan v Taj Bhai, (1917) ILR 39 All 368.
2792. Ram Lal v Bholo Nath, (1920) ILR 42 All 629.
2793. National Textile Corp Ltd v Haribox Swalram, AIR 2004 SC 1998 : (2004) 9 SCC 786 : 2004 (4) Scale 227.
2794. Winter v Way, (1964) 1 Mad HC 200.
2795. Benaim & Co v Debono, AIR 1924 Cal 514 : 1924 AC 514.
2796. Ramco Textiles v UOI, AIR 1960 Ker 275 : (1960) ILR Ker 435 : (1960) Ker LT 352 : 1960 Ker LJ 408; Gaya Muzaffarpur Roadways v FG Industries Ltd, AIR 1971 Cal 494.
2797. Lakshmi Narain v UOI, AIR 1958 Pat 489; Fertilizers Corp of India v Tata Iron & Steel Co, AIR 1965 Punj 143.
2798. Parthasarathy v Calcutta Glass & Silicate Works Ltd, (1948) 2 Mad LJ 101; Subbarao v PK Ginning & Pressing Factory, AIR 1953 Mad 389 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 548.
2799. Kalaswamy v Ponnuswamy, AIR 1962 Mad 44 : (1961) ILR Mad 1091.

performed at the place where the law requires it to be registered.[2800] If the place is neither expressed in the contract nor implied from the necessities of the case, it will be determined by the court according to the intention of the parties,[2801] or the provisions of sections 48–49 of Contract Act, 1872.

Thus, in Llewhellin v Chunilal,[2802] the court said that looking to the ordinary course of business it was the intention of the parties that payment should be made at plaintiff's place of business. Similarly, in Sreenath Roy v Cally Das,[2803] a suit for breach of an agreement to mortgage property outside Calcutta was held to lie in Calcutta as the plaintiff's place of business was in Calcutta and the defendant would have to repay the money there to redeem. Ordinarily, in the case of goods purchased or money borrowed, payment must be made at the residence of the seller or lender as the case may be.[2804] In a contract of service which did not fix the place of payment of salary, the salary was held to be payable at the place where the service was rendered.[2805] In a suit for arrears of salary and travelling allowance against the state government, it is the place where the plaintiff was posted and served and not his place of residence which matters for the purpose of jurisdiction.[2806] The fact that such a person serves a notice under section 80 of the CPC does not confer jurisdiction on the court where it is served, as giving of notice does not constitute part of the cause of action.[2807] When A sued B on a contract of service made at Hyderabad for service was rendered at Hyderabad, alleging that after service was rendered B promised to pay in Madras, the court held that there was no consideration for the latter promise, no contract to pay in Madras, and therefore, no breach of contract in Madras so as to enable A to sue in Madras.[2808] The State of Orissa appointed the plaintiff company as "mining agent" to get and raise coal from a colliery within Orissa. Plaintiff's contract was terminated by the State of Orissa. Plaintiff sued for damages for breach of contract in West Bengal (Alipore, Calcutta), on the ground that he had made purchase of machinery at Calcutta to enable him to perform the contract and that the Alipore court had jurisdiction. It was held that this did not give the Alipore court jurisdiction. However, in this case, under another head, that court was held to have jurisdiction.[2809] Where a suit is filed for the recovery of amount paid in advance, jurisdiction vests in the court where the advance is made or where the goods are to be delivered.[2810] The principle, that the court of the place where the contract of sale of goods is to be performed by delivery of the goods will have jurisdiction to entertain a suit in respect of non-delivery as per contract, is well accepted.[2811] Where there is a contract for sale of goods, the title to the goods would pass where documents of title are delivered if payment is made through banks on receipt of document. Performance of the contract in such case has to be completed at the destination, by delivery of documents through bank at the destination. Hence, a part of the cause of action arises at the destination.[2812] If 2800. Sami v Gopal, (1873) 7 Mad HC 176; Patel Bros v Vadilal, AIR 1959 Mad 227.

---

2801. Dhunjisha v Fforde, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 648; Muhamad v Muhammad, (1916) PR 2; Venkatesh Bhat v Kamal Pat Motilal, AIR 1957 Mad 201.
2802. Llewhellin v Chunilal, (1882) ILR 4 All 423.
2803. Sreenath Roy v Cally Das, (1879) ILR 5 Cal 82.
2804. Bangali Mal v Ganga Ram, AIR 1923 All 465.
2805. Beg Mohammed v Kavasji, (1900) 2 Bom LR 514.
2806. State of Uttar Pradesh v Raja Ram, AIR 1966 All 159.
2807. S Shyam Sunder v Sharma, AIR 1973 MP 233.
2808. Seshagiri Raw v Nawab Askur Jung, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 438; Kamiseui v Katha, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 355.
2809. State of Orissa v Goenka Investment and Mining Industries, AIR 1983 Cal 438 (DB).
2810. Jaipur Udyog Ltd v Indian Drugs and Pharmaceutical Ltd, AIR 1984 All 305.
2811. Venkatesa v Kamlapati Motilal, AIR 1957 Mad 201; Hindustan Malleables v Indian Furnace Co Ltd, AIR 1979 Pat 146.
2812. RK Janakiah Chetty v AK Mohan, AIR 1980 AP 41.

the contract is to be performed at the place where it is made, the suit on the contract must be filed there and nowhere else. A suit for prompt dower by a Mohammedan wife is a suit on contract and the place of performance must be deemed to be the place where the wife has been residing.[2813] In Dadabhai v Diogo,[2814] A at Karwar sent money to his agent in Bombay with instructions to negotiate a contract for the purchase and shipment of goods from Bombay to Karwar. The agent entered into a contract with B and paid him the money, but B failed to ship the goods. A sued B at Karwar, but the court there had no jurisdiction for the contract was made and the money paid in Bombay, and the performance was also to be in Bombay by the shipment of goods from there. A suit for damages for breach of contract and refund of earnest money paid thereunder can be filed at the place where the earnest money was paid as that is part of the cause of action and where that was paid by bill and that was accepted, that amount must be deemed to have been paid at the place of acceptance and a suit can be instituted at the place.[2815] The rejection or repudiation of a claim under a contract of insurance has been held not to be part of the cause of action.[2816]

[s 20.15] Cause of Action in Other Suits

In an administration suit, the undertaking to administer is part of the cause of action.[2817] The grant of probate or letters of administration is part of the cause of action in a suit for a legacy or for a distributive share in the estate of an intestate, or in a suit for the administration of the estate of the deceased testator or intestate.[2818] A suit against executors for administration of estate and for accounts is not a suit for immovable property within section 16 as an inquiry into title of property is only incidental and can be instituted at any court where the cause of action arises wholly or in part.[2819] In a contract of bailment, the payment of the bailee's charge is part of the performance of the contract,[2820] and part of the cause of action also accrues at the place where the goods bailed are stored.[2821] In the suit where material alteration of a cheque fraudulently made is alleged; that fact of the issuance of the cheque constitutes part of the cause of action. Hence, the court at the place where the cheque was issued has jurisdiction to try such a suit.[2822] A suit for a breach of a contract of betrothal may be filed where the breach takes place,[2823] and in case of a contract to marry, at the place where the marriage was to have been celebrated.[2824] A suit for damages for misrepresentation will lie at the place where the misrepresentation was made,[2825] or for wrongful arrest at the place of arrest,[2826] or for death caused by negligence at the place where the death took place,[2827] or for libel at the place of publication.[2828] In actions in tort, aggravation of damages is not part of the cause of action

---

2813. Tulsiman Bibi v Abdul Latif, AIR 1936 Cal 97 : (1936) ILR 63 Cal 726.
2814. Dadabhai v Diogo, (1894) ILR 14 Bom 43.
2815. Ramdas v Kaluram, AIR 1960 All 557.
2816. Kamla Chopra v LIC of India, AIR 1975 Del 15.
2817. Srinivasa v Vencatta, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 239, p 259.
2818. Re Fuller, (1854) 2 E&B 573.
2819. Hemchandra v Direndra, AIR 1960 Cal 691 : 69 Cal WN 711.
2820. Boseck v Mandlestan, (1906) PR 70.
2821. Ganesh Prasad v Bansidhar, (1917) 15 All LJ 513.
2822. KV Bank Ltd v RC Oza, AIR 1974 Mad 209.
2823. Bhagsingh v Labhsing, (1916) PR 93.
2824. Mathura Prasad v Satya Narayan, (1922) 65 IC 812.
2825. Bengal Coal Co v Elgin Cotton Co, (1870) 2 NWP 13.
2826. Luddy v Johnson, (1871) 6 Beng LR 141.
2827. Shiam Narain v BB & CI Rly, (1919) ILR 41 All 488.
2828. Geffert v Rukhand, (1888) ILR 13 Bom 178; Chiranjilal v Ribhabdas, AIR 1955 Raj 291 (for when amounts to publication).

and no jurisdiction can be founded solely thereon.[2829] The cause of action in a suit to set aside a forged Will arises at the place where the Will was published,[2830] or if plaintiff's interest in any property is prejudicially affected by the Will, the suit may be filed at the place where that property is situated.[2831] In a suit to set aside a deed of release executed in Calcutta in plaintiff's interest in property in Bombay, it was said that the cause of action did not arise wholly in Calcutta but included the effect of the release on the Bombay property.[2832] In a contract of insurance of goods made in Rangoon, and providing for payment at Rangoon, the Rangoon High Court held that the cause of action was at Rangoon and not at the place where the goods were destroyed or damaged.[2833] However, the Bombay High Court has dissented from this case on the ground that the destruction or damage of the goods is part of the cause of action. In case of life assurance, it has been held that part of the cause of action arises at the place where the death occurs.[2834] A suit for restitution of conjugal rights may be brought in the court of the place where the husband resides, or it may be brought in the court of the place where the wife resides;[2835] but, if the wife has never lived in the husband's house, the suit must be brought at the place where the wife resides.[2836] A suit for restitution of conjugal rights by Mohammedan husband can be filed in the court within whose jurisdiction the marriage took place as under the Mohammedan Law, marriage is a contract and not a sacrament.[2837] A suit for restitution of conjugal rights can be filed in court within whose jurisdiction the parties are residing and that jurisdiction is not lost by either of the parties subsequently leaving the place.[2838] Where a suit for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife was filed in a court within whose jurisdiction she was living and further relief by way of injunction was claimed against her relations who were alleged to have prevented her from joining the plaintiff and they were neither residing nor carrying on business within the jurisdiction, it was held that the suit was not maintainable as against them.[2839] A right to specific relief for declaration of marriage as void is a suit of a civil nature. A suit to declare invalid a marriage between a Hindu and a Christian can be filed in the court within whose jurisdiction the parties were residing, even if the marriage took place elsewhere.[2840] A suit by a guardian for the custody of his ward removed by the defendant from Allahabad to Lahore may be brought in the court at Lahore, or it may be brought in the court at Allahabad.[2841] A suit for damages for infringement of a trademark may be brought in the court of the place where the defendant resides or in the court of the place where the defendant publishes advertisement constituting infringement of the trademark.[2842]

In another case relating to trademark violation under the Trade Marks Act, 1999, a Division Bench of the Delhi High Court held that the provisions of section 134 of the Act do not

---

2829. Barwankar v Satyanarain Prasad, AIR 1957 Pat 128.
2830. Sheodial v Durga Kaur, (1883) Cal WN 128.
2831. Nittala Achayya v Nittala Yellamma, AIR 1923 Mad 109 : (1923) 43 Mad LJ 615.
2832. Hadjee Ismael v Hadjee Mohommed, (1874) 13 Beng LR 91.
2833. Jupiter General Insurance Co v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1924 Rang 2 : (1923) 1 Rang 231.
2834. Peoples' Insurance Co Ltd v Benoy Bhusan, AIR 1943 Cal 199 : (1943) ILR 1 Cal 564; dissenting from Jupiter General Insurance Co v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1924 Rang 2 : (1923) 1 Rang 231; Vishvendra v National Insurance Co, AIR 1918 Mad 635; Light of Asia Insurance Co Ltd v Bai Chanchal, AIR 1932 Bom 392 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 815; Punjab Mutual Hindu Family Relief Fund v Sardari, (1918) PR 98.
2835. Lalitagar v Bai Suraj, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 316.
2836. Lakshmi Ammal v Venugopal, AIR 1934 Mad 407 : (1934) 67 Mad LJ 271.
2837. Nizamuddin v Huseni, AIR 1960 MP 212.
2838. Zahoor Ahmed v Tahra Bi, AIR 1954 Ngp 51.
2839. Kaluram v Mangilal, AIR 1956 MB 160.
2840. Sanjay Mishra v Eveline, AIR 1993 MP 54; Gangabai v Vijay Kumar, AIR 1974 SC 1126 : (1974) 2 SCC 393 : (1974) SCR 3 882; Secretary of State v Mask & Co, AIR 1940 PC 105.
2841. Charat Chandra v Foram, (1890) ILR 12 All 213.
2842. Kheshtra Pal v Pancham Singh, (1915) ILR 37 All 446.

override the provisions of section 20 of the Code but provide an additional forum and place for filing suit under the Act.[2843] Explaining the applicability of section 134 of the Act in view of section 20 of the Code, M Sharma, J, (as he then was) observed as follows:

> 12. Now, coming to section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a perusal of the same make it manifest that it is possible to invoke the jurisdiction of a particular Court if the defendants or any of the defendants resides or carries on business or personally works for gain within the jurisdiction of the said Court. When the Trade Marks Act was enacted, the Legislature was fully conscious of the fact that Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides for a forum and the place in which a suit is required to be instituted. Despite the said fact, Section 134 of Trade Marks Act, 1999 was enacted and while enacting the said provision, which was in addition to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Legislature specifically included the non obstante clause, which states "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure."
>
> 13. Therefore, in our opinion, in view of the inclusion of the aforesaid expression in the statutory provision "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure" the provisions of Section 134 of the Trade Marks Act, 1999 shall have to be read in addition to the provisions of Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[2844]

In Dhodha House Case,[2845] which was under the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958 (repealed by the Trade Marks Act, 1999), the Supreme Court held that under the Act, to invoke the jurisdiction of the Court, the plaintiff must actually and voluntarily reside at the place or carry out business or personally work for gain. Therefore, where the plaintiff neither resided at the place nor carried on business, the Court at the place would not have territorial jurisdiction merely because its goods are sold at the place. The distinction between the provisions relating to territorial jurisdiction in the Copyright Act, 1957, Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958 and the Trade Marks Act, 1999 has been explained by the Supreme Court in the following words:

> 43. A cause of action in a given case both under the 1957 Act as also under the 1958 Act may be overlapping to some extent. The territorial jurisdiction conferred upon the Court in terms of the Code of Civil Procedure indisputably shall apply to a suit or proceeding under the 1957 Act as also the 1958 Act. Sub-section (2) of Section 62 of the 1957 Act provides for an additional forum. Such additional forum was provided so as to enable the author to file a suit who may not otherwise be in a position to file a suit at different places where his copyright was violated. The Parliament while enacting the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act in the year 1958 was aware of the provisions of the 1957 Act. It still did not choose to make a similar provision therein. Such an omission may be held to be a conscious action on the part of the Parliament. The intention of the Parliament in not providing for an additional forum in relation to the violation of the 1958 Act is, therefore, clear and explicit. The Parliament while enacting the Trade Marks Act, 1999 provided for such an additional forum by enacting sub-section (2) of Section 134 of the Trade Marks Act. The Court shall not, it is well-settled, readily presume the existence of jurisdiction of a Court which was not conferred by the statute. For the purpose of attracting the jurisdiction of a Court in terms of sub-section (2) of Section 62 of the 1957 Act, the conditions precedent specified therein must be fulfilled, the requisites wherefor are that the plaintiff must actually and voluntarily reside to carry on business or personally work for gain.[2846]

It was further held in the case that activities on the part of the defendant may give to action both under the 1958 Act as also under the 1957 Act. But it would not entitle the plaintiff to invoke the jurisdiction of court in terms of section 62(2) of the 1957 Act. Although O II,

---

2843. Intas Pharmaceuticals Ltd v Allergan Inc, AIR 2007 Del 108 : 2006 (132) DLT 641 (DB).
2844. Intas Pharmaceuticals Ltd v Allergan Inc, AIR 2007 Del 108, at p 111 : 2006 (132) DLT 641 (DB).
2845. Dhodha House v SK Maingi, AIR 2006 SC 730 : (2006) 9 SCC 41 : (2006) 1 All LJ 669.
2846. Dhodha House v SK Maingi, AIR 2006 SC 730, at p 739 : (2006) 9 SCC 41 : (2006) 1 All LJ 669. SB Sinha, J, speaking for the Bench.

rule 3 of the Code contemplates uniting of several causes of action in the same suit, application of O II, rule 3 of the Code ipso facto would not confer jurisdiction upon a court which had none so as to enable it to consider infringement of trade mark under the 1957 Act as also the 1958 Act.[2847]

In the Dabur India Ltd case,[2848] this question again came up for consideration before the Supreme Court. In that case, a suit for copyright infringement was filed wherein the relief for passing off action was also claimed. The suit had been filed at the court where the plaintiff resided. It was held that such composite suit is not maintainable. Explaining the decision given earlier in Dhodha House case (supra), it was observed as follows:

> 29. What then would be meant by a composite suit? A composite suit would not entitle a court to entertain a suit in respect whereof it has no jurisdiction, territorial or otherwise. Order II, Rule 3 of the Code specifically states so and, thus, there is no reason as to why the same should be ignored. A composite suit within the provisions of the 1957 Act as considered in Dhodha House (supra), therefore, would mean the suit which is founded on infringement of a copyright and wherein the incidental power of the Court is invoked. A plaintiff may seek a remedy which can otherwise be granted by the court. It was that aspect of the matter which had not been considered in Dhodha House (supra) but it never meant that two suits having different causes of actions can be clubbed together as a composite suit.

In a suit for infringement of trade mark, the Madras High Court has held that the term "carries on business" in section 62 of Copyright Act, 1957 and section 134(2) of Trade Marks Act, 1999 is not confined to only principal place of business but covers branch or branches where business is carried out. It has been observed that in the scheme of the two enactments, there is a complete departure from the provisions of section 20 of the Code. If the contrast as between two expressions namely, "actually and voluntarily resides" and "carries on business" is correctly perceived, it would reveal that while there is limitation regarding residence, there is no such restriction with reference to "carrying on business".[2849]

Considering the language of section 62 of the Copyright Act and section 134 of the Trade Marks Act, it has been found by the Supreme Court that an additional forum has been provided by including a district court within whose limits the plaintiff actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain. The expression "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure" does not oust the applicability of the provisions of section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure and it is clear that additional remedy has been provided to the plaintiff so as to file a suit where he is residing or carrying on business, etc, as the case may be.[2850]

Suit was filed for infringement of trademark. Defendants were manufacturing and selling their product in Madhya Pradesh by camouflaging registered trademark of plaintiffs. Registration of plaintiffs' trademarks was at Madras and their manufacturing, marketing and selling their product throughout the country was not disputed by the defendants. It was held that part of the cause of action arose at Madras. It was held that High Court of Madras could try it. Since the defendants had not disputed the registration of the trademark of the plaintiffs at Madras and their manufacturing, marketing and selling their product throughout the country, there was no difficulty in holding that on a combined perusal of clause 12 of the

---

2847. Dhodha House v SK Maingi, AIR 2006 SC 730, at pp 735–736 : (2006) 9 SCC 41 : (2006) 1 All LJ 669.
2848. Dabur India Ltd v KR Industries, AIR 2008 SC 3123. (SB Sinha J, speaking for the Bench).
2849. Wipro Limited v Oushadha Chandrika Ayurvedic India (Pvt) Ltd, AIR 2008 Mad 165 : (2008) 3 Mad LJ 1 (DB).
2850. Indian Performing Rights Society Ltd v Sanjay Dalia, AIR 2015 SC 3479 : (2015) 10 SCC 161 : 2015 (8) SCR 210.

Letters Patent and section 20 of the CPC as well as section 105 of the Act, it can be safely held that the suit can be filed in Madras High Court and the court has jurisdiction to try the same.[2851] A suit for passing-off can be filed at the place where the plaintiff has substantial market for his product. Suit is not required to be filed only at the place where the plaintiff resides.[2852] In a suit for passing-off or for injunction on account of infringement of trademark, the cause of action partly or wholly can arise in a given jurisdiction, only if the defendant is proved to have directly made a sale of goods under the impugned trademark, within the jurisdiction, not to an individual consumer but to a distributor, wholesaler or retailer and if such a sale is on a commercial scale. In the instant case, there was no evidence to show any transaction of sale of goods under the impugned trademark at the place where the suit was instituted, and so, the court at the place had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.[2853] A suit relating to infringement of trademarks, and for passing-off, cannot be filed in Bombay if the defendants carry on business in Calcutta and there is no proof that the defendants dispatched goods for being sold in Bombay, or that such supply was on commercial basis.[2854] As death of the insured person is a part of the cause of action of suit for recovery of money due on the insurance policy, it can be brought in court having territorial jurisdiction over the place where the insured had died.[2855] A suit for damages for conversion may be brought in the court of the place where the conversion originally took place.[2856] A sells and delivers goods to B in Bombay. A then assigns the debt for the price of the goods to C and gives notice of the assignment to B. C may sue B in Poona as the assignment is part of the cause of action.[2857] A suit to set aside a deed can be brought at the place where the deed was registered.[2858] A suit for a declaration that a new constitution framed by a society is invalid can be filed at the place where it was framed.[2859] A suit by a public servant for setting aside an order of dismissal on the ground that he had not been given an opportunity to be heard as required under Article 331 could be filed at the place where the order was passed, as failure to give an opportunity was part of the cause of action and that must be held to have occurred at the place where the order was passed.[2860] A suit for damages for wrongful termination of services can be filed at the place where the services were terminated.[2861] A suit on an award can be filed in a court within whose jurisdiction the agreement to refer the dispute to arbitration was entered into as that is a part of the cause of action.[2862] In a suit for malicious prosecution, the High Court of Rajasthan held that since the essence of a malicious prosecution is the malicious abuse of the process of the court in a particular place, wrong is done to the person, maliciously prosecuted, by serving that process upon him at the place where he is served. Hence, the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction that place is situated has jurisdiction.[2863] When a bank has branches in different places, each branch is considered as an entity in itself and a suit in respect of dealings 2851. Amrutanjan Ltd v Ashwin Fine Chemicals and Pharmaceuticals, Kashi Mira District, AIR 1991 Mad 277.

---

2852. Cadilla Laboratories Pvt Ltd v Ramnath Atul & Co, AIR 1991 Kant 303.
2853. HP Horticulture Produce Mktg and Processing Corp Ltd v Mohan Meakin Breweries Ltd., AIR 1981 P&H 117.
2854. Gold Seal Engg Product Pvt Ltd v Hindustan Manufacturers, AIR 1992 Bom 144.
2855. Peoples' Insurance Co Ltd v Benoy Bhusan Bhowmik, (1943) 47 Cal WN 293.
2856. Kartick Churn v Gopalkisto, (1877) ILR 3 Cal 264.
2857. Reed v Brown, [1888] 22 QBD 128, p 131.
2858. Rajlakshmi Dassi v Bonomali Sen, AIR 1950 Cal 510 : 85 Cal LJ 270.
2859. Sridhar v Jaychandra, AIR 1959 All 598.
2860. Hiralal v State of Saurastra, AIR 1956 Sau 75.
2861. TRS Mani v IRP Radio Pvt Ltd, AIR 1963 Mad 30 : (1962) II R Mad 1141 : (1962) 2 Mad LJ 270.
2862. East India Trading Co v Badat Trading Co, AIR 1959 Bom 414 : (1959) ILR Bom 1004.
2863. RP Goala v Amarpal Singh, AIR 1972 Raj 142; Khanchand Pokardas v Hiranand, AIR 1965 Bom 109.

with the branch should be filed in the court within whose jurisdiction the branch has its office and not where the head office is situated.[2864]

Military contract was entered into in Uttar Pradesh. The work was executed in Uttar Pradesh and the award was passed by the arbitrator. Proceedings were instituted in Delhi High Court for making the award a rule of court. It was held that Delhi High Court had no jurisdiction.[2865] There was reference to arbitration of disputes regarding properties located within jurisdiction of two courts. One property was located within the jurisdiction of one of the courts. That court has jurisdiction to entertain proceedings relating to the award.[2866] The doctrine of implied repeal is based on the postulate that the legislature which is presumed to know the existing state of law did not intend to create any confusion by retaining conflicting provisions. Courts in applying this doctrine are supposed merely to give effect to the legislative intent by examining the object and scope of the two enactments. It is a matter of legislative intent that the two sets of provisions of section 20, Code of Civil Procedure and section 18, Presidency Small Causes Courts Act, 1882, were not expected to be applied simultaneously.[2867]

[s 20.16] Section 20 (c) and Article 226 (2) of the Constitution of India

Although in view of section 141 of the CPC, the provisions thereof would not apply to a writ proceeding, the phraseology used in section 20(c) of the CPC and clause (2) of Article 226, being in pari materia, the decisions of Supreme Court rendered on interpretation of section 20(c) of the CPC shall apply to the writ proceedings also. Before proceeding to discuss the matter further, it may be pointed out that the entire bundle of facts pleaded need not constitute a cause of action as what is necessary to be proved before the petitioner can obtain a decree in the material facts. The expression "material facts" is also known as integral facts.[2868]

[s 20.17] Contract of Agency

In suits for an agent's account, the cause of action arises at the place where the contract of agency was made or the place where accounts are to be rendered and payment is to be made by the agents.[2869] It does not arise at the place where a demand for account was made.[2870] In Lal Singh v Kadir Baksh,[2871] a Sialkot firm sent hides for sale to their commission agent at Calcutta and were held entitled to sue at Sialkot for the sale proceeds, as the account were to be rendered there and the money was payable there. In Motilal v Surajman,[2872] a Bombay merchant A ordered goods from time to time from B who acted as his pucca aditia at Phulgaon. A sued B in Bombay for the amount due to him on the account. Tyabji, J, held that: (a) instructions were sent by A to B from Bombay; and (b) as accounts were rendered by B to A at Bombay; and (c) as demand was made for payment of the amount due from Bombay, payment of the money

---

2864. Hansraj v Indian Overseas Bank Ltd, AIR 1956 Cal 33; Nedungadi Bank v Central Bank, AIR 1961 Ker 50 : (1960) ILR Ker 1444.
2865. Bakhtawar Singh Balkrishna v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 1003 : (1988) 2 SCC 293 : 1988 (2) ALR 155 SC : JT 1988 (1) SC 467 : 1988 (1) Scale 527.
2866. Madhao Deshpande v Madhav Dhamadhikari, AIR 1988 SC 1347 : (1988) 3 SCC 511 : 1988 (2) ALR 290 SC : JT (2) SC 222 : 1988 (1) Scale 905.
2867. Ratanlal Adukia v UOI, (1989) 3 SCC 537.
2868. Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd v UOI, AIR 2004 SC 2321 : (2004) 6 SCC 254 : JT 2004 1 475.
2869. Ramdass v Danpat, AIR 1925 Lah 387 : (1925) 6 Lah 153; Annamalai Chettyar v Daw Hnin U, AIR 1936 Rang 251.
2870. Dharam v Ramlal, AIR 1961 Punj 567.
2871. Lal Singh v Kadir Baksh, AIR 1922 Lah 36 : (1922) 3 Lah LJ 499.
2872. Motilal v Surajman, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 167, a case under clause 12 of the Letters Patent.

was intended to be made in Bombay and that a material part of the cause of action arose in Bombay. This case was dissented from in Tika Ram v Daulat Ram,[2873] where the Allahabad High Court held that a commission agent doing an independent business of his own is liable to account at his own place of business. This is the view taken in a later Bombay case[2874] and is in accordance with the decisions of the Punjab[2875] and Lahore[2876] courts. Conversely, a commission agent may sue at the place where he carries on business.[2877] The mere sending of goods does not constitute part of the cause of action and does not give jurisdiction of the court of the place from which the goods were sent.[2878] So also, where a contract of commission agent was concluded at Calcutta and goods were sent pursuant to the orders of the commission agent to Amritsar, the cause of action for a suit for accounts against the commission agent arose wholly in Calcutta and the court at Amritsar had no jurisdiction to entertain it.[2879] In Bilticut transactions, the buyer gets title to the goods only when the railway receipts are endorsed to him and that being part of the cause of action a suit can be instituted for refund of price paid at the place where they are delivered and it had been further observed that a suit against a commission agent on a Bilticut transaction can be brought at a place where part of the cause of action has arisen even if he does not carry on business there.[2880]

[s 20.18] Place Where Money Is Expressly or Impliedly Payable

Part of the cause of action arises where money is expressly or impliedly payable under a contract.[2881] In Lal Singh v Kadir Baksh,[2882] the case referred to in the last paragraph, the suit could be instituted at Sialkot as it was an implied term of the contract that the agent should pay his principal there. When the place of payment is not specified, the court will be guided by the intention of the parties.[2883] In a suit based on the refusal of the government to refund sales tax paid by the plaintiff in spite of the order of the sales-tax authority having been set aside, it was held that it would be the court in Bihar State which would have the jurisdiction. The fact that rules 40–43 of the Bihar Sales Tax Rules, 1949, provided for an application of refund to be made to the commissioner for sales tax only and the refund being made payable under these rules only through one of the Bihar State Treasuries implied that the refund was payable at one of those treasuries in Bihar.[2884] The amount due on a balance struck at the foot 2873. Tika Ram v Daulat Ram, AIR 1924 All 530 : (1924) ILR 46 All 465.

---

2874. Mahomed Haji v Jute and Gunny Brokers Ltd, (1931) 33 Bom LR 1364 : AIR 1932 Bom 42: dissenting from Motilal v Surajmal, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 167; Devidatt v Shriram, AIR 1932 Bom 291 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 324.
2875. Muhammad Shafi v Karamat Ali, (1896) PR 76.
2876. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 297 : (1928) 9 Lah 455; Ramditta Mal v Seth Jot Mal, (1940) AI 1471; Premnath v Kaudomal, AIR 1958 P&H 361 : (1958) ILR Punj 682.
2877. Chandu Lal v Ganeshi Lal, AIR 1935 Lah 68.
2878. Nandlal v Kishan lal, AIR 1928 Bom 548 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 1391; Puran Chand v Jodh Raj, AIR 1922 All 448.
2879. Firm Brijraj v Firm Sagarmal, AIR 1952 P&H 119; Pasu & Co v Gulzarilal, AIR 1958 MP 409.
2880. Firm Shah Chandran Mal v Hazarilal, AIR 1962 Raj : (1962) ILR Raj 225; Firm Hazarilal v Firm Gulab Chand, AIR 1956 Ngp 118 : (1955) ILR Nag 722.
2881. UOI v KK Goswami, AIR 1974 Cal 231 : (1973) ILR 1 Cal 421 : 78 Cal WN 154; State of Sikkim v Jammu & Kashmir Bank Ltd, AIR 2002 Sikkim 8.
2882. Lal Singh v Kadir Baksh, AIR 1922 Lah 36 : (1922) 3 Lah LJ 499; Galley & Co v Dabi China Appalaswami Naidu, AIR 1946 Mad 300; Appanna v Subbarayulu, AIR 1957 AP 530.
2883. Galley & Co v Dabi China Appalaswami Naidu, AIR 1946 Mad 300; Dhunjisha v Fjorde, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 649; Darragh & Co v Purshotam, (1881) ILR 4 Mad 372; Sailendra Nath v Ramsundar, (1912) 16 Cal LJ 279; Gafurunissa v Narayan, (1919) 49 IC 950; Muhammad v Muhammad, (1916) PR 2; Venkatesh Bhat v Kamal Pat Motilal, AIR 1957 Mad 201.
2884. State of Bihar v Oriental Coal Co, AIR 1972 SC 378 : (1972) 4 SCC 468 : 1972 SCR (1) 982.

of an account is payable at the place where the balance was struck although the transactions which were the subject of the account took place elsewhere.[2885] In Luchmee Chund v Zorawar Mal,[2886] an account was taken and balance struck on dissolution of a partnership business at Muttra and the Privy Council held that although the partnership agreement had been entered into at Rutlam, the suit for the balance was properly instituted at Muttra as that was the place where the balance was struck and the amount became due and payable. If a seller of goods at Rangoon draws hundies on the purchaser at Tuticorin in favour of a bank at Tuticorin, the suit for amount due in respect of the transaction may be instituted at Tuticorin for that is the place where the purchaser has to pay for the goods and it makes no difference that the vendor has discounted the hundies at Rangoon.[2887] On the other hand, the mere fact that a cheque is sent in payment from a particular place will not alter the locality of the suit.[2888] When payment is made by cheque and that is honoured, the payment must be held to have been made at the place where the cheque is received and not at the place where it has been cashed.[2889] It is the general agency with liability to account and refund the balance, that is the cause of action, and the fact that a particular collection is made by the agent at a different place will not give jurisdiction to sue at that place.[2890] If under a contract for the sale of goods the price is payable at the seller's place of business, but the buyer failing to pay the seller sends his man to the buyer's residence and the buyer pays at his residence, the buyer cannot in a suit for compensation for inferiority of the goods take advantage of that fact and sue in the court of the place where he resides.[2891] The fact that the creditor is described in a promissory note made at y as resident of K does not make K the place of payment so as to give jurisdiction to the court at K. No place of performance being fixed, the question, as stated above is one of intention to be gathered from the contract and the surrounding circumstances.[2892]

[s 20.19] The Debtor Must Find His Creditor

Under the English law, if a place is appointed for the performance of a contract, it is the duty of the creditor to attend at the place named to receive payment; but if no place is appointed, the debtor is bound to find the creditor and tender him the money. In other words, there is an implied promise to pay inter alia where the creditor resides or carries on business. Under the Indian law as enacted in section 49 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where no place is fixed for the performance of a promise, whether the promise is to deliver goods or to pay money,[2893] it is the duty of the debtor to apply to the creditor to appoint a reasonable place for the performance of the promise, and to perform it at such place. But what if the debtor does 2885. Haimraj v Ram Bux, (1866) 1 Agra 115.

---

2886. Luchmee Chund v Zorawar Mal, (1860) 8 Moo Ind App 291 (a case under Bengal Regulation Act 2 of 1803).
2887. Venkatachalam v Rajaballi, AIR 1935 Mad 663 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 504 (FB); Ganesh Parshad v Firm Jawaharsingh, AIR 1952 P&H 381.
2888. Sohan Singh v Riddick, AIR 1922 Lah 164 : (1922) 65 IC 865.
2889. CIT v Ogale Glass Works, AIR 1954 SC 429 : (1955) 1 SCR 185 1954 SCJ 577; Jagdish Mills v CIT, AIR 1959 SC 1160; Horsburgh v Chandroji, AIR 1957 MB 90.
2890. Shah Sankalchand v Ambalal, AIR 1930 Bom 150 : (1930) ILR 54 Bom 192.
2891. Damri Shah v Ralia Mal, (1920) 2 Lah LJ 555.
2892. Raman v Gopalachari, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 223.
2893. Soniram v RD Tata & Co, AIR 1927 PC 156 : (1927) 54 IA 265 : 271, 5 Rang 451. The dicta to the contrary in Tika Ram v Daulat Ram, AIR 1924 All 530 : (1924) ILR 46 All 465, pp 467–468 are erroneous.

not apply to the creditor to appoint a place? In such a case, it has been held in some cases[2894] that the common law rule applies and there is an implied promise to pay the creditor wherever he might be, and in some[2895] that there is no such duty and no implied promise arises. This question was considered by the judicial committee in Soniram v RD Tata & Co Ltd[2896] which arose out of a suit instituted by the respondents in Rangoon for the recovery of the balance due on dealings which they had with the appellants in Calcutta. The contention of the defendant before the Privy Council was that the court at Rangoon had no jurisdiction as he did not reside or carry on business there and that the rule of the common law that debtors should seek the creditor had no application. It was held by the judicial committee that on the terms of the contract the amounts were by implication payable at Rangoon. On this finding, the question of the application of the common law rule did not arise for decision. The Privy Council, however, observed after discussing the decisions of the Indian courts:

> Their Lordships do not think that in this state of the authorities it is possible to accede to the present contention that section 49 of the Contract Act gets rid of inferences, that should justly be drawn from the terms of the contract itself or from the necessities of the case involving in the obligation to pay the creditor the further obligation of finding the creditor so as to pay him.

There has been a divergence of judicial opinion on the precise scope of this decision. On one hand, it has been held that when the debtor does not apply under section 49 and the agreement does not expressly name any place for payment, it would be reasonable and in conformity with justice to invoke the rule of common law.[2897] It is also observed that recourse can be had to that rule in interpreting the agreement where it is silent on the subject.[2898] On the other hand, it has been held that the decision in Soniram's case is one on the terms of the particular contract, that the Rangoon court was held to have jurisdiction because the money was payable there and that the observations relating to the applicability of the common law rule did not amount to a decision on the question and that to apply the technical rule of the common law would be to abrogate the provisions of the Code.[2899] It has further been observed that great caution should be exercised in applying this rule.[2900] The trend in in the 21st century is that even if the common law rule may not be extended to India as a rule of law, courts in India would, in contracts where the place of payment is not provided for expressly or by implication, infer that the parties had implied that payment must be made at the place where the creditor resided or carried on business.[2901] In spite of the disinclination to adopt the common law maxim, it is well-settled that the place of payment would be determined taking 2894. Dhunjisha v Fforde, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 649, 656; Motilal v Surajmal, (1906) ILR 30 Bom 167, 171; Gokul Das v Nathu, AIR 1926 All 477 : (1926) 48 ILR All 310; RSEB v Dayal Wood Work, AIR 1998 AP 381.

---

2895. Piyara Singh v Bhagwan Das, AIR 1951 Pat 33; Kadarmal v Surajmal, (1907) 9 Bom LR 903; Raman v Gopalachari, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 223.

2896. Soniram v RD Tata & Co Lt., 54 IA 265 : 5 Rang 451 : (1927) PC 156; distinguishing Pritappa v Virabadrappa, (1905) 7 Bom LR 993.

2897. Bharumal v Sakhawatmal, AIR 1956 Bom 111; Borakur Engineering and Foundry Works Ltd v State of Bihar, AIR 1960 Cal 513 : (1960) 64 Cal WN 744.

2898. Johrimull v Hiralal, AIR 1961 Pat 198; Adinarayana v Lakshminarayana, (1940) 1 Mad LJ 558 : AIR 1940 Mad 588.

2899. Firm Hiralal v Brijnath, AIR 1960 P&H 450 (FB) : (1960) II R 2 Punj 291; Niranjan v Jagat Singh, AIR 1955 P&H 128.

2900. Mahaluxmi Bank Ltd v Chota Nagpur Industrial and Commercial Assn, AIR 1955 Cal 413; Ramalinga v Jayalakshmi, AIR 1945 Mad 695.

2901. Manohar Oil Mills v Bhawani Din Bhagwandin, AIR 1971 All 326; Great Eastern Shipping Co v UOI, AIR 1971 Cal 150; Shoba Singh & Sons v Saurashtra Iron Foundry, AIR 1968 Guj 276; State of Uttar Pradesh v Raja Ram, AIR 1966 All 159.

into account: (i) the terms of contract; (ii) the attendant circumstances; (iii) the necessities of the case; and (iv) the provisions of the contract and this Code.[2902] The rule does not apply where the facts of the case lead to an inference that payment was intended to be made at a particular place.[2903]

In a suit for recovery payment against fixed deposits wrongfully withheld by bank, the case of the plaintiff was that all decisions with regard to non-payment of due amount in respect of the fixed deposits were taken by the head office of the bank at Delhi. The cause of action in the suit was for non-payment of money due and payable from branch office of the bank at Khidderpore (West Bengal). However, the said branch office is situated outside the ordinary original Civil Jurisdiction of Calcutta High Court. It was held by the Calcutta High Court that neither there was jurisdiction nor leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent had been sought. Therefore, the suit could have been instituted within whose jurisdiction the branch of the bank is situated, i.e., the District Court of Alipore or at Delhi.[2904]

